Professor Hart stated that when he got back to Leningrad, he received a letter from his wife, advising him that he had better get out of Russia, for war seemed imminent. It was the first he had heard of it, he said. The press is all controlled in Russia, and though all families have radios, they are built by the government to be so weak that they can not pick up messages from outside stations, and must listen only to government programs.

"The country is sealed up tight as a drum," said Prof. Hart. "Nobody knows what is going on outside. I was there when the treaty with Germany was signed, and the people were all amazed and stunned. The Russians are very bad off. Hitler made a bad pact, for Russia is hardly able to supply herself. Transportation in Russia is bad, for with three gauges on her railroads, it will take a long time before anything can be transported to Germany.

"The Russians believe that the capitalistic countries are going to get into a war, and that Russia will take advantage of this to spread the world revolution and they seem to be doing it. I do not think they will stop at Finland. They will spread ignorance that accompanies it, and will abolish religion.

"The average Russian soldier is sloppy. Although there are lots of them, they are not well equipped. In those great demonstrations in the Red Square, they breathe a sigh of relief when the tanks get to the other side without breaking down. The population has nothing to live for and nothing to fight for. On the other hand the Finns are marvelous fighters and are well-equipped.

Model Finland

"The Finns have had the same time as the Russians to build up their country—22 years. Finland has fine factories, no slums in the cities; no extremes of wealth or poverty," declared Prof. Hart. "They have no unemployment, for if a man won't work, he goes to jail. Prices for goods are reasonable and it is a pleasure for a tourist to go shopping. The Finns have a genius for co-operatives. If they find a communist who beefs about the country, they take him to the Russian-Finnish border, and dump him over the line. You will not see greater contrast anywhere in the world than on opposite sides of this border," declared Professor Hart.

Scots Battle For the Kilt

Consequently upon the War Office decision that Highland regiments with the British Expeditionary Force in France shall discard the kilt for the new battle dress when serving in the firing line, yet another controversy has developed between officialdom and Highland tradition.

It appears that Highlanders are to be put into trousers because the new battle dress gives greater comfort and freedom of movement on active service besides removing distinctions whereby regiments may be identified by the enemy. It is also contended that the kilt is less proof against gas than is the battle dress.

During the last war, kilted regiments were particularly disliked by the Germans, who referred to them as "the ladies from Hell", and the arrival of a Highland unit in the front line invariably resulted in a concentrated strafe on that sector. Shortly before the Armistice a list was captured from the enemy detailing the British divisions most to be feared, and it was found that the 51st Highland Territorial Division came first, with the Guards Division second, writes David Le Roi in the Edinburgh Scotsman.

Although the majority of Highlanders will scorn the claim that battle dress is more comfortable than the kilt, and wax indignant that authority should be anxious to conceal their presence from the enemy, the decision of the War Office to ban the kilt from the firing line is not without certain merits.

Throughout 1914 - 1918, German's fear and hatred of kilted soldiers resulted in such intense activity against Highland regiments that their casualties were far higher than those of any other units in the British Army. Consequently, by keeping the kilt out of the war zone and thereby lessening the enemy's chances of knowing where Highland regiments are, thousands of valuable lives may be saved.

But although the War Office has a case for Highlanders temporarily discarding the kilt during their spells of duty in the forward zones, there is no justification to ban the garment for Highlanders when walking out or on leave. To stop the issue of new kilts until after the war means that thousands of men are destined to pass through the ranks of famous regiments without ever wearing the proper uniform.

Indeed, we must beware lest the decision to discard the kilt for the duration of the war is not used by officialdom in yet another effort to abolish from the army our national costume altogether. For it is a fact that the War Office has in the past been only too eager to meddle with Scotland's proudest military distinction, and many attempts have been made to put kilted regiments permanently into trousers.

Thus in 1804 some busybody at the Horse Guards sat down and wrote to the commanding officers of all Highland regiments asking their "private opinion as to the expediency of abolishing the kilt in Highland regiments and establishing in lieu thereof the tartan trews".

Amongst those so addressed was Alan Cameron of Errocht, founder and first colonel of the Cameron Highlanders, and his reply left little doubt as to his "private opinion". In the course of a lengthy and fiery letter he castigated the would-be reformers as follows:

"The proposed situation must have proceeded from a whimsical idea more than from the mere comfort of the Highland soldier, and a wish to lay aside the Highland garb. From my own experience, I feel well-founded in saying that if anything was wanted to aid the rack-renting Highland landlords in destroying that source, which hitherto proved so fruitful for keeping up the Highland corps, it will be that of abolishing their native garb, which His Royal Highness, the Commander-in-Chief, may rest assured will prove a complete death warrant to the recruiting service in that respect. But I sincerely hope that His Royal Highness will never acquiesce in so painful, and degrading an idea as to strip off our native garb and stuff us into a harlequin tartan pantaloon."

Colonel Cameron's protest was not without result, as the authorities contented themselves with depriving only a few Highland regiments of the kilt. Appropriately enough, the Camerons were amongst those retaining the national garb.

Five years later, the War Office again returned to the charge, and, despite the service then being rendered by kilted regiments in Wellington's Army on the Peninsula, presented a petition to the King recommending that five of the Highland regiments should cease wearing the kilt, as "the costume is objectionable to the people of South Britain". The absurd request was actually granted, and the following units put into trousers: 71st (Highland Light Infantry); 72nd (Seaforths); 73rd (Black Watch); 74th (Gordons); and 91st (Argyll and Sutherland.)

As will be noted, the Cameron Highlanders were not one of the regiments to lose the kilt, their colonel's opposition again having gained the day. It was a narrow escape for the men of Lochaber, because four of the five regiments affected by the order of 1809 remained kiltless until 1882, when Highland uniform was generally restored. The Highland Light Infantry, however, continue to wear trousers, being the only Highland regiment to do so.

British military records are strewn with these orders and recommendations having as object the denationalisation of Highland uniforms. During the Boer War, for example, it was suggested that the Highland Brigade should don trousers because bare knees rendered the men liable to catch cold. The idea was only dropped when a Scots doctor produced statistics revealing that kilted regiments had the lowest sicklists in the British Army.

That the old official enmity to Highland garb is yet far from dead south of the Border was indicated as recently as 1934, when Lord Baden-Powell insisted upon the wearing of felt hats by Scottish Rover Scouts in preference to the Balmoral bonnet. Cowboy hats with kilts provide a sartorial curiosity indeed.

English officialdom's frequent decrying of Highland costume is all the more remarkable in view of our southern cousins' eagerness to don kilt and bonnet the moment they cross the Border. Moreover, it is notorious that Englishmen compete for commissions in Highland regiments; attracted not only by the uniform, but also by the fact that kilted units have traditions which many English units lack.

Can it be that, while individually they admire Highland garb, Englishmen collectively deprecate it because, having no national costume of their own, they are jealous of the kilt?

Highland costume is the oldest existing garb in Europe. Most of the so-called national attire sometimes worn by the peasantry in Continental countries has an antiquity no greater than the fifteenth century, and is merely a survival of universal fashions prevailing at that period. Nowadays it is seldom donned except as a species of fancy dress to attract tourists.

On the other hand, we have in Scotland men wearing as their normal clothing, costume the origin of which is lost in the mists of antiquity. And that is more than can be said of trousers, which for lack of a national costume of his own, the Englishman must share with the rest of the world.

Fortunately, sentiment has managed to save a few kilted regiments in the British Army, and everybody who has the interests of Highland tradition at heart trusts that the present partial ban on the kilt is merely a temporary wartime measure that will not develop into another attempt permanently to trouser the Highland soldier.

At normal times, the kilt is the Government's best recruiting sergeant for when the Army is on a peace-time establishment kilted regiments are invariably at full strength; so great is the appeal to Scotsmen to have the opportunity of donning the ancient national costume.

Frankford

Frankford—The members of the Young Ladies' Class of the Frankford United Church held a "Mothers and Daughters" banquet in the Rose Lowery Hall on Wednesday evening, March 13. The tables were tastefully decorated with the St. Patrick decorations and a sumptuous repast served by the ladies. Mrs. Dan Frost, the teacher of the class, certainly deserves much credit for the success of the banquet. She was assisted by a committee of two consisting of Misses Helen Embury and Miss Ruby Hadley. Mrs. Dan Frost opened the program by a few very appropriate remarks and the class sang a welcome. Rev. J. F. Lane led in prayer. The toast to the King was proposed by Mrs. Frost followed by "God Save the King." This was followed by a brief interlude of commuinty singing. The toast to "Our Church" in the absence of Miss Kay Hibbert was proposed by Mrs. J. Dafoe and Rev. J. F. Lane gave a few appropriate remarks. Misses Frances and Alice Lohness favored with music and singing throughout the evening. Miss Lucy Ferguson and Miss Doreen Loney proposed the toast "to the mothers" and Mrs. Embury and Mrs. Mikel replied. The toast "to our Sunday School" was presented by Miss Marjorie Forbes and Mr. Walter Morrow replied.

The meeting was closed by the benediction.

The carnival in the Frankford Arena on Thursday evening was very poorly attended as the weather was so unfavorable. However the costumes were very attractive and those who faced the storm were well repaid. Prizes were awarded as follows: Ladies' Fancy Costume, 1st, Miss Doreen Loney; 2nd, Miss Bernice Turley. Ladies' Comic Costume, 1st, Mrs. Perry Brown; 2nd, Mrs. Harold Hadley. Girl's Fancy Costume, 1st, Betty Dixon; 2nd, Doreen Burkett; Girl's Comic Costume, 1st, Geraldine Wallis; 2nd, Marie Turley. AS YOU HOPE FOR VICTORY— Be Generous

A CUP of coffee and a doughnut seem small enough reward for a man who has gone over the top in the face of machine gun fire.

A pair of dry new socks means much to a man whose feet have been wet for a week.

These are only some of the things the Salvation Army does for the soldiers, but the veterans of the last war have never forgotten those two little services, and the spirit of Christian kindness that went with them.

All that the Salvation Army did for the troops in the last war will be done in this war—and more—if you will help according to the need.

Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Sharpe were visitors for a few days this week at the home of their son, H. W. Sharpe, D. C., Lindsay.

Miss Agnes Gallagher and Miss Olive Nightingale attended the Toronto Skating Carnival on Thursday night.

Spring flowers with touches of paddy green in tapers and favors, enhanced the charm of the spacious rooms of the Officers' Mess at the Armouries yesterday for the tea and bridge at which members of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. entertained. There was a splendid attendance and a fine sum was realized for the many worthy projects of the Chapter. Mrs. A. B. Gribble, regent, received the guests. The tea table beautifully arranged with colorful blossoms and candelabra with green candles, was presided over by Mrs. R. B. Chadwick, Mrs. W. N. Ponton and Mrs. A. B. Payne. Mrs. W. C. Morgan was in charge of the tea table and the conveners of the tea were Mrs. Fred Lazier and Mrs. L. S. Shiels. Mrs. R. Abrams and Mrs. R. Keel were in charge of the bridge. Members of the Chapter and the Auxiliary group graciously acted as tea assistants. The home cooking table was in charge of Mrs. J. Porritt, Mrs. J. E. Bateman and Mrs. J. V. Doyle. Mrs. G. M. Miller was treasurer for the afternoon. Mrs. Leo B. Riggs made the drawing for the handsome bridge table set on which tickets were sold. The lucky winner was Mr. T. H. Coppin, 67 Rossland Road, Oshawa.

WEDDINGS

HARSHAW—GWYN

Winnipeg— The marriage took place this afternoon in the Church of St. George the Martyr of Miss Elizabeth Emily Gwyn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Trevor Gwyn of Winnipeg, to Mr. James Arthur Harshaw of Toronto, son of Mrs. Harshaw and the late Archibald Thomas Harshaw of Napanee. Rev. W. L. Wright, assisted by Rev. C. J. S. Stuart, conducted the ceremony.

Mr. Gwyn gave his daughter in marriage, and she wore an effective gown of white bridal satin, with heirloom veil of rose point and Brussels lace, and carried bridal roses. The groomsman was Mr. E. P. Allison and the ushers, Mr. Trever Wilkie, Mr. Alex Hutchinson, Mr. T. F. R. Elliott and Mr. Harold Harshaw.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Arthur Wilkie, Crescent Road, and Mrs. Gwyn received in a gown of aquamarine blue with contrasting accessories, and corsage of sweet peas. For travelling the bride will wear a cherry red tailored suit, black coat trimmed with Persian lamb, and matching hat. Mr. Harshaw and his bride will live at 112 Hudson Drive, Moore Park, on their return.

Fashion Flashes

It's just everywhere, this passion for gray. One of the loveliest prints of the season is an afternoon frock of gray silk crepe with a white and violet floral design. A bunch of matching violets is thrust through the belt. Pretty with a gray jacket.

Be casual when it comes to informal dinner dresses. A charming model has a short-sleeved sweater-type blue crepe blouse worn with a long full skirt chevron striped in purply blue, light red and white. The skirt is made with a high waistband with the stripes horizontal.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Courageous Mother—This One

Dear Miss Fairfax,—

My husband broke every law and commandment and wound up in jail. I had a high school education and one year in a business college. Yet I did not feel myself too good to do scrubbing and rough cleaning, to keep a roof over the children's heads. I adore the children —a beautiful boy of 8, a little girl of 6. They are so mature, realize their responsibility, and help to make each other happy.

While I was out working one day, a very wealthy woman, childless, noticed my children and how well they played together. Now if this woman were the usual rich, stupid reactionary, I should have thrown her out when she offered to adopt my children. But she's a very good sort, has done much for underprivileged people and is a force for good in her community.

I shall put aside my own feelings and dwell only on the advantages to my children if I give them up. I'm a charwoman, and I can never do much for their welfare beyond loving them. This woman can give them an education, culture, a background. Is my heartbreak worth while? The break must be complete. She does not want me to see them again, if she takes them for her very own.

A Mother

The temperate tone of your letter convinces me you have given this decision your best thought. It is not necessary to tell me of your heartbreak—I realize it.

This lady can give the children all those things which will insure their welfare. Presumably she is capable of loving them, too, as she noticed their endearing qualities. I think, however, that she might be willing to stretch a point and agree to let you see them from time to time.

I have wondered since getting your letter, if I would have the courage to do what you contemplate doing. To be able to give them up requires a sublime courage. There is no element of selfishness in giving up children for their own good. I hope in your place that I should have the courage to say "yes", and give my children to someone who could do all the things for them I could not do.

Can't Persuade Her to go Places

Dear Miss Fairfax,

She seem to enjoy my company and treats me swell, though she refuses when it comes to going out with me. What would you suggest is the best way to persuade her to go places?

Perplexed

With almost the entire sex "rarin' fur to go" this lady must have her own reasons for clinging to the hearthstone. If she belongs to a church, how about suggesting she let you go with her to some of the church entertainments? As an entering wedge, you might suggest a movie given at one of the suburban theatres, if her idea of declining to go with you is that she doesn't want the neighbours to know she's "keeping company".

The Most Tolerant of Husbands

Dear Miss Fairfax,

What is your opinion of a husband who is not a bit jealous of his wife, no matter what she does in his presence, at a party, a dance or even in a night club? She can spend all her evening dancing, drinking and talking with other men and enjoy herself, and then go home with her husband without hearing a word of complaint from him.

He's just the opposite. He'll drink a little, smoke and talk with his men friends. Would you call him a loving, devoted husband, or doesn't he care for his wife? Do you think a jealous husband has more love for his wife than the one mentioned above? When this woman goes out alone, some other man usually escorts her home, and she tells her husband about it. Can this be real love?

Eve

Sometimes husband act in the manner you describe, though I've never known of one to go quite so far and still be absolutely convinced of the fidelity of his wife. Again husband are easy because they're "crazy" about their wives, and know if they object, the domestic charmer will leave them.

If you could only mix these super-tolerant men with those consumed with the green-eyed monster of jealousy, we'd come pretty close to achieving a millenium.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Make Your St. Patrick's Day Table Settings Effeceive

St. Patrick's Day colors are "naturals" for table-settings! The hostess who plans a party for this gala day finds delight in the dramatic combination of emerald green and white. An effective color accent is the black of the paper high hat.

For your table-setting you can buy Cellophane doilies of emerald green. Or, if you're handy with your needle, you can easily stitch up doilies of bright green linen or cotton. You'll be lucky if you have some green plates, or plates with green in the decoration; if you have not some green glasses, you can buy some inexpensive tumblers.

For your centrepiece, use any of the honoured symbols of the day. It's easy to buy or to make a black-paper high hat banded with green ribbon. Stick a white clay pipe in this, and fill with green carnations.

Tiny pots of growing clover—the nearest thing we have to real shamrock—offer limitless decorative possibilities. You can mass the pots of clover in the centre of the table, and flank them with alternating green and white candles. Another trick is to cut a harp from cardboard, gild it, attach it to a base, place in the centre of the table, and surround it with the pots of clover.

You can, if you wish, make the entire motif of the table-setting a clover leaf. Cut a clover leaf from green cardboard, or painted white cardboard, attach it to a base and use it as a centrepiece, surrounded with the pots of clover. An alternative is to have the clover leaf lying flat on the table, outlined with the pots of clover. For favors use boxes, clover-leaf-shaper, filled with green, or green and white, candies.

Death in Family

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it proper and in good taste, in case of a death, for the immediate family to send flowers? I have noticed that very often when a parent dies, the son and daughters have floral pieces sent to the home individually.

T. L.

Flowers have such an inevitably sweet and deep way of saying just what we want them to say, that, in the case of death, we send them to express our tribute to the one who has gone on. When the shadow falls very close to us, we want our flowers to express our message, our tribute of love and devotion and appreciation and memory. This tribute is even more appropriate to those near and dear than to friends who could not possibly be so close to our lives.

Ham for Easter—Of Course

By MARTHA LOGAN

Easter without a gayly decorated baked ham would be like Christmas without a brightly lighted evergreen tree. Both are traditions which have continued to grow in favor throughout all these many years of change and the growing urge for the new and novel.

Of course, the best hams of today have kept up with changing demands for greater ease of food preparation and more satisfaction in table testing. So, too, the modern ham is in step with consumer demand for informative labeling and carries a tag or insert giving cooking directions, based on extensive laboratory and kitchen tests.

No long cooking processes, no parboiling, no guesswork as to doneness need worry the modern hostess. Scientific production and quality control assure uniformly tender hams of such superior flavor as was impossible even five years ago.

Since a discussion of working methods is unnecessary here if a woman reads the directions that come with the ham, let's talk about garnishes for the Easter ham.

A beautiful brown glaze is made by sifting brown sugar over the uniform, diamond-scored, cooked ham. Drizzle honey or maple syrup over this or use the thick juice from canned peaches or apricots. The spicy pickle juice from peaches, watermelon rind or crabapple pickle may also be used as a savory sauce to baste the brown sugar topping.

Easter is a time of flowers, so let's use a flower garnish. Candied orange peel may be used to form petals for a flower design on top of the ham, or cook until tender half-inch strips of thin orange peel, then roll into rosettes and candy in syrup. This makes flowers in the likeness of double tulips to use around the ham.

Another flower-like garnish is made by paring in spiral fashion thin half-inch strips from the thick end of a carrot. Draw a sprig of parsley through the spiral and a California poppy is formed.

The colored Easter egg idea may be carried out by tinting shelled, hard-cooked eggs with vegetable colors, or use balls of cooked carrots, turnips, beets, and Brussels sprouts in nests of noodles, shoestring potatoes, or parsley.

Whatever the garnish, plan something that does not require too much last-minute preparation. Remember, too, that the garnish should be good to serve and eat with the ham because, after all, the ham is the centre of attraction for the Easter table.

MELROSE Y.P.U.

The regular meeting of the Melrose Young People's Union was held in the Church Hall on Tuesday evening, March 12, with an attendance of 19. The President opened the meeting with Hymn 236 and all remained standing while Alex Allison read Psalm 23. Morley Pascoe then read a Bible selection. Business was discussed. Marion English and Audrey Demill took up the collection. The Missionary Convener, Mrs. B. McKinney, took charge and Hymn 274 was sung. Evelyn Badgley read a poem followed with the Scripture Lesson by Beatrice Macfarlane. Frances MacFarlane gave an interesting topic on "Let's Go To Church In India". Audrey Demill and Marion English sang "If Jesus Goes With Me I'll Go Anywhere". Mrs. S. Demill gave a humorous reading entitled "The Inventor's Wife". Gordon Snider sang a comical song "The Lone Country Bachelor". Hymn 381 was sung. All joined in a sing-song and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

BETHANY Y.P.U.

The weekly meeting of the Bethany Y.P.U. was held at the home of Mr. Wesley Bradshaw on Tuesday evening, March 12.

The meeting opened with quiet music and the Call to Worship. Hymn 31 was sung after which the Lord's Prayer was repeated. Miss Hazel Walker read the Scripture lesson. The Secretary's report was read and adopted. Business was discussed. This part of the meeting closed with Hymn 25.

Mr. Clem Treverton then took charge. Hymn 36 was sung. Mrs. George Sills gave a reading. Mrs. A. Miller and Miss Stella Bradshaw favoured with a duet. Miss Edith Walker gave the topic. Hymn 22 was sung and Miss Hazel Walker gave a reading.

A musical selection was given by Mr. Harry McPherson and Miss Bessie Walker. Mr. Horace Casey gave a reading and the meeting closed with Hymn 10 and the League Benediction. A contest was given by Mr. Clem Treverton, after which Miss Hazel Walker led in a few games.

MOIRA COMMUNITY LEAGUE

The regular meeting of Moira United Church Community League was held on Monday evening, March 11th., in the vestry. The President Miss Betty Foster was in charge. The meeting opened with a "get-together" game, after which everyone settled down for devotionals.

The Scripture Lesson was read by Miss Jean Holden. Mr. Wesley Farrell read an interesting letter from Canadian Missionary friends in China. A number of short readings were presented by the following— Connie Williams, Earl Thompson, Mr. Hart, Mrs. W. Farrell.

A short play was presented by some pupils from the public school, after which a vocal duet was rendered by Beverly Foster and Nicholas Rusnake, "South of the Border" which was much enjoyed.

Mrs. Nelson Welsh gave a Travel Talk on Quebec, having been on a tour of that city last year, she was able in her own style to hold the interest of everyone present. The meeting closed with a hymn. Attendance numbered thirty-five.

HALLOWAY Y.P.U.

The weekly meeting of the Halloway Young People's Union was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Mary Carter with seventeen in attendance. In the absence of the President, the meeting was in charge of Mr. Colin Donald. Following the opening hymn all repeated the Lord's Prayer. Mr. Coleman Townsend read the Scripture Lesson and Mrs. Frederick a poem "How He Came".

A letter was read from Mr. Ralph Campbell, president of the Belleville and South Hastings Y.P.U. referring to the matter of reporting meetings in the local paper, as discussed at the Rally held in Foxboro last week. Mrs. Ed. Emerson was appointed Press Secretary for Halloway.

Rev. E. M. Cooke discussed plans for inviting the Unions of Marsh Hill and Foxboro to join with Halloway in a Young People's gathering to be held here in connection with special Easter services.

A splendid talk was given by Rev. Mr. Cooke on "The Meaning of the Symbols", dealing with the significance of the Last Supper observance.

Mrs. Clayton Read, Fellowship Convener, then took charge of the meeting. A reading was given by Mrs. Ed. Emerson. Miss Mary Carter sang a favorite hymn, "The Old Rugged Cross," accompanied by Mrs. Wm. Faulkner. Mrs. Don Rose gave a reading entitled "Words". The Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting. A contest U-Auto-Know was won by the group whose leader was Mr. Don Rose. A bountiful lunch was served by the hostess.

FOXBORO Y.P.U.

Young People's Union was held in the Sunday School room on Tuesday evening when Cannifton Young People were guests of Foxboro. The main feature of the evening's program was a debate "Resolved that modernistic furniture makes a house more homelike than does good copies of period furniture or furniture from good designers such as Duncan Phyfe". The affirmative side was taken by Misess Verna Pound and Ruth Whitfield, Cannifton, while Miss Nama Sine and Mr. Jim Ketcheson spoke for the negative. The negative side won the decision. The judges were Mrs. R. G. Coulter, Belleville, Miss Emma Collett, Cannifton; Miss Muriel Milligan, Foxboro. Contests, games and lunch were enjoyed by all.

MARSH HILL Y.P.U.

The weekly league meeting of the Marsh Hill Young People met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Marsette on Friday night with twenty-eight present. The president opened the meeting with a hymn, followed with prayer by Mr. B. Mitts. The Scripture lesson was read by Marjorie Parks.

Dora Sharpe, the missionary convener, then conducted a very interesting program, "School Days in India", taken from the Study book "Moving Millions". A very interesting reading on "Mohan a boy of India" was read by Mr. W. Lough. Irene Coulter sang with her own guitar accompaniment. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

BRIDGE STREET Y. P. U.

The March 11th meeting of the Bridge Street Young People's Society was under the direction of the Christian Fellowship group under Myrtle Reid, who took charge of the devotional, and also led in a very instructive discussion on the Lenten Season with the heading of "Christ as we See Him To-day".

Under Gertrude Lazier's supervision reports were given as to what has been done concerning the Cabaret.

Refreshments and a social hour followed the singing of the last hymn.

The Dentist

Occasionally I get letters from dentists asking me what can be done to improve relations between a child and his dentist. Well, I only know of one thing than can be done, and parents are the ones to do it—show the child that the dentist's office isn't at all the torture chamber that is often depicted to little girls and boys.

When dentist come up to see the teeth of the Quintuplets—usually it is the dean of the college of dentistry of the University of Toronto—they always say "Why can't all children act like the Quins?"

Of course, they refer to the way the Quins behave when they are having their teeth examined, and the do behave beautifully. They are never frightened at the prospect of having the dentist examine their teeth and clean them. But don't think for a moment this good behaviour is due to the fact that these children are brave or courageous beyond the average. I don't think they are. They just have never been frightened by stories about dentists.

We haven't allowed them to hear anything like that. To them the dentist is just a good friend who is trying to see that they have nice teeth. They are no more scared of him than they are of me. Yet I have gone into families where children were frightened to death of the doctor. Why? Well, because when they wanted to frighten the youngsters they would threaten—"If you don't do so-and-so, I'll call the doctor". Such children are scared of dentists too. He shares the bogeyman role with the doctor.

If parents only realized how important it is that their children have good teeth and that the dentist see them at regular periods, they would never let the child become frightened of him and his white coat and shiny instruments. Remember, this isn't just a child's mouth. It is the only mouth your child will ever have. It is the mouth he will carry all through his life and if it gets a bad start, it will always be bad.

All children should be taken to the dentist regularly. Don't wait unit they are half grown. Take them early and take them often.

Sometimes, of course, parents and home training are not at all responsible for the fear children have of dentist's offices. Older children often take a fiendish delight in frightening younger ones about such things. I think policeman, doctors and dentists all come in for some attention in this way.

So, the earlier you can take your child to the dentist the better. If he can say, when children begin to talk about the tortures that go on in the dentist chair "Why, I've been there and it didn't hurt', then you've won a victory.

Of course, a lot depends on the first visit to the dentist. If the child is of nervous, excitable temperament, he is likely to be a bit of a problem. Often, it is well to take the child to the dentist several times before any work is done at all. In this way the child gets acquainted, so that when the time comes that the dentist says, "Open your mouth", it isn't a total stranger who does it.

BAY OF QUINTE W. I.

The regular meeting of the Bay of Quinte W. I. was held on Wednesday last, at the home of Mrs. G. Clapp, Front Road, with a good attendance.

The president, Mrs. R. Ketcheson opened the meeting with the Opening Ode, Lord's Prayer in unison. Roll call was answered by antiques, many were on display, some were described as being a century old. Business was discussed and the secretary's report was very gratifying.

At this time Mrs. Ketcheson called on Mr. Arnold Westfall, as guest speaker. Having made success of poultry raising, he gave a most helpful talk on chicken raising from the incubator to the marketing of the fowl. A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Westfall for his very able talk.

The program was now turned over to the convener, Mrs. Bruce Hogle, it being grandmothers' day. "Silver Threads Among the Gold" was sung by several of the grandmothers which brought great applause.

A contest was put on, on the grandmothers' names and was won by Mrs. Palce. In a spelling match between the grandmothers and the non-grandmothers of words of four letters spelled backwards, the non-grandmothers won. Historical Research was the topic for the day and a paper prepared by Mrs. C. Ketcheson on this topic will be heard at a later date owing to the late hour. Mrs. R. Ketcheson again took charge of the meeting. A wool cushion donated by Mrs. R. Ketcheson was on observation and for sale, the proceeds to go for Red Cross work. Mrs. Casey Ketcheson, convener of the Red Cross work, gave a report of work done through the local Institute. 24 pairs pyjamas; 35 pairs socks; 6 scarfs; 5 sweaters; 6 helmets; 10 pneumonia jackets up to date and many other articles are under way. The meeting closed by singing God Save the King.

Worry Exhausts the Nerves

Only in recent years have the serious consequences of worry and nervous disorders been fully realized. And as they are realised, the value of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food becomes better and better appreciated.

Worry makes you nervous and irritable and sleepless. It destroys memory and the ability to concentrate the mind. It ruins digestion and makes you feel tired and downhearted and discouraged. Why not fight off worry by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to restore nerve force to the exhausted nervous system?

You will not be using it long before you find yourself resting and sleeping better, less irritable and nervous and looking on the bright side again. Your friends will soon tell you how much better you are looking and you will know again the joy of healthful living.

Nursing Sister Tells Of Experience In Last Great War

Madoc—On Wednesday, March 13th, the Madoc Branch of the Red Cross Society held a successful entertainment in the Eastern Star Hall, Madoc. The afternoon was given over to an open meeting with a splendid program provided by local talent and a guest speaker, Mrs. Chester Sills of Ivanhoe, who was a nurse in the last great war. She gave many of her own personal experiences and spoke of the magnificent work done by the Red Cross.

Mrs. Jennie Morrison who is convener of the War Work Committee of Madoc branch and who attended the annual Red Cross meeting in Toronto as a delegate gave a splendid report on the meetings. Reports of Hart's and Hazzard's Red Cross units were given by Mrs. McCaffrey and Mrs. Broad. Several musical numbers were given. Duets by Mrs. Foster and Miss Salisbury, solo by Miss Margaret O'Connell, vocal trio by the Parks sister, two dance numbers by Barbara Jean and Patsy Nicol. Dutch dance by eight High School Girls. Reading by Miss Doris Broad. Mrs. Leslie Ashley and Miss West provided music during the tea hour. The hall was tastefully decorated with St. Patrick decorations and the tea tables also carried green lighted candles and St. Patrick decorations.

In the evening a bridge and euchre followed by lunch and a dance with the High School orchestra providing the music brought to a close a very successful event. Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. Golan and Mr. Johnston, euchre prize by Mr. Kernaham. Mrs. Jas. Watson as convener of the day's events and her assistants are to be complimented on the success on the day's event.

During the week the work-room committee shipped to Red Cross Headquarters, Toronto, 48 pair of socks, 24 sets of pyjamas, 24 sweaters, 5 quilts, 1 dozen hot water bottle covers, 24 ice box covers, 24 pair wristlets, 3 scarves, 2 pair bed socks and 1 helmet.

Shower is Held For Bridal Couple

West Huntingdon — On Wednesday evening a large crowd of friends and neighbors gathered in the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter McInroy to tender a miscellaneous shower in honour of their youngest daughter, Marjorie, who was recently married to Mr. John Blakely of Thomasburg. Mr. Elmer Post was chairman for the evening's entertainment which consisted of community singing with Mrs. W. J. Fitchett at the piano. Mr. W. Wannamaker gave a couple of musical selections. Solos were given by Miss Mary Elliott and Mr. John B. Hagerman. Instrumental numbers were given on the piano by Miss Georgie Pitman and Mr Vincent Farrell. Miss Margaret Wright read an appropriate address which was signed by Mrs. W. J. Fitchett, Mrs. Elmer Post, Georgie Pitman and Jean Farrell. Both Marjorie and John made suitable replies. Gifts were both numerous and beautiful including Pyrex, electric lamps, etc. Speeches were made by Messrs. Charles Mumby, Barton Haggerty and Angus Farrell.

The remainder of the evening was spent in a social way.

Vision Test Held By School Nurse

The monthly report of the City School Nurse was tendered by Miss E. A. Earshman, Public Health Nurse, at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education held in the Belleville Collegiate Institute last evening.

During the month of February Miss Earshman made 19 official visits to city public schools and held 492 class inspections. Forty-two observations were made and 40 physical inspections carried out.

With the employment of new sight charts a total of 475 vision tests were completed. Eight dental clinics, 16 home visits and 14 visits by parents to the nurse's office were reported. During the month 16 scholars were excluded from city schools by the nurse owing to illness.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, March 17

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds testimonies of rather peculiar experiences. These may have either occult, spiritual or revolutionary angles which are difficult to interpret. Personal research or group work of a humane or reformatory social nature is indicated. Higher and subtle forces and creative urges are involved, but in all be wise with superiors and wary of deception.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of experiences out of the routine, with activities in unfamiliar avenues. New, original or unique projects may thrive, especially if in co-operation with groups or associates of high social and reformatory ideals. But be tactful with superiors and alert to subtlety, intrigue and duplicity.

A child born on this day may be blessed with original talents and faculties of an intellectual and creative expression. It may progress in some novel lines, despite opposition or lack of support.

For Monday, March 18

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a successful, progressive and pleasant day, with much stirring to promote good fortune and personal well being. The young and adventurous, with flares of genius and originality, are under excellent sway for achievement and gratification, with romance, possibly matrimony, in the forefront. Elders and feminine influence are propitious.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of promise and achievement, with personal gratifications and pleasures. There will be success through originality and ingenuity, with intellectual as well as creative inspiration, elders and superiors supporting. Romance and emotonal adventures are likely, with the young having especial significance and expression. But shun extravagance and over-enthusiasm.

A child born on this day may have great versatility and creative ability of a scientific and intellectual nature. It may be kindly, humane, generous, popular and gay.

WOMEN'S LIBERAL LEAGUE MEETS

Holding their organization meeting at the home of Mrs. Harold Longwell of Foxboro last night about seventy-five members of the Sidney Women's Liberal League listened to Mr. McLean Haig, Liberal candidate for South Hastings, as he set forth the issue of the election in a brief address. Solos by Miss Carlyle and Mrs. Chambers as well as readings by Mrs. T. A. Tucker were thoroughly enjoyed as part of the evening's social entertainment.

Lunch served by the ladies after Mr. Haig's address brought the evening to a close. Mrs. P. Utman is president of the Sidney Women's Liberal League.

God Bless Canada

(Words and Music by Mr. and Mrs. G. M. James, Belleville, Ontario.)

God bless Canada, lovely Canada,
The home of maple and beaver,
Whose great fields, mines, forests and seas
Richly reward real endeavour.
May her destiny be that of wise growth,
A noble example of worth.
God bless Canada, lovely Canada,
The home of maple and beaver.

God bless Canada, busy Canada,
And its people staunch, brave and true,
With freedom, progress and candour,
And encouragement for the weak.
Grant that Canada more and more ensures
The Home Sweet Home of multitudes.
God bless Canada, busy Canada,
The home of the staunch, brave and true.

God bless Canada, loyal Canada,
Bless homes with plenteous content,
And leaders with wisdom and strength,
Toilers with gainful employment
That in peril she may join in the fight
With our Commonwealth of Nations.
God bless Canada, loyal Canada,
The home of stalwarts tried and true.

EXPLANATORY

1. Mr. and Mrs. James have been engaged in choir and concert activities nearly all their lives. Mrs. James, known as Effie Chapman, for many years sang the leading part in one of the most famous ladies' quartettes known to the counties near Lake Erie. Mrs. James during the same period was also a talented lyric soprano, and often sang the leading role in such compositions as Robin Hood.

Mr. James, a graduate of the University of Toronto in Arts and also in Law, is a retired Ontario High School Principal who has spent the best forty years of his life teaching school, singing in choirs and conducting his various school choruses with brilliant success.

Is it any wonder that two such talented and experienced people should in collaboration give Canada such an inspiring National Anthem as "God Bless Canada", so admirably suited to the youth of all grades and kinds of Canadian schools?

2. The words of this National Anthem are simple, and intended to inspire in Canadian youth a love for and devotion to Canada, the future seat and centre of The British Empire.

3. Music for youth must be simple, within their vocal range and capacity, varied and conspicuously melodious. The wonderful energy of youth demands March Time.

4. In a chorus rendition the first line of each stanza might be sung as a solo, and then all parts take up the melody from the beginning as if that had not been done. This will emphasize the theme effectively, and also give pleasing variety as the soloist may change with each stanza.

5. March Time for youth is lively, with noticeable traits of faith, hope and optimism.

6. The words of this National Anthem were composed by Mrs. James at the outbreak of the war, September 1939, and were distributed locally in Belleville, also throughout Canada and the United States for suggestions.

7. The cost post-free of the words alone, or of both words and music in standard sheet music form is much below what you would expect if obtained directly from The Publishers, The James Texts, Belleville, Ontario.

8. In due course of time The James Texts hope to be able to supply music for bands and orchestras for this National Anthem.

GOD BLESS CANADA

Wearin 'O' the Green Becomes a Menu

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

GREEN GROWS the menu on St. Patrick's Day, so why not get an early start on spring by serving some of these dishes?

Baked or broiled bananas with an Emerald Mint Sauce go well with a St. Patrick's Day menu. For six servings, use one cup canned crushed pineapple, one cup sugar, three-fourths cup water, green food coloring and for drops oil of peppermint. Mix pineapple, sugar and water. Simmer for ten minutes, stirring once in a while. Add food coloring and oil of peppermint. Serve hot on baked or broiled bananas with the main course or as a hot dessert.

Irish Stew is a good choice for St. Patrick's or any other day. Why not dumplings with your stew, made according to a new recipe? For eight dumplings use one and one-half cups flour, teaspoon salt, tablespoon baking powder, one egg, tablespoon melted fat, one-half cup bran and three-fourths cup milk. Sift flour, salt and baking powder together. Beat egg until light; add melted and cooled fat, bran and milk. Add liquid mixture to sifted dry ingredients and stir only until flour disappears. Drop batter by heaping teaspoonfuls on top of hot meat stew, cover tightly and simmer for 20 minutes without removing cover. Serve hot.

Salad Plate

For a good salad plate, use six lettuce leaves, 12 canned pineapple sticks, one cup oranges (chopped), one cup bananas (sliced), one-half cup cream mayonnaise, a three-ounce package cream cheese, tablespoon cream and six nutmeats (halved). Arrange lettuce leaves on salad platter and on each leaf place two pineapple sticks. Mix chopped oranges and bananas with cream mayonnaise. Place a heaping tablespoon of mixture on pineapple sticks. Soften cheese with and make into six balls, pressing a nutmeat into the centre of each ball. Use to garnish salad.

To make the cream mayonnaise, fold one-half cup whipped cream into one-half cup mayonnaise. Chill in refrigerator before serving. For a tinted salad dressing, use one-half cup each vinegar, lemon juice, one-fourth cup chopped mint, one and one-half tablespoons granulated sugar, one-half cup cold water, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup freshly-chopped mint leaves. Combine vinegar, lemon juice and one-fourth cup chopped mint. Simmer until reduced to one-half original quantity. Add sugar, water and salt. Strain and chill. Add one-fourth cup mint leaves when thoroughly chilled. Makes about one and one-half cups.

How about making some cup cakes, frosting with a green icing, and then rolling them in coconut which has been tinted a pale green? To make the icing use two cups sugar, one-half cup water, two tablespoons light corn syrup, two egg whites, teaspoon mint essence and few drops green food coloring. Boil sugar, water and syrup together until it spins a thread (240 degrees F.). Pour over stiffly-beaten egg whites; flavor and color, set bowl in hot water and beat to spreading consistency.

Port Arthur Ready to Oppose Saskatchewan Winners After Winning District

By the Canadian Press

Word of another great crop of contenders in Manitoba, the home of the Dominion junior hockey champions of 1937 and 1938, is going the rounds as the fight narrows down again in Memorial Cup playoffs.

The Winnipeg district missed the boat last year when Edmonton Athletic Club went east to play—and lost to—Oshawa Generals in the Dominion junior finals. In the two years before that Winnipeg Monarchs and St. Boniface Seals had captured the title.

Now four strong clubs, reputedly containing professional timber, are fighting for the Manitoba laurels. Winnipeg and Kenora Thistles open a best-of-three southern division final at Kenora tonight. While Winnipeg Elmwood Maple Leafs and Winnipeg St. James Canadians are tied at a game apiece in their best-of-three northern division playoff.

Still looming large, however, are the '39 finalists. Oshawa has gained a one-game lead over Toronto Marlboros for the Ontario Hockey Association Junior "A" title and has just as strong a lineup as last year, even though lacking an individual standout like Billy Taylor. Edmonton has put together a team strong enough to lick Trail 11-1 in the first contest of their Alberta-British Columbia best-of-three series.

Port Arthur On Trail

Edmonton or Trail will oppose the Saskatchewan champions and the Manitoba winners will play Port Arthur in the western semi-finals. Port Arthur took the Thunder Bay throne last night in a 7-4 victory over Fort William.

Perth will oppose Charlottetown in an eastern intersectional playoff. The Ontario team stopped Cornwall 9-2 last night to gain the Ottawa and district junior title again while Charlottetown captured the Maritimes championship by downing Truro 7-4, taking the total-goals round by the impressive total of 22-5.

The Perth-Charlottetown survivor will play the Quebec champions, who are a long way from being declared. Verdun Maple Leafs are to meet the winner of a game between Sherbrooke and Thetford Mines in one Quebec semi-final. Quebec Aces swept past Three Rivers, 8-5 and 24-1 in a total-goals round, to earn the right to meet eVrdun Bulldogs or Lachine in the other semi-final.

Sudbury Frood Tiger Juniors and South Porcupine will begin a best-of-three round Tuesday for the Northern Ontario championship and the right to oppose Oshawa or the Marlboros.

FRANK A. CORRELL HEADS BOWLERS

Frank A. Correll was re-elected president of the Belleville Lawn Bowlers' Association at the club's annual meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening. Enthusiasm dominated the conclave as it was revealed that 29 new members had been obtained during the 1939 season, bringing the male membership of the club to a total of 79.

Following the election of officers plans to further enlarge the association membership were discussed by the 300 odd club members who attended the meeting. President Correll personally extended the thanks of the club to the Corbin Lock Company, donors of the new Corbin Lock Trophy supplied for treble tournament competition during 1939.

Secretary-Treasurer Harold Cross presented the financial statement of the club, which proved exceedingly satisfactory, showing a substantial credit bank balance following last season's operation. Efforts to still further the club's membership were agreed upon following a general "round-table" discussion, however. The matter of entering the Ontario Provincial Lawn Bowlers' Association was left in abeyance and the Belleville Club selected delegates to the district lawn bowling convention, to be held locally later in the season.

The result of the election of officers of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Association for the current year was:

President—F. A. Correll.
Vice-Pres.—John Shaw.
Sec.-Treas.—Harold Cross.
Chairman of Greens—Fred Harper.
Chairman of Games — H. E. Thompson.
Chairman of Membership—Geo. Watkin.

Pigden, Vechter and Clare Lead Attack in One-Point Victory

PLAY IN TORONTO

Toronto, Mar. 16 (CP).—Remaining basketball district winners of the Central Ontario Secondary School Association conclude their quest for the association's four titles in the final round of the two-day annual tournament here today.

At the end of the semi-final round last night, teams from Meaford, Belleville, Niagara Falls and Owen Sound joined Bowmanville, Cobourg and Peterboro — the teams which drew byes—in the final brackets.

Possibility that Niagara Falls might grab two of the championships when two of their three teams swept past semi-final obstacles. The senior girls, displaying a fast and accurate passing style of play, trounced Midland high school 47-22 and the junior boys, unbeaten this year, licked Orillia collegiate institute 37-12.

The girls now face Cobourg and the boys Peterborough. Owen Sound's junior girls eliminated the Falls' other entry with a hard fought 26-18 victory which sent them into the final against Bowmanville.

Belleville Beats Bowmanville.

In the senior boys' division, Meaford and Belleville snatched one-point victories to enter the final round. Ralph Bumstead sparked Meaford to their 37-36 win over St. Catharines sinking six field goals and two foul shots for 14 points. Belleville edged out Bowmanville 31-30 with Bill Pigden, Max Vechter and Ross Clare leading the attack.

Midland's inability to keep track of pretty Lucy Joinette, whose spectacular shooting accounted for 27 points, enabled Niagara Falls to roll up an overwhelming lead. She sank the first two baskets to give the red and white clad Falls' team a 4-0 lead and after Doreen Rowe pulled Midland level with two baskets she ran wild, sinking 10 more field goals and three foul shots.

Niagara led 17-12 at half-time. Helen Giesenhoff with six, Zorka Yankoff with four and Jean Walker with ten scored the other Falls' points. Esther May and Doreen Rowe acted as spearheads of the Midland attack, scoring eight and seven points respectively.

In the boys' game the Falls' team forged into an early lead and at the half time whistle led 13-10. Johnny Murphy of Niagara Falls topped the scorers with 14 points and was followed closely by his teammate, Jimmy Greenwood, who scored 13.

Jacqueline McCullough of Owen Sound captured scoring honors in the junior girls' game with 12 points. Niagara Falls' Adeline Smillie and Owen Sound's Eileen Lageer picked up ten points each to follow Miss McCullough.

Lakeland, Fla., March 16—(AP)—Manager Del Baker got back into harness today for Detroit Tigers' game with Brooklyn Dodgers after a 24-hour layoff with a cold. This was Brooklyn's third appearance in Lakeland, making the Dodgers virtually commuters.

Los Angeles — While Chicago Cubs' fans keep their fingers crossed, Clay Bryant prepared to test his pitching arm today against the White Sox in the third game of their city series. Each team has won one game and a total of 42 runs have been scored, showing it's about time for some pitcher to test his arm.

Sebring, Fla.—Cleveland Indians are blossoming out as a defensive ball club. In their exhibition against Washington Senators yesterday the Indians benefited from two double plays and the air-tight pitching of Bill Zuber, Harry Eisenstat and Johnny Humphreys.

Winter Haven, Fla. — No Gazelle in the field, rookie Johnny Rucker is making Manager Bill Terry of New York Giants take notice of his hitting. He batted "five for five" against the world champion Yankees yesterday until Spud Chandler stopped him in the seventh.

Dickie Barrett Leads Juveniles In Scoring Race

Dick Barrett, up-and-coming left winger with the 1940 Belleville juveniles, led the local teen-aged pucksters as the team's leading scorer in the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association playdowns participated in by the Dennis-Reid locals. Barrett scored three goals and had one assist in four league games. Al Kellar and Bennett were second in the scoring with two goals and one assist each. Barrett having four scoring points.

The Belleville juveniles scored ten goals in four games while goalie Ted Clark fished 13 pucks from behind him as the result of goals scored against the local kids in the O.J.H.A. Bill McBride, by virtue of a major penalty, was the badman of the team serving 12 minutes in the hockey "cooler."

The individual scoring records of the Belleville Juveniles for 1940 are:

Player	M.	G.	A.	Pts.	Pen

ALBERT COLLEGE DEFEATED 5 TO 3 BY ASSUMPTION

ONCE TIED

Moulden, Bailey and Partridge Scorers for the Green and White

London, Ont., March 16—(CP)—St. Patrick's College of Ottawa and Assumption College High School of Windsor entered the Ontario Interscholastic hockey final Friday with victories in the semi-final round of the tournament conducted under auspices of the University of Western Ontario.

St. Patrick's defeated North Bay High School 2-1, while Assumption had nearly as much trouble defeating Albert College of Belleville 5-3.

Alex Connell's Ottawa team had too much weight and too much speed for North Bay but couldn't grab an advantage until the final period, when John Ellis shot the winning goal. After that Cummings put the puck into the Ottawa net, but it was ruled he was standing in the goal crease.

After a fast and scoreless first period, Frarr put North Bay ahead in the second. George Pope tied the count within four minutes on a pass from Jack Doyle. Ellis' clincher came on a rebound of Bill Munro's shot after three minutes of the third.

Devlin saved North Bay time after time with brilliant goaltending, while Gerry Tuner had considerably less to do in Ottawa's nets.

Albert College rattled in two quick goals in the third period to tie Assumption 3-3. Bill Lowery and Jim Jenkins scored in quick succession, however, to establish the purple's supremacy.

The final will be played tomorrow afternoon.

National Leaguers Due for Beating In All-Star Game

Tampa, Fla., March 16—(AP)—Barring a reprieve because of rain or other fortuitous circumstances, the long-suffering National Leaguers are due to take another lambasting from their American League tormentors in tomorrow's all-star baseball game.

The American League has summoned perhaps the most wicked line-up it ever has thrown into an all-star contest. The Nationals look weaker than in any previous game. The Nationals at least will have the consolation of knowing they stuck their necks out for a fine cause, the Finnish Relief Fund. All they need now is some relief from the American League.

With five New York Yankees and three Boston Red Sox as starters, Manager Joe McCarthy has a stronger American line-up than ever before because of the addition of two slugging sophomores, Charley Keller from the Yankees and Ted Williams of Boston.

At least, the Nationals will not have to look at Red Ruffing and probably Bob Grove. But that is slight comfort with men like Bob Feller, Buck Newsom, Dutch Leonard, Tom Bridges and Vernon Gomez ready to fire at them.

CHICAGO HAWKS DOWN WINGS 4-3 IN ROUGH GAME

Sixteen Penalties Handed Out With Eleven Coming in Last Period

FREE-FOR-ALL FIGHT

Every Player on Both Teams Except Goalies in the Battle

Detroit, March 16—(CP)—At one time New York Americans had the slogan "keep punching", but as things stand now Chicago Black Hawks seemed to have usurped it —and in a literal manner.

Whatever fault Manager Paul Thompson may be able to find with his Hawks, he'll never have to complain about their lack of fight. This was demonstrated recently in two wild weekend games against Toronto Maple Leafs, and it was shown again last night as the Hawks defeated Detroit Red Wings 4-3 in the only National Hockey League game scheduled.

It wasn't quite so bitter as the two Toronto-Chicago battles, but it was still scrappy enough to bring down 16 penalties. Eleven of the penalties came in the last period, during which a melee broke out that involved all the players except the goalies.

The Hawks got all their goals in succession, before the Wings put on a spurt that threatened for a time to tie the score. Joe Cooper, Doug Bentley, Johnny Chad and Bob Carse scored for Chicago with Syd Howe, Alex Motter and Mud Bruneteau netting the Detroit goals.

Howe Finishes Seventh

Howe was in on all three goals and the three points he picked up shot him up into seventh position among individual scorers ahead of Gordie Drillon of Toronto, Hector (Toe) Blake of Canadiens and Phil Watson of Rangers. Howe has 36 points compared to 35 for the other three.

After Cooper had scored in the first period and Bentley in the second session, the teams put on a third period scoring bee that produced a goal a minute in the first five minutes. Detroit's first two scores came only 12 seconds apart.

The Hawks, who still have a game to play to complete their regular schedule, start a best-of-three Stanley Cup playoff series with the Maple Leafs at Toronto on Tuesday night. The Wings start a similar series against New York Americans at Detroit the same night.

Voting is in progress for one of the National Hockey League's foremost awards, the Calder Trophy, which goes annually to the rookie adjudged by writers to be the best of the season.

The selections are made for The Canadian Press by hockey writers in N.H.L. cities and the trophy is donoted by the league president, Frank Calder.

No player who has participated in so much as one National League game in a previous season is eligible for the prize. That lets out players who are engaged in their first full season in the big time but who played in a game or two in other years, like Goalie Paul Goodman of Chicago or Centre Connie Brown of Detroit.

Frank Brimsek, Boston's sensational netminder, won the prize in 1939 but no goaltender is eligible this time. Goodman is out because he played a single game with the Black Hawks in the Stanley Cup series of 1938.

But there is no dearth of freshmen. New York Rangers have introduced two sensational forwards in Kilby MacDonald and Alf Pike while Chicago has a big crop of candidates, including Doug Bentley, Johnny Chad, Bob Carse, Les Cunningham and Phil Hergesheimer.

In Wally Stanowski, Toronto has almost the only rookie defenceman to make good this winter in his first attempt. Stanowski, a free-skating Pole from Winnipeg, has made good with a bang. Lex Chisholm has been a determined and consistently strong performer with the same club in his inaugural season although now on the sidelines as the result of a broken arm.

Apparently Belleville is as good a sporting town as comes down the pike. The other night only 2,000 fans saw the Petes play in Owen Sound and Josh Craig, former Peterboro' sports scribe, once told us that a 2,500 crowd was tops in the Liftlock City. Whenever Belleville fans see a winner the local rink is usually filled to capacity. If the Petes were playing here in their current round robin series as a home club the S.R.O. sign would be hung out every night with at least 3,500 attending. Incidentally Sports Scribe Perdue of Peterboro is branching out into a new line, Cec went on the air to broadcast during the Peterboro-Owen Sound game.

Do you remember when the leading scorer in the National Hockey League seventeen years ago today was Babe Dye, of Toronto, who during the season scored 26 goals and 11 assists. His record compared with 24 goals and 23 assists made by "Toe" Blake of Montreal Canadiens who led the league scoring in 1938-39.

Reports that President Larry MacPhail was negotiating with air line officials for flights to be made by the Dodgers this season gained strength last week, when MacPhail admitted having wired the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce that he would be willing to transport the Brooklyn team there by plane, for an exhibition game during three-day off-period of the all-star game next July.

A slight change was necessary in the two local post-season hockey groups. On Monday night Glen Miller and Wallbridge will meet in the third and deciding game for the district rural hockey championship and the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy, while the second doubleheader in the city industrial loop has been postponed until Tuesday. Considerable rivalry has been seen in the Robertson Cup series and both Wallbridge and Glen Miller are bringing large delegations of supporters to cheer their favorites on to victory Monday night.

When Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees counted noses at training camp, he found that he had the only Rumanian in the American League — Charley Stanceu, right-handed pitcher up from Binghamton.

A gala evening's entertainment for the employees of the Stewart Warner-Alemite Company was enjoyed at the Hume Arena last night when winter sports dominated. Hockey games, races, dancing, bingo and a general social time made the evening one which will long be remembered. General Manager L. A. Young and his able band of associates kept things moving in a genial trend all evening.

SPORT SPICE—Frank Buckland's Peterboro' Intermediates beat Collingwood 8-4 last night and cinched a final play-off berth for the Intermediate "A" O.H.A. title......The value of the world champion New York Yankees was highly over-rated prior to the death of the late Col Ruppert, it seems......Instead of being listed as ten million dollar assets you can purchase the Yankees lock, stock and barrel for less than $4,000,000 today, with no takers in sight...... These startling figures would also indicate that some of the advertised major league salaries are also out of proportion......It took Globe and Mail Ed Fitkin to beat Oshawa Times George Campbell with the announcement that Oshawa would shoot for the Allan Cup next puck session......Exactly 243,405 paid admissions to see the New York Rangers play in the Madison Square Gardens this season, an increase of 1,733 over last year's figures......

AS AMERKS HANDED BRUINS SURPRISE DEFEAT

The other Bruin is Bobby Bauer, of Boston Kraut line fame, while rushing up for the Amerks are Ed. Anderson, LEFT, and Johnny Gagnon, in REAR.

Allan Mills

Mrs. John Morton and Mrs. Jack Reid and family visited Mr. and Mrs. Fred McKeown on Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Burkitt and Gerald and Mrs. Harry McAdam spent Wednesday evening with Mr. and Mrs. A. Wright.

Mrs. J. S. McKeown and Miss D. Wellman attended the W. I. pot luck dinner held in the club rooms at Bonarlaw on Wednesday. Mrs. Dave Wellman gave a splendid demonstration on meat cookery. The afternoon was spent in cutting material for war garments.

Mrs. John Morton spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Fred McKeown.

The regular meeting of the W. A. was held at the Rectory on Thursday afternoon with not as large an attendance as usual.

Rain turning to sleet and followed by a heavy snow storm fell in this district on Thursday making the roads very treacherous.

AT THE CAPITOL

"REMEMBER THE NIGHT"

A Paramount picture, directed by Michael Leison from an original screen play by Preston Sturges.

In keeping with the policy laid down at the beginning of the new year to present better pictures, the Capitol brings in one of the best films to play in Belleville in several months.

"Remember the Night", presents Barbara Stanwyck in another hard-boiled role—a lady who has the nasty habit of lifting things that don't belong to her, a failing which, naturally enough, gets her in wrong. Standing trial for one of these thefts, she has the good luck or misfortune, depending on the way you look at it, of having Fred MacMurray as a prosecuting attorney. When the court decides to postpone judgment in her case until after Christmas, Fred, in a moment of weakness, goes her bail so that Barbara may be out of the clink by the holiday. In a still further moment of weakness he takes her to his home in Indiana and introduces her to a folksy atmosphere for the first time in her life.

Now you're getting away ahead of us—yes, he falls for her and when the time comes for him to go back to New York to continue the prosecution, he decides to throw the case in the ash can and marry the gal. But don't jump to conclusions, it doesn't end the way you might expect.

Cast is a little short on "names" but those in the leads do grand jobs. Beulah Bondi has a nice bit as MacMurray's good-hearted, old-fashioned mother, and Elizabeth Patterson is excellent as the fluttery, be - sure-you-have-your-goloshes-on Aunt Emma.

A select group of short subjects complete the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

FREDDIE STONE AND HIS BAND BOX MUSICAL REVUE

Belleville's own sensational entertainer, of province-wide reputation. will appear on the stage of the McCarthy Theatre in person each evening the beginning of the week when Freddie Stone (Ken Soble amateur winner) will present his new band box musical revue which features Belleville's greatest group of entertainers, musicians, singers and dancers, which have been assembled in many years.

Ross Sweet, master of ceremonies; Mildred Day, the tip-tap, tap dancer, Ellen MacFarland, a little Scotty with lots of melody; Betty McCann, the girl with the golden voice; Billy and Clarence Sligh, the guitar kings, and Johnny "nimble-fingers" Lloyd, banjoist.

The show has been carefully arranged to present you with the best in entertainment and you are urged to come and give it the applause it deserves, it is possible that with your help, they will continue and make a name for Belleville, in the nearby spots that are anxious to have Freddie Stone appear.

"MARINES FLY HIGH"

Reunited for the first time since they played pilots in "Sky Giant" a year ago, Richard Dix and Chester Morris are again cast as aviators in R.K.O. Radio's thrilling adventure story "The Marines Fly High" which will be shown on the McCarthy Theatre screen during the stage show presentation. The latest Fox Movietone News events, an excellent Edgar Kennedy comedy "Baby Daze" and an all technicolor Donald Duck cartoon will also be presented. Please note that the screen offering is shown afternoon and evening, but Freddie Stone's appearance is to be only nightly.

New Playing.

"Torpedo Raider", a thrilling drama of the British Navy in action and The Higgins Family in the hilarious comedy-feature "Money to Burn" with the extra presentation of the closing chapter of "Kit Carson" in which the identity of Peg-Leg is revealed is now on the McCarthy screen.

AT THE BELLE

"Raffles"

Samuel Goldwyn's newest production, "Raffles," is now on the Belle theatre screen. The new film, starring David Niven in the title role, with lovely Olivia de Havilland as his leading lady, provides mystery-melodrama at its top-notch best. Superbly and excitingly directed by Sam Wood, "Raffles" was filmed from the screen play by John Van Druten and the late Sidney Howard.

David Niven, as the Amateur Cracksman, turns in a notable performance, marked by acting that is vivid ,romantic and sauve. Miss de Havilland's portrayal of his fiancee proves that she is an actress of brilliant talents. Other stirring performances are contributed by Dudley Digges as Inspector MacKenzie of Scotland Yard, Dame May Whitty as Lady Melrose, Douglas Walton as Bunny Manders. Minor roles are excellently handled by E. E. Clive, Peter Godfrey and Keith Hitchcock.

The story of "Raffles" is the story of a gentleman crook(a sauve society man who leads a life of secret crime for the fun and adventure. Known as the Amateur Cracksman, he has been baffling Scotland Yard with his daring and spectacular robberies for months. And then, just as he is about to withdraw from his dangerous career, he furnishes the Yard with its first and only clue. From then on, the speedy action carries the story to the beautiful country estate of Lady Melrose where the famous emerald necklace is stolen and a chase to London begins.

Unfolded against backgrounds of pictorial beauty and dramatic highlights, "Raffles" was directed with speed and humour, but its most characteristic quality is its ever-mounting suspense. This is, of course, a blend of skillful direction and skillful acting—and just another tribute to the showmanship of Samuel Goldwyn. All of which means that "Raffles" is a film not to be missed by moviegoers who rightfully demand pictures with a quality trademark.

Four Junior Features

Four special junior features will be exhibited on the same program including a funny Leon Errol comedy, "Truth Aches," offering twenty minutes of hilarious fun, an interesting Pete Smith speciality "Romance of a Potato," a clever color cartoon, "Busy Bakers," and the popular Belle British Newsreel, with its important news events from "over there."

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma was in the living room pushing crooked things straight and straight things crooked, and pop said, By the way, how about our famous dinner with the illustrious guest, that ought to be happening any day now, oughtn't it?

O, you mean Mrs. Thurston Willows, ma said, and pop said, So I do. Do you mean to say that you've grown so used to the collossal idea that you've stopped worrying about it? he said.

Well as a cold matter of fact, Willyum, I decided to call that engagement off ma said and pop said, You what, for Peet sake? Columbus didn't call off the discovery of America, did he? Wellington didn't call off the battle of Waterloo, did he? I mean it's impossible, he said.

Just a same it's true, ma said. I called her up to verify the engagement, wich I believe is the customerry procedure to follow, and Mrs. Thurston Willows came to the telephone in person and implied that her presence here on the night in question was out of the question because she expects to be called out of town for the particuler evening, ma said ,and pop said, Who did you say called off the date for Peet sake?

I did, if you'll have the common patience to listen, ma said. I hardly gave her time to get the words out of her mouth when I told her that I had been having a little trouble with my servants, or my staff, as I expressed it, so as a matter of fact it was just as out of the question for me as it was for her, wich made us birds of a feather as far as the entire incident was concerned, ma said, and pop said, You're a genius, and if I had to marry you all over again I'd consider it my lucky day.

By THAYER WALDO

Reynold Rand gave himself over to the luxury of a nearleer. In fact refusing it status as a full-fledged grounds: he neglected to exhibit one is based upon purely technical grounds: he neglected to exhibit his contortional tour de force. Rather, he screened it with great care behind his open newspaper. Of course, that may have been all for the best; there was a lady seated opposite him at the breakfast table, and she chanced to be his wife.

"But my dear girl," he said, nothing but silk in the purr; "my dear, dear girl—how preposterous! Could you conceive of idiotic jealous suspicions in me, of all people? I engaged a bodyguard for you merely to ensure your complete protection and my peace of mind."

With an emphatic movement Irene Rand reached across and snatched the printed barricade from his hands.

"You," she stated in flat accusation, "are a triple distilled liar! In the last 10 years you've never given me a single thought when I wasn't right in the same room, and as few as possible then. You've gone and hired some horrible plug-ugly just to embarrass me so I won't go anywhere, all because in your vile imagination—"

"Pet," Reynold interrupted, suavely mild, "remember your blood pressure. Do you want the veins in your neck standing out when they take those close-ups today?"

Swift solicitous fingers fluttered to her throat, stroked it smoothly. Reynold lit a fat cigar and continued:

"My motives, I can only repeat, are of the highest order. As a well-known star, you can't afford to ignore the current prevalence of kidnaping and robbery."

In the kitchen on their right sounded a buzz. The titular head of the house glanced around in an almost apprehensive fashion. Then he faced forward again, managing a careless smile.

"Ah, yes," he murmured; "that must be the chap now. I asked him to drop around this morning so you could meet him."

Irene gasped and began loudly:

"Reynold P. Rand, if you think I'm actually going to put up with this, you're daffy as hell and—"

Deftly he had risen and slipped through the swing door, leaving her amidspeech. She sprang around the table, bolted after him—and then came to a halt just inside the dining room. Reynold's meager back was toward her, in the hallway; towering neck and more above him stood a great warrior-featured blond lad with gleaming teeth.

"Oh, Mr. Drake—Rey's just been telling me all about you. Do come in and sit down."

Both men faced her, one surprised, the other wearing a mask of cold politeness.

"How do you do, Mrs. Rand?" The tone was self-possessed and impersonal. "It's a pleasure to meet you; I've seen so many of your pictures."

"Thank you," she said, leading him into the library. "Reynold, will you please call the studio and tell them I'll be a little late. Mr. Drake and I need to chat and get acquainted."

He came at nine that evening, looking monumental but even handsomer in dress clothes. Driving alone, they went to the Capitol club.

For an hour she enjoyed herself utterly.

Drake still would unbend but slightly. She was trying for the dozenth time to draw him into conversation when, several tables away, she suddenly glimpsed a familiar face, and started. Maurice! As she stared he saw her, evidently not for the first time. Elaborately he bowed; the accompanying smile was hard, ironic.

Quickly she glanced at her escort, and as instantly knew real excitement. He had seen, too! He was positively glaring in that direction. Irene leaned across the table to whisper:

"Never mind—he's probably tight. I never laid eyes on him before."

But it was futile; that seemed only to aggravate matters. With a bull-like growl deep in his young chest, Drake sprang up and was striding toward the offender, fists hugely doubled.

Shocked wonder checked her thoughts as she saw him charge straight past Maurice, heading for the table beyond. Then the tow-headed giant pulled a man out of a chair, sent him down again with a right to the chin—and the withheld little shriek burst from Irene. Incredibly, the man Drake had punched was Reynold!

The next second or so she never recalled. She only knew that at last her bodyguard was standing before her again; that one enormous hand inexorably grasped the wrist of a tearful little thing with auburn hair.

"Sorry, Mrs. Rand," he said in a voice like avenging thunder, "but I'll have to leave you now, and I won't be coming back. It seems this stuff should begin at home, so from now on I'll be shadowing my wife."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his health, and I said, Hay pop, when you were my age did you have an air rifle?

Being a hint about me wanting one for my birthday next month, and pop said, I admit when I was your age boys had more trouble with their digestions than boys have these days of advanced vitamins and calories, but on the other hand our eyes were much tuffer because they weren't constantly straining to follow so many different comics at the same time. So a stray shot from an air rifle could be brushed out of our eyes more or less like a grain of dust, but today if you shot somebody in the eye the result would be quite serious for everybody concerned, he said.

Well how about if I promise to use it just for self defence? I said, and pop said, Have you some idea that a gang of pidgins and sparrows are going to sign a pact and start a totalitarian war on you?

No sir, I'm thinking of berglers, I said. If there's one thing a bergler is afraid of it's a gun, and if a bergler hears me say Get out of here or I'll shoot, it will have a better effect if I really have a gun, I said, and pop said, The best use you can make of a bergler in your room is to invite him to steel that unesthetic row of old inner tubes draped against your wall.

But G wizzickers, pop, I mean G willickers, they're the most valuable thing in my room, I said, and pop said, That's what I'm banking on, that's what makes me hope a bergler might take them if we cant contrive some other way of getting rid of them.

Aw heck, pop, holey smokes good night, I said.

And I hurry up changed the subject away from air rifles to other things.

WALL STREET

New York, Mar. 16 (AP).—Peace rumors continued to permeate the Wall Street atmosphere today and, while these had no actual basis, many so-called "war babies" added one to more than two points to Friday's losses. Mild buying at the last enabled many issues to close above the day's bottoms.

Dealings picked up and transfers of 450,000 shares were the largest for any Saturday this year.

Bonds were down and commodities mixed.

Canadian stocks were easy. Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines and Hiram Walker dipped fractions while Lake Shore Mines came back as much. Canada 4s, in the bond market, were steady.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, March 16 (CP)— Mild weakness marked prices in the final session of the week on the Toronto Stock Exchange. Volume was little better than 100,000 shares.

Mining shares displayed more resistance to depressing influences than the industrials. Steel, food, utility, band and miscellaneous groups shared in the downward drift with losses limited mainly to minor fractions. Aircrafts also were a bit soft.

Losses of 1-4 to 1-2 point were boarded by Algoma Steel, Dominion Bridge, Canadian Car, Cub Aircraft and some utilities, including Brazilian and National Steel Car weakened 3-4. In the foods, Lake of the Woods eased down 1 and losses of 1-4 to 3-8 were posted for Canadian Canners B and National Grocers. C.P.R. changed hands in sizeable volume with the price down the minimum fraction to 7 1-8. Brewery issues were weak, Canada Malting losing 1-2 and Canadian Breweries pfd. 3-4.

Sherritt and Steep Rock were the only base metal issues trading in volume of consequence and Sherritt held at 95 while Steep Rock eased 7 cents.

With the gold share recessions there were a number of compensating gains. Powell Rouyn, Preston, Kerr-Addison and MacLeod-Cockshutt had gains to off-set losses for Coniaurum, Pickle Crow, Little Long Lac and San Antonio.

Bacon Board Sets Prices for Produce

So far the articles have dealt solely with the product of a grade "A" carcass and top grade "A1" sizeable Wiltshire bacon for which the top price has been paid by the board. All the hogs used in the export bacon trade do not produce grade "A" carcasses. To meet the variation in quality the board have set up the following table of prices based on the weight and quality of the bacon:

A1	$17.50	$17.70	$17.30
A2	17.10	17.30	16.90
A3	16.70	16.90	16.50

Large Crowd Attends Madoc Fashion Show

Madoc —(Special)— One of the largest ladies gatherings filled to capacity the Guild Rooms of the Anglican Church at Madoc Tuesday afternoon, March 12th., to view the Fashion Show, sponsored by the Junior Ladies Club of St. John's Church. Styles displayed through courtesy of C. I. Ross' Ladies' Wear. The latest spring styles in dresses, suits and coats with hats and accessories to match were gracefully modelled by Miss Betty Stewart, Miss Elaine Taylor, Miss Jean Phillips, Miss Rita Smith, Mrs. D. Foote and Mrs. S. Embury.

The tables and stage looked very spring-like being decorated with daffodils.

Several out of town ladies were present from Belleville, Marmora, Cordova, Deloro, Tweed and the surrounding district.

JAPAN PROTESTS INCIDENT

Tokyo, March 16—(AP)— The government sent a written protest to the Russian Embassy today, asserting a Russian patrol fired illegally on a Japanese patrol at the border of Sakhalin Island, ownership of which is divided between Japan and Russia.

The protest followed by a few hours the report from Toyohara, Karafuto, that there were about a dozen Soviet and two Japanese casualties in an armed clash at the border.

KING, LAPOINTE PRAISED AT RALLY AT FRANKFORD

McLEAN HAIG SPEAKS

Frankford, March 16 (Staff)—Declaring that the greatest accomplishment of the Mackenzie King Government during the last term of parliament was bringing Canada through the first days of the war as a united country, Mr. John Robinette of Toronto, in speaking at a Liberal rally here Friday evening, claimed that it was entirely due to the joint efforts of Hon. Ernest Lapointe, and Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King that the possible threat of lack of unity at the outset of the war had been nullified.

These two men took their political lives in their hands, and, campaigning strenuously, won for Canada the united war front which she presents today, said Mr. Robinette, as he told the electors of Frankford that the one big issue of the present election was the question of "which government has the confidence of the Canadian people to bring about the successful conclusion of the war."

"The people of Canada will not be fooled by a lot of fancy promises," stated Mr. Robinette, "and they will not cast aside an experienced and competent government for a mere question mark. Manion has not suggested one man whom he hopes to place in his cabinet if the National Government is elected. He says that he will select the best brains of the country but he's placed in the awkward dilemma of being unable to name men outside the Conservative ranks for fear of losing the Conservative vote, while he is unwilling to say that Conservatives only will fill his cabinet for fear of losing the outside vote."

Says Mr. King Able Statesman

Mr. Robinette said that in Mackenzie King the people of Canada had an experienced and capable statesman, a man who has the ability of selecting men of confidence to surround him, and a man of great organizing capabilities. He has been accused of not being a man of action, but upon this depends what being a man of action entails. If it means acting without first weighing the matter in question, then certainly the accusation is correct, but if it means first weighing the matter carefully and then doing what is right, then Mackenzie King is a man of action.

It is Canada's lot to act in the role of interpreter to explain the United States to England, and to explain England to the United States, said Mr. Robinette, and this role of interpreter is particularly important at the present time. United States has been objecting to Britain because of the search of mails and it is Canada's duty to iron out such difficulties. Mr. Mackenzie King is an experienced diplomat. He is respected bith in the United States and Great Britain, but Dr. Manion is comparatively unknown, which is one important reason that the Liberal Government should he re-elected.

Minister of Defence Praised

In turning to Canada's war effort, Mr. Robinette had nothing but praise for Hon. Norman Rogers as Minister of Defence. It was a big task to equip and put our first division in England and a great tribute to Hon. Norman Rogers, he said.

"Although the King administration has been accused of inactivity, it is rather enlightening to note that only a few days after war was declared, such important boards as the Foreign Exchange Board, the regulations of which have successfully prevented capital from leaving Canada. The Wartime Prices and Trades Board and the War Supply Board had been formed."

In closing Mr. Robinette warned the Liberals against over-confidence in this election. "Elections can be lost by a very few votes, so make certain your votes are polled on election day."

Candidate Speaks

Mr. McLean Haig, official Liberal candidate for Hastings South, declared that "although several matters had been discussed auxiliary to the election, the one main issue is "what government or group of individuals are to conduct Canada's war effort?"

Mr. Haig said that this war was entirely different from the last war because it was being fought both on the military and home fronts "It is being fought on the military front by our troops and air force, while on the home front it is being fought by complete industrial organization, by sound economics and finesse," he said.

The King Government was perfectly conscious that conditions existing in Europe might lead to war and took such precautionary steps as to permit speedy mobilization. Canada has never been prepared for war, Mr. Haig said. It is 125 years since Canada's shores had been invaded and Canada would never be prepared for war in peace time.

Profiteering Prevented

Mr. Haig touched briefly on the various boards which had been set up shortly after the outbreak of the war, with the view of preventing wartime profiteering and to assure an adequate supply of agricultural products. He also defended Canada's war effort on the military front, stating that she was only maintaining a peace time establishment at the outbreak of the war. The Bennett Government had reduced grants to the militia to a point where it was impossible to maintain the Defence Department and the Air Force had been reduced at the same time, said Mr. Haig.

In contrast to this, Mr. Haig said that since 1936 the Department of National Defence has increased appropriations until the Canadian militia was on a level with our neighbours. The navy had been improved and the Air Force increased. Our first division was sent overseas completely equipped.

"A National Government must be national in representation," stated Mr. Haig, "and only the Liberal party is able to do this. Dr. Manion would be unable to accomplish formation of a National Government unless he included such minority groups as the C.C.F. and Social Credit whose policies were entirely different to those of the National Government.

"Dr. Manion asks the electors to trust him to form a phantom cabinet," stated Mr. Haig in closing, "but cast your ballot in favor of the government who you feel is competent to carry on our war effort. The future of our children is dependent upon the successful termination of the war, so cast your ballot for the government which has experience and ability."

KING ASSAILED FOR INDIFFERENCE TO RESPONSIBILITY

W. E. Tummon Speaking at Point Anne Charges King's Refusal to Give Electors Accounting of Year's Work Violates Cardinal Point of British Institutions

USELESS EXPENDITURES

Point Anne, March 15— (Staff)—Headed by W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P., of Tweed, Ont, a battery of speakers assailed the King Administration and upheld the policies of the National Conservative Government here last night.

Speaking for George H. Stokes, National Conservative candidate for the riding of Hastings South, the speakers which included besides Mr. Tummon, Dr. Harold Welsh, Alderman Harold Armstrong, Frank Cushing, Alderman Harry Rollins, and the candidate attacked the King regime and expounded the policies of Dr. R. J. Manion and his National Conservative Government.

In his attack upon the government, Mr. Tummon told audience that Mr. King had slighted one of the cardinal principles of British institutions when he "scuttled" Parliament, and refused the electors the privilege of learning what business had been transpired.

"You won't get the chance to question us in a place where we can answer" was Mr. King's attitude", the speaker said. "Mr. King knew full well when he went to the hustings that he was in a position to tell what he wanted and to hold back what he wanted."

Refers to Vote of Censure

Referring to the Ontario Government's vote of censure, Mr. Tummon stated that the King Government's reaction, "was the first time in history that an administration had retreated under fire". "Chamberlain is under fire all the time. He does not retreat, and is one of the most highly respected men in the world", he said.

Like the soldier of the American Civil War who slept at his post, and who was immortalized in stone, so did the Prime Minister doze when the war-clouds loomed over Canada, Mr. Tummon said. "He refused the co-operation of Dr. Manion and his colleagues and slept blissfully away as if nothing had happened.

Parliament Unanimous

With the possible exception of Mr. Woodsworth, Parliament as a whole offered to stand by the Mother Country in her hour of need.

"Its members were unanimous in this matter," Mr. Tummon said, "and not once from the time war was declared until Mr. King "scuttled" Parliament did Dr. Manion make a speech. There was a spirit of unity throughout the length and breadth of the country.

"But that spirit began to wane, and became bogged down, because Mr. King was playing politics over the body of his country", the speaker asserted. "He did so", he continued "to antagonize the Conservative party. Let's save the country first, and if we save the country, then we can save the party. If we can't save the country, then there will be no need for the party."

Dr. Harold Welsh, M.L.A.

Deploring what he called a whispering campaign being waged about the National Conservative Party as regards conscription, Dr. Harold Welsh, M.L.A., told his audience that conscription was not the issue in this election. "But," he warned, "if the worst comes to the worst, and we find ourselves with our backs against the wall, then everything will have to be conscripted."

He charged the King Administration with useless expenditures on public works at the present time. "Post Offices, wharfs and other things are being built, for no reason at all," he said. "Why they are even putting a horse-stable up at Ottawa and a bathroom in the Customs Building."

Relief costs were mounting steadily, he said. There are now 488,000 men on relief in Canada, 44,000 more than a year ago. And of these 100,000 are under the age of thirty years. One hundred million dollars were spent in relief last year, he said, pointing out that this figure represented a per capita cost of $14.00. He charged that the King Government had not kept faith with the people, that there was a deplorable lack of efficiency and leadership and it had no right to ask for the support of the people. The soldiers will not vote for the King administration, he asserted, because they know full well what conditions were like when they enlisted. Their allowances are in a terrible state and there seems no way out of the King chaos.

"The issue rises above party politics," he concluded, urging support of the meeting for the National Government candidate, G. H. Stokes. Alderman Harold Armstrong, Frank Cushing and Harry Rollins spoke briefly as did Jack Ketcheson, Young Conservative leader. Mrs. Insley gave a well-rendered solo.

POLITICAL LEADERS

At Halifax Finance Minister Ralston said that "A National Government is for the purpose of submerging opposition."

Under the Canadian system, opposition and vigilant criticism were recognized as safeguards. A National or Union government in Canada would impair that safeguard, Col. Ralston told the audience of more than 800.

"Only in the most extreme emergency could it be in the national interest to destroy or throttle a vigilant opposition and that is what happens if it is swallowed up in a so-called National Government."

Disunity Might Bring N.G.

"If there should come a time when no one party can command a majority, or if there should arise race, religion, section or class issues, which threaten the national well-being, then there might have to be what is called a National Government — a combination of parties strong enough to deal with that issue.

"In other words it would be disunity not unity that might give rise to a National Government for the time being."

"I believe from the bottom of my heart," Col. Ralston said, "that never has the population of Canada been united as it is united in the war effort from coast to coast."

Preceding Col. Ralston on the platform, Revenue Minister Ilsley said there was "neither patronage nor profiteering in our war effort".

Mr. Ilsley said he had "never seen so much abuse and vilification as in this campaign." One of the offenders in this respect was Conservative Leader Manion. The others were Premier Hepburn of Ontario and the Ontario Conservative leader, Col. George Drew.

Definite Charge Made.

At Toronto Col. Drew charged in an address over a network of Ontario radio stations that two units of Canada's defence forces in Port Arthur, Ont., the home city of Transport Minister Howe, are inadequately clothed and equipped.

Col. Drew said Prime Minister Mackenzie King had said "again and again that our defence forces are adequately clothed and equipped" and Mr. Howe has been "even more emphatic".

The infantry battalion has half the number of rifles needed for the men it is authorized to train, has no anti-tank rifles, no light machine guns, no heavy three-inch mortars, no two-inch mortars, and no bayonet service belts, Col. Drew charged. In addition, it had no uniforms.

The artillery unit in Port Arthur should have four 60-pounders of four six-inch Howitzers, Col. Drew said, but instead has "two old 18-pounders, only one of which is of any use for training purposes because the other has no barrel or breach." Though the Ross rifle has been criticized, this unit was equipped with 72 Ross rifles, while the signal equipment was "obsolete and practically useless."

"I have seen the same thing, Mr. King, from one end of Canada to the other, and yet you continue to talk about our defence forces being fully clothed and equipped," Col. Drew said. "Please remember this, Mr. King, that even if peace were declared tomorrow our peace establishments of six divisions would be without modern weapons and equipment of any kind."

Charged With Twisting Words

Trade Minister Euler was charged with twisting the words of Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of Canada's first overseas division, by quoting him as calling the Canadian forces "the best-equipped army." General McNaughton "deserves protection from distortion of his words," Col. Drew said. "He never at any time suggested that the first division left Canada as the best-equipped army he ever saw.

"What he did say was that when it goes into action it will be as well-equipped as any in the world. And it will be, Mr. King, because they are being supplied with the weapons they require in Great Britain."

At Lindsay, Ont., Defence Minister Rogers, in a statement he read at a political rally, replied to charges made by Col. Drew at Toronto Thursday with regard to lumber orders of the Defence Department.

Col. Drew charged that A. Grant MacLachlan, Mr. Rogers' secretary, held the "main interest" in the MacLachlan Lumber and Woodworking Company of Kingston which had received Defence Department orders in 1936, 1937, 1938 and 1939 and that the last order had been given on November 24, 1939.

Rogers Denies Charges

"This statement by Col. Drew is as deliberately misleading as other charges he has made in the course of the present campaign," Mr. Rogers said. "In the first place, the contract for lumber could only be described as patronage or favoritism if I, as Minister of National Defence, had used my official position to obtain the contract for the MacLachlan firm.

"There is not a shadow of truth in any such suggestion. I have never intervened at any time to obtain business for this firm. It is equally true that Mr. MacLachlan has never used his official position to obtain business for this firm."

Mr. Rogers said the November contract was placed by the War Supply Board, "a non-partisan agency having no connection with the Department of National Defence. The Board, in buying lumber for the Kingston area, had followed its regular practice of calling for tenders and the contract had been obtained "on a strictly competitive basis with other firms."

Wilful Perversion of Truth.

Mr. Rogers added: "It is nothing less than a wilful perversion of truth to imply, as Col. Drew does, that there is even the slightest suggestion of patronage or profiteering in such a transaction."

When Mr. MacLachlan had joined him as secretary in 1935 he had withdrawn from active direction of the lumber company though his savings were invested in it. Contracts the firm had received from the Defence Department subsequently were obtained on a competitive basis. Col. Drew, the statement said, had failed to say that the lumber firm was formed in 1927 and had implied it came into existence in 1935.

The minister concluded: "I challenge Dr. Manion or Col. Drew again to provide a single specific case where there has been patronage or profiteering in the Canadian war efforts.

At Vancouver R. L. Maitland, British Columbia Conservative leader, said in a 15-minute radio broadcast that Mr. King "has been taken out of circulation by his own party" and that the present government is "the most useless we have ever had".

When Mr. King dissolved parliament last January he said the proper place to meet charges against his administration was on the hustings, Mr. Maitland said.

"But Mr. King is not on the hustings. He has gone out of circulation. He said he is too busy to meet the Canadian people and discuss these issues."

The major accomplishment of the Liberal Government was "to make a treaty with the United States, now hailed by the Democratic party of the United States as a great victory for the Democratic party."

Dr. Manion offered unity and 'government above patronage', and had only one thought—'to bring peace at the earliest possible moment by showing an efficiency and determination on the part of our government."

W. A. MacPherson, National Government candidate in Regina charged at Winnipeg that Mr. King "deliberately falsified" parliamentary records to prevent the people from knowing why parliament was dissolved after a one-day session.

"As an example of political craft, chicanery, trickery and dexterity, Premier King's performance has never been exceeded in any Democratic country in the world," Mr. MacPherson said.

No Questions On Paper Charged.

It had been parliamentary practice to list upon the order paper of the opening day all the questions and notices of motion which members sent to the government prior to the opening. Although at least 72 questions had been sent in this year, not a line was printed on the order paper. This, he said, was deliberate falsification of the records.

T. L. Church, Toronto Conservative, had put in at least one question which the government did not want published. It asked if the government would consider appointment of a select committee to investigate and fix responsibility for Canada's "unpreparedness" for war and "lack of co-operation" with Great Britain, he said.

This and other questions, and not the Ontario legislature's resolution of censure, were responsible for the sudden dissolution of parliament.

In Mr. King's Winnipeg speech he said that if there was unpreparedness in the Department of National Defence it was the fault of the Conservative administration of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett.

March 8, 1935 in a speech at Kingston . . Premier King told of how as he was leaving Ottawa he had passed a large new building on Wellington Street. This was a new building for the R.C.M.P. and in it he saw the danger of dictatorship.

"Then this gentleman . . went on to say that there were drill halls and armouries all over the country—that a great military force was being built up. He saw in this dictatorship and asked, "are we going to have in Canada a second Italy, a second Germany or a second Russia?"

"Then he condemned R. B. Bennett for spending money on defence and now he says Bennett was to blame for no defence."

Successful Strike is Claimed

Most successful sit-down strike in Canada's history was the refusal of Canadian manufacturers to take orders for war supplies with profits limited to five per cent, M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, said at Toronto.

He recalled the passage by parliament of the Defence Purchasing Board Act limiting profits on defence department contracts let without tender to five per cent.

"Then Mr. Howe (Transport Minister Howe) had to come before parliament and tell us the Act was set aside by Order-in-Council because they hadn't succeeded in letting a single contract on that basis. A people's government would have taken over the factories of those manufacturers and would have operated them as public service corporations for the duration of the war."

"What an outcry there would have been had Canadian labor gone on a sit-down strike when filling of orders for war supplies would have been impeded, said Mr. Coldwell.

FINLAND BEGINS TO REORGANIZE

"Our country, like the whole of Europe, indeed, the whole of western civilization, still is in the greatest danger. No one can say what tomorrow will bring."

Told by the premier that "to make peace often calls for more courage and far greater initiative than the resort to war," the Diet, except for three members of the Swedish People's Party who voted no and nine members who are absent in the army, voted solidly for the pact.

Soviet Meet March 29

The Supreme Soviet of the U.S.S.R. meets March 29 to approve the treaty and possibly decide on government of the territory acquired from Finland. This includes the Karelian Isthmus, Viipuri, areas in northeastern Finland, part of the Arctic coast, and, by lease, the Hanko peninsula in southwestern Finland.

Explaining his government came into power December 1, the day after war broke out, Ryti said it "was regarded as its chief task the restoration of peace."

Of Finland's struggle, the premier commented:

"We were given an abundance of sympathy, but no effective help from any direction. Not until it had become evident that Finland was capable of successfully defending herself did we begin to receive humanitarian and material help and munitions, especially from Sweden and the western powers.

Little Manpower Help

"On the other hand, we received no help in the form of manpower in actual fact, merely a few reinforced battalions, mostly from Sweden.

"When the western powers (Britain and France) eventually offered soldiers, Ryti said, "the first batch of troops would have reached the front providing normal transport could have been maintained not earlier than the end of April, and the strength of the troops when arriving would have been so small as to have been insufficient even to make up for the casualties our own army would have suffered in the meantime."

In addition, he said, it "has made Finland a battlefield in "the Great War," because "the opponents of the western powers would have resorted to war against these troops."

PLAN IS DOOMED

A Rumanian military mission in Berlin, it was reported reliably, has been told Russia could be persuaded to sign a 25-year non-aggression pact with Rumania and that Hungary would pledge not to press territorial revision demands for 10 years.

Terms Asked

For engineering such assurances, Germany, in need of Rumania's oil and grain, is reported to want:

Rumania's promise to demobilize most of her 1,600,000 soldiers at once so they can return to work in fields and factories;

Acceleration of Rumanian industry and agriculture to an unprecedented degree;

Officials abruptly dismissed any possibility of including a guardist in the Cabinet. Although the government is offering amnesty to 800 iron guardists now in concentration camps if they pledge allegiance to the King and join the National Rebirth Front—Rumania's only political party—fugitive leaders still in Germany will be barred from the homeland.

The reported army demobilization proposal was opposed by military leaders as putting Rumania completely at the mercy of foreign powers, no matter what guarantees were made on paper.

"NERVES" SHE CALLED IT

Losing interest—losing friends—she never said any more—always too tired. "Nerves," she thought — but it was her kidneys, the filters of her blood, that needed attention. Delay meant danger. She took Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, headache, backache, lack of energy, disappeared.

WAR BRIEFS

London, Mar. 16 (CP).—A protest against gasoline rationing and high motor vehicle taxes was sent to the Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon, today by a committee representing Great Britain's principal automobile dealers and associations. The committee asked that taxes be cut in the next budget.

Stockholm, Mar. 16 (CP-Havas).—Lieut.-General O. G. Thornell, the chief of the Swedish general staff, today proposed to the government that a civic defence organization be created here to prevent the enemy dropping parachutists behind the lines, eithr for a rear attack or for espionage, as was done in Finland.

Oslo, Mar. 16 (AP). — Norway protested to Germany today against the sinking of the Norwegian steamship Nidarholm off Ireland Feb. 12 "without examination and without permitting the ship's papers to be taken into security."

Moscow, March 16—(AP)—Isvestia, Soviet Government newspaper, said today that British and French troops concentrations in the Near East and diplomatic activity in the Balkans were attempts" to harness the population of colonial and dependent countries to the Allied war chariot."

The paper claimed that Allied efforts were directed not only against Germany but Italy as well.

London, March 16 —(AP) — Britain will pay rewards up to 1,000 pounds ($4,450) for accurate information" leading to the "capture or destruction of an enemy war vessel."

Other rewards offered to "nonservice personnel afloat or ashore" including 50 pounds for the movements of enemy war vessels, including minelayers, 5 pounds for the position of mines, and 1 pound for the first report of a mine washed ashore or 5 pounds if it is a "specially interesting mine."

Paris, March 16—(AP)—Catholic authorities today gave French congregations permission to dispense with meatless Fridays, beginning at Easter. The dispensation followed government orders restricting the sale and consumption of meats on Sundays, Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays of each week.

Government restrictions, effective March 25, will supersede the existing meatless days—Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays. The church's permission to have meat on Fridays will continue until the end of the war.

Police Blotter

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours, leaving the cell block at the city police station available for the fifteen transients, who were forced indoors owing to the recent snow storm.

Provincial Police today were called to the Royal Canadian Air Force base, Trenton, where a sum of money had been stolen from a private locker. Provincial Constable W. E. Smith investigated and was informed that $110.00 had been taken from the personal locker of an R.C.A.F. member. Police investigations are continuing.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine stated today that no major accident resulted from the season's heaviest snow storm of yesterday. Reports that a serious accident east of Napanee had resulted in a transport driver being seriously injured when his tractor and trailer careened into the ditch, was received.

Large Audience Greets G. White Conservative Candidate at Coe Hill

At Coe Hill on Friday evening, a large and enthusiastic meeting was held in the interests of Mr. George White, the Conservative candidate in the riding of Hastings-Peterboro. The hall was filled to capacity and the chair was occupied by Mr. Charles Moffatt of Coe Hill.

Addresses were made by the candidate and by Mr. R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., Belleville, Mr. George A. Reid, Belleville, Mr. Charles Rollins, Coe Hill and Mr. William Hill, Madoc.

HELD IN SHOOTING

Identified as Mahomed Singh Azad, this Indian is being held for the assassination of Sir Michael O'Dwyer, long a key figure in the British administration of India, and the wounding of three other British officials. The shooting took place during a meeting of the East Indian association at Caxton Hall, London.

20-Year-Old Mother Sent to Reformatory

London, Ont., March 16—(CP)—Mrs. Pauline Harvey, of Chatham, 20-year-old mother of two children, one seven and the other 20 months old, was sentenced to Mercer Reformatory today on four cheque forgeries, and one charge of obtaining money by false pretences. She will serve six months determinate and six months indeterminate.

The woman repeated what she said in court two days ago, that she committted the forgeries at the instance of her husband. She also explained; "We were a month behind in our rent, and the landlady said we'd have to get out unless we paid up."

Mrs. Helen Turner, Now Living at New Rochelle, N.Y., Received Many Congratulations and Calls on Day of Anniversary

ONCE TAUGHT SCHOOL

Her hair a silver halo above a face that shows but little of the effect of a century of life well and truly lived, a little old lady sat in the home of her daughter, Mrs. E. Leslie Burwell, 1 Pierce Street, New Rochelle, N.Y., the other day and received the felicitations of friends and relatives on the attainment of her 100th. birthday.

True to her Scottish descent, Mrs. Turner wore a sprig of heather in her plum-colored dress. Nearby on a table stood a large basket filled with telegrams and letters of congratulation. Two old-fashioned bouquets, framed in lace were placed in vases.

In another room stood a handsome birthday cake, topped by a sugar-sculptured plaque on which was the red, white and blue shield of the Daughters of the British Empire, of which her daughter is Regent. Tall silver candelabra flanked the gleaming beauty of the cake, while other table decorations were also themed in red, white and blue.

With all the mental alertness of one thirty years younger Mrs. Turner greeted her guests in a gracious manner. Later she led the way to the dining room where she officiated at the ceremony of cutting the cake.

A former teacher, Mrs. Turner numbers among her pupils, who formerly lived in Belleville, one Essie Van Dusen, whose son later gained world-wide fame as Dr. A. R. Dafoe of the Quintuplets of Callander.

She has a philosophy all her own. "If the world is going to have peace," she says, "it will come as the result of right thinking on the part of individuals, each of whom must do his bit to achieve this end."

Modesty itself, Mrs. Turner "refuses" to see why "all this fuss should be made over an old lady." She refused to take credit for all the attentions showered upon her, insisting it was a compliment to her daughter and her husband.

From far off Scotland and Canada came gifts and flowers. Relatives from all parts of the continent gathered to pay tribute on her birthday, which incidentally falls on the same date as that of George Washington.

Late Rector's Family Guests of Parish Guild

Mrs. S. E. Morton and Family Presented With Duncan - Phyfe Tilt - Top Table

Mrs. S. E. Morton, Misses Marion and Stella Morton and Master Stanley Morton were guests of honor on Wednesday at a supper given in the basement of the church by the members of the Parish Guild, reports the Brockville Recorder and Times.

The tables, decorated in violet, yellow and green, with daffodils and tulips in silver containers and enhanced by yellow lighted tapers, made a pleasing effect, while the delicious menu of turkey, escalloped potatoes, salads, jellies, relish, pie, cheese, tea drew forth the commendation of every guest. When supper ended, recording secretary, Mrs. Ray Fitzpatrick, read a short address with reference to the departure of Mrs. Morton and family in the near future, her pleasant relationship with the Guild and the hope she would return some time. The treasurer, Mrs. F. J. Clutterbuck, made the presentation on behalf of the Guild of a mahogany Duncan-Phyfe tilt-top table. The pedestal was tied with a huge white satin bow on which were the names of the fifty members present. Mrs. Morton spoke a few words of appreciation and thanks, after which the president read a short poem, of her own composition, which she presented to Mrs. Morton.

The supper was arranged under the group system No. 1 of which Mrs. M. Tooker is convener, and the following ladies: Mrs. A. Robinson, Mrs. R. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. C. Stethem, Mrs. H. Manhard and Mrs. J. Jackson. They were assisted by Miss A. Leech, while Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Miss B. Storey looked after the decorating.

The regular monthly business meeting and quilting occupied the afternoon.

HAD POCKETS PICKED

Brantford, Ont., March 16.—(CP)—Three persons reported to police that their pockets had been picked Friday at the political meeting addressed by Hon. R. J. Manion. One man lost his wallet and $37, another lost $18 and an Old Age Pensioner lost $9.

BRITISH, GERMAN AIR FORCES EXCHANGE RAIDS

R.A.F. Makes Extensive Flight Over Poland Within Past 24 Hours

London, March 16—(CP)— The British and German air forces exchanged raids within the past 24 hours, the Air Ministry announced today, with the Royal Air Force making an "extensive" flight over Poland and a German bomber clashing with a British coastal patrol in a running fight.

A Ministry communique said that air activities of the last 24 hours included "an extensive night flight over Polish territory by aircraft of the bomber command in an engagement between aircraft of the coastal command in an enemy bomber."

FOUR INJURED IN CAR CRASH

Motor Car Skidded Off Road and Plunged 30 Feet Down an Embankment

Orangeville, Ont., March 16 (CP)—One girl is in hospital today with a broken leg and three others are at home nursing injuries received yesterday when the car in which they were riding skidded off the road and plunged 30 feet down an embankment.

The driver, Lloyd Curry, 18, was unhurt. Helen Gear, 17, suffered a broken leg; Jean Barber, wrenched shoulder, bruises; Kay Hackett, daughter of the school principal, who owned the car, bruises; and Francis Woodland, bruises. They were driving to Hamilton to take part in a basketball game.

Curry, chosen by the principal, E. H. Hackett, to drive the girls, said he had passed a car on the Caledon mountain when the car started "We clipped off one guard-rail post, then another. Then the car dropped off. My head hit the roof. We turned over once. I hung on to the wheel as hard as I could and shouted to the girls to hold tight. Jean Barber couldn't have, because we found her sitting in a snow bank. She must have been thrown through the door.

"We kept turning over and dropping," Curry related. "Then we stopped. I think we would all have been killed if the snow hadn't cushioned our fall. Somehow we got untangled and I stood up and tried the doors. I couldn't budge them."

They were released by a farmer who had seen the car somersault down the embankment. He climbed on the wrecked machine and pried open a door.

THEIR GALLANT DEFENCE ENDED IN BITTER PEACE

With the recently concluded peace pact between Russia and Finland, the gallant defence waged by Baron Gustav Mannerheim and his small Finnish army came to an end. The heroic three and a half months defence put up by the inferior forces of Finland against the Red hordes of Dictator Stalin will undoubtedly go down in history as one of the most gallant and brilliant military defences of all time. Field-Marshal Baron Mannerheim, LEFT, is shown here going over a map with General Oesch, his chief of staff.

ONTARIO'S PROVINCIAL SECRETARY ATTENDS KING RALLY

Ontario's Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, who made the news headlines when he resigned from the Hepburn cabinet recently only to reconsider and withdraw his resignation, was on hand at the Liberal rally in Toronto which welcomed Prime Minister King to the "Tory Stronghold." Mr. Nixon is pictured here with Mrs. Nixon and Sir William Mulock as they sat on the platform during the rally which marked Mr. King's first and only personal public appearance in Ontario during the present federal election campaign.

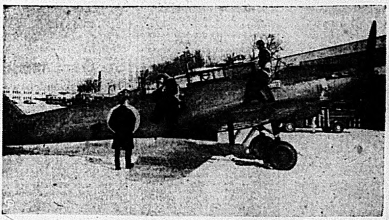
Leading Aircraftsman J. Duguid, one of the two R.C.A.F. fliers who crashed in their plane on the United States side of the U.S.-Canadian border early this week, is shown with Nurse Smalling as he prepared to leave for Canada after the U.S. state department had ordered his release and that of his companion Pilot Officer A. E. Cannon. The state department ruled that the Canadian plane was not on a hostile mission when it was forced to land. The damaged craft will be returned to Canada.

FAIREY "BATTLES" USED IN TRAINING SCHEME



The Fairey "Battle," which has not been used here for training purposes before, is a two-seat medium bomber of British design and manufacture. It is being used in this country by the R.C.A.F. for training purposes and is one of six aircraft selected for use in connection with the British Commonwealth Training Plan. It is to be used also for towing targets at which air gunners can release bursts of fire, and so increase their efficiency.

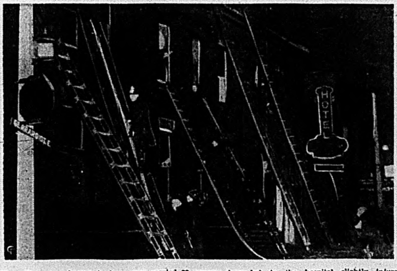
PREMIER KING GIVEN ROUSING RECEPTION IN TORONTO

Nearly 6,000 Torontonians turned out to hear Prime Minister King and other stalwarts of the Liberal party as Mr. King made his first and only personal appearance speech in Ontario during the present federal election campaign. The prime minister is pictured here surrounded by some of his admirers during the rally which heard Defence Minister Rogers, Justice Minister Lapointe and other leading Liberals defend the government's war record.

THREE PERISH, MANY INJURED AS FLAMES SWEEP THROUGH TORONTO HOTEL



Three lives were known to have been lost as firemen continued searching the ruins of the fire which swept the Avonmore hotel in Toronto. At least a dozen other persons are in the hospital suffering from burns and injuries received as they jumped from the windows of the blazing hotel. Firemen carried 29 persons down ladders, as the main floor and stairways were a blazing inferno when the firemen were summoned to the hotel. Firemen were praised by onlookers for their daring as they swiftly crossed icy roofs to tear off shingles to make holes for their hoses. One fireman was removed to the hospital slightly injured. Firemen are shown, ABOVE, mounting ladders to rescue hotel guests trapped by the flames and dense smoke. Several of the rescued were overcome and had to be given first aid treatment by the firemen, RIGHT, before being removed to the hospital.

MORE DYNAMIC WAR POLICY URGED IN BRITAIN

HITLER AND IL DUCE RETURN TO THEIR CAPITALS

Cabinet Shuffle In Great Britain Likely to Follow

Bold Aerial Stroke by 14 German Heinkels on Scapa Flow in Which a Civilian Was Killed Followed by Expression of Opinion Favoring More Vigorous Prosecution of War

CHANGE SEEN SOON

Say Churchill, Sir Jodn Simon and Lord Halifax Will Likely Remain in War Cabinet — May Invite Labor and Liberal Leaders to Join

London, March 18 (CP)—Germany's boldest aerial stroke of the war—a one hour and 25-minute raid by 14 Heinkel bombers on the Scapa Flow naval anchorage—was followed today by expressions of belief in political quarters that Prime Minister Chamberlain is planning cabinet changes to institute a more dynamic war policy.

The Prime Minister's 71st birthday found Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini in a meeting at Brenner Pass which centred speculation on whether Germany plans an intensified conflict or a "peace offensive."

Press clamor for greater initiative in the government's direction of the war was heightened in anticipation of the debate in the House of Commons tomorrow when the Labor and Liberal parties and some Conservatives are expected to press for more vigorous action.

Changes After Easter

Informed political observers expressed the conviction that Mr. Chamberlain is planning ministerial changes soon, probably after the Easter parliamentary recess starting Thursday.

Some thought he might adopt the pattern set in the first Great War by David Lloyd George for a small war cabinet engaged solely in direction of higher war policy with all departmental duties given to ministers outside the cabinet.

In such a plan it was considered likely that Mr. Chamberlain could retain in the war cabinet Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary.

Press Outspoken

There were suggestions he might invite the Labor and Liberal lead-

DR. LESLIE BURGIN DEFENDS ACTION

Luton, Bedfordshire, March 18—(CP)—Dr. Leslie Burgin, whose conduct as Supply Minister has been criticized in Parilament and in the press, defended his department in a speech here Saturday night.

"It is possible to find oneself in a position when delivery is more important than price," he said. "You will never make the Treasury believe that, and you have to be very daring if of two choices you choose the dearer. In so doing you might be dead right to your country but it is a heavy responsibility when you remember that a Public Accounts Committee has a habit of asking some years afterwards why at a particular hour you deliberately looked one way rather than the other.'

Reviewing the country's war effort, Dr. Burgin said: "You have to place contracts at the rate of rather more than £16,000,000 ($17,200,000) weekly for armament and stores alone, without counting raw material and a dozen and one odds and ends which have a habit in the hour of paying for them of adding up. The responsibility of doing that rightly and avoiding catching a wrong one here and there is quite considerable."

NO HARD FEELINGS ON THE 17TH

Chicago, March 18—(AP)— John Palmerston's automobile knocked down Terrance Dugan, 40, yesterday and Palmerston was astounded when the grinning Irishman jumped to his feet and said: "Your headlight is broken. Here's $1 to get it fixed. It's to help celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

NINE SHOTS FIRED

Windsor, Ont., March 18—(CP)—A police chase which at times attained a speed of 90 miles an hour ended today with the arrest of one man and the escape of two others after the pursued automobile crashed into an embankment here. Nine shots were fired by police at the car during the wild ride.

Held for investigation is William Pringle, 19, Windsor. A cordon of police was thrown about the district in an attempt to apprehend the two who fled on foot.

CONVICTED OF ASSAULT

Galt, Ont., March 18—(CP) — Convicted of assaulting a Branchton woman, Frank Houseman, 78, of that village today was sentenced to serve a year in the reformatory. The aged man was said to have hit her with a hammer.

"CRUEL LOSSES" SUFFERED BY GERMAN PATROLS

Attacks With Largest Number of Men Since War Started Enemy Repeatedly Turned Back

HEAVY ARTILLERY FIRE

All Positions Temporarily Occupied by Germans Retaken by French

Paris, March 18—(AP)—German attacks with the largest number of men put into action since the war started were reported by military quarters today to have been turned back by French machine-gun and artillery fire.

German patrols operating Sunday in separated sectors west of the Vosges Mountains and east of the Moselle River suffered what military sources described as "cruel losses" in extended operations.

At least three separate engagement occurred during the day. The first came at dawn Sunday when French observers, moving forward to posts which are not manned during the night, found Germans installed in them. The French at-

GANDHI'S CONTROL IS THREATENED

Chandra Bose Sets Up Rival Camp to Gain Independence Quickly

Ramgarh, India, March 18—(CP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi's control of the All-India Nationalist Congress Party appeared threatened today by the arrival of Subhas Chandra Bose, former Congress President, who established a rival camp near the one where the Gandhi followers are preparing to open a plenary session. A crowd of 10,000 met Bose.

His followers, who want immediate independence for India, were told he was drafting an ultimatum to the regular congress — that either the party set a specific date to start a civil disobedience campaign or meet an independent resistance movement by Bose's sympathizers.

"NO FAIR" SAYS WALTER

Towanda, Pa., March 18—(AP) Walter Finch and Glenn Brenchley agreed to trade horses "sight unseen." After turning his horse over to Brenchley, Finch says all he received in return was a wooden sawhorse. He swore out a complaint charging Brenchley with larceny.

MANY DESCENDANTS

Gonzales, Tex., March 18—(AP)—Mrs. Mary Skinner, 100, known locally as the "champion grandmother of the United States," died yesterday in the home she had occupied for 80 years. A count on her 100th birthday disclosed she had 53 grand-children, 211 great-grandchildren and 65 great-great-grandchildren.

Allies Consult on Form of Aid For Turkey If She is Involved

London, March 18—(CP)—Great Britain, France and Turkey are consulting on the form of aid the western powers will give Turkey in the event she becomes involved in hostilities, Foreign Under - Secretary Richard Butler told the House of Commons today.

The Government at the same time turned down a suggestion that it ask the League of Nations to set up a neutral commission to examine responsible proposals for peace.

The suggestion was made by Arthur Woodburn, Labor. Mr. Butler declared Foreign Secretary Vicount Halifax "is not convinced" adoption of the proposal "would be best in the present circumstances."

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House his statement tomorrow on Finland and the progress of the war would contain information on the quantity of guns, ammunition and planes given and offered to Finland.

Questions were asked on the future of Finland, but Mr. Butler asked members to await the Prime Minister's statement. Asked for assurance Finland would not be prejudiced when the peace conference came because she accepted the Russian peace terms, Mr. Butler replied "It is not possible to forecast at this stage the scope of the peace conference."

Asked whether a comprehensive plan existed for immediate military aid to Turkey if "her integrity should be threatened or if it becomes expedient for her to go to the aid of a neighboring state," Mr. Butler replied:

"Great Britain and France are bound by Article 1 of their Treaty of Mutual Assistance with Turkey to give Turkey all the aid and assistance in their power in the event of her being involved in hostilities with a European power in consequence of aggression by that power against Turkey. The form that assistance should take has been, and is, the subject of consultation between the three governments."

CANADA'S SOLDIERS VOTE

Private G. F. Brush, 48th Highlanders, is shown handing his ballot in a sealed envelope, to voting officer Lt. D. P. B. Corbett, as voting in the federal election started for the men of the C.A.S.F. who are stationed at Exhibition park, Toronto. The polls are open for the soldiers for at least three hours a day from March 16 to March 23. The soldiers vote differently than ordinary civilians. They write the name of their choice on the ballot and seal it in two envelopes to be mailed to Ottawa.

Lumber Camp at Bessemer Completely Destroyed by Fire

UNKNOWN ORIGIN

Bancroft, Ont., March 18 — Special—Fire originating in a twenty-six square mile timber limit, owned and operated by W. F. Hamlyn at Bessemer, seventeen miles southeast of this village, totally destroyed buildings of the camp Sunday afternoon.

Offices, dam, storehouses, sleeping quarters and a cookery fell prey to the flames while sawing equipment, saws, belting and other contents of the buildings were destroyed. Origin of the blaze is undetermined and the amount of damage is yet to be estimated.

Word of the conflagration was brought out by Samuel Whitmore, employee at the camp who stated that telephone lines were burned, preventing any calls for assistance. He was forced to come out by team.

Employees of the camp driven from their quarters by flames fought the blaze and prevented them from eating through the timber. No one was injured, Mr. Whitmore stated.

The lumber camp had been in operation since 1915.

MURDER-TO-ORDER COMBINE HELD FOR 20 VICTIMS

Ten Under Arrest in New York for 20 Gangland Slayings

New York, March 18—(AP)— A murder-to-order combine which killed by contract for "big shot" racketeers was said today by a Brooklyn prosecutor to have been responsible for at least a dozen—possibly 20—gangland slayings.

District Attorney William O'Dwyer said 10 men were under arrest in connection with the crimes. He said the gang was implicated in seven murders and two attempted slayings in Brooklyn, and three killings in Sullivan County in Up-State New York.

Youthful gunmen, described as "young punks", did the trigger work under agreements with such racket overlords as Lucky Luciano, imprisoned Manhattan vice king, Louis (Peke) Buchalter, and Jacob (Gurrah) Shapiro, O'Dwyer said.

GERMANS CLAIM 3 BATTLESHIPS, CRUISER ARE HIT

Unit Leader of Air Force States Germany Knew British Home Fleet "in" at Scapa Flow

Berlin, March 18—(AP)— Elated German fliers today told of their weekend raid on the British naval anchorage at Scapa Flow, declaring it was carried out on a meticulous plan.

It was claimed that three battleships and one cruiser were struck and damaged and that the 42,100-ton battle cruiser Hood and the 32,000-ton battle cruisers Renown and Repulse were at anchorage, when the German bombers roared in from the North Sea.

One flier told of "the bright fire of burning hangars" and the official communique said Orkney Island airports at Stromness, Kirkwall and Earth House, as well as a number of anti-aircraft positions, were bombed.

MANION—ROGERS FEUD ENLIVENS DULL WEEKEND

Defence Minister States Charges of Opposition Designed to Create Disquiet Solely to Put Opposition in Power

MANION CRITICAL

Conservative Leader Charges Rogers Continues to State Untruths When He Knows Them to be Untruths

TAKE 1—MANION-ROGERS

By the Canadian Press

A new outburst in the hustings feud between Defence Minister Rogers and Conservative Leader Manion enlivened a dull political weekend but generally the Dominion election campaign continues to move at a comparatively slow tempo.

Speaking at Brantford, Ont., Saturday the Defence Minister said Opposition charges are designed to create disquiet solely to put the Opposition in power.

"When Parliament was dissolved," he said, "it was generally understood that the government's war record was to be the issue, but Hon. Dr. Manion has moved further and further from it until he now has criticism for the record but nothing constructive."

Plenty of Impedence Claim

Dr. Manion at Windsor, Ont., referred to Mr. Rogers and said there had never been a Dominion Cabinet Minister "with the impudence this man shows in continuing to state untruths when he knows them to be untruths."

The Conservative Leader revived a number of complaints of abuse he has been making in his campaign and said: "Yet this unscrupulous little man, Rogers, continues to say in every speech he makes that his challenge has not been answered.

At Sarnia Justice Minister Lapointe attacked the National Government proposal of Dr. Manion, replied to criticism of the Defence of Canada regulations and discussed the government's war organization efforts.

Lapointe Asks Question

"Dr. Manion has stated that he will enlist the best brains of the country for his cabinet if he is returned," Mr. Lapointe said. "Who are the best brains? I think we should know. Statesmen are not improvised in a day. They have to be trained. They must have experience.

"You all know of the war-time blackouts in Europe but I think the best blackout in the war is this mysterious aggregation of best brains. I ask you, are you going to vote for ghosts?"

"The government of Mackenzie King represents Canadian unity," he said. "Sometimes it is not good for a government to have too large a majority. But this time it is different. The eyes of the world are on Canada. It is the voice of Canada that speaks on March 26 (election day) and it is essential that it be a united voice, one even Lord Haw Haw can understand."

Stating there had been some criticism of the Defence of Canada regulations, Mr. Lapointe said they were devised for the purpose of the war effort and did not go as far as they did in 1914.

Star is Criticized

At Preston, Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, criticized the Toronto Daily Star for "misrepresentation" in publishing editorially excerpts from two letters Lord Tweedsmuir, who died last month in Montreal, wrote to a friend in Scotland during 1939.

The excerpts appeared in a letter to the Edinburgh Scotsman from John Gordon Jameson who quoted the late Governor-General as saying last May "We are undoubtedly witnessing the revival of anti-Christ," and further that "I am wholly in agreement with the present policy of the government—to

Dictators Confer For Brief Time At Brennero, Italy

Conference Between Mussolini and Hitler Lasts Two and Half Hours

MUCH SPECULATION

Diplomatic Quarters Buzz With Talk of a Possible 'Peace Drive'

Brennero, Italy, March 18—(AP)—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini conferred for two and a half hours here today and then left, each to return to his capital.

A communique described their conversation as cordial. Hitler's special train left for Berlin at 1 p.m. (7 a.m. EST), 15 minutes before Mussolini started back to Rome.

Their conference, preceded by the barest of formalities, began at 10:10 a.m. (4:10 a.m. EST). There was no inkling of what might come of the rendezvous, linked in diplomatic quarters with talk of a so-called "peace drive."

Hitler's private train was here when the eight-car special bearing Mussolini and his foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, pulled in from its night-time stop at Bressanone, 25 miles away.

FIVE CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH AT CHICOUTIMI

CHILDREN ASLEEP

Port Alfred, Que., March 18 — (CP)—Five children, including a 10-year-old girl who made a vain attempt to rescue her younger sisters and brothers, perished last night in a fire that swept the three storey tenement building in which they lived.

The dead children of Mr. and Mrs. Armand Hebert, were: Colette 10 years of age, Philippe, nine; Jacqueline, seven; Marie Paule, five and Camil, nine months. Several other children suffered partial asphyxiation.

The fire, worst in tre history of this small Saguenay River industrial centre, broke out at 10 p.m. while the children slept. Their parents had gone out for the evening and a [illegible]-year-old maid, Laurette Hovington, was in charge Five-year-old Jacqueline Jauvin was minding the two small daugh-

LITTLE HOPE FOR TRAPPED MINERS

71 Men Have Been Underground Since Explosion on Saturday

St. Clairsville, O., March 18 — (AP) — Hope virtually was abandoned today for 71 miners trapped since Saturday in the Willow Grove coal mine.

Rescue crews continued their efforts to penetrate falls of slate blocking the chambers in which the men were caught by an explosion, attributed by mine workers either to gas or coal dust.

More than 100 miners reached the surface safely through an air shaft shortly after the blast. Two men lost their lives breathing poisonous afterdamp fumes in an attempt to reach the others.

John Owens, President of the Ohio District of the United Mine Workers, surveyed the wrecked tunnels last night and declared he held "no hope whatsoever" that any of the entombed miners were alive.

Four-man squads, equipped with an automatic loading machine, worked in shifts removing slate from the clogged passages. R. V. Clay, general manager of the company, said about 44 men, working as a unit, were trapped about three miles from the mine entrance. The other 27 were in scattered groups nearby when the explosion struck.

BERLIN HOPEFUL AXIS EXTENDED TO MOSCOW

Historic Brenner Pass Meeting Causes Berlin Circles to Express Opinions

RUSSIA DISCUSSED

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, Mar. 18 (AP).—Extension of the Rome-Berlin axis to Moscow and possible eventful participation of Italy in the war on Germany's side were cited today by excellently informed Berlin circles as the main apparent results of today's historic Brenner Pass meeting between Fuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

The two statesmen appeared to have worked on plans for a complete reorganization of Europe with Soviet Russia as their partner.

Berlin was filled with rumors that German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop would confer with Russian Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff as soon as possible, either in Berlin or Moscow.

Question As To Italy.

Hitler and Mussolini were said to have agreed on possible ultimate participation of Italy in the war on Germany's side if and when such a course should be deemed preferable to the present status of Italy as "not neutral and yet not waging war."

(The only description given in Italy up to the same time of the meeting at the Brenner Pass was that the conference was "cordial".)

Meantime Italy would lose no opportunity to demonstrate to the western powers that she is Germany's ally economically, politically and ideologically, the story said.

As evidence of this, The Associated Press's sources said Italy, for instance, ceased furnishing certain implements of war to France as she had done hitherto.

Coal Agreement.

The present German-Italian coal agreement will be followed by other agreements for putting resources of each country at the disposal of the other. (The coal agreement, to furnish the major part of Italy's coal needs by rail, followed upon Britain's blockade of German coal being shipped by water).

500 YOUNG CHICKS BURNED IN FIRE

Five hundred young chicks, the property of Mr. W. Kilpatrick of 150 West Moira Street, met an untimely end last evening when the brooder house in which they were lodged became ignited. An overheated brooder stove was the cause of the fire, according to fire officials this morning, who stated that it was necessary to rip up the floor of the building before the seat of the flames could be reached. With the exception of the floor the building suffered little damage, however, and the three-weeks-old chicks were smothered with the smoke and heat.

PALM SUNDAY AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Palm Sunday was observed at Church of St. Michael the Archangel, yesterday. At High Mass at ten-thirty the palms were blessed by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V. G., and the ceremony was followed by a procession. After the Mass, the palms were distributed to the faithful.

MOIRA LODGE TO VISIT OSHAWA

The Moira Lodge, A.F. and A.M. No. 11 of Belleville, will visit Oshawa on Tuesday, March 19th., to return a fraternal visit from the Temple Lodge of that city.

RIVER ICE FIELD STILL REMAINS INTACT

While a few stretches of open water are apparent in the Moira River, there is still considerable thickness of ice in most parts, city officials stated today. Heavy ice-fields are apparent above the various dams, with a thickness of well over two feet being in evidence above the Holgate dam.

There is no sign of complete disentegration in any part of the ice-locked river as yet, but sudden rains or mild weather will do much toward rushing the break-up. Water levels, however, are three feet below those of a year ago, and with the lack of moisture in tributary streams in the northern areas being an important factor, city officials are of the opinion that the flood menace has been greatly minimized.

The one-thousand foot channel cut in the ice-field directly south of the C.P.R. bridge is being kept open by city workmen, in case a sudden rising of temperatures or arrival of warm rains, sends the ice rushing down to the river-mouth.

COL. VANDERWATER IS PRIZE WINNER

Colonel Roscoe Vandewater, Foxboro, won the reserve championship in the wheat class at the Quinte Seed Fair which concluded a three-day exhibit at Port Hope on Saturday.

HYDRO EMPLOYEE RECEIVES PROMOTION

E. Miller Johns, Tweed, has been promoted by the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario to the position of rural superintendent of Sulphide, Madoc and Marmora rural power districts. In addition to his new duties, Mr. Johns will continue to act as manager of Tweed hydro-electric system.

SALE CAR LICENCES VERY MUCH BETTER

Following an early season slackness, during which time the sale of permits remained well behind the usual quota, the sale of motor vehicle licences has picked up considerably during the past week and the number now disposed of compares very favorably with a corresponding date of last year, according to Mr. E. Vermilyea, local issuer of motor licences, who states that nearly two thousand out of a quota of 4,500 have now been sold. Unless business remains steady at this figure however, there is bound to be a lineup during the last few days prior to the end of the month, when it becomes illegal to display 1939 markers, stated Mr. Vermilyea who said that for some reason only very few licences for four cylinder cars have as yet been disposed of.

BOYS SENT HOME BY MOTOR TRANSPORT

After spending the night in the Belleville police station, registered as transients, two teen-aged Toronto lads were detained and questioned by local police this morning, as the remaining transients were permitted their liberty.

Later the two boys, who gave their names as George Williams, 14, of 204 Pickering St., and Edward Rogers, 214 of the same street Toronto, admitted to Sargeant Arthur Harman they had run away from home. The lads were detained and later their parents notified of their whereabouts. Later today the police sent the two boys home by motor transport.

SUSPEND SENTENCE ON THEFT CHARGE

After eluding the police and effecting escape early Saturday afternoon, Pte. Frank Simpson, of Hamilton, was later arrested in this city Saturday night. Today he appeared in city police court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C., today and pleaded guilty to a charge of the theft of scrap metal from the premises of the Belleville Hospital. Detective Fred Isard apprehended the accused after he had thrown away a bag of scrap metal and eluded the officer earlier Saturday.

At the suggestion of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C., Simpson was allowed his freedom upon the penalty of a six-months' suspended sentence. "You had better return immediately to your unit," suggested Mr. Donnan after sentence was meted out.

DOG OWNERS MUST GET LICENCES SOON

Stern warning was issued by City Pound-keeper Thomas Thorne today to residents who have been delinquent in securing their dog licences. "There are a number of people who think this tax can be avoided but a close check-up is now being made. Those who have not secured the licences may have to pay a fine" he said.

Mr. Thorne is also checking up dogs which accompany their young masters or mistresses to school. He addressed the pupils of Ann Street this morning and warned them that dogs must be left at home. After his talk, four young dog-owners furtively left the assembly hall and took their respective "Fidos" to the safety of their homes and kennels.

FROST PLUGS BLOWN ON MOTOR VEHICLE

At lea stone motorist realized this morning the devastating effects which frosty nights can have on a weakened anti-freeze solution, and at the same time Front St. pedestrians were afforded a little excitement as they witnessed the result of absent-mindedness on the part of the motorist. In an effort to "thaw" out his motor, while he took breakfast at a local cafe, the motorist had left the engine running and everything was going smoothly until pedestrians were startled by a sharp explosion coming from the car standing at the curb, with the machine, immediately afterwards being enveloped in a dense cloud of steam. After the cloud of steam had drifted away, investigation proved that with frost having stopped up the regular radiator circulation, the water in the engine had developed pressure enough to blow the frost plug with the resultant loss of the anti-freeze as the steam forced it from the engine to run away down a near-by sewer.

FARMERS ARE BUSY REPAIRING MACHINERY

Making use of the lull in activities between the winter and spring seasons, farmers of the district are busy repairing farm machinery in readiness for the spring work.

While some farmers leave their machinery exposed to the winter elements, the majority of rural residents of this district keep their machinery in closed buildings.

However there is a certain amount of wear and tear and accumulations of rust. New parts have to be purchased and others replaced and generally everybody is getting ready for the season, which, it is hoped, is now not too far away.

APPROVAL GIVEN

Approval has been given by the Minister of Education to the formation of two township school areas in the municipality of Bangor, Wicklow and McClure. One township area will include the four school sections of McClure and Wicklow and the other, the three sections of Bangor.

This brings the number of Township School areas in the northern part of the county to five.

POLICE COURT

Following a six weeks' vacation in Florida, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., returned to his post as prosecuting attorney in the city police court today. He was welcomed back by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., and Chief Kidd.

William Lusk, 17, of this city, was sentenced to serve not less than three months nor more than nine, in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate Butler when he appeared for sentence today. Lusk pleaded guilty to a charge of the theft of a roll of linoleum, the property of Wray's Furnishing Company, one week ago and appeared for sentence today.

"This lad is a bad boy," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., following which Chief Kidd introduced Lusk's list of previous convictions, which found he had been given four suspended sentence warnings in the past three years. Lusk was apprehended as he was found carrying the roll of linoleum from behind Wray's Store. He made no comment for his actions.

Arrested at his home by R.C.M.P. Constable Wm. Beatty, Henry Sharkey, Sulphide, was remanded to the custody of the County jail on Saturday. Sharkey was charged with the possession of an alleged still, suitable for the manufacture of illicit liquor, Constable Beatty stated. The accused man was remanded until Thursday next when he will appear in Tweed police court.

Only one inebriate faced L.C.A. charges in today's local police court, however, and the conventional fine was paid.

War Supplies Sent To Red Cross Hdqts. By Local Branch

Further evidence of the splendid response of the women of the city and district to the war-work appeal of the Red Cross was seen today, when six large cartons of war supplies were forwarded with another shipment of clothing for refugees, to Red Cross headquarters in Toronto.

Included in the war supplies shipment was 276 pairs socks; 68 pairs wristlets; 48 scarves; 30 sweaters; 90 pairs pyjamas; 24 pairs bed socks; 24 ice-bag covers; 18 hot-water bag covers; 12 triangular bandages; 24 khaki handkerchiefs and 6 hospital gowns.

Refugee clothing included 6 quilts; 36 pairs children's bloomers; 7 children's dresses; 14 helmets; 4 pairs socks; 6 pairs mittens; 5 toques; 4 scarves; 1 sweater; 1 suit woolen underwear; 9 baby's shirts and 8 baby's jackets.

Local Red Cross officials today expressed their appreciation of generous donations of war work supplies and money to the following Red Cross units and auxiliaries, Melrose, Point Anne, Halloway, Foxboro, Bell Telephone girls, St. Andrew's Church, Jewish Ladies, Cannifton, Bridge Street United Church, Roslin, and Mrs. H. S. Bryson.

Ladies of the district are unflagging in their efforts to maintain a steady flow of supplies and money flowing into Red Cross headquarters, a local official stated today. "They are doing a splendid work and their interest and efforts are still of the same enthusiastic nature, as that which characterized them, when the appeal was first launched. We are proud of the efforts of the women of Belleville and outlying districts."

On Sunday, March 17th., Mrs. Margaret Roach, widow of John Roach, and one time of Belleville, passed away in Toronto. She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Taugher, who were residents of Belleville many years ago and resided on College Hill.

Surviving her are two nieces, Mrs. Regina Nelson of San Francisco, California, and Mrs. Helen Park of Denver, Colorado, two nephews, Mr. Basil Paul Taugher and Mr. Edward Taugher of San Francisco, California.

The funeral will take place in Toronto on Wednesday morning to the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes for Requiem Mass, after which the funeral party will leave by motor cars for St. James' Cemetery, Belleville, where interment will be made.

LATE MRS. MARY M. ANDERSON

(Rednersville)

Service for the late Mrs. Mary Mason Anderson, wife of Mr. W. Burt Anderson, Rednersville, and formerly of Carroll, Manitoba, was conducted in the chapel at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, on Sunday afternoon, by the Rev. W. H. Boomhour of Rednersville United Church. Many friends were present at the service.

Later the body was forwarded to Carroll, Manitoba, where interment will be made in the family plot.

LATE MRS. MARY A. ASHLEY

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Agnes Ashley, widow of Hiram Ashley took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, on Saturday afternoon, March 16th., to the Presbyterian Church in Foxboro where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. W. J. Walker, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, assisted by the Rev. A. Poulter of the United Church, Madoc, and the Rev. J. W. MacDonald of the Presbyterian Church at Roslin. During the service a vocal solo, "Face to Face," was rendered by Mr. Morley Anderson.

Interment was made in Foxboro Cemetery; the bearers were Messrs. James Lake, John Longwell, Floyd Ashley, Oley Dafoe, Neil Davis and Walter Wickett.

MRS. OLIVER DINGMAN

(Madoc)

Madoc, March 18—(Special) — An aged and highly respected resident of Madoc in the person of Mrs. Oliver Dingman, died at her home in Madoc village today after a lengthy illness. The late Mrs. Dingman, who was formerly Miss Alice Eaton was born in Madoc Township 89 years ago, and has continually resided in that community. Her husband predeceased her 17 years ago, while her only son died two years ago.

She was a member of Trinity United Church and while health permitted was an active worker in all branches of the church's activity. She was well known in the village and her demise will be regretted by a wide circle of friends. Left to mourn are a grandson, Wallace Dingman, with whom she resided, two grandsons and two grand daughters all in the United States. The funeral will be held on Wednesday.

Why The Weather?

Spring weather! Mark Twain in one of his speeches said: "In the spring I have counted one hundred and thirty-six different kinds of weather inside twenty-four hours." These remarks were made in connection with New England weather. New England and southeastern Canada lie right in the path of many storms as they pass from west to east. There the seasons are in sharp contrast with one another. Spring has a variable character in New England and southeastern Canada, due to the storms which often keep on coming until late spring, and to the growing influence of the sun, which is mounting each day higher and higher in the sky, giving many days of almost summer warmth.

Youth Possesses Toy Gun When Taken by Police

Found in the possession of a toy gun, youthful Douglas Verrall, alias Douglas Stothern, who ran away from his charge as farmhand near Bowmanville, was taken into custody by P.C. Wright here Saturday evening. The lad was acting in a suspicious manner, when approached by the constable and failed to give a good account of his presence, it being well after midnight Saturday night.

Further questioning by Sergeant Harman and P.C. Wright at the police station revealed the fact the lad was carrying a toy pistol. Young Verrall then admitted he had been an inmate of the Boys' Training School at Bowmanville and had been released to the custody of a nearby farmer. The Bowmanville school authorities were notified of the lad's whereabouts and yesterday he was returned to that institution. P.C. Wright observed the lad loitering suspiciously near the city hall and held him for questioning.

Former Revolver Shooting Champion Now in the R.C.A.F.

The eagle eye and unerring marksmanship that brought former Lieut. T. R. ("Happy") Ritchie, Gordon Highlanders of Canada, the International Police revolver-shooting championship for seven years in a row, will soon be behind the sights of a machine-gun mounted on one of His Majesty's crack fighting planes.

For "Happy" as he is familiarly known to his intimate friends, because of on infectious good humor, has resigned his commission in the infantry branch of the service and is now undergoing training for a pilot at the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Trenton, with the rank of aircraftsman. He is one of six ex-officers who resigned their commissions, in order to qualify as a pilot under the new Empire Air Training plan.

"Happy" has a wide military experience behind him. He fought in France with the 50th battalion during the last war, and came through unscathed. He served on the British Columbia Police Force for a period of 4 1-2 years, and was instructor in musketry for the Royal Canadian Volunteer Naval Reserve, and the 102nd battalion.

He won the International revolver-shooting title in 1929 and has successfully defended it seven times.

Police Blotter

Considerable property damage was reported as the result of a motor car skidding on the icy pavement into an iron fence at the entrance to the C.N.R. station, Station St., over the week-end.

Albert Snider, Picton, was hastening to catch an east-bound C.N.R. train when the motor car he was about to turn into the railway yards, skidded and crashed into the iron fence south of the station. The fence was badly damaged during the impact, while a wheel was broken off the motor vehicle.

Two Cars Collide

Early Sunday morning two automobiles collided at the intersection of Victoria Ave. and Pinnacle St. John Shymryalyn, R. R. No. 6 Belleville, was proceeding north on Pinnacle St., while Chas Burd, Foxboro, was proceeding easterly on Victoria Ave and about to make a left-hand turn, he told investigating police. No injuries were sustained in either accident.

Lionel Westfall, Belleville, reported to police while driving his motor car on Front St. the vehicle had run over a dog, killing the animal. Later the dog was identified as having been the property of Morley Smith, also of Belleville.

Speaker States Manion's Proposed Gov't Cabinet Just a 'Ghost' Cabinet

REFUTES CRITICISMS

Tweed (Special)—Addressing a Liberal audience in Tweed on Saturday night in support of the candidature of McLean Haig, official Liberal candidate of South Hastings, John Jennings, K.C., of Toronto, characterized the proposed National Government cabinet of Dr. R. J. Manion a "shadow" cabinet. "But," he added, "a shadow cabinet in hardly a correct term, as a shadow can be cast only by that which possesses substance. This is not true of Dr. Manion's cabinet. A 'ghost' cabinet would be more accurate and who wants to be governed by ghosts?"

The entry of McLean Haig into the hall was greeted by the applause of the crowd of his supporters, which almost filled the hall, as Mr. I. D. Corcoran called the meeting to order at 8.30. On the platform with the candidate were Mr. John Jennings, K.C., of Toronto; Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C., of Belleville; Mr. Ed. Brown, unsuccessful Liberal candidate in East Hastings by-election; Mr. S. Tufts, president of Tweed Liberal Association and Mr. Chas. Rush, president of Hungerford Liberal Association.

"Canada," said the chairman, "a young nation as nations go, is economically and financially unable to maintain herself in a state of preparedness for war during times of peace. The very best she can accomplish in peace times is that adequate defences in her vulnerable coastal towns be maintained. Surely no one, in times of peace, expects a Canadian government to spend hundreds of millions of dollars for defensive purposes as countries in Europe do. Such tactics in Canada would be strongly resented by everyone.

Consulted British War Office

"The Mackenzie King government, realizing the possibility of war some time before it became an eventuality, went as far as any democratic country could go in matters of defense, as far as a democratic people would tolerate. Moreover, on the outbreak of war the government consulted an official of the British War Office before embarking on war expenditures and Canada's war effort is the outcome of this and other conversations.

"One might be led to believe by reading the papers that these 'impulsive politicians' could steer the ship of state on a straighter course, but their policy is one of 'leap before you look.' The severest critics of the King administration at the present time," continued Mr. Corcoran, "were strangely silent during the election campaign in Quebec province last October when the Duplessis government was swept out of office largely through the efforts of three Liberal Cabinet ministers.

"Criticism in democratic countries is necessary at times but over-criticism causes all criticism to lose merit. The National Government supporters are largely over-critical because no sane person would expect any government not to make mistakes in changing from a peace time to a war-time policy. Such over-criticism results in destroying the value of their reasonable criticism," concluded the chairman.

"I have not had," observed Mr. Haig, in his opening remarks, "the same personal contacts with the people of Tweed as some of those on the platform with me.

This election resolves itself into one principal issue, although we hear other matters mentioned and a discussion of accomplishments of various kinds; but the people of Canada are being asked what group of men they want to carry on our war effort. It is only natural that the conduct of Canada's war effort to date be called into question and it must be explained."

Mr. Haig then proceeded to describe in some detail what Canada had done since the outbreak of war in September, 1939. Due to the improvement in military technique, this war effort is carried on in two separate and distinct fronts, the economic and the military. The preparation on the economic front has brought about the essential mobilization of all our natural and national resources. Before the war broke out the King Government had laid plans for what Canada should do in the event of war coming. In peace time Canada is not prepared to maintain a war footing. These plans, worked out during peace, were in readiness and in a few days there was set in motion all the machinery of a war time economy with the various war time boards fully organized.

War Supply Board Organized First

The War Supply Board was the first of such boards. This Board drew the best brains of the country for its personnel, with the result that every contract for war supplies is let on the basis of merit. The scandals re contracts of 1914 cannot be repeated in this war, and to date not a single charge of political patronage or corruption has been proved against this Board.

The War Time Prices and Trade Board has been set up to prevent a recurrence of the exorbitant prices during and following the Great War. This Board is properly staffed by the best economic brains of the country to see that prices are kept at their proper level, with the result that during the first six months of the war there has been hardly any appreciable rise in the price of commodities. "On all economic fronts" said Mr. Haig, "the King government has done everything possible to mobilize all our resources and harmonize them into a workable unit."

During peace times only the normal number of men were called for enlistment because Canada cannot maintain a war footing in peace times. In spite of what Dr. Manion says" continued Mr. Haig, "our Canadian troops in England are properly equipped with modern weapons of war. Nor does one have to depend upon the statements even of Hon. Norman R[illegible] the facts," and here the speaker read extracts from an a[illegible] the Minister of National Defence Sutherland of the Bennett Government, who observed that "everything was being done that could be done."

Canada's army is composed of one fully-equipped division already in England and another in training in Canada. Canada's navy is made up of six destroyers and one flotilla leader and for the first time in the history of Canada sharing in the defence of the east and west coasts in collaboration with the British Navy.

Air Force Appropriation Reduced Under Bennett Regime

During the Bennett regime the Air Force appropriation was gradually reduced until in 1936 Canada's war ace Col. Bishop said that it was inferior to any air force in the world. "A few weeks ago", stated the speaker, "Col. Bishop described it as superior to that of any nation. Truly that is a remarkable achievement for which the government of Mackenzie King must be given the credit."

Concluding his remarks Mr. Haig forecast an overwhelming majority for the Government on March 26th. We do not take to heart the criticism of the Government by Dr. Manion and others.. Even the Financial Post, which is admittedly "Tory" in its leanings admits that the new government will have 140 Liberals in its personnel.

Mr. John Jennings K.C., of Toronto referred to his personal regard for Mr. Mackenzie King whom he knew at Toronto University. "No higher minded statesman ever conducted the affairs of this country," he said. "Men who have nothing to do but go up and down this country telling falsehoods as Dr. Manion is doing had done nothing whatever towards Canada's war effort. Mr. Jennings, setting at rest the claim by some that Mr. Haig's personal letter from Mr. King endorsing him as the official Liberal candidate was not signed by Mr. King personally but by a ,member of his staff, readily identified the signature which he had seen a great many times.

Gov't Willing to be Judged on Record

"Mr. King in this election," remarked Mr. Jennings, "has laid down the principle that 'no unkind word be said against anyone,' but let the government be judged on its record."

"There is no division in Canada concerning our standing beside Britain in this war. It is a war that will cost us dear, and the price paid in men, material and money will shock us before we are done. Public men are not doing their full duty if they fail at this time to draw this fact to the attention of the people. In this gigantic struggle there is no place for patronage and the making of vast war fortunes.

"The policy of the Canadian government just before the war was that Canada would not go into any war except following the mandate of parliament or a plebiscite of the people. No money can be spent but by a vote of parliament. Canada's preparations were so well made before war broke out that the change from a peace-time to a war-time set-up was made so smoothly and efficiently that most people even yet are not aware that Canada is at war.

Referring directly to Dr. Manion's criticisms of Canada's war effort, Mr. Jennings said that in March, 1939, a year ago, Dr. Manion had himself said on the floor of the House that the situation in Europe was no more critical than it had been for months and months previously. What would Dr. Manion have done had he been Prime Minister in September last when war broke out? We cannot succeed in this war effort unless we are all one. A representative of the British Admiralty in Halifax recently made the observation that Canada's war effort to date was of a very high calibre.

"Where are the super brains which Manion is calling to assist him? Can anyone in this hall name five of them? They haven't rallied to his side yet. Many of them are already in the various boards set up at present. With utter disregard of political affiliations Mr. King has already included 18 Conservatives in his various war time boards. All contracts by these boards are called for by tenders and only after careful survey of the ability of the tenderer to fill the contract are they let to him and usually the lowest tender gets the contract. These boards know all the costs of materials and overhead and there is no possibility of big profits. The people whose money is being spent will receive one hundred cents of value for every dollar that is spent.

Many Made Fortunes in Last War

"Dr. Manion is envious of this. In the Great War only those with political pull obtained contracts and they got big rake offs. Many are living today on the vast fortunes they made in the last war under a Conservative government. No favoritism is shown in awarding of commissions in the Canadian army. Maj. Gen. McNaughton, a dyed-in-the-wool Conservative, in command of Canada's First Division overseas, certified that not one commission had been given through favoritism, but only after the applicant had been found fitted for the post.

Reverting to legal phraseology, Mr. Jennings said: "You are the jury being asked to convict the King Government of being unfit to carry on Canada's war effort. You are called to try this case on the evidence submitted. What will your verdict be on March 26th?

Opposing a National Government the speaker said that the best government is that which is obtained when there is an opposition. A National Government with no opposition lends itself to scandal and corruption and only in totalitarian countries such as Germany, Italy and Russia where there are dictatorships can it be carried on. We don't want that in democratic Canada.

"What did Manion do last October?" queried Mr. Jennings "during the Quebec election when Hon. Powers, Lapointe and Cardin and others prepared to stake their political life to defeat the Duplessis government? These men risked all when the unity of the country was at stake. Dr. Manion did not go to Quebec. Are you going to turn out Lapointe and these others and an administration with long experience and a record of integrity and put in its place the shadow cabinet of Dr. Manion? Is it not even a shadow cabinet because it is not of sufficient substance to cast a shadow. It might be called a ghost cabinet but who wants to be ruled by ghosts?

"The best brains of Canada don't want to serve under a third-rate leader," continued the speaker. "Will Mr. Heon be a member of this cabinet? He was prevailed upon to second Dr. Manion's nomination at the Conservative convention at Ottawa only after he (Mr. Heon) was promised by the Conservative party that 'no soldiers would be sent overseas from Canada should Great Britain be engaged in war.'

"Who will administer Canada's war effort, men of experience integrity and representative of all sections of Canada or a 'ghost' government whom we do not know? I have no doubt of your answer," concluded Mr. Jennings.

Mr. Bernard Collins K.C., of Belleville, a former resident of Tweed, complimented the chairman on his able address. He referred to the experience of the candidate McLean Haig, as a member of Belleville council and of Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

Tributes Paid to R. Cross Workers

Tributes were paid to the residents of Tweed, whom he knew so well. "For in no place in Canada will you find more loyal friends than in Tweed and district. They are true to the best traditions which they have inherited from two great pioneering races, the British and the French who settled this district. Tributes were paid to Mr. W. E. Tummon ex-M.P., who was instrumental in organizing Tweed Red Cross Branch, the successor to Tweed Red Cross Society which did such magnificent war work in the Great War, and to Mr. S. B. Rollins one of its most respected and useful citizens.

Providence has been kind to Canada, she is endowed with great natural resources, a great people and a great neighbour to the south of us. Along that three thousand mile frontier not a single fort or warship is maintained for defensive purposes or purposes of intimidation. May God grant that Canada always preserve her connection with the British Commonwealth of Nations, and may our democratic institutions never be lost, was the sincere hope expressed by the speaker.

"The only issue in this election continued Mr. Collins, "is the contribution which we must make in our war effort. We are now fighting against those states whose members have dedicated their lives to the destruction of democracy and civilization."

Referring to Mr. Leopold Macaulay's recent appearance in Stirling, Mr. Collins asked this question, "was Mr. Macaulay sincere in his efforts for co-operation when a few weeks ago he was one of those who stood on the floor of the House in the Ontario legislature and voted with a small body of Conservatives and some Liberals in censuring the war effort of the King government?

Mr. Macaulay did nothing to bring about unity when the Quebec election was held. He did not go to Quebec. Where was he? I hope," said the speaker, "he will go to the trouble to answer these questions when he comes back to South Hastings."

In concluding his address, Mr. Collins said that the "memory of the old Union Government of the Great War was still so strong that surely no one would dare to recall it; but now it has been revived under the name of National Government."

GERMANS CLAIM

Scapa Flow and in the islands but raid acknowledged that the Germans had reached objectives at said only one warship was slightly damaged and that other bombs fell in civilian areas, killing one man, wounding seven other persons and damaging five cottages. They said one of the attackers was shot down and others were damaged.)

Knew Home Fleet "in"

The unit leader, Major Fritz Doench, said the Germans "had known for days that the British home fleet was at Scapa Flow" and gave this glowing account of the raid—

"We waited for days, loaded carefully, prepared for weather which would be most favorable. Just before taking off we talked our plans over once more and then departed. We flew a roundabout way because we were not foolish enough to go directly. We came toward the Orkneys from the east and still could see well.

"Before us was such an endless number of ships we had trouble picking out which one we should make the target. We hit four of the biggest ships at least once, directly with 1,000 pounders.

"For half an hour as we circled about the north we saw huge columns of flame. About 7:55 p.m. we disappeared into the darkness toward home."

Observer Tells His Story

Lieut. Honno Phillips, 24-year-old observer whose unit was assigned to the reported attack on the airports in order to keep grounded as many fighter planes as possible, told this story—

"On the trip out we were tense because it was the first raid on a British airport. We headed for Earth House, first. Coming out of the east our objective lay clear before us. We let our row of bombs go.

"We saw bomb after bomb strike clouds of dirt as they struck the runways, then the bright fire of burning hangars.

"During the attack British pursuit planes tried to reach us from below but we turned off and disappeared into the night."

Had to Use Oxygen

Another picture of how the Germans struck just when the ebbing sum could guide their aim and paproaching night "blackout" their homeward flight, was told by First Lieut. Mac Magnussen, who has raided Britain thirteen times.

"We flew toward the Orkneys sometimes so high we had to use oxygen, sometimes through brief rain and sleet storms," he said.

"Our radio man entertained us by playing hot music on his harmonica, which was relayed to the others by our radio system.

"As we apporached the Orkneys there were no clouds, hence it was unfavorable for us because the English could quickly spot us.

"All was quiet on board as we flew to attack one of the warships most favorably situated.

Sensed Plane Lightening

"Then I sensed the plane lightening. The bombs were dropping. It was a few seconds before I learned the results. Then our bomber called, "We hit, she's burning.'

"The prow of the boat was enveloped in a cloud of smoke which spread so that the entire craft soon was buried in a black mass. Tongues of red flame shot out. We made a few curves to watch the fireworks. Anti-aircraft firing appeared to be aimless shooting, as though the English were not able to see us.

"Then came the worning that pursuiters were on our tail. I rose in spirals, stepped on the gas. As we parted into the darkness we saw another great torch spring up. Apparently another big one had been hit."

Political Forces Gather Momentum For Final Drive

With election zero hour only a week away, various political forces in the district are gathering momentum for the final drive to the wire next Tuesday. All three factions in Hastings South are preparing their heavy artillery for the last minute appeals to the electors, and a large number of meetings are scheduled for this week.

The highlight, of course, will be the address of the Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, who speaks in the interest of McLean Haig here tomorrow night. Senator Salter Hayden, K.C., Toronto, will speak in the same cause in Trenton on Thursday night.

Local speakers, for the main part, will rally to the standard of the Conservative choice, Mr. George H. Stokes, and the various parts of the district will ring to the appeal of National Conservative stalwarts.

Mr. Harry R. Cory, Trenton, third entry in the electoral race is carrying on his fight with earnestness and has a number of meetings scheduled for the next few days.

In Prince Edward-Lennox, Messrs. George A. Tustin, National government and Howard Weese, Liberal standard-bearer are allowing no grass to grow under their respective campaign feet. Many meetings will be held in the double riding this week.

In Northumberland, where Jamieson Bone, Belleville ex-Mayor and National government candidate, and W. A. Fraser, Liberal stalwart are waging one of the bitterest fights of the district, additional verbal pyrotechnics are expected before the final curtain rings down on the electoral stage next Tuesday. Both speakers are dynamic, and forceful, have not been pulling their "platform punches" and a further heated struggle is expected before the end of the week.

"SEND HIM VICTORIOUS'

In the National Anthem the Ottawa Journal says the British people have the theme song for this age and this period of war as for other ages and times, "something easily carried in mind and heart all ready for whistling when the common sense of mid-Europe has still another black-out. And the wonder is that we have it already at hand, worded as if verbally tailored to meet the present situation. It is the tune, of much discussed origin, to which all Britishers react in the same way whether heard on Canadian prairies, Australian blocks, South African veldts, or in the Motherland itself."

The Journal goes on to say, "This familiar theme song stands for patriotism and loyalty throughout the Empire upon which the sun never sets. The critical may find its music lacking in the spirit of the 'Marseillaise,' the majesty of the now seldom heard, 'God Save the Tsar,' or the appeal of 'The Star Spangled Banner.' But since Henry Carey gave the words of 'God Save the King' to the world just two hundred years ago, it has been a part of many achievements in peace or war.

"Since its adoption as the British National Anthem the words have undergone changes. It has been pruned a bit, altered here and there. One whole verse was dropped, about the time optimists believed that a permanent Brotherhood of Man was in process of formation. That stanza might now be taken out of retirement, dusted off, and again put in circulation for it voices the sentiment of most and probably of all who whole-heartedly sing 'God Save the King.' The deleted verse fits today's conditions as created by the arch-dictator and his sycophants. Remember how it runs? 'Confound their politics. Frustrate their knavish tricks.' What could be more pat with a 'blitzkreig' possible, or a long, wearing war incited by Hitler impending?

"'God Save the King' is more than a plea for the safety of the monarch who is Canada's King. His safety and his victories are our own. United his peoples can face with confidence any common foe. Any part, east, west, north or south, may have its individual song suitable to the environment, but above all these, in power and volume, the strains of the National Anthem will rise while the British Commonwealth of nations stands as it always will for justice and honor within and without its confines."

HUN PLOT TO GET MONEY

Everyone remembers how the Huns when they gripped Czecho-Slovakia, while they were affirming they were setting up protectorates, gave the world an example of unparalleled theft. Motor drays drove up in front of the bank in Prague and loaded up with the gold of the Czech nation and carried it off to Berlin where it was not ear-marked. It was by the very act of theft transmuted into German money and wealth.

The other day a plot was bared indicating that these same Nazi Huns were trying to unload on the markets of the world, especially through neutral agencies, securities which had been seized in Nazi depradations. London Stock Exchange has warned brokers and investors and markets to be on their guard, "to exercise the greatest caution in accepting or executing orders, the real source of which they were not able to verify beyond all reasonable doubt."

Such securities as referred to are liable to seizure by the Custodian of Enemy Property and their delivery gives no title to the purchase. The seller, therefore, is liable to be called upon in the case of seizure to make a second delivery.

Canadian exchanges have taken action to protect members and the public.

RUSSO-FINN WAR'S COST

One nation has learned the cost of war in numbers at least—that is Russia who is said to have lost a quarter of million soldiers dead and a like number wounded. Estimates a year or so ago placed the available strength of the Russian army at 16,000,000 men. If that figure is correct then Russia has probably lost one in every thirty-two of her men of military age or one in every 340 inhabitants of Russia in casualties half of which were deaths.

Half a million is a great loss in fifteen weeks, over thirty-three thousand a week or nearly five thousand a day.

But the proportionate loss of Finland is higher. She lost 15,000 killed, according to the estimate of Field Marshal Mannerheim, and the Foreign Minister puts the wounded at 35,000 or over. Total casualties of fifty thousand to such people is very heavy about one sixth or seventh of their available man power for military service and about one in 75 of the population. The Finnish killed probably number one in every 250 of the population while the Russian dead are one in every 680 of the population.

The economic loss to Finland has been very heavy through Russian air raids and hand fighting, running into hundreds of millions probably. Russia gains territory which she herself has helped to blast and blow to bits. To make use of this she will have to pour out many millions in addition to what she must have poured out in this campaign in an undeclared war.

SAYS GERMANY USED THREAT

It has been said by the Norwegian Foreign Minister that Germany threatened Norway and Sweden if they allowed Allied aid to cross their territory into Finland.

That is just what the world is used to expecting from Germany—threats of violence and if necessary, actual violence.

What did Hitler think of the Russian adventure in Finland? Was Hitler pleased to see the Russian army suffer losses? Did he fear that Russia might get in too far for German comfort?

In one of the British newspapers it was said a few days ago that whatever there is of threat to civilization is to be laid to Hitlerism, which has to be wiped out before there is security for nations and democracy. That is the viewpoint of the Allies and no doubt of neutrals. This thought is substantiated by the decision of Finland to sign peace because she could not obtain the aid even the Allies had already offered, because as declared by the Finns, Finland's Scandinavian neighbors, Norway and Sweden, would not consent to passage of troops. The statement of the Norwegian Minister is important in this connection.

The Nazis know no other weapons but trickery, threats and violence. Therefore no understanding can be made with Hitler and his satellites or sycophants in the Nazi party for his ways are not democratic ways and are not the ways which have been current in modern history. His agencies resemble those of conquerors used in the darkest periods of history. (Those conquerors have all gone and with them every vestige of their mushroom empires.)

Eagle Bathing In Hotel Room Startles Scribe

By R. S. MARRIOTT

in Montreal Gazette

"Excuse me, but Mr. Ramshaw is having a bath. He won't mind if you pop in and see him."

I stared at the speaker. He was Capt. C. W. R. Knight, one of the best known lecturer-naturalists in the world. He had his coat off and his sleeves rolled up as he stood in his room at the Windsor Hotel, and from the bathroom came the sound of splashing.

I followed him into the bathroom, and leapt out again immediately. Mr. Ramshaw had his feet on the edge of the washbasin, and his head buried in the water. Captain Knight gave a deep-throated chuckle. You see, Mr. Ramshaw is an eagle—a magnificent golden eagle from Scotland. The captain assured me that he was quite tame. No doubt he was, but I still couldn't help feeling that the only tame eagle was a dead one, and I didn't expect to find either a live one or a dead one in the bathroom of a city hotel.

Mr. Ramshaw was very much alive. He raised his sleek, hook-beaked head as I ventured into the room again, turned around and took off. There was a flurry of wings until it seemed that there was nothing else in the room but feathers, then a flop and he had landed on the packing case in which he had been smuggled into the hotel.

Then Captain Knight explained. While he was explaining, Ramshaw again took flight, landed on the gauntletted hand of his master and peered inquiringly into his face. Captain Knight stroked his head.

"Yes, Ramshaw is just 13 years old. That's not old, you know—he will most likely live to be 100. it's hard to tell, eagles don't keep birth registers. He's a good specimen, came from Scotland. As a matter of fact he has a wing spread of six feet."

Captain Knight got him from a zoo when he was quite young after a female eagle of the same species had turned nasty. The captain still carries three scars on his face where the eagle had fastended its talons into him.

Ramshaw has had quite an adventurous career. He has made 15 crossings of the Atlantic, been seasick nearly every time, and each time he looked as though he wanted to die, but like any normal human being, didn't.

He once went on a spree in New York and sailed round high above that city of sky-scrapers for two days, before finally frightening the wits out of a taxi-driver on whose cab he alighted.

"There is a little village in England which was sorry to see Ramshaw go on this trip," continued Captain Knight. "Every morning I would send him up and he would come back with a rabbit. The villagers liked those rabbits, they were very tasty."

Ramshaw co-operates well with his master during his lectures and he is always a focal point of interest. He is allowed out on the stage loose and can at any time be recalled to his master's hand. The secret is a cunningly concealed piece of meat. His interest in meat is amazing and his beak fairly dribbled saliva this morning when the captain showed him a brown paper parcel while trying to get him to pose for some pictures.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES
OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 18th., 1920.

Mr. B. C. Frederick has returned from Hamilton where he attended as a delegate the Dominion Council of the Royal Templars of Temperance.

Mrs. T. A. Gardiner is visiting friends in St. Catharines.

The continued cold weather has had the effect of holding the ice in the river and in consequence there is no change in the possibility of a flood. This morning the water rose to some extent in the back yards on the west side of Front Street, north of the footbridge, but up to the present time no great inconvenience has been caused. A gang of men is engaged in cutting a channel at the mouth of the river below the railway bridge. The ice from the railway bridges to the footbridge remains intact and is of considerable thickness.

In a successful attempt to stop a runaway team this morning the Rev. A. L. Geen of this city was the victim of a painful accident. About 7.30 o'clock A. M., Mr. Geen was proceeding along Bridge Street west, near the lower bridge, when a team of horses attached to a delivery wagon came towards the bridge running at a fast rate of speed and without a driver. Mr. Geen succeeded in grasping the lines and stopped the horses, but in doing so he was dragged a considerable distance. At first he did not think that he was seriously hurt and proceeded to his place of business. However, at the store his injuries were found to be much more serious and a doctor was called. It was found that his shoulder was dislocated and he sustained several severe cuts and bruises. To day he is resting comfortably at his home, Moody Cottage.

A War Against Wooly Words

Now I wish to have a battle with Whitehall. It's a battle about bad language—the bad language of Government departments and other lofty places. But I don't mean abuse or blasphemy. I say "bad language" as you would say "bad bowling" or "bad cooking," meaning rotten, inefficient, ineffective, and even dangerous language.

Few of us nowadays, I think, would say that in war time words—and men of words—don't matter. You remember Nelson's signal: "England expects that every man will do his duty". Good. But suppose that that signal had been drafted by one of our fat-word-breeders in Whitehall, that signal would have run thus: "England anticipates"— nobody can say "expects" to day—"that with regard to the current emergency, personnel will duly implement their obligations in accordance with the functions allocated to their respective age-groups".

Well, would anyone have said then that words didn't matter? No; it would have been said that the author of that verbose, vague and suety signal was not fit to lead his fellow-countrymen into battle. Yet such signals, such commands, are oozing and squelching out of Whitehall, and bogging the thoughts of the loyal citizen every day. And, make no mistake, this is a serious charge. Bad muddled words, causing doubt and delay, have thrown or are throwing much sand in the national machine. And in this war words matter more than ever.

Herr Hitler, I suppose, may fairly be described as a man of action. I hope, I'm sure, that in saying so much I shall not be thought guilty of annoying the enemy. But he's far from despising the use of words. Here at home no one who was delighted in the power and precision of Mr. Winston Churchill's broadsides will say that words don't matter; and it's no accident that the same statesman who in speech has scored so many bull's-eyes is fixed as well in the public mind as a rock in purpose and a dynamo in action. He has shown you that it is not always necessary to speak of big things in long woolly words.

Some of us knew this before, but to others it has come with a shock of surprise. And that shows how low we have sunk in the world of words. You have learned in recent years to expect any speech or writing about public affairs to be bulging with words like bolsters and phrases like feather-beds—gross Latin words like "decontamination", phrases like "mutual bi-lateral non-aggression", and so on. So, when Mr. Churchill concludes an address with that simple but electric passage, "Man the ships, till the fields, sweep the mines, guard the streets, kiss the girls" and so on, you sit up and say, "My hat, all this means something after all, moreover, this man understands us".

But I had better not say any more about Mr. Churchill, or you'll think that I'm conducting a base intrigue against the rest of the Cabinet—which I'm not. The Prime Minister and Sir John Simon and others, in their different styles, are masters of concise and lucid statement, and never waste a word. All the King's ministers would agree with me at once that words do matter. They matter because they are the channels of thought, and should be clear; because they are spurs to action, and should be sharp; because they are the tools of every trade and should be cared for; and because they are evidence of character, and give us away.

The woolly word may reveal the woolly mind; the obscure or cloudy word may conceal the tricky purpose or the absence of a plan. I am told that outside a famous barracks in London this notice was recently displayed: "Tenders are invited for the disposal of manure accumulated in respect of military animals". "Manure accumulated in respect of military animals":— in other words, "manure".

Now, to condemn this sort of thing is not merely to be a fussy grammarian or pedantic scholar, to prefer effective and fitting language, or to disapprove of wasting public ink and paper. That notice betrays the character of the man who composed it. I can see the fellow, and I had better not say what I see. But we are entitled to suspect the character and competence of any department, any party, and any politician who stuffs the public mind with woolly, half-baked, flabby or slushy words.

In this war, I think, the classic example is 'evacuation', and all the nasty litter of mongrel expressions which have sprung up round it—'evacuee', the 'self-evacuating' person, 're-evacuation', and so on. Nothing can be done, perhaps, to kill 'evacuation' now, but unless we abuse its wretched parents with a will, they will gaily give birth to some similar monstrosity tomorrow.

No doubt about it, this was a wanton and brutish crime against good sense and the King's English, committed by the King's Government. And there was not the lease excuse. 'Evacuate' means —it still means—'to make empty', quite empty. 'Evacuate' is what the doctor tries to do when he uses a stomach-pump. Now when the whole of a garrison retired from a fort and left it to the enemy, that was reasonably described as an 'evacuation'— though even then, 'abandonment' would have been a better word. But you don't say that you have 'evacuated' a pint pot when you have drunk half a pint. At no time did the Government intend that London, Liverpool or Manchester should be 'evacuated'—that is 'made empty'. Then why use the word? If ever they do wish to do the drastic thing, they will need some drastic word like 'evacuate' and then they will find that they have destroyed its meaning.

If you ask me what I should have done, I shall accept the challenge at once. I should have said. "The Government policy is one of dispersal — to disperse or scatter the people, as the general scatters his soldiers, that they may present a more tricky target to the enemy. Those who are asked to go will be called 'scatterers' a good old English word, or, if you insist, 'scatterees'—a bad word, but much better than 'evacuees'."

And mark you, there is here a strong point or morale. To 'evacuate" a city is to abandon it, to surrender it. The word stinks of defeat. To "disperse" or "scatter" is a sensible military manoeuvre; It's what the infantry do when they perceive the enemy before them or his aeroplanes above. No doubt, if I had my way, the good word "scatter" would have budded and blossomed in some surprising ways. We should have had "scatter camps" and "scatter children", "scatter areas" and "scatter-backs".

Why not? I am no pedant; and that growth would have been at least natural and the roots sound. What I hate is to hear the simple workman or waterman in the pub compelled to speak of the intimate things in his life—the departure of his wife, the care of his children —in ugly, alien and unnatural terms, simply because some official in the Ministry of Sanitation enjoys the sound of lengthy Latin words, or is too lazy to select an English one.

But I should prefer, as I have said, to do without such alien labels in politics at all. Let us—where we can—preserve and honor the fire, the force, the freshness of our tongue—with, of course, such reasonable contributions as we require from others. In that tongue, after all, great things can be said in few and slender words How did King George the Fifth speak of the British Empire? "In these days", he said in 1935, "when fear and preparation for war are again astir in the world, let us be thankful that quiet government and peace prevail over so large a part of the earth's surface, and that under our flag of freedom so many millions eat their daily bread, in far distant lands and climates, with none to make them afraid."

Is that Imperialism? I cannot tell. Is it good English? Yes, simple and sturdy, proud but plain.—by A. P. Herbert, M. P., in the London Listener.

Brass Knuckles On Aggressors

Both Finland and China are backed against the wall. Disorder and aggression now rule the world from Tokyo to the Rhine. The cancer that eats at world civilization is almost as big as the patient. There are few healthy spots left. If there is to be a solution, it must be a big solution. It is too late for small solutions.

In this setting the Senate bill grants Export-Import Bank loans of $20,000,000 apiece to Finland and China is little more than a pious wish, a gesture, a moral sop. It might almost be called conscience money. We are giving a few crumbs to peace and decency before pulling the blankets up about our ears and sinking into deep isolated sleep and sweet democratic dreams.

We refuse to entangle our fortunes with those of the belligerents because we fear to involve ourselves in war.

It is a pity this same delicacy does not lead us to cut off our relations with the aggressors, with whom, in another way, we are also entangling our fortunes. Almost every ship that leaves our west coast bears copper and scrap iron and steel and oil and machinery for the use of the aggressors who have created the problem which afflicts and affrights us.

The truth is that we are arming the countries which inflict those wounds we seek to bind up by small loans. The greatest democracy in the world is bogged down in a morass of contradictions. It sells brass knuckles to the thug and iodoform to his victim. It will not defend the victim for fear of war and it will not stop arming the aggressor.

An embargo of war materials to Japan would leave the Japanese military machine helpless. It depends almost exclusively on American goods. It buys $30,000,000 of crude petroleum from us each year; during peace it bought $14,000,000 of this commodity. It buys $5,000,000 of pig iron; during peace it bought $45,000 worth per year. It buys $22,000,000 of copper; during peace it purchased less than $8,000,000. It buys almost $24,000,000 of machinery; during peace it bought less than $4,000,000 per year. These increases are for war use.

Not all the bandages in America nor all the ambulances, nor all the medicine can wipe out the moral stain of these increased sales. The goods are clearly the raw materials of conquest, the makings of murder on the Asiatic mainland.

As for Russia, she had almost cut off her purchases from us until the Fall of last year, when war came. In four months she bought $56,000,000 of goods, of the year's total of $70,000,000. She is buying heavily of copper and gasoline and machine tools. Most of these are war goods by their very nature; almost all are war goods during war. A metal-working lathe is more deadly than a thousand 12-inch shells. It makes the motors that run the tanks that crush freedom and democracy.

The small loans in the Senate bill may drag us toward war; they cannot save Finland or China.

Instead of making this new partnership, let us break the old one that binds us to the brigands. That may save China: the mere word of forthcoming embargo might give the Russian generals pause in their headquarters on the Karelian isthmus.

This is the contribution history calls upon us to make. It does not involve the risk of war. By dragging the brakes on war, and tending to reduce the area and severity of war, embargo serves the cause of peace everywhere, and thus the cause of peace for our country.

It is close to the zero hour for what is left of order in the world. There is no longer the slightest doubt as to what we ought to do.—New York Post.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

In the new flurry of diplomatic activity following the end of the Russo-Finnish war, Germany seems to be trying to swing Rumania into line with Nazi plans for economic war by using the threat of the now idle Russian army.

No word has come from Moscow about designs on Rumania but the Nazis are offering to guarantee the Balkan kingdom against Russian aggression in exchange for important concessions.

King Carol finds the concessions asked too steep and no doubt has in mind the joint guarantee of Great Britain and France which Rumania now enjoys. He also can compare the records of Great Britain and France in keeping their pledges with the record of Nazi Germany.

By linking Rumania's economic system up with the German war machine King Carol would lose the guarantees of the Allies and get a Nazi guarantee in exchange.

The presence of Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's personal emissary, in Europe undoubtedly accounts for some of the diplomatic activity noticeable now. Mr. Welles was in Rome during the week-end.

The German ambassador visited the Foreign Office while Mr. Welles conferred with Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister and today Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Hitler are to confer. These facts, coupled with last week's visit to Rome by Joachim von Ribbentrop indicate keen Nazi interest in the conversations between the officials of the United States and Italy.

Possibly the Germans want to impress the United States with the solidarity of the Rome-Berlin Axis as an assurance of ultimate German victory. Possibly they may be interested in some new peace move to be sponsored jointly by President Roosevelt and Premier Mussolini.

Somber Scenes As Hitler Talks

Not the swastika, but the iron cross, dominated the memorial service held in Berlin today. This was the decoration, created 127 years ago on this date, that hung behind the low rostrum from which Chancellor Hitler delivered one of the briefest, quietest and perhaps most decisive speeches he ever made,—writes Anne O'Hare McCormick in New York Times.

The place was full of military uniforms—blue, gray, green and black—for among the few hundred persons admitted to the glass-roofed court in the arsenal where the observance took place ranking officers of all branches of the fighting forces predominated. But Hitler's long coat was of a different color, drab olive green, that not only set him apart from the others but subtly changed his appearance and his role.

Apparently in the pink of physical condition, trim, erect and almost immobile, he stood under the sign of the Iron Cross as war chief. He read his speech in low, even tones, seldom raising his eyes from the manuscript. His only gesture was to turn the page, his only emphasis put on the last few sentences when, as leader of the nation, Chancellor of the Reich and Commander in Chief of the army, he dedicated the country to war and vowed victory to it.

The red-carpeted aisle, leading to the platform divided the military dignitaries on one side from the party hierarchy on the other. From Hess, Himmler and Goebbels down the line the latter were all there in their brown uniforms, but when Hitler came in with Goering, von Brauchitsch, Keitel and Raeder—the five men in supreme command of the destiny of Germany—he took his place with the military. This was significant only as it underlined the extent to which the party seems to be submerged, not merely in today's observance, but in the national picture. Only one Brown Shirt representing the Nazi veterans stood on Hitler's side of the aisle.

Gone are the great party rallies, the staged demonstrations. Gone are the days of the Nazis ueber alles. Now the general atmosphere is very like that of today's memorial service, somber, subdued, ready for the worst. The crowds did not cheer Hitler as he drove down Unter den Linden in his open car, did not gather in front of the Chancellory, as they usually do when he appears. He spoke amid camouflaged cannon and armored cars of the World War in the Central Court Museum, filled with old uniforms, tattered flags and antiquated guns—the debris of centuries of warfare. Around the hall were disposed the human wreckage of the latest victory, [illegible] wounded soldiers of the Polish campaign.

No sound broke the silence except Hitler's low voice blurred by echoes. When he ended abruptly on a note indicating what lies ahead, not a murmer was heard. It was a funeral service, and the obituary mood was accentuated by the piercing strains of the Heroic Symphony. But throughout the speech, as well as Beethoven's great elegy, played by a string orchestra, also in military uniform, one felt the commemoration was not for heroes already dead but for heroes about to die. The occasion was plainly keyed to a prelude to war.

City Busses And Gas Tax

Brantford is pressing for rebate of gasoline tax on fuel used by buses of the city's transportation system. Estimating the amount of the tax at about $9,000 a year, Brantford Expositor points out that street railway indebtedness still imposes certain financial obligations, and the city must also spend money removing tracks and reconditioning streets, as well as maintaining mileage which is part of the provincial highway system. It is also noted that the province permits a rebate of the tax on gasoline used by municipally owned motor vehicles, and on the whole concludes that the city has a good case in respect of the motor buses.

It may be a good case, but it is safe to predict that the government will not see it in that light. Kitchener made a similar move a year ago this month. If exemption were granted in respect of public vehicles operating for revenue in one city, other systems would be similarly entitled to it and it would be difficult to draw a line. The argument that vehicles are used only within corporation limits and not on provincial highways outside applies to privately-operated bus services and as well as a host of commercial and private vehicles used entirely within a municipality. In any case, this proposition has never got very far at Queen's Park. Intermittently, for years, city councils have sought a share of the gas tax revenue on the ground that they had to maintain highway links at their own cost. There was a theory that the extra half-mill subsidy paid last year was by way of sharing the gas tax, but now it has been withdrawn.

The Brantford argument rests partly upon compassionate grounds otherwise upon the theory that motor taxation is for highway purposes, but that has long been abandoned and the phraseology embodying it removed from the statute. The gas tax, increased far beyond need for road purposes, is collected because the government wants the money, and that, whether or not, so expressed, will likely be the answer to Brantford. — Woodstock Sentinel Review.

ers, Clement Attlee and Sir Archibald Sinclair, to join the government, which they refused to do at the beginning of the war. Mr. Lloyd George also was mentioned in speculation.

In an outspoken demand for a more dynamic war policy, The Daily Mail declared—

"Events seem to be always one jump ahead of the British government. ......while the enemy acts (in reference to the Hitler-Mussolini meeting) the democracies hesitate.

"Today we still have the good old easy-come-easy-go system of muddling inefficiency. It may carry us through peace but it's not good enough for war,......

"The government should face one fact. Their lack of boldness is losing them public confidence. The British people want to see Britain the master, not the servant of events."

Ask For More Vigor

The Times asked for "more vigor and liveliness, both in the conduct of the war and in the conduct of diplomacy."

"Many people clearly find themselves in agreement with Mr. Herbert Morrison's remarks on Saturday that we need more vigor," The Times said. "There is thought to be a slightly leisurely air about our methods.

"Are we hitting as often as we can and wherever we can? The war leaders themselves alone have the facts and knowledge to decide how the ingredients of patience and daring can best be mixed, but it is certain that public opinion both in this country and in France, so far from relapsing into what is the fashion to call complacency, would like above all things to see a more dynamic current running through the Franco-British war effort."

First Civilian Casualty

The raid in Saturday's twilight brought the war's first civilian air raid casualties and the announcement that an unidentified warship had been hit.

One cottager was killed and seven other civilians—including two women—were wounded. Seven naval men were listed as casualties also, but the Admiralty did not specify whether they were killed or wounded.

A government statement on the raid is expected in the House of Commons which has been preparing for a debate this week on the whole conduct of the war.

Press criticism of what the Times called "the slightly leisurely air about our methods" was general. The Daily Mail asserted that public confidence is being undermined by the government's "lack of boldness."

Only One German Plane Shot Down

The fact only one German bomber was shot down prompted questions, the press blaming the Royal Air Force for not destroying more.

The 100 high explosive and incendiary bombs the German raiders showered on Scapa Flow off the north coast of Scotland did only "minor damage" to the British man o'war, the Admiralty announced.

James Isbister, 27, an Orkney county council employee, was the civilian killed. He was standing in the doorway of his bridge of Waith Cottage, near Stromness Airfield. Two neighbors, also watching the flash of anti-aircraft fire in the gathering darkness, were wounded.

First Since October 17

The raid was the first on Scapa Flow since the dismantled battleship Iron Duke, in use as a training ship, was hit and damaged by a German air raider Oct. 17.

Soon after the enemy squadron roared in from the North Sea, heather on Pomona Island was blazing. The raiders appeared just after sunset at about 7:50 p.m. and were not driven off by planes and ship and shore batteries until 9:15. Five cottages were hit and farm buildings and haystacks were fired.

It was stated that few of the enemy dared to brave the Scapa Flow defences but "were content to kill and wound civilians in a small village (Bridge of Waith) five or six miles from the harbor."

(German announcements claimed three battleships and one cruiser were "severely damaged" and that two other naval vessels sustained "probable" damage.)

Raid German Patrol Vessels

The Air Ministry reported a Saturday foray against German patrol vessels between the islands of Borkum and Heligoland. Royal Air Force planes staggered one empty craft with a salvo of bombs, the vessel being "partially lifted out of the water" by the force of the explosions. All British planes returned to their bases safely.

The Daily Telegraph said that downing of only one raider during the Nazi bombing attack showed that the base had not been adequately protected.

The Daily Mail said the government's "lack of boldness is losing them public confidence" and advocated "a real war cabinet, a compact body of men fired with initiative and imagination," like the war cabinet of five formed by David Lloyd George in the first Great War.

Want Greater Diplomacy

The Daily Telegraph said: "What will cause disappointment in the public minds is the knowledge not so much that this raid on Scapa Flow could be achieved but that the raiders were able to return to their base with such small loss. The Germans as a matter of course boast that all their raiding machines returned safely.

"On that point Mr. Churchill will be expected to say a good deal. Meanwhile the first case of those in charge of our defensive organization must be to make sure any repetition of Saturday's raid will prove a perilous and costly venture."

"Events seem to be always one jump ahead of the British government," The Daily Mail said editorially.

"Hitler and Mussolini meet today for the first time since the war broke out. They may agree to a joint Balkan plan or on a so-called basis for peace proposals.

"Are we with France prepared to face this new diplomatic situation?

Deplorable Diplomatic Setback

"Already Spring has opened with a deplorable diplomatic setback — Finland. Our prestige suffered. The reaction on the small neutral countries has been deplorable.

"While the enemy acts, the democracies hesitate.

"It is time that the government arrested the creeping paralysis which is dulling our movements, our voice and our resolution."

The Daily Herald said: "Are Britain and France doing all they can to keep the diplomatic initiative on their side? The ides of March have come and gone this year without any military eruption. We have diplomatic eruptions instead.

"What do they protend for the Allies? And what plans have we made to meet all the surprises that may come?

"Our diplomacy and our economic warfare must be resolute. . . .

"We must plan, foresee, prepare and direct the progress of the war. We must force it into the mold of victory.

"Our vast resources and our just cause give us the power to take the initiative and to keep it."

tacked with automatic light arms and were met by German counterfire. Later the Germans withdrew. In the second engagement the Germans sent about 300 men to meet a French patrol operating in the Vosges. The French unit replied to enemy fire and repulsed waves of Germans seeking to capture advance positions, according to these advices.

Heavy Machine-Gunning

Heavy bursts of machine-gunning were succeeded by fire from the artillery which blasted the German troops and forced them to retreat in disorder. Shell explosions ripped through the Germans causing a large number of dead and wounded. Two French soldiers "disappeared."

Military advices said all positions temporarily occupied by the Germans were retaken.

Along the Rhine, French and German troops exchanged rapid rounds of machine-gun fire while loudspeakers on both sides blared propaganda messages.

(Guns of the Maginot Line, according to a report from Basel, Switzerland, yesterday blasted propaganda billboards on the German side which bore the slogan, "Do not sacrifice yourself to the English.")

Allied and German aerial forces made several reconnaissances over each other's territory despite unfavorable weather, it was reported.

This morning's French communique follows:

"An attempted enemy infiltration east of the Moselle River failed before the fire of our infantry and artillery."

ONE of these days the itch is going to hit you to get out and get in on the fun a McLaughlin-Buick can be in the spring-time.

Maybe, like others we know of, you've even got the model picked out, and are just "waiting a few weeks" to do something definite about it.

But may we emphasize, in purely friendly interest, that a lot of other people probably have the same idea?

And that when they start buying in droves—as they do every year about the ides of March—even McLaughlin-Buick's big production line has trouble keeping up with them?

Of course, we're doing all we can to be ready for everyone.

But what with everybody wanting Buicks this season, we can't say how long we can promise the delivery we can give now.

So why not play the early bird this year? Why not get the jump on your neighbor and be driving your McLaughlin-Buick while he's still talking about getting his? Better see your McLaughlin-Buick dealer today!

DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES; OTTAWA:

Fish Chowder

2 cups raw diced fish
4 cups water
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup of chopped celery
2 cups raw diced or grated potatoes
4 cups milk
⅓ cup minced onion
Salt and pepper

Fry onion in melted butter, add fish, potatoes and celery, cook a few minutes, season well, add cold water and cook until tender. Then add cold milk and heat to the boiling point. Serve very hot. Any kind of white-fleshed fish may be used.

Creamed Finnan Haddie

Cover a finnan haddie with water, let come to the boiling point and simmer for a few minutes until the fish is cooked — using the top of the stove or the oven. Drain the fish, lay on a hot platter and place small pieces of butter on top. Return to the oven to heat and just before serving add ½ cup of cream or whole milk heated. Do not let the fish remain too long or the cream may curdle from the smoked fish. Garnish with parsley.

NIGHT COUGHING CAN OFTEN BE PREVENTED

Your child's coughing at night—caused by throat "tickle" or irritation, mouth breathing, or a cold—can often be prevented by rubbing his throat and chest with plenty of Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. VapoRub's swift poultice-and-vapor action loosens phlegm, relieves irritation, clears air passages, tends to stop mouth breathing. This helps him relax into healing sleep.

STAR IN BELLEVILLE SKATING ACTIVITIES

Concluding another successful season, the Quinte Skating club of Belleville staged ice carnivals in several neighboring centres. Two of the outstanding skaters among the club's many talented members are Georgia Scott and "Bill" Yarrow, who are shown in a glide. Georgia, 16, won the club junior championship and teamed with Yarrow to take the doubles.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Too Many Matrons Forget Servants Are Humans

When Robert Burns wrote about "man's inhumanity to man", he, of course, included women. But the ladies, its regretful to say, sometimes go a bit farther in the matter of inhumanity toward their fellow-women.

In these days of economic storm and stress, many girls of good families and background have taken jobs as domestics. They are mothers' helpers and maids; some of them are graduate dieticians who, failing to get positions in institutions, enlist as cooks for families

I've had many letters from girls of this type, telling me that they would be contented in domestic service if the people for whom they work would only allow them to have company. But company is taboo in the kitchen, even after working hours.

If you've ever attended a conference which has to do with home economics or the like, you will doubtless recall the plaints of well-dressed matrons that American girls decline to take jobs as domestics. They'll endure any kind of factory work in preference, which is hard for your comfortable matron to understand.

A short cut to the maid's reasoning, in so many of the cases, is that these girls, even if they are given good wages and comfortable quarters, are not permitted to have company. Especially is the boy friend debarred.

Girls who undertake to do domestic work are as human as girls holding down white-collar jobs, or debutantes holding no job at all. If they're normal, they hope to marry and have homes of their own. But how is this possible when the only place they can meet the boy friend is on some dismal street corner.

Take this girl's letter for instance:

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"When I was 17, my mother and father died only a few months apart, so I took service as a maid and work for a wealth family who occupy a large house. I have worked for them for ten years and they are very kind, considerate, give me excellent wages, and do not overwork me.

"But I get so lonely in my room of evening, for I am not allowed to have even my girl friends to come and see me. Last summer I met a very nice and sensible young man who has a steady job and good connections. But when we want to see each other, we have to go to a movie, walk the snowy street, sit in his car, or drive around, so we can be together a while.

"I told him I could not receive him in the house. Although he was sympathetic about this, how can I expect him to meet me on street corners when he can visit other girls in their homes? Would it be proper for me to visit him in his room? Or could we rent a room so that we could meet some place where it's warm and comfortable? I hardly know what is the right thing to do.

Unhappy".

I hope if this meets the eye of the lady who has had this faithful employee for the past ten years (or any other matron who declines to let her maids have company) that she will try to put herself in the place of such a girl. Then she will not be unduly shocked when she hears of a girl visiting a young man in his room, or renting a room so that they can see each other with some degree of comfort.

It's too bad for a nice girl to be driven to such extremes. And I hope the young man will shorten the courtship and take the girl to a home of her own. Otherwise, what is to be expected?

GOOD MANNERS

Ready-Made Reminder Cards May Now Be Bought

Limitless praises should be sung to the man or woman who invented "Informals", those fold-over cards that are at our service for an ever-increasing number of uses.

Now another use has been devised for these friendly cards. It is now possible for us to buy, by the box, semi-engraved reminder cards. The words, beautifully engraved on the first page of this double card, are:

This is to remind you that expecting you for on at o'clock

Heretofore reminder cards were a luxury, for we had to have our own engraving-plate made, and the cards engraved from the plate. Since they were such an important social item, these cards had to be engraved on the finest stock.

Reminder cards are charming proper and sensible supplements to the telephoned invitation. We plan our party, we telephone our invitations, we immediately know which invited guests can come and which cannot. But then, there is always the possibility that the date or the hour may have been misunderstood over the telephone, so that our invited guest may not have accurately the information.

Now, with a trifle more expense than your note-paper for the invitations would cost, you may conveniently have at hand a box of distinguished-looking reminder cards, fill in the spaces with your name, with the occasion for the party ('dinner', 'lunch', 'buffet supper,', 'bridge', or whatever), the date, the hour, and, if necessary, at the bottom of the card, the address.

And there you are, with every detail definite for your guests.

Ice Cream or Punch?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Our sorority is going to have a semi-formal dance at a moderately small club. The problem is refreshments. The majority wants ice cream and cookies. The others want punch and cookies. They want to have a large bowl of punch, with the cookies nearby on large platters. Then the people would help themselves.

What is your opinion?

Reader

At a dance it is more appropriate to have a drinkable than an "eatable'. If I were you, I'd plan to have the fruit punch and the cookies. Besides being more appropriate, the punch-bowl, filled with delicious and thirst-quenching punch, gives a more festive air than do the not-too-attractive cups of ice cream.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, March 19

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE LUNAR and mutual aspects ruling this day point to great activity and progress, with the forces and faculties under high stimuli. There may be tenacious obstacles and stubborn impediments to cope with, but splendid mentality, adaptability and the employment of fresh modes and tactics assure a definite step forward. Superiors, employers and groups will be found ready to co-operate, being impressed by brilliant ideas, novelty and ingenuity. Romance is not lacking in the personal life. In fact, be prepared for sudden developments.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of decided progress, with highly-keyed talents, initiative and daring in untried and novel fields of action attracting the hearty support of employers and superiors. There may be impediments or old static conditions to cope with, but ingenuity skill, resourcefulness and fresh methods and procedures will reap enduring progress. The personal life is rich with romance or unexpected emotional adventures.

A child born on this day may have great versatility, intellectual strength and initiative, despite a restless, nervous and high-tensioned temperament. Its talents and fresh ideas assure favor from superiors.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Remember The Night"

Meaning The King's Men and Martha Mears, in "Remember the Night," Paramount's light-hearted film starring Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray, which is now playing at the Capitol theatre.

The famous old ballad, which more than any other song written in America puts you in mind of summer nights on the porch, white pants and mandolin, ginger snaps and iced tea, serves as background music for "Remember the Night," most of the action of which is laid on a real old-fashioned Indiana farm during Christmas.

"Back Home in Indiana" is introduced in a night club sequence in which MacMurray, a rising young district attorney, finds out that Miss Stanwyck, the girl he is trying to clamp in jail for a jewel theft, is a native Hoosier, just like himself and, since she is out of jail with nowhere to go, he decides to take her back home for the holidays. There follows a series of amusing situations strongly reminiscent of the "It Happened One Night" school of comedy.

The night club, of course, is a modern one and the orchestra swings it, proving that the old song, which was written by James F. Hanley and Ballard MacDonald in 1917, is not only great folk music, but a swell 1940 tune as well.

There's another musical surprise in "Remember the Night," supplied by Sterling Holloway, the wheeze-voiced comedian who, with Beulah Bondi and Elizabeth Patterson, heads the strong supporting cast of the picture. Holloway renders that old parlor favorite of a few generations back, "The End of a Pefect Day," and you'd never know that his voice was capable of rendering it with all the oomph folks used to give it around the organ.

MacMurray, of course, also provides some music, as he does in almost all his pictures. This time, however, he renders "Way Down Upon the Swanee River" on the piano with two fingers, and accompanies himself vocally. It's hot stuff!

Select short subjects will complete the bill.

A dash of Scotch appears in the fashion picture as plaids register for Spring. A charming tailored suit is a Glen Urquhart plaid in gray, tan and blue. The single-breasted jacket is fitted and is hip-length, with breast and hip pockets.

The check is endorsed for Spring. A smart hat and bag ensemble are of black and white checked taffeta with a tiny red line running through. The high crowned sailor has red grosgrain ribbon band with streamers in back. The bag has a matching red lining.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Badgely, Pt. Anne, Celebrate Their Golden Wedding

Point Anne (Special)—On Sunday, March 17th, St. Patrick's Day, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Badgely of Second Concession of Ameliasburg, celebrated the 50th anniversary of their marriage which took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Murney, Frankford, on March 17, 1890. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. A. Duprau. The attendants were Mr. Walter Pettet and Miss Libbie Murney of Frankford. These have long since passed on. Mr. Peter Badgely was born in Thurlow Township, Hastings County 71 years ago and was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Badgely.

Mrs. Badgely was also born in Thurlow 73 years ago. Her parents were the late Henry and Lucinda Van Meer. Mr. and Mrs. Badgely lived the early part of their married life in Sidney Township and about 40 years ago moved to Prince Edward County and since then have lived on the Second Concession of Ameliasburg. Ten children were born to them, three of whom Harry, Albert and May are deceased. The living are Mrs. Agnes Howell, Belleville, Mrs. Jennie Ayrhart, of Perrysburg, N. Y., Mrs. Annie Burshaw, Point Anne, Mrs. Gladys Colton, Ameliasburg, Mrs. Mabel Oliver, Albion, N. Y., Peter Badgely, Jr., Ameliasburg and John Badgely and family who make their home with the aged couple on the home place. Mr. and Mrs. Badgely also have 30 grandchildren and 3 great grandchildren. An only remaining sister of Mr. Badgely is Mrs. Martha Hillman, who makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Morley Dempsey. Mrs. William Kyle of Belleville is a niece of Mrs. Badgely.

The entire family of Mr. and Mrs. Badgely, with the exception of Mrs. Mabel Oliver were present at the home for the day and all spent a happy quiet day.

Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Insley, Point Anne and Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Pine and son of Rednersville. About 40 were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Badgely in discussing their married life stated the fact that their wedding day was a beautiful bright day with zero weather and no snow. They made the trip to Frankford with horse and buggy. They also told about the fine service of the Belleville Intelligencer of which they were subscribers before the amalgamation of the old Ontario and the Intelligencer for some 48 years of their married life. The aged couple are hale and hearty and happy together and received greetings from friends from many distant points.

Background for Beauty

DOLORES DEL RIO . . gives her beauty a charming setting at home

By HELEN FOLLETT

BEAUTY should have a charming setting. Women who understand the need of flattering surroundings appear at better advantage in their homes than elsewhere. They arrange the proper scenery for themselves.

The color of the upholstery of the furniture, the arrangement of lights, the patterns of rugs and draperies contribute to the picture in which they are the central characters. Everything is carefully planned. And it's fun doing it. Such a home has atmosphere. One drops into a comfortable chair, enjoys a sense of relaxation and enjoyment.

Let us visualize another setting: Stiff-backed chairs that make your back ache; ash trays in the most inconvenient places; papers scattered about; pictures that have no meaning; furniture of dingy, gloomy colors. How can a woman appear lovely in a frame like that? She can't. Discomfort and confusion are distracting.

Every woman should know something about interior decorating. It is an interesting subject. It has a lot to do with a woman's appearance and her happiness. A woman whose mind runs along those lines can assemble any old pieces of furniture and make a home attractive. It is a matter of placing and arrangement.

During the winter season, when offices and houses are overheated and the air dry, many individuals suffer from an unbearable itching of the skin. Place water containers on radiators and the trouble will disappear. One advantage of air conditioning is the possibility for keeping the air moist.

Sensitive skin of this kind should be bathed with a bland soap, rinsed with tepid water, dried gently, treated with an oil or one of the semi-liquid milky hand lotions that are popular. If oil is used, the application should be followed by a brisk rubdown with a coarse towel.

Those School 'Injustices'

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

A FAVORITE place for the child to talk about the things he doesn't like at school is the dinner table. The teacher is often the centre of his criticism.

We parents may not be interested in the child's remarks at other times, but our ears are keen when he talks about "injustices" at school. Encouraged by our rapt attention, the young critic goes on very freely, embellishing his accounts to suit his fancy and convenience. Furthermore, we are inclined to lend encouragement by our approving looks. We may do more; we may be weak and vain enough to emphasize his condemnation, even dwelling on some evils of the school that he had never thought about.

Suppose we do behave ourselves in such a fashion when our child complains about the teacher and the school. He soon begins to think himself imposed upon. He is a martyr much abused; his teacher is his enemy. He learns to hate his work at school and dreads to go. His homework is despised, and learning has but little lure for him. He has good reason now to earn low grades, and if he fails he knows that he will have to offer no excuse; his alibi already has been framed. Throughout the school day he looks forward to the dinner hour and thinks of things that he is going to report.

Suppose right there we lend approval to the criticism of the child. Suppose we interrupt to scold about the school. Suppose in anger we should go next day to abuse the teacher. In that event we shall have demonstrated lack of self-control; we shall have set our sanctions upon tattling and gossip; we shall have lost the opportunity to teach fairness, moral judgment and good thinking.

Invite Opposition

Almost surely we shall set the teacher against us and against our child, and inevitably we shall then destroy the child's success at school—impair, perhaps, his educational destiny. We shall also lose; the money which we pay in taxes will have been wasted. We could not be more extravagant if we were to throw half a hundred dollar bills into a blazing fire.

If we are sensible, the next time our child complains about his school and teacher, we shall listen patiently and let him go on so long as he is courteous in his remarks. If we really think there are some wrongs at school, we shall, after waiting prayerfully for a few days, go calmly to the school and talk things over with the teacher. We shall go to learn and not to scold, and go determined to be decent. The chances are we shall come home much wiser and better parents.

In the meantime, we shall lose no opportunity to play up before our child the honest virtues of his teacher and his school.

German Communique Claims Successes

Berlin, March 18 —(CP)— The German high command's daily communique:—

"Directly eastward of the Mosel River and in the border south of Zweibruecken, enemy scouting troops were thrown back with losses, numerous prisoners being taken. Artillery activity was somewhat livelier on both sides than in the preceding day.

"The air force continued scouting over France and Great Britain. On the Scottish east coast armed enemy merchant ships and an outpost boat were attacked. One outpost boat was sunk."

Typewriters

I can't say that I'm an advocate of and enthusiatic for all of the modern ideas being advanced on the subject of the education of children, for I am far from being as certain as some present day thinkers that the older generation was wrong about everything, but there are some with which I do agree heartily after having had experience with them here at the Dionne Quintuplet Nursery. One of them is the use of the typewriter in helping children to learn their letters.

There is a great deal to be said for the idea that children should know sight reading before they get into writing and spelling.

It has really been surprising to see how quickly the Quintuplets have learned their alphabets on their typewriters and have progressed from that stage onward. One apparent reason for this is that the children didn't have to learn how to make letters, that is learn to write, at the same time they were learning to distinguish between the letters and to know the names of the letters. Often a child will know its letters by sight, yet its unskilled or unpractised hand will be unable to manage the pencil or pen and get on paper its mental image of the letter. Difficulty with writing can impede a bright child's school work in other ways, obviously.

Learning their letters on the typewriter is just like a game to the Quins, and Yvonne and Annette are particularly fast in their progress. All the children can now type their own names with ease and they also do words that the teacher writes for them on the blackboard.

As I say, Yvonne and Annette have shown the greatest amount of progress in typing words and phrases. Cecile isn't far behind, and neither is Marie. Emilie could be up with any of them, her intentions are good, but she usually is occupied with about three things at a time and typing is likely to be in second or third place.

The other day the teacher wrote some things on the board and the children began typing them. In the middle of the drill, Emilie's mind wandered off to a model house she has been drawing and she stopped to give it a couple of improvements. In a few minutes, Annette and Yvonne were proudly exhibiting their typing.

"Look, what I've done,' Yvonne said to the teacher, in French.

"That's just what I intended to do', Emilie declared in French without a smile as she gazed at the words on the page. Of course, everyone laughed, even the other children, for Emilie is notorious for her good intentions.

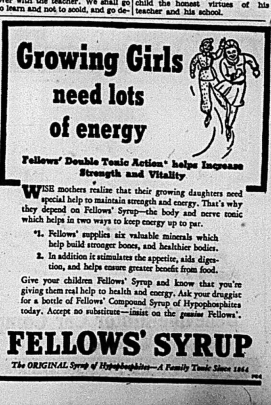
The children love to show off their ability by typing the names of their family, nurses and visitors to the Nursery. Joseph A. Valin, one of their guardians, who visits them regularly, has to have a new demonstration each time he pays a call. Emilie who is very fond of the judge, insists in spelling his name Valim. She recognizes the mistake, apologizes for it, and then goes right ahead and makes it again with a straight face, though I think she is doing it for a joke.

Typewriters are particularly helpful to the Quins because they are learning to write in French. This means that they must have accents over certain letters. These accents can be very confusing if they aren't properly placed over the word, and the child in the first stages of writing with a pencil has difficulty with them.

Emilie shines in one kind of typing. She punches out pictures with her machine. Somewhere she saw pictures made with a typewriter and we often find her doing this when she should be getting on with her work.

Incidentally, there are "Boners" in the Quins' schoolwork as amusing as some of those in the books of student slips, and they sometimes get secular and religious teachings mixed up with surprising results. The other day they had beef at dinner and this inspired Annette to ask some questions after the meal. She wanted to know about beef, what it was, where it came from and all that. When the nurse explained that beef came from cattle, she grew very thoughtful. Finally, she came out with a rather startling question in French.

"Was that the beef that kept Le Petit Jesus warm in the manger at Bethlehem?"



Growing Girls need lots of energy

Fellows' Double Tonic Action* helps Increase Strength and Vitality

WISE mothers realize that their growing daughters need special help to maintain strength and energy. That's why they depend on Fellows' Syrup—the body and nerve tonic which helps in two ways to keep energy up to par.

2. In addition it stimulates the appetite, aids digestion, and helps ensure greater benefit from food.

Give your children Fellows' Syrup and know that you're giving them real help to health and energy. Ask your druggist for a bottle of Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites today. Accept no substitute—insist on the genuine Fellows'.

Playboy's Secretary

by Louise Raybold

CHAPTER 1

SARA SIDNEY rested an elbow on her desk, settled the phone more comfortably against her ear, and listened patiently to Toby Martin at the other end of the wire.

Then, "I'm terribly sorry, Toby," she said firmly, "and it's swell of you to ask me, but I can't go out with you tonight because I have another date."

"And suppose it is? Is there any reason—"

"Oh, no! No, indeed! No reason at all! Certainly nobody would expect you to thrown down millionaire playboy Curt Carrington, the boss's son, in favor of impecunious little Toby Martin!" Toby was working up to his best sarcastic pitch. "Let me see—you had a date with him last week, and one the week before. Not really a habit yet. Oh, no, not at all!"

"I fairly hate you, Toby, when you talk like that!" Sara's tone was distinctly cold. "You're so unreasonable!"

"Oh, all right—I'm sorry," he grudingly apologized. "But if I can't take you out tonight, how about lunch tomorrow?"

Sara hesitated. She felt like punishing him for his flare of jealous anger. "Millionaire playboy" indeed!" But she yielded.

"All right," she agreed, though not too graciously. "Where shall I meet you?"

"What do you say to Pedro's?"

Sara was surprised. Pedro's was an expensive place. Toby, on the small salary he earned with an advertising company, usually took her to some cheap, crowded restaurant.

"I'll meet you there at one o'clock," she said. "Now I have to get back to work. Goodby."

She hung up, straightened her white flared cuffs, patted her curly golden hair, then turned back to her typewriter. In less than three minutes she had put Toby Martin out of mind.

Going place with Toby, whom she'd known for years, was always fun, but, on this particular occasion, it was no sacrifice to forego a pleasant evening with him, for her evening was to be given to none other than young Curtis Carrington, for whom she acted as secretary in the New York engineering firm of Carrington & Broderick.

The handsome son of the head of the firm, he was adored by every girl in the office. Each morning, when he arrived and passed through the big room occupied by the stenographers, shiny compacts were whisked into a second's brief use, slim young backs straightened, fingers picked up speed on type-writers.

Into his most casual greeting — "Good morning, Miss Kraus!" "How goes the world with you, Miss Leonard?" "Top of the day to you, Miss Kennedy!"—each girl managed to read a warm, definite, for-her-alone significance.

However, Sara knew that she alone had won his particular interest, as evidenced by the fact that, twice recently, he had taken her out to dinner.

Then, today, on his leisurely way out to lunch, he had paused beside her desk. She had felt her heart turn over—had known that the eyes of all the other girls were upon them.

"How about dinner and a show tonight?" he had murmured.

Sara's quick reply had been a bit breathless. "I'd love it, Mr. Carrington!" She had hoped her delight was not too evident.

"Ah, that's fine! I'll call for you at seven."

He had moved on, followed by half a dozen pairs of eyes, which, as the door closed behind him, shifted enviously and inquiringly to Sara.

That had happened two hours ago, and now, Sara thanked her lucky stars it had occurred before Toby telephoned. Breaking a date with that importunate young man would have been a whole lot harder than merely refusing one—and Sara, honest with herself, knew that, for one hour with Curt Carrington, she would break a dozen dates with any one else, even Toby.

She had not chosen to satisfy the curiosity of the other girls and immersed in daydreams, had not been aware of their continued glances in her direction.

Then, a few minutes after Toby's call, Rose Kennedy, at the next desk, stopped typing and, cupping her chin in her hand, gazed speculatively across at Sara.

"I wonder if Juliette Carter knows her luck," she murmured.

"What?" said Sara, startled.

"Funny how some girls get all the breaks," Rose continued. "That Carter girl already has everything—wealth, social position, and good looks. So what will she get when she marries young Carrington? More wealth, social position, and good looks!"

"It has only been rumored that they might be engaged—there has been no announcement," Sara answered evenly.

"No? Well, not in so many words, maybe, but how about this?" Rose picked up a morning paper, and read, "Numbered among the week-end guests at Yellow Gables, Long Island home of the Sturges Carringtons, was Miss Juliette Carter.' And how about this tidbit?" Rose turned the pages of a tabloid paper, and read, "It is currently hinted up and down the Main Stem that what dashing young scion of a well-known engineering house is very much that way about the beauteous Carter heiress?' "

Sara said coldly, "I see, Rosy-Posy, that you do your daily gossip columns!"

In a moment, however, she thawed. After all, she could well afford to be amiable to homely little Rose, who never had a date, who didn't even have a Toby Martin in the background.

"Well," she remarked, with an attempt at indifference, "what's wrong with that set-up, anyhow? Why shouldn't like marry like? Juliette Carter and Mr. Carrington have known each other ever since they first learned to toddle. It's best, in the long run, for people of similar background to marry each other."

"Hear! Hear!" Brenda Kraus put in. "Sara has gone worldly wise on us!"

The girls resumed their work, and the sunny, spacious twenty-ninth-story office once more was filled with the rhythmic click of typewriter keys.

Sara soon managed to banish the shadow cast over her spirits by Rose's linking of the names of Curt Carrington and Juliette Carter. She gave herself up to happy anticipation of the evening ahead...

CHAPTER II

Sara was not the only person that afternoon in the offices of Carrington and Broderick to turn down an invitation for the evening.

Curtis Carrington, too, rejected a bid.

Pursued by many girls but by none more than Juliette Carter, he received a phone call from that young lady shortly before five o'clock, asking him to join a party she was getting up to make a round of the night clubs. When he told her he couldn't she protested effusively.

"But Curt, honey, I need you — and it's just the sort of party you love! We're going to Dink's first—every one says the new floor show there is simply divine. Say you'll come, darling!"

He listened patiently while she continued to wheedle, but remained adamant.

When he finally hung up, he turned to find that his father had entered the office and had heard the last part of he conversation. Sturges Carrington, gray-haired and distinguished looking, gazed at him thoughtfully.

"Juliette?"

"Yes," said Curt briefly.

"Too bad you had to turn her down, my boy." The older man walked over to a window and stood looking out. "You've been rather neglecting her of late—and you know how your mother and I feel about you and Juliette. Ever since you were little tikes together, we've hoped——"

Curt, rising, broke in hotly, "See here, Dad, you can run Carrington and Broderick, but you can't—"

"Run you, Curt?" His father turned. "No—I'm afraid I can't. I learned that long ago. You're pretty headstrong." He paused then said, "This previous engagement you mentioned—is it, by any chance, with that little secretary of yours?"

"And if it is?" Curt replied defiantly.

His father gestured with upturned palms, "Miss Sidney, I have no doubt, is a very nice girl but—er—hardly the girl for you Curt. I hope you're not going to make a fool of yourself over her. Juliette is your kind, my boy—and it's always best to stick to one's own kind."

"The trouble with Juliette," he said, "is that she's too bent on sticking to me! Just because we've always played around together she acts as though I belong to her. She's always after me, and I'm getting a bit fed up with it!"

Sturges Carrington sighed. "Most young men would be delighted to be favored by so lovely a girl. You don't appreciate your good fortune."

"You mean I don't appreciate her fortune," Curt said drily. "Come clean, Dad, if Juliette instead of having a few millions in her own right, were as poor as Sara Sidney, would you still be so eager to have her as a daughter-in-law?"

His father was silent a moment. Then, he said, "Naturally, I wouldn't want you to marry Juliette simply for the money — I wouldn't want you to marry her unless you loved her. However, to be perfectly frank, I'll admit that the Carter millions at this time might salvage what is left of Carrington and Broderick".

"As bad as they can possibly be, son. If we don't land that Remo Dam contract, we'll be in a very precarious position."

Curt frowned. "But we're going to land it. The Poulton company is our only serious competition."

"We only need one," his father pointed out. "If they win—"

"Oh, stop worrying, Dad! The contract's in the bag. The Poulton outfit hasn't a chance of getting it. Why, they didn't get wind of the Maruban government's intention to dam the Remo River until after our field agents had been on the ground for three months!"

Sturges Carrington shrugged. "I only hope you're right. But until the contract actually is 'in the bag,' as you say—"

"You don't want me to lose sight of little Juliette?" Curt smiled. "Okay, Dad—if you insist."

He glanced at his wrist watch, then started for the door.

"I've got to run along. Have to get home and change."

"Curt ... is your date with Miss Sidney?"

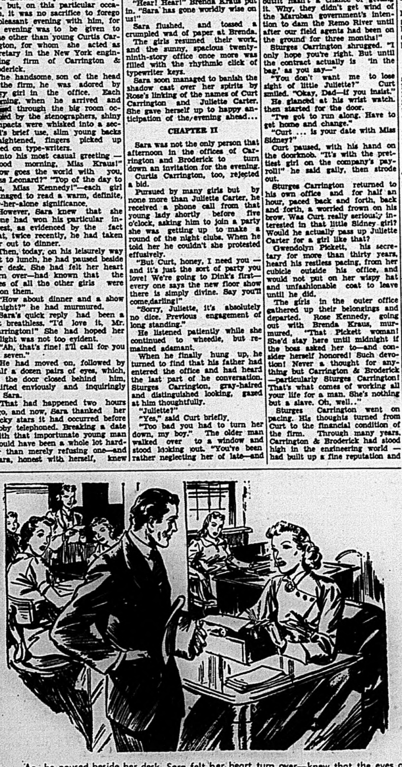
Curt paused, with his hand on the doorknob. "It's with the prettiest girl on the company's payroll!" he said gaily, then strode out.

Sturges Carrington returned to his own office and for half an hour, paced back and forth, back and forth, a worried frown on his brow. Was Curt really seriously interested in that little Sidney girl? Would he actually pass up Juliette Carter for a girl like that?

Gwendolyn Pickett, his secretary for more than thirty years, heard his restless pacing, from her cubicle outside his office, and would not put on her wispy hat and unfashionable coat to leave until he did.

The girls in the outer office gathered up their belongings and departed. Rose Kennedy, going out with Brenda Kraus, murmured, "That Pickett woman! She'd stay here until midnight if the boss asked her to—and consider herself honored! Such devotion! Never a thought for anything but Carrington & Broderick—particularly Sturges Carrington! That's what comes of working all your life for a man. She's nothing but a slave. Oh, well.."

Sturges Carrington went on pacing. His thoughts turned from Curt to the financial condition of the firm. Through many years, Carrington & Broderick had stood high in the engineering world — had built up a fine reputation and amassed enviable profits. Until recently, its soundness had never been threatened.



As he paused beside her desk, Sara felt her heart turn over—knew that the eyes of all the other girls were upon them

"I hope you're not going to make a fool of yourself over this girl, Curt."

However, during the last few years, things had gone badly. In particular, the firm had had stiff competition from Poulton, Inc., a comparatively new organization, which had won several big contracts that Carrington & Broderick had counted on getting.

Now, one of the biggest of all—for the damming of the Remo River in Maruba, South America — was soon to be granted. Bids must be submitted within the next few weeks to a Maruban government commission that had been sent up to New York. The company that landed that contract would not only make a neat profit but would be in line for other Maruban projects.

Carrington & Broderick had been aiming at it for months — had had their field agents in South America making surveys and preparing blueprints. If the firm should fail to get the contract and couldn't raise more capital — well, it would go on the rocks."

Sturges Carrington paused in his stride, and shook his head gloomily. "And Curt picks a time like this," he muttered, "to slight a five-million-dollar heiress for a penniless little secretary!"

CHAPTER III

Mrs. Sidney, eating her solitary supper in the tiny kitchen of the little apartment she shared with her daughter, could hear Sara moving about her room as she dressed to go out with Curt—could hear the girl's gay snatches of song.

Then, Sara was standing in the kitchen doorway, slim and straight, her eyes sparkling.

"How do I look, mother?" She pivoted, with a swirl of her long skirt. "Even if my dress is a year old, I still think it's a honey."

"You look lovely, dear."

"You mean because you're going out with a rich young society man?" Mrs. Sidney's tone was not exactly enthusiastic.

"Oh, Mother, it's not because he's rich that I think I'm lucky — in fact, I'm not sure that he is very rich. It's because he's the nicest man I've ever known!" Sara paused, then asked anxiously, "Mother you do like him, don't you?"

"He seems very attractive," the older woman answered guardedly, "and it's easy to see why you — why you admire him. But—"

"Now, no buts!" Sara protested.

"Child, it's only — well, I don't like to see you so carried away just because he has taken you out a few times. A young man of his type, from such a very different environment, is not apt to seriously interested in you—his secretary. It's only that I'm afraid you are laying yourself open to heartache and unhappiness if you take his attentions too seriously. Don't let him turn your head, Sara."

"I'd much rather see you give more encouragement to Toby Martin," Mrs. Sidney went on. "After all, he's a very attractive young man, too, and he——"

"Oh, Toby!!" Sara shrugged. "He's sweet, of course, and I'm awfully fond of him but—well, Toby's just like a nice brother."

"He's a fine boy, Sara. You'd go a long way to find another like him."

"Oh, I appreciate his good qualities," Sara agreed. "But mother, if a man doesn't stir that certain something in you, he just doesn't."

"That's why I like him," Sara said dreamily. "Because he is so different from any one I've ever known. Mother, he's marvelous!"

Curt took Sara to a smart, high-priced French restaurant, much frequented by the social elect. Sara was thrilled, and gazed about her excitedly, trying to pick out people whose pictures she had seen in the rotogravure sections of the Sunday papers.

"Love it!" she breathed.

He rested his arms on the table. "Have you any idea how lovely you look, Sara Sidney?"

She blushed and laughed. "Of course not! I've been waiting for you to tell me!"

He grinned and reached for her hand. "Little imp! But honestly, Sara, you're the prettiest girl in this room—you stand out. I mean it!"

Thus the evening started.

After dinner, they went on to the theatre, where their seats were among the choicest. Sara had never sat so far down front. But she told herself she would have been equally happy in the last row of the top balcony, so long as Curt was there beside her. She reveled in his nearness.

The show was a musical-comedy hit, filled with laughter and catchy songs. Then, it was over, and they were in the chattering throng streaming through the lobby into the street.

"Let's look in somewhere for a bite to eat and a dance," Curt suggested. "Have you any favorite spot?"

So the evening wasn't yet over!

"Wherever you say," Sara smiled.

Curt was relieved that she did not pick the popular night club that Juliette had nicknamed "Dink's" in honor of a certain young man with a horn to whom she had taken a fancy and who, according to the headwaiter, was Dink somebody. Curt would have liked showing Sara off to those of his friends sure to be found at Dink's, but wouldn't have liked running into Juliette.

Hence, he took her to the resplendent Silver Slipper, where the two doormen looked like Kensington guards, and the hat-check girl like a movie star. Toby had once taken her to one of the dressier night clubs to celebrate his first raise, but they had been put at a table far off in a corner and had, somehow, felt that they didn't belong.

Tonight was different.

The headwaiter greeted Curt deferentially and quickly led the way to a floor-side table. The orchestra leader twirled his baton in Curt's direction and smiled. The waiter who took the order called him by name and was most obsequious. Every one knew him, and hurried to serve him.

Then, Sara was in his arms, dancing. She felt as though she were floating through clouds — wished that the evening would never end. She thought fleetingly of her mother's warning not to lose her head over Curt, but shoved it away. She didn't want to look one minute beyond the rosy, exciting, lovely present. She felt his arm tighten about her, and dreamily lost herself in the happiness of the moment.

As they rounded the end of the floor nearest the entrance, she vaguely noticed a group of new arrivals coming in—then suddenly looked more closely at one particular dark-haired girl. At the same instant she felt Curt stiffen—and knew she was right as to the girl's identity. She had seen her picture in the paper many times.

It was Juliette Carter.

OCHAPTER IV

Juliette Carter had a personality that was vivid and indomitable. What she wanted, she went out and got.

For some time now, she had loved and wanted Curt Carrington. with all the intensity that was a part of her nature. That Curt was not in love with her, she knew. Nevertheless, she was determined to make him hers ,and she believed that her money, recently inherited from her father, could be made the means of gaining her end. She suspected that it would be a godsend to the Carrington business right now—though she did not suspect how great a godsend.

Her late - afternoon telephone talk with him had left her consumed with jealous curiosity. That his "previous engagement" was with another girl, she had no doubt. Who was this person, anyway?

She had ended by telephoning George Poulton, and had found him more than willing to be her escort for the evening. Young Poulton, a junior partner in Poulton, Inc., chief rival of Carrington & Broderick, had recently been very attentive to her but had received little encouragement. Now, however, she wondered whether it wouldn't be a good idea to start making much of George. Perhaps she could arouse Curt's jealousy.

When she and George and the rest of the party she had collected set out that evening on their round of night clubs, she was definitely hoping that they would chance to run into Curt and his unknown companion. She wanted avidly to get a look at this girl.

They had already visited several clubs, and she was just beginning to despair of finding Curt, when they arrived at the Silver Slipper.

She saw Curt and Sara at once. Then as the others followed the head waiter toward a table, she slipped her arm through George Poulton's and drew him toward the dance floor.

"There's Curt Carrington," she said. "I want to speak to him."

"Why, that's Miss Sidney with him!" exclaimed George.

"Miss Sidney?" Juliette's eyebrows went up. "Who is Miss Sidney?"

Juliette remembered then, that Curt had spoken of this "Miss Sidney," now his secretary — had mentioned her efficiency. But he hadn't mentioned her prettiness! Juliette's eyes narrowed. So this was the girl who was threatening her hold on him—this little blond secretary, this little nobody!

Meanwhile, Curt and Sara, seeing her approaching them, had stopped dancing.

"Curt," she cooed, as she reached them, "why didn't you tell me you were going to do the night clubs, too? You might just as well have come with us!"

"Hello, Juliette." Curt's face was red with embarrassment. "I — uh——"

"How are you, Miss Sidney?" George shook her hand warmly. "It's nice to see you again."

"And nice to see you, Mr. Poulton," said Sara. Then, seeing Curt's startled expression, she explained. "My first job was in Mr. Poulton's office, right after I finished business school."

"Oh, yes— I remember now. You told me," said Curt.

Juliette, who had been surveying Sara from head to toe, now said sweetly, "Curt, darling, aren't you going to introduce us?"

"Of course. Uh —Juliette— Miss Carter, this is Miss Sidney. You've heard me speak of her."

"Yes — I have," Juliette said succinctly, giving Sara a level glance. "How do you do, Miss — what is the name? Sidney? Make Curt bring you over to our table when you finish your dance."

As she and George moved away, Sara felt her cheeks burning. She had not missed the antagonism in Juliette's manner and tone — the deliberate condescension in her words.

She did not want to go to Juliette's table, but made no protest when Curt led her there after their dance. Once there, she felt even more uncomfortable. She sat silent while every one chattered of things and persons of which she knew nothing. She was aware of Juliette's smouldering black eyes upon her—and squirmed under the other girl's scrutiny.

Curt was no help, for he was absorbed in a discussion of some engineering question with George Poulton.

Finally, Juliette broke in upon them. "Can't you two stop talking shop?"

"Sorry," said Curt.

Juliette glanced at Sara, and said, with edged significance, "He should leave business where it belong — in the office! Don't you agree with me, Miss—uh—Sidney?"

Sara at once realized Juliette's hidden meaning—that he should have left her, Sara, in the office.

But she answered lightly, "I'm afraid it's hard to make men forget business—and Curt is no exception."

"Really?" Juliette's voice dripped acid. "I hadn't realized he was so absorbed — he's never seemed so before. What a pity if he has changed! I'll have to do something about this!"

A silence fell over the party. The others had become aware of the tension in the air—of the double meaning in Juliette's words. They were all looking at Sara curiously. Her face flamed.

Curt rose abruptly. "Sara and I must be leaving."

"Oh, must you?" Juliette cooed. "What a shame!" Then, to Sara, "I hope I shall see you again, Miss Sidney—In Curt's office, perhaps."

Sara's chin lifted. She knew that, in this other girl, she had met a formidable and implacable enemy —one to be feared. But she held her head proudly—gave no sign of the humiliation she was feeling.

As she and Curt drove homeward, she was utterly miserable. The lovely shining evening had been ruined. Her ecstatic mood of the earlier hours was now completely gone.

How could she compete with a girl like Juliette Carter — a girl with wealth, beauty and social position behind her? Juliette had shown all too plainly that she would fight if any one dared to take Curt away from her—and what weapons had she, Sara, to match those of the society girl?

Curt suddenly broke the silence. "Juliette's a little cat! You musn't mind her—she's just mad because I stood her up tonight."

"Oh, it's all right," Sara murmured.

She didn't want to talk about it, and changed the subject. They made casual conversation until they reached her apartment house and Curt escorted her to her door.

Then, he took her hand and said, "Look here, if my mother should invite you out to Yellow Gables for the week-end, would you come?"

Sara's heart lifted a little. A week-end at the Carrington place on Long Island! Surely, Curt would not ask her to his home—introduce her to his family—if he were only idly interested in her.

"I'd love to," she said.

But long after she had gone to bed, she lay awake, seeing again the menace in Juliette Carter's cold, appraising, hostile eyes.

(To Be Continued)

She felt his arm tighten about her, and dreamily lost herself in the happiness of the moment.

Praising Child's Improvement

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

NOT HOW well a child can do, but how much better he can do than he did before is what counts. While I was in teacher training, I tried hard to help those preparing to teach and teachers in service to see that improvement by each child, and not his actual achievement, is the thing to keep interested in.

In my book, The Learner and His Attitude, I discussed the psychology of improvement and its emotional attendants at length. Since then I have had the pleasure of seeing some of my former students apply these principles. One teacher, for example, had each member of her class keep an "improvement book" in which he entered samples of his writings once each month. Elsewhere I found displayed on the walls work of those children who, in one or several subjects, had made marked improvement over a month or so. Accordingly, the poorest writer or drawer of the room might have had his work on display. Effort was inspired thereby and children were not rewarded for the contributions of their dead grandparents.

Do It Now!

May I entreat teachers now to get samples of your children's work in any subject you wish to emphasize. Then, after a few months, gather similar samples, again, and exhibit a number of those that show the most improvement during the interval.

A certain mother writes about her boy in the second grade whose teacher says, "he is the best reader in the class" but is "hopelessly lost when it comes to art and writing. His teacher makes so much of the ability to draw that he is discouraged and often weeps when he goes to bed at night because he says he can never do anything good enough to have it put on the wall."

This problem never would have arisen if the teacher had employed the principle of emphasizing improvement rather than absolute performance.

Possibilities for Parents

This principle has great possibilities for parents. Let us express pleasure over the improvement of the child in any trait. Put on the kitchen wall the paper your child brings home which is better than the one he brought home yesterday or last week—no matter how low the grade on it or how unsightly. If the grade is better than the one before, or if the paper is neater than an earlier one, let the whole family enjoy evidence of the improvement.

Boston Bruins N.H.L. Champs, Team to Beat for Stanley Cup As They Take Canadiens 7-2

Kraut Line of Schmidt, Dumart and Bauer, Lead in Scoring Race

DRILLION FOURTH

Toronto Leafs Meet Hawks in First Round of Play-offs

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

All the evidence is at hand and you can't get away from the fact that Boston Bruins, National Hockey League champions for the second successive year, are the team to beat for the Stanley Cup.

The Bruins closed the schedule last night with a characterisic 7-2 victory at home over the last-place Montreal Canadiens, the only club that won't be around when the playoffs start tomorrow night. It was just a breeze for Boston after winning the title Thursday, partly because the Canadiens had only 10 men on hand.

As the schedule closed, Milt Schmidt of the Bruins won the league point-making championship with 22 goals and 30 assists. His mates on the sauerkraut line, Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer, ran second and third with 43 and 42 points respectively.

For two periods the Canadiens stayed even. The relentless Toe Blake tied the score after Johnny Crawford had put Boston ahead in the first period. George Mantha gave the Habitants a brief 2-1 advantage in the second but Herbie Cain brought Boston level. In the third the Bruins applied their pressure and Red Hamill, Roy Conacher, Schmidt, Dumart and Flash Hollett scored in that order.

Open Against Rangers

The Bruins open the cup series against the Rangers tomorrow at New York in a best-of-seven-games round. At the same time Chicago Black Hawks begin a best-of-three round against the Maple Leafs at Toronto and New York Americans start another against the Red Wings at Detroit.

Gordon Drillon picked up five points, three goals and two assists, and landed in fourth place among the individual leaders when Toronto split a weekend doubleheader with New York Americans. The Leafs won 8-6 at home Saturday in the highest-scoring contest of the season and the Americans beat them 5-2 at New York last night when young Pat Egan went on a St. Patrick's Day spree to score three times.

The 14 goals Saturday were spread all through the lineups. Hank Goldup, Red Heron, Drillon, Bob Davidson, Pep Kelly, Sweeney Schriner, Gus Marker and Syl Apps scored for Toronto in that order and Harvey Jackson, Johnny Gagnon, Nels Stewart, Buzz Boll, Johnny Sodrell and Art Chapman for the Americans.

Heron Line Successful

The feature to Coach Dick Irwin, however, was the continued success of Heron's line. It was only the third appearance of Heron at centre between Kelly and Schriner, but the line got three goals and eight points. At Montreal last Thursday Heron got four goals and Schriner another.

Drillon grabbed both Toronto goals last night. Lorne Carr and Hooley Smith got the Americans' first two and then Egan went on his rampage, to score once in the second period and twice in the third. The little defenceman was brought up from the minors only last week to replace the injured Wilf Field.

The final period was marked by a wild fist fight between Eddie Shore of the Americans and Bog Davidson of Toronto, which prompted a melee involving practically every member of the two teams. Shore and Davidson drew major penalties and so did Charlie Conacher of the Americans and Bucko McDonald of Toronto for joining in.

The Black Hawks wound up their regular program with a 3-1 victory over Detroit at Chicago, their second win over the same team in three nights. The Red Wings didn't beat the Hawks all season.

Mud Bruneteau scored for the Wings in the first period gut Bill Thoms and Bill Carse sent Chicago ahead in the second. Phil Hergesheimer completed the scoring in the third.

Cleveland Barons, Winners of the Int.-Am. Loop Last Year, Eliminated

TAYLOR GOES WELL

Playing With Pittsburgh Hornets Figures in Five Goals in Two Games

(By The Canadian Press)

A new champion will be crowned this season in the International-American Hockey League.

Cleveland Barons, who won the title last spring, bowed out of the picture during the week-end as the nine-team circuit closed out its regular activities. Cleveland's opponents in last year's final, Philadelphia Ramblers, were ousted from the race earlier in the season.

George Patterson put the final touch to Cleveland's fall, scoring the winning goal as new Haven Eagles beat the Barons 4-3 last night. Strangely enough it was Patterson, who changed clubs before the schedule began, who scored the goal that gave Cleveland the title last spring.

Cleveland's loss, as it turned out, didn't affect their playoff chances for Hershey Bears and Pittsburgh Hornets, with whom they were fighting for the last playoff position in the league's western divisions, both closed out their schedules with victories.

Final standings showed Providence Reds winners of the eastern section and Indianapolis Capitals, playing their first season in the league, the top-place team in the western division.

Playoffs Start Tonight

In the playoffs starting tomorrow, Providence will meet Indianapolis, New Haven will play Hershey and Springfield will take on Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh and New Haven wound up the season with double-victories. The Hornets, with young Billy Taylor leading the way, beat Syracuse 4-3 last night and Hershey 3-2 Saturday. Taylor figured in five goals in the two games and scored the winner in them both.

New Haven had a 5-3 victory over Philadelphia Saturday to add to their triumph against the Barons last night.

In other games last night Hershey scored twice in overtime to beat Indianapolis 8-6 while Philadelphia trounced Providence 6-2.

Woody Dumart, Boston, finished up the season in second place in scoring behind linemate Milt Schmidt by picking up a goal and an assist as Bruins walloped Canadiens 7-2.

Pat Egan, Americans, scored three goals and two assists as Americans split a pair of week-end contests with Toronto.

Bruins Lines Show Great Diversity

Technique, Pace, and Even Origin of the Three Boston Attacking Waves Vary

ART JACKSON EDDIE WISEMAN HERBIE CAIN

The three forward lines which Boston Bruins toss at opposing clubs in the National Hockey league present some of the greatest contrasts in the game. This applies not merely to personnel, style and technique, which presents a diversity of attack that doubtless accounts in part for the success of the Stanley cup-holders. But they present striking variety in origin. Two of them are composed entirely of players developed by the club. Another, which could be called "the tourist line," is made up of players acquired by purchase or trade.

Developed Kraut Line

Foremost among the Bruin lines, in scoring efficiency at least, is the kraut trio, the three youngsters personally developed from their earliest professional hockey beginnings by Art Ross, the Boston pilot. This is a line with power, speed, weight and scoring punch. Three-quarters of the way through the season, turning on a terrific burst of sharp shooting, the Schmidt-Bauer-Dumart trio crashed right through the 100-point mark, and set out on the trail of a new 10-year record, that of 151 points set by the Toronto Leaf line of Jackson-Primeau,Conacher in other years.

This kraut trio is undoubtedly one of the greatest forward units of modern times. They stress power and speed, pound away unceasingly at opposing defences, execute plays that are brilliant and well-planned in formation. These three youngsters are close personal friends. They plan plays, work together with remarkably fine cohesion and understanding. They possess great individual speed, but, above all, these husky lads, with a weight average of close to 180 pounds, stress power.

The second Bruin line, centred by Bill Cowley, flanked by Roy Conacher and Mel Hill, lays accent on cleverness. Fast enough to hold their own, this trio does not emphasize speed, but their passing is clever to a degree, their team-play is of the precision type, most exacting, and well-timed. Cowley, a player of the Nighbor-Primeau-Boucher style of cleverness, a cool and tricky stick-handler, completely unselfish, sets up scores of plays for the two hard-shooting and clever wings. Conacher, third and youngest of three brothers to perform in the National league, is generally rated more versatile than his high-scoring brother Charlie, now with New York Americans. Charlie placed main reliance on his cannonading shot, but young Roy mixes up his styles in baffling fashion. Without his brother's huge physique, and by no means such a flamboyant and spectacular performer as the other two members of his family, he uses a great degree of variety of method.. He can fire a swift shot, without warning, or he can stick-handle through and pull out a goaler. Scoring three goals in a night, in a game last season (he had four in another game), Conacher impressed New York critics by using a different method to register each count. Mel Hill is much the same type, a cool, unobtrusive opportunist, who reached heights of brilliancy as the emergency man for Bruins in the play-offs last spring. This line, like the krauts, is an all-Boston development.

When Bruins defeated Hawks 6-0 on Feb. 27, this Cowley-Hill-Conacher line scored five of the six goals, and corralled 12 of the 17 points totalled.

The "Tourist Line"

The third line, the recently-formed Jackson-Wiseman-Cain trio, is not only composed of players bought or secured from other major league clubs by Bruins, but a line which relies on straight speed. It is a line rather on the lightweight side, but of whirlwind pace, that can wear down many an opponent by carrying on at sustained speed. Art Jackson, brother of Harvey of the New York Americans, is a stocky little blond, weighing 160 pounds, who centres this line. He started his professional career with Toronto Leafs, thence to Bruins, playing one season with Americans, where he scored 12 goals, registered 13 assists in a season. He is fast, fearless, aggressive, a hard shot. Wiseman is another blond, also stocky and swift-skating. This 150-pounder started his National league career with Detroit in 1932, moved to Americans in 1935, and landed with Bruins this season when that team traded Eddie Shore to the New York club. Wiseman is not only very fast, but was a constant goal-getter for Americans. his best mark being 18 goals in 1937-38. Herbie Cain, 165 pounds came into professional hockey with Montreal Maroons, and left-winged that club's great green line, on which Gus Marker and Bobby Gracie were the others, notching 20 goals in the 1934-35 campaign when Maroons marched through to the Stanley cup. He went to Canadiens when Maroons disbanded, and was this season traded to Boston for Charlie Sands, when Canadiens found themselves with a plethora of left-wingers, a shortage of right-wingers.

SHORE, DUTTON MIGHT PURCHASE N. Y. AMERICANS

Another Rumor is That Team May be Moved Out of New York

TEAM FOR SALE

Terms of Rental Contract With Garden is a Secret One

By SYDNEY GRUSON

Canadian Press Staff-Writer

New York, March 18—(CP)—The walls of Madison Square Garden echo these days to rumors that New York Americans, the 'orphans' of the National Hockey League, will be sold to Red Dutton and Eddie Shore and (or) the American franchise will be moved out of New York. But the rumors remain just that, lacking any concrete basis.

The more persistent of the recent rumors concern the Dutton-Shore deal, a rumor given impetus when Shore was purchased from Boston by the Americans and immediately came to an agreement with Dutton, the American manager, linking Shore's minor- league Springfield Indians and the National League club in a close alliance.

None of the principals concerned, however, will throw much light on what, if anything, is being done to negotiate such a sale. Frank Calder, President of the N.H.L. which owns the American franchise, says the league has not been approached but adds: "The Americans are for sale—they have been for several years"

"Eddie and I haven't talked about it," says Dutton. "But I'd like to own the Americans, sure I would, but it would have to be with a better contract with Madison Square Garden."

Thought of it Says Shore

And all the phlegmatic Shore says is that "I've thought of a lot of things," when asked if he ever thought of buying the club.

Dutton's mention of the Garden and the American's contract for rental of the sports palace is linked directly with the possibilities of moving the Americans out of New York. No one denies that the Americans have a tough time making both ends meet under the present contract and no one denies that there has been talk of a move among league officers.

The terms of the rental contract are a secret between the officials concerned, but the best information from unofficial sources is that the garden gets a little more than 40 per cent of the Americans' gross receipts—a prohibitive figure against the Americans making enough money to purchase first-rank players.

Buffalo, where a rink seating 14,000 persons is being built, has been mentioned as a possible home for the club. Dutton admits that, and at the same time adds that he would like to move the club to Brooklyn, adjacent to New York and one of the country's most rabid sports centres. But Brooklyn hasn't a rink and, as yet, there's no one in sight to put up the money to build one for the Americans.

On Saturday afternoon at the Recreation Bowling Alleys, what looked on paper to be a tidy, close-fought bowling battle between teams from the Corbin Lock Company and the Ontario Intelligencer turned into a rout by the Corbin Specials to the tune of 3179 to 2571.

Credit should be given when credit is due and the "Specials" certainly deserved their win, but in all fairness to the "Inkslingers", it can be said they were strictly off color. More than likely Pat Drumm's team could beat the newsmen any old day, but it will remain for another battle come some Saturday afternoon soon (for the "Inkslingers" promptly challenged the Specials after the game Saturday) to really erase all doubt as to which team is definitely the better.

For the victors Don Sargent and Jack Fitzpatrick were really hot with neat scores of 690 and 683. "Wimpy" Reynolds was not far behind with a smart 668. Strange as it may seem Captain Pat Drumm had the low score of the five with 552. Pat lost the "toss-up" with Lady Luck Saturday and ran into streams of hard luck during the pastime.

Corbin Specials (4):
Harold Reid	236	190	160	—586
Don Sargent	273	245	172	—690
J. Fitzpatrick	261	199	223	—683
W. Reynolds	208	176	284	—668
Pat Drumm	152	170	230	—552
				—3179
Ont. Intel (0):
George Ling	200	154	175	—529
Ted Russell	160	122	229	—511
Cecil Hardwick	152	213	116	—481
Reg. Hardwick	210	173	187	—570
Archie Hill	156	184	140	—480

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Forced to come from behind in their semi-final game, George Laughlin's Belleville Collegiate senior interscholastic cage team went on to win the C.O.S.S.A. basketball championship in Toronto on Saturday, beating Meaford High 35 to 27 in the final game. Ross Clare saved the locals by potting a last second basket in the semi-finals, while the entire Collegiate quintette played strong basketball to win the final game against Meaford. The "Collegians" won the right to enter the Canadian Secondary School Senior Interscholastic playdowns at Ottawa early next month, where the various district winners will class for the top-ranking secondary schools basketball honors. The Belleville Collegiate squad, and their respective scores in the C.O.S.S.A. was composed of Clare 4; Pigden 4; Vechter 2; Thorne 6, Argue 13; Griffin 6; S. McBride, Warren; Bill McBride, Hunter, Gardner and Wannamaker.

Headed by Dr. F. C. Allen, of the University of Kansas and head of the U.S.A. basketball research, recently suggested that the circumference of the basketball be cut down slightly in order to increase the game's scoring possibilities. Other Yankee cage mentors have agitated an increase in the 18-inch diameter of the basket hoops. After much research Dr. Allen says it would be more practical and useful to play with a diminished-sized ball, as this would not only accomplish the purpose in mind, but also make it easier to handle the ball. (A smaller ball would naturally be easier to handle than the present one). Incidentally history tells us that when the late Dr. James A. Naismith, a Canadian by birth, first introduced the game of basketball, a common soccer football was used.

The circumference of a soccer football is 27 inches, but today we find the present basketball 29 1-2 inches around. Dr. Allen suggests the size of the cage spheroid be lessened to an even 29 inches and to also lower its resiliency slightly in order to increase the scoring possibilities of the game. Basketball is one of the most offensive games we know of, the only system of defence being the possession of the ball, which in turn must be advanced at all times. If the purpose of the basketball rules committee of the U.S.A. is to further open the game, we feel Dr. Allen's suggestion of a smaller ball is a better suggestion than the enlargement of the baskets. (As for hockey, Belleville teams need large nets at which to shoot, while the home cage could be diminished considerably).

Larry MacPhail, general manager of Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Baseball League, announces that the club had sent three players to Montreal Royals of the International league.

The players were Outfielder Tut Stainback, Pitcher Ira Hutchinson and Catcher Charley George. The Dodgers last week released Goody Rosen, Toronto-born outfielder to the Columbus, O., club of the American Association.

Stainback played in 68 games for the Dodgers last season and batted .269. Hutchinson won five and lost two in his pitching chores for Brooklyn. Charley George, who last season, was the Dodgers' third-baseman, was obtained from New Orleans string catcher.

Pete Beach's Albert College senior C.O.S.S.A. champion pucksters made a strong stand against Assumption College (Windsor) in the C.S.S.A. hockey finals in London over the week end. The Alberts lost 5-3 Friday night, as Assumption scored a victory with a belated third period rally. In the second game played Saturday Albert lost 6-1 to North Bay. St. Patrick's College (Ottawa) celebrated the 17th of Old Ireland by winning the Canadian Interscholastic hockey title in a true and fitting manner.

The final rural hockey game, for the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy is the feature sporting attraction at the Hume Arena tonight with Wallbridge and Glen Miller being the chief contenders. Each team has won a game and tonight's tussle will settle all arguments as to which is the better club, or will it? This may be the final puck game of the current season, so the fans should act accordingly, as it's a long time from now until next winter's puck business,

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18—(AP)—A lively stepper in the Grapefruit League, Detroit Tigers seek their sixth straight victory today as they engage St. Louis Cardinals. The hospital list of the Redbirds was reduced by the recovery of Johnny Mize and Curt Davis, however, and they hope to square accounts.

Clearwater, Fla.: Hopes that Hugh Casey would have a good year with Brooklyn Dodgers were bolstered by his performance against Boston Red Sox yesterday. He allowed only one hit in five innings and set down his first 11 foes in order.

San Antonio, Tex.: Bantering Buck Newsom is gont, but St. Louis Browns claim to have his successor in Jack (Showboat) Kramer, 22-year-old sophomore with an inimitable vocabulary. With a record of nine victories and 16 defeats last year as a rookie, Kramer says he'll be great this year.

St. Petersburg, Fla.: Just when there was beginning to be some question whether Lefty Lee Grissom would be a fit companion for that other southpaw wonder of New York Yankees, Lefty Gomez, the former made it clear he would qualify.

In yesterday's game with St. Louis Cards Grissom took two strikes batting lefthanded, then crossed the plate and took a called third strike from a righthanded position.

Anaheim Calif.: Benny McCoy is hitting only .267 for Philadelphia Athletics but Connie Mack is sure his $45,000 beauty will be meeting the ball solidly by the time the season opens. McCoy has been at bat 30 times in 14 games and collected eight hits, four singles and four doubles. He has driven in four runs and scored five himself.

Finland's Capitulation Severe Defeat For the Allies

Hull, England, March 18—(CP-Cable)—Richard Law, member of the House of Commons, and son of the late Rt. Hon. Andrew Bonar Law, said yesterday the capitulation of Finland was a severe defeat for the Allies and that they required a superb moral effort to extricate themselves from its consequences.

He said the Russian threat to the eastern boundary of Germany had always been a restraining factor on the Nazi government, but the threat was now removed through exposure of the military incompetence of Russia. The blockade, he said, would be much less effective in the future because of the tremendous back door which has been opened to Germany.

LEMON JUICE RECIPE CHECKS RHEUMATIC PAIN QUICKLY

If you suffer from rheumatic or neuritis pain try this simple inexpensive home recipe. Get a package of Ru-Ex Prescription from your druggist. Mix it with a quart of water, add the juice of 4 lemons. It's easy and pleasant.

You need only 2 tablespoonsful two times a day. Often within 48 hours — sometimes overnight — splendid results are obtained. If the pains are not quickly relieved and if you do not feel better, Ru-Ex Prescription will cost you nothing to try. Your money back, if it does not help you. Ru-Ex Prescription is for sale and recommended by Doyle's Drug Store and all other leading druggists.

Napanee Accepts Equalized Assessment Set by the Council

Napanee, Ont., March 18—(CP)—Lennox and Addington County Council's two-year dispute over equalized assessment was ended Saturday when Napanee accepted an assessment of $1,500,000 for 1940 and 1941, while ten other municipalities agreed to share the levy on $52,000, which represents the difference between Napanee's new figure and the one proposed.

In two years of court hearings, the county and the town paid $25,000 in an attempt to settle the dispute over what share of the assessment was to be taken by Napanee.

The town's representatives came to the March session of the council offering to pay taxes on $1,500,000 or more than ever before. The Townships of Camden and Ernestown still held out for the assessment originally proposed, but in the end they were among the municipalities which absorbed the difference.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PLAYERS DEFEAT AMERICANS 2-1

All-Star Game for Finnish Relief Shows Pitchers Far Ahead of Hitters in Training

GOOD BALL GAME

National Leaguers Score Winning Run in Ninth on Two Hits, Sacrifice and Error

By WHITNEY MARTIN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Tampa, Fla., March 18—(AP) — The long-abused National leaguers today strutted the streets in broad daylight, and if pressed, very lightly, would say casually: "Oh yes, the American League. We had their stars over for a practice game yesterday. Beat them, 2 to 1, with our reserves."

Which, in essence, is true. The National League all-stars did win an exhibition game, which more than 13,000 spectators contributed approximately $20,000 to the Finnish relief fund to see. And three sugstitutes did blend their talents to score the winning run in the ninth inning.

But in reality, the game proved nothing, except that the pitchers are far ahead of the batters in spring training, and that a lineup of sluggers is just another lineup when the fast ones, and not the hurlers, are snapping.

Greeted Gleefully

However, the victory was greeted gleefully by the senior circuit. It was St. Patrick's Day to the rest of the country, but it was groundhog Day to the National Leaguers, who popped out of the holes in which they had been hiding since the last world series.

For a spring exhibition it was a corking ball game, with the big surprise the inability of the row on row of siege guns in the American lineup to get much more than a loud foul. They were held to five hits, Bill Dickey and Frank Crosetti getting two each and Jimmy Foxx one, and none was better than a single.

American Leaguers Outhit

The National Leaguers collected six blows, all singles, putting two of them together in the ninth for the ball game.

The Americans took the lead in the second inning when Dimaggio walked, went to second on Dickey's single and went home on Crosetti's first hit.

The Nationals tied it up in the fourth when Ott walked, advanced when Harry Danning was hit by Buck Newsom, and scored on Demaree's single to right, beating a fine throw by Williams by inches.

Bob Feller started the eighth inning for the Americans. He had plenty of stuff, but was wild. A double play pulled him out of a hole in that inning, but in the ninth Al Lopez, Boston Bee catcher, sent a slashing single to centre, went to second when Hal Trosky, Cleveland first baseman, dropped Rollie Hemsley's throw on Terry Moore's sacrifice and scored the winning run on Pete Coscarart's single through short.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking in back of the sporting page and ma was pushing crooked things straight and straight things crooked and I was thinking of giving another hint about wanting a air rifle for my birthday next month, and ma said, P. Willis Hinkle's article was very intristing today, it was all devoted to the wrong fallacy of giving childern toy soldiers and other warlike gifts at a time when the biggest question before the world today is how to stamp the military spirit out of mankind.

Sounding like a bad beginning for the subject of a air rifle, and I said, Well anyways, ma, I dont want any toy soldiers, and she said, Well I should hope not at your age, but unfortunately you are not the only child in the world. There are litterly millions of childern whose mass sicology is being encouraged to take a turn for the worst, he said.

Well jimminy ma, if I had a child I'd give him a whole army of toy soldiers and teach him to turn it into a Salvation Army and make it sing songs about peace, I said, and ma said, Well I declare that's a real constructive idea - imagine Benny having such a thought.

Sure, ma, and if you and pop give me a air rifle for my birthday I'll act the same way with it, I mean I'll only use it to shoot at mean cats that are trying to pick fights with innocent cats, I said, and pop said, He's getting more and more constructive, what do you think, mother?

I think the most humane weapon to use on fighting cats is still a proverbial old shoe the same as it has always been, ma said. But just a same I'm quite struck with his idea about teaching children to convert soldiers and I think I'll suggest it at the next current events meeting of the Dawters of Cleopattera, she said.

Being suppose to be a compliment for me but I'd rather-of had the air rifle.

HOW TO GET A CASH LOAN ON NEW "FIT-YOUR-BUDGET" PLAN

This advertisement tells about a helpful new loan service now offered in this community by Household Finance (formerly Central Finance). You can now apply for a loan of $20 to $500 without going to the Household office. You need no stocks or bonds, no co-makers or endorsers. You may repay your loan on the schedule which fits your monthly income.

Suppose you need $100 and can readily repay $9.46 a month. Twelve instalments of $9.46 each will repay your loan in full. Or, if you wish smaller instalments, 15 monthly payments of $7.78 each will also repay a $100 loan.

YOU CAN BORROW $20 TO $500 IF YOU CAN MAKE THESE CONVENIENT MONTHLY PAYMENTS

CASH LOAN YOU GET	AMOUNT YOU PAY BACK EACH MONTH Including All Charges

WE GUARANTEE the total amount figured by using this table to be the full amount you will pay, when payments are made on schedule. You will pay less if you prepay your loan in full or in part, since you pay charges only for the actual time you have the money. Payments are calculated at the rate of charge which is authorized by the Small Loans Act, 1939.

R. E. HENDERSON, PRESIDENT

Payments to fit your budget

Find the loan you need in first column of the table. Then read across, picking out the monthly payment which you wish to make. Note that you may make small payments if you prefer. Or you may pay larger instalments and pay up sooner. Note, also, how little your loan costs if repaid in a short time. Charges on a $100 loan, for instance, repaid in four monthly instalments, are only $5.04. (In all cases payments shown in the table include all charges. There is nothing more to pay.)

Simple to borrow

All you do is fill in and return the coupon below. We then send a representative to your home. No credit inquiries are made of friends, employers or relatives, and you don't have to ask friends or fellow-workers to sign the loan papers with you. You get your loan promptly, without red tape or embarrassment.

Why don't you send the coupon for more information about this new service now? You will be under no obligation to borrow.

Collegiate Cagers Win C.O.S.S.A. Title

Toronto, March 18—Teams from Niagara Falls, Belleville and Owen Sound won the four Central Ontario Secondary School Association basketball championships in the final round of the two-day annual tournament here Saturday.

Niagara Falls Collegiate Vocational Institute took two titles, the senior girls defeating Cobourg Collegiate 29-17 and the junior boys whipping Peterborough Collegiate Vocational Institute 51-18. Belleville Collegiate trounced Meaford High 35-27 to win the senior boys' crown and Owen Sound defeated Bowmanville 39-25 to capture the junior girls' championship.

Alan Argue sparked Belleville to victory, sinking six field goals and one foul shot for 13 points, which gave him a one-point margin over Meaford's Ralph Bumstead for scoring honors.

Senior Boys

Belleville — Forward, Pigden 4, Argue 13; centre, Vechter 2; guards Thorne 6, Griffin 6; subs, Clare 4, Hunter, Gardner, B. McBride, R. Warren.

Meaford — Forwards, Bumstead 12, Pillgren 5; centre, Ciglen 4; guards, Ellis 5, Pitts 1; subs, Baker, Irving, Maher, Laycock, Durkin.

Freddie Stone and Local Talent on the Stage

Freddie Stone, popular Belleville boy and winner on the Ken Soble radio program, as a violinist and imitator, has with a group of Belleville's talented entertainers, made up a stage presentation, and now at the McCarthy theatre it is being presented each evening.

Freddie, Ross Sweet, Mildred Day, Ellen MacFarland, Betty McCann, Billy Sligh, Clarence Sligh and Johnny Lloyd, have arranged a program that will delight you, their show is packed with wholesome entertainment and we assert that you would have to travel far, to hear or see professional entertainers do better, come and give these boys and girls your applause, that their show so richly deserves.

Chester Morris, Richard Dix and Lucille Ball, in a new and outstanding comedy-drama "The Marines Fly High," the latest Fox Movietone News Events, described by Lowell Thomas, an amusing Walt Disney technicolor Donald Duck cartoon and Edgar Kennedy in a laugh-crammed comedy are presented on the screen preceding and following the stage presentation and as usual the matinee performance of the screen show only, will be given.

AT THE BELLE

"I TAKE THIS WOMAN"

Hedy Lamarr definitely becomes an outstanding dramatic actress in her first American picture background, in "I Take This Woman", next at the Belle Theatre in which she is co-starred with Spencer Tracy, one of the screen's greatest actors.

The story of a social butterfly who, when her romance crashes, finds sanctuary and finally real love, happiness and a new destiny at the side of an earnest, faithful scientist.

The action of the story is in New York, in locales ranging from glamorous night clubs and fashion salons to a dingy tenement. W. S. Van Dyke 11 directed.

Verree Teasdale has one of her best wise-cracking roles and Kent Taylor enacts Tracy's rival for Miss Lamarr in the play. Laraine Day, Mona Barrie, Jack Carson, Peter Cavanaugh, Louis Calhern, Frances Drake, Marjorie Main, George E. Stone, Willie Best, Don Castle, Dalies Frantz and Reed Hadley are other principals in the large cast.

"Emergency Squad"

Thrills come by the battalion in the precarious lives of the heroes of the big city "Emergency Squad" and the motion picture camera has managed to capture most of them in a highly graphic manner in Paramount's film about the service, "Emergency Squad", which is announced as the companion feature attraction.

Louis Campbell, as the newsgal, who finds romance as well as a story on her big assignment, and William Henry, Richard Denning and Robert Paige, as three heroes of the "Emergency Squad", garner acting honors, well supported by Anthony Quinn, John Miljan and John Marston.

It's a grand show from the word go—and that's just the word for this picture! By all means see it! You'll enjoy its fresh young players and its exciting story.

Highlights of the seven important events listed in the Belle News of the Hour is Britain's 85,000-ton Queen Elizabeth braving submarine infested seas on dramatic maiden voyage.

David Niven Starred

Headed by a cast which stars debonair David Niven and lovely Olivia De Havilland Samuel Goldwyn's production of the exciting, romantic mystery - melodrama, "Raffles" is now being presented at the Belle. Based on the celebrated novel, "The Amateur Cracksman", by W. E. Bornung, "Raffles" dramatizes the story of a suave and dapper gentleman crook, who moves in the highest society and is known as a champion cricketeer.

Four Junior Features

Four special junior features are now being exhibited on the same program including a funny Leon Errol comedy "Truth Aches", offering twenty minutes of hilarious fun, an interesting Pete Smith specialty "Romance of a Potato", a clever color cartoon "Busy Bakers", and the popular Belle British newsreel, with its important news from "Over There", and other important World events.

U. S. Ambassador And Wife Enjoying Life in Canada

Ottawa, March 18—(CP)—James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister to Canada, said Sunday he and his wife have been "keenly anticipating seeing much more of the Dominion."

Since coming to Canada last January the Cromwells have made a visit to Northern Quebec, which was "greatly enjoyed."

Mr. Cromwell, whose wife is the former Doris Duke, took the opportunity to deny newspaper reports that they do not like the Ottawa post.

"Certain newspapers recently have stated openly that Mrs. Cromwell and I do not like our Canadian assignment," he said. "Nothing could be further from the truth. Both Mrs. Cromwell and I have liked Canada and Canadians from the beginning. I have stated so publicly and privately."

"I said after we had been here a few weeks that we had been made to feel at home," he added. "Nothing since has spoiled that impression, but rather confirmed it."

Mr. Cromwell will soon visit Washington during a 10-day trip and probably will confer with President Roosevelt.

WAR LOAN OVER-SUBSCRIBED

London, March 18—(CP)—Britain's new 300,000,000 pound ($1,335,000,000) three per cent war loan has been over-subscribed, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, informed the House of Commons today.

"PEACE ARCHER" AFTER BULLSEYE ON NO 10

MANION—ROGERS FEUD ENLIVENS

pursue peace, but to have a clear line beyond which we cannot go, and to be prepared to the last decimal for war."

Read From Quotations

A quotation from a letter of last Aug. 26, a few days before the outbreak of war, said: "I have given up speculation as to the future and am content to live by the day under the hand of the Almighty Canada is prepared to the last decimal."

Col. Drew said the first letter referred to the British government's policy and the second referred to the spiritual, and not material, preparedness of Canada. He declared Lord Tweedsmuir's memory 'should be protected' from "misrepresentations" and that "the man who would misrepresent the words of one whose memory will for all time be revered by the British people should hide his face forever from the sight of decent people."

In personal equipment for the soldiers, in hospital and dental equipment and in rations, Canada's active service force is in the forefront, Defence Minister Rogers said at Brantford.

Opposition charges are designed to create disquiet solely to put the opposition in power, said Mr. Rogers.

Move Away From Issue Charged

"When parliament was dissolved, it was generally understood the government's war record was to ge the issue, but Hon. Dr. Manion has moved further and further away from it until he now has criticism for the record, but nothing constructive.

"We cannot overestimate the gravity of the decision which has to be reached by the citizens of Canada." Such a decision was not made on the price of radio licences, on the price of wheat, but on what the government has done, is doing and is prepared to do in Canada's war effort.

Dr. Manion and Col. George Drew, talked much of unpreparedness. Did they mean that Canada in peace should have had men and equipment ready for war? Even in peace—for three years—the King government had prepared a policy of supply for the Canadian forces. This policy had been justified by events.

Be in Forefront Prediction

Under the Liberal regime the Royal Canadian Air Force had been built up and the Trans-Canada Air Lines, a major achievement in civil aviation, created. By 1942—and Canada was prepared for a three-year war—there would be 80 air training schools. When peace arrived, Canada would be in the forefront of aviation activities.

Mr. Rogers said Dr. Manion failed to show stable qualities in his leadership of the campaign. Did the Canadian people not think unity would be found with King and Lapointe rather than with Manion and Drew with former Premier Duplessis of Quebec "lurking in the background." A government by the latter group would be unable to be a National Government even though it might adopt the name.

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation believes in a "pay-as-you-go" policy in the prosecution of the war, J. S. Woodsworth, National Leader of the C. C. F., said at Winnipeg.

M. J. Coldwell, National Chairman of the C.C.F., urged upon the meeting attention to the human side of the war.

Mr. Woodsworth said the present Federal administration would lay the burden of war taxation upon the common people whereas it should be placed upon those who could afford to bear it.

"Why shouldn't we tax wealth as they do in Great Britain?" It would not be necessary to confiscate wealth.

Claims Moral Conscription

When Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett was Prime Minister he termed Canada's bonded indebtedness "our sacred obligations" but care of the men, women and children of Canada is "infinitely more sacred than our bonded obligations," Mr. Woodsworth said.

All parties professed opposition to conscription but there was moral conscription in Canada. "It was put up to our unemployed men either to get into the army or starve."

These men were asked to risk their lives for Canada. "I want to know why we can't ask the men who own factories to lend their factories free to the country for duration of the war."

War settles nothing, Mr. Woodsworth said, suggesting an international organization for settling world problems—"the League of Nations if you wish."

"The Germans say 'Deutschland Ueber Alles' but I don't know that it is so different when we say "Britannia Rules the Waves.' I don't think that in the world today any nation is big enough to do as it pleases. We must have some organization that applies to everyone, big and little."

Denying charges the C.C.F. was essentially Communist, Mr. Woodsworth said he knew of no organization "that has made itself more of a nuisance to us than the Communists."

But the Communists had the right to express their opinions. A man had been arrested in Regina for distributing pamphlets. "Well if Communists have the right to run for parliament I say they have a right to distribute their literature."

War Issue Smoke Screen is Claim

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has shown his agreement with the policy of national government by his selection of Conservatives for dollar-a-year jogs while cabinet posts are retained by Liberals, Hon. M. A. MacPherson, National Government candidate in Regina, said at Manitou, Man.

Mr. MacPherson promised an aggressive and efficient war effort under the capable leadership of men selected for their ability to fill the important posts in the National Government proposed by Dr. Manion.

"Mr. King has taken this to mean union government which is a sort of marriage, and has already declared his intention to remain a political batchelor to the end of his political life......"

He charged the Liberals with using the war issue as a smoke screen to conceal administrative inefficiency and failure to produce a wheat policy or cope with unemployment.

The government chose its war-effort as the election issue and when "we take up the issue of war they say we are dangerous men."

Saved From Disaster

At Somerset, N.S., Revenue Minister Ilsley said the government recognized the apple industry as a "war casualty" shortly after the outbreak of war and prompt action in providing financial assistance was all that saved it from certain disaster.

National government came under fire again at Simcoe, Ont., where Trade Minister Euler said if Dr. Manion were elected he would have to summon cabinet members from parties with conflicting views on the extent of the war effort and on conscription.

Denton Massey, National Government Candidate in Toronto-Greenwood, charged at Fredericton that nobody in Canada was more prejudicing recruiting than Mr. King because of alleged failures by the government to clothe and equip properly the Canadian armed forces and to provide allowances for soldiers' dependents.

READY FOR TRIAL

Smiling happily, Chester B. Duryea, 69, is pictured a few moments after his release into a new world from Matteawan State Hospital for the Criminal Insane, where he has been held for 25 years following the slaying of his father, wealthy General Hiram Duryea, in 1914. His freedom might be short lived, however. He was taken to jail in Brooklyn, N.Y., to await trial for murder in connection with his father's death.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 18—(CP)— Industrials and western oils registered minor losses today on Toronto exchange. Mining charges posted small changes. Volume continued small and turnover totalled 113,000 shares.

The steels were weak and new lows for the year were boarded by the Canadian Car and Foundry issues and Dominion Steel B. Fleet Aircraft also sold at is low for the year. Papers were a bit soft and the utilities and foods were steady.

Gold issues showed firmness. San Antonio declined a few cents. In base metals Noranda, Nickel and Smelters were off slightly.

WALL STREET

New York, March 18 (AP)— The stock market steadied today after an early slipup. While dealings were light either way, initial losses running to a point were reduced or transformed into small advances near the fourth hour.

Among de[illegible]ant stocks were Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Douglas Aircraft, Glen Martin Standard Oil of N.J., Consolidated Edison and Public Service of N.J.

Bonds were ragged, with German, Belgian, Finnish and Polish dollar loans exhibiting strength. Major commodities were lower.

Lake Shore Mines and Distillers Seagram, on the Canadian list, improved fractions. Canada 4s, among bonds, were steady. Others were either stationary or inactive.

Packing Houses In U. S. Swamped By Flood of Hogs

Chicago, March 18—(AP) — A flood of waddling, fat hogs, the result of above normal birth-rate and abundant feed in piglots the past three years, are pouring into United States livestock slaughtering centres, pushing meat packing operations and employment to a five-year high and accelerating numerous related industries and businesses.

Livestock experts said today the peak of what they called the "hog cycle" of production has brought an unusual influx of porkers, helping to drive prices to their lowest levels since 1934 but at the same time stepping up many activities associated with transforming the hog for kitchen use.

Market statistics indicate farm income from hogs has been maintained despite lower prices due to the increased volume. Livestock experts said the 5,355,000 head killed at federally inspected plants in January, the largest volume in six years, had a value based on Chicago average price of $5.32 per hundred weight and weight of 248 pounds of slightly more than $70,000,000.

This compared with a value of $41,200,000 in September, 1935, when a record low slaughter totalled only 1,453,000 head and the Chicago average price was $10.95. In August, 1937, when prices were at the peak of the past decade and the Chicago average was $11.77 only 1,590,000 hogs were killed, with an estimated value of slightly more than $51,000,000.

Picton

Picton, March 18 — Soldiers here began voting on Saturday in the federal elections.

A recruiting office was opened in Peterborough last week and 150 recruits are being sought there for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Recruits are being accepted here and there is a good response with men coming from many distant points to enlist.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Carver of Oshawa are moving to Picton this week.

Mrs. H. U. Tobey entertained at bridge on Friday, taking her guests to the St. Andrew's Church for the St. Patrick's tea. This affair was well attended and a nice sum was realized.

Due to the bad roads, Cherry Valley young people did not present their three one-act plays Friday night. These will be given at a later date.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald White of Toronto and Miss Fannie Williams were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Williams.

Mrs. Howard Graham will spend Easter holidays in Toronto.

The National Conservatives held a successful meeting at Waupoos Hall Friday night. The speakers were the candidate, George J. Tustin, and H. S. Colliver, ex-M.L.A. On Monday, Rev. A. W. Downer is speaking here in the interests of Mr. Tustin with Hon. N. Rogers here for Mr. Weese on Tuesday.

OPERATION DESCRIBED OVER RADIO

Seattle, March 18—(AP)— Louis G. Cameron's appendix was removed over a statwide radio hookup yesterday. Dr. Edwin A. Nixon, of the Washington State Medical Association, stood near the operating table with a microphone, giving the radio audience a "play-by-play" description. After the operation Cameron was able to smile and say "hello." The broadcast was sponsored by the Association.

DICTATORS CONFER AT BRENNERO

Went to Il Duce's Car

Mussolini, Ciano and Hitler met on the station platform and then went at once to Mussolini's parlor car. The German ambassador to Italy, Hans-Georg Von Mackensen also was here. He travelled with Mussolini from Rome.

Snow began falling as the two leaders met in the shadow of the Brenner pass, once the gateway of Teutonic invasion of the Roman Empire.

Lavish decorations which marked Hitler's visits to Italy in times past were lacking. Ceremonies were cut to the barest requirements of official etiquette.

Italian and German banners ornamented the railway station and a red carpet lay across the platform between rows of potted plants. These were the only festive signs.

Nothing Known of Talks

Except for the extremely brief communique describing the talk as cordial, nothing was known definitely of the nature of the conversation.

The meeting was held at a critical time in the war, the Finnish peace having removed for the moment the prospect of a two-front war and the approach of spring bringing with it the widely-suggested possibility of "real war."

With the briefest ceremony Hitler and Mussolini began their talk immediately after meeting. Il Duce's son-in-law and Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, and the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, entered the special car with their chiefs, and the four went into a closed compartment, where curtains were quickly drawn.

The train stood on the siding just within Italian territory in the historic Brenner Pass. The long platform was kept clear and so was a space for some distance around the station.

Only a few provincial, military and civil authorities were at the station for the meeting, arranged swiftly and carried out with clock-work precision. The world did not learn it would be held until the two leaders were out of their capitals and well on their way.

As Mussolini and Count Ciano alighted from their train, buglers of the Guard of Honor sounded attention while a battalion of Alpine troops presented arms. Il Duce passed the guard in review and then stood with members of his party under the platform roof until the arrival of Hitler's train 45 minutes later.

While a military band played German and Italian anthems, Mussolini stepped forward to exchange salutes and handshakes with Hitler. Count Ciano greeted Von Ribbentrop and other members of the German party.

Hitler and Mussolini then reviewed the guard and strode to Il Duce's car on a nearby track.

Mussolini appeared to be in excellent humor. He wore a dark blue uniform and the cap of an honorary corporal in the Fascist militia.

Hitler, who was standing at the doorway of his train when it coasted into the station, stepped down immediately. He wore the olive uniform of a German soldier, with a raincoat of the same color.

Play Doomed to Failure

Paris, March 18—(CP)—If the meeting between Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini is the first act of an Easter week peace offensive, the play is doomed to failure, according to the French view.

Government sources said today, in commenting on the Brennero conference, that the Allies cannot accept a compromise peace but will fight on until they have won victory and guarantees of security.

Newspapers simultaneously urged the formation of a new war cabinet after a Chamber of Deputies debate tomorrow on the conduct of the war. One complaint against the government has been that Premier Daladier holds too many cabinet posts. Premier Daladier conferred for more than an hour with President Albert Lebrun.

May Separate Portfolios

Speculation in the Press revolved on the question of whether the premier intends to broaden his government to include all parties from Socialist Leon Blum on the left to Louis Marin on the right or whether he will confine himself to adjustments affecting a few of his senior ministers.

It is generally agreed he will separate the foreign and war portfolios, which he now holds himself and will probably set up an inner "war cabinet" of about half a dozen key ministers in whose hands will be concentrated supreme executive power.

There was also considerable guessing as to whether the premier will wait until after tomorrow's chamber debate to carry through his expected changes, or will confront the chamber with an accomplished fact.

Le Matin said: "He is undeniably master of the situation and will choose the moment he thinks best for the interests of the country. It is indispensable that the ministerial crisis should be solved at the same moment it is officially made public."

Le Petit Journal also urged quick action once the crisis comes into the open to prevent the Nazis taking advantage of the few days when France might find herself without a government.

Albert Baynet, in l'Oeuvre, said "the cabinet must emerge as a 'war cabinet', both in its structure and its act, showing inflexible resolution against the enemies of France."

MURDER-TO-ORDER COMBINE HELD

The prospector quoted one informer as saying the gang leaders had boasted to him of having "rubbed out" seven witnesses in District Attorney Thomas Dewey's Buchalter trial, and had planned to kill the remaining four witnesses in the case.

Mistaken Identity

In one case, the District Attorney said, the "rubout ring" shot to death Irving Penn, 42-year-old music firm executive, whom they mistook for a Dewey witness in the Lepke case.

Two young members of the syndicate, fearful they would be deserted by their leaders and left to face alone charges under which they are now held, spilled their stories, O'Dwyer said. He named them as Anthony (Duke) Maffetore and Abraham (Pretty) Levine.

Sums of $10 and $20—sometimes as little as $3—were paid for the slayings. The Brooklyn killers apparently were allied in some way with the Detroit Purple gang, the prosecutor said, adding he anticipated arrests as far away as Los Angeles and Miami.

Picture Actor Held

Hollywood, March 18—(AP)— Irving Cohen, 37, motion picture actor, was arrested today on telegraphic information from New York which described him as wanted for murder.

Deputy Sheriff P. M. Kunow said he was informed Cohen is wanted in connection with an investigation by District Attorney William O'Dwyer of Brooklyn.

"Cohen tells us he has been in pictures for about three years" Kunou declared. "He told me:—"You'll get a kick out of this. I played a copper in one picture."

"He told us he used the name of Jack Gordon in films."

BERLIN HOPEFUL AXIS EXTENDED

In the event of Italy's entering the war, it is said Germany would supply her partner with all necessary warlike materials.

Hitler and Mussolini further agreed according to these sources, that an Italian-Russian rapprochement must follow next. This would involve careful delineation of sphere of influence in the Balkans.

The Associated Press said that Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State, now in Rome, would be one of the first to learn the details of today's meeting. As seen in Berlin, the story said, this would give President Roosevelt "one more chance to find some formula" for peace.

Article in Ribbentrop's Paper

Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's personal monthly organ "Berlin-Rome-Tokyo" today published an article characterized by three stars instead of the author's name. Such three-star articles are understood to have been approved and to be tantamount to an utterance by the Foreign Minister.

The argument in the course of the article is concluded:—

"We are acting unrestrictedly and irrepressibly with war and victory as the sole dominating thought. We are amused to see how some people believe that German and Italian statesmen, contrary to all their practices thereto, will permit initiative to be wrested from them through cajolery, threats or blackmail, or to allow themselves to be provoked by noisy statesmen or an angry press on the other side.

"For the benefit of these strategists let it be said quite clearly and pointedly; the German-Italian alliance is a reality built not only upon power but just as much upon wisdom, it is a reality which can be active everywhere at any time without restriction."

An authorized spokesman soon after the Hitler-Mussolini meeting said it was held "to discuss all questions which concern both Allied and the authoritarian nations."

Welles Revisits Pope.

Rome, Mar. 18 (AP).—While Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini conferred today at Brennero, Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's emissary, revisited Pope Pius XII at the Vatican and foreign observers were inclined to connect the two.

Although the public did not learn of the impending meeting until the overnight trains were rolling toward the Brenner Pass, Mr. Welles had been informed when he talked for more than an hour with Mussolini on Saturday.

The Hitler-Mussolini appointment offered the two leaders their first opportunity for face-to-face consultation since the start of the war—indeed their first since Sept. 29, 1938, when Czecho-Slovakia was partitioned at Munich.

Participation By Italy Unlikely.

Whether it presaged a German move to obtain a truce in Hitler's war with Great Britain and France was impossible to ascertain. There was a belief in foreign circles, that Mussolini would refrain from taking part in any so-called peace offensive unless he received definite signs of its likely success.

If, on the other hand, Hitler intended to discuss plans for a spring offensive it was thought Mussolini would avoid involving Italy in it.

Truce Outlook Slight.

The outlook for any truce appeared slight indeed to diplomatic eyes. While there has been speculation for some time as to the possibility of Hitler's offering to restore a certain amount of independence to Poland and Czecho-Slovakia there has been little hope that this would satisfy Britain and France.

The United States Under-Secretary of State was accompanied to the last conference of his tour by Myron Taylor, special United States representative at the Vatican. The Pope received them in his private library.

The audience lasted one hour, after which Mr. Welles visited Luigi Cardinal Maglione, Papal Secretary of State.

Mr. Welles plans to leave Rome tomorrow night for Genoa to board the lines Conte Di Savoia for the United States and it is possible Mussolini will be in a position to add last minute data to the dossier he is carrying back to President Roosevelt.

FIVE CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH

Had Gone Out

Occupants of the other apartments all had gone out.

Gravel apparently was one of the first to reach the fire. He and Roland St. Gelais broke down a door. St. Gelais carried the Gravel children through the flames to safety.

Gravel had to break into the Hebert apartment. He fumbled in the dark and bumped into a cradle in which three-year-old Suzanne Hebert was sleeping. He rescued her while Charles Edouard Gravel went to the third floor and carried to safety Jacqueline Jauvin, who was semi-asphyxiated.

Stumbled to Street

Miss Hovington, asleep on the third floor with the five children who were killed, was suffering from asphyxiation when she stumbled into the street. Spectators had to hold her back from reentering the burning building when she learned the children still were in their beds.

Colette Hebert, eldest of the 32-year-old Mrs. Hebert's children, had almost reached the street when she heard the cries of her sisters and brothers and turned back to help them. She died before she could reach them.

Thick smoke pouring from the building hampered firemen in their work. The firemen ran a ladder up the side of the building and one of the men was obliged to turn back when he kicked through a window. The thick smoke kept him from entering.

Firemen Injured

Fireman Henri Nil Maltais said one spectator had told him there was no one in the building.

Maltais and Roland St. Gelais suffered severe cuts about the hands. Miss Hovington also was injured slightly.

The fire, which caused material damage estimated at $20,000 burned through the night and searchers were unable until this morning to penetrate the smoking ruins to look for the bodies of the five children.

All the belongings of the four families who lived in the building were lost.

SIX CONVICTED OF HIGHGRADING

Three of Six Men Given Penitentiary Terms at Portsmouth

Toronto, March 18—(CP)— Six men, three of them from Northern Ontario, were sentenced today to penitentiary terms on charges of conspiracy to sell highgrade gold or silver ore. They were convicted last week at which the crown counsel said gold and silver to the value of more than $1,000,000 were covered by the charges.

Judge James Parker sentenced Simon Dollinger, 40, and J. J. Wittenberg, 47, Toronto, each to three years in penitentiary. Each was convicted of three charges of conspiracy. Also sentenced to three years was Charles Lamothe, 39, Timmins, who was convicted of two counts.

Joseph Shapiro, 43, Kirkland Lake, received two years on two counts, and Moses Boxinbaum, 50, Val D'Or, Que., and Hamilton, Ont., and Harry Rotstein, 51, Kirkland Lake, each was sentenced to one year following conviction on two counts.

Dollinger and Wittenberg previously were acquitted of 14 charges of forging telegraph money orders, combined with 14 counts of uttering forged documents. The crown charged $33,606 was involved in these counts.

Motorists Find Deer With Broken Back

Marmora, March 18—(Special)—While driving east on No. 7 highway between Havelock and Marmora on Saturday morning, Mr. Rork Ferguson of Norwood and Mr. Barney Quinn of Havelock, noticed a small buck deer, which was badly hurt. The deer was lying in the snow at the side of the highway and was unable to walk. On investigating they found the deer had a broken back and had evidently been struck by a car. Overseer Shannon was notified and the animal was quickly put out of misery.

PLUNGES PENKNIFE INTO HIS CHEST

Denver, March 18 (AP)—Taking advantage of a hospital nurse's brief absence, an invalid deprived himself of the few hours of life remaining to him by plunging a penknife into his chest while he lay under an oxygen tent.

The knife blade punctured and collapsed the right lung of Calvin H. Campbell Sr., 47. His physician said he would have died within a few hours in any event because of complications attending pneumonia.

Campbell, who had undergone nine major operations in 14 years, lay quietly on his hospital bed when his nurse, Gladys Eller, returned to his room after a short absence. She noticed the oxygen tent had been thrust aside and that he held a knife in his hand.

Campbell smiled.

"Did I hit it?" he asked.

"What?" said Miss Eller.

"My heart," replied Campbell.

To an interne summoned by Miss Eller, Campbell said. "I had to do it. I couldn't stand it any longer."

Egg Market Remains Firm

Toronto, March 18 — Improved demand imparted a firmer undertone to the local egg market at the week-end. Butter remained quietly steady.

Fresh receipts cleared more readily on the egg market Saturday. The three top grades in the graded section ranged 1-2c per dozen higher, with Government-inspected lots of these eggs commanding 1-2c above quoted prices. No revision was made in the retail division.

Fair demand from outside points for fresh butter was the only feature to the butter market which closed out the week quiet, but steady. Prints moved through retail channels at former values.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, March 18—(CP)—Produce market prices here Saturday as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 29c to 29 1-2c first grade solids, jobbing price, 28 1-2c to 29c

Thousands Driven From Their Homes By Danube Flood

All Rivers Rising in Southeastern Europe—Soldiers Ordered to Dynamite Ice Jams and Remove Residents From Villages

FARMS UNDER WATER

Budapest, March, 18 — (AP) — Five new deaths were reported today as the Danube River, raised by Spring thaws to the highest level since 1876, poured over its banks to flood thousands of Hungarian homes and menace large farming areas in Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Rumania.

Virtually all rivers in southeastern Europe are rising. The rampaging Danube washed out scores of bridges as it flowed through Hungary, and soldiers were ordered out to dynamite ice jams and remove residents from threatened villages. The outskirts of Budapest were under water.

German freighters dared swift water and swirling ice floes and departed from their winter berths at Budapest, signalling renewal of the Reich's vital Danube traffic.

Twenty-five persons were killed and 70 injured yesterday when a passenger train was wrecked by an avalanche near Ozalu, Yugoslavia. Officials said heavy rains caused the avalanche.

SOLDIER HELD ON ROBBERY CHARGE

Taken From Parade at Exhibition Grounds in Toronto

Toronto, March 18 — (CP) — Clarence Charbotte of Vancouver, a private in a regiment stationed at the exhibition camp here, was arrested today on charges of assault and robbery. Police allege Charbotte was the prowler who struck Mrs. M. J. Finnigan in the face Saturday when she found him ransacking her bedroom.

Mrs. Finnigan, wife of the proprietor of the Palace Hotel, investigated noises in her bedroom and screamed when she saw the man. He struck her in the face and fled with $4 she said. A soldier's cap and a pair of gloves were found in the room.

Military authorities co-operated with city police in investigation of the robbery. Troops were paraded at the camp and Pte. Charbotte was taken from the parade and arrested. He will appear in court next Monday.

Helsinki, March 18—(AP)—Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim, Finland's army commander, has been proposed as director "of the national fate in general."

So far it is only a newspaper suggestion, offered yesterday by the influential Uusi Suomi, and there has been no indication that the Field Marshal would accept. Many such opportunities have been offered Baron Mannerheim in the past but he never accepted.

Uusi Suomi, in a special dispatch, said Soviet Russia plans to begin immediately construction of fortifications along the new frontier with Finland and that they are to be known as the "Voroshiloff Line," after War Commissar Klementi Voroshiloff.

'Helping Mama' Baby is Burned And Skull Injured

New York, March 18—(AP) — Three-year-old Martin Neville and his little sister tried to "help mama" while she was at Palm Sunday services, and as a result their three-months-old sister is in the hospital with serious burns and a possible fractured skull.

Martin and his sister, Evelyn, 18 months old, decided to give the baby a bath. As their father, a night engineer slept a few feet away, they lifted the baby out of her crib, dragged her across the floor by her nightgown to the bathroom, and tried to put her into the tub, but dropped her, and her head hit the floor.

Undaunted, they got a toy bucket and poured scalding water on her. The baby's cries finally awakened the father.

TWO CHILDREN DROWN

Prince Albert, Sask., March 18 — (CP)—Two small children of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Heath, drowned last night in the sedimentary basin of the Prince Albert water works system.

Shortly after police were notified that Harold, five, and Margaret, three, were missing, they found tiny footprints leading through a wire fence which surrounded the basin. Three hours later the bodies were recovered from eight feet of water.

W. E. Spackman, Tweed Bank Manager, Retires

Tweed—After ten years as manager of the local branch of the Bank of Montreal, Mr. W. Earl Spackman has been superannuated. For some years Mr. Spackman has not been in good health, forcing his retirement after thirty-four years of service. Mr. Spackman will be succeeded by Mr. K. A. McNeil of Mildomay who will assume his new duties about the first of April.

Mr. Spackman entered the employ of Molson's Bank at Exeter as a junior in 1906, later transferring to the Merchants' Bank which eventually amalgamated with the Bank of Montreal. Previous to coming to Tweed following the transfer of Mr. Alex Yule to Ingersoll, Mr. Spackman was at Westport.

He will be greatly missed in Tweed where he has actively identified himself with a number of organizations, notably Tweed public library, the bowling club and the Community club, in all of which he held important executive offices. Both he and Mrs. Spackman were members of St. James' Anglican Church.

Plainfield by defeating Farnsworth in the third engagement in East Hastings Rural League hockey finals, captured Dr. H. E. Welsh's hockey trophy. The winners were easily masters of the situation in the final game and deserved their win.

Dr. P. T. Bowlby and F. W. Clark as speakers at Tweed Masonic Lodge on Friday night gave interesting addresses, the former on the history of the lodge since its organization, and the latter on his trip to Florida a short time ago.

Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Company of Massassaga, through its local manager, Mr. Wallace I. Johnston has purchased three new 3-ton Chevrolet trucks from LeSage Motor Sales, to be used in their lumbering operations.

An interesting meeting of the Marion Coon Evening Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. T. N. Beatty with the President, Miss Florence Blaney, in charge. Following a worship service, Mrs. M. G. Dales and Mrs. S. H. Connor sang "Alone." Master Billy Beatty played a piano solo. The program centred around the theme "Christian Service in India" and was planned by Miss L. Richardson and Mrs. R. Wood. Lunch was served by Mrs. Beatty, Mrs. Wood and Miss Meiklejohn.

Mrs. E. Coon Dies

Mrs. Emily Coon, of Peterboro, widow of the late Rev. Charles Henry Coon, a former pastor of Tweed Methodist Church 1913 to 1917, passed away recently at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Prise, in her 76th year. Death followed an extended illness.

One of her daughters, Marion Grave Coon, served for many years as missionary to China. She returned home on furlough, and ill health which finally resulted in her death two years ago, prevented her return to China. The Marion Coon Evening Auxiliary of Tweed United Church was named in her honour in 1937.

The late Mrs. Coon was born at Waupoos near Picton. She is survived by six daughters and two sons.

The funeral service was held in Peterboro by Rev. M. C. Parr of George Street United Church, with interment in Lindsay.

Miss Delma Pipe of Tweed recently graduated from Brockville Business College following successfully passing examinations for stenographer. At the same time she was successful in governmental civil service examination.

Miss Jennie Wright spent the past few days in Toronto and Hamilton.

Mrs. Geo. Elwood was taken to Belleville General Hospital on Thursday.

Mr. Merritt "Pete" Clark has returned to Drumheller, Alberta, after visiting his father Mr. H. J. Clark for the past three weeks.

Miss Margaret Kerr has returned home after visiting relatives in Midland and Penetang.

Mr. S. B. Rollins, who is a patient in Belleville General Hospital is greatly improved in health.

Death claimed a former school teacher of Chapman's Corners in the person of Dr. H. E. Hicks of Griswold, Manitoba. The late Dr. Hicks was born in Prince Edward County and after teaching school at Chapman's Corners married Miss Jennie Johnson daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Johnson of Tweed. In 1896 he began the practice of medicine and in 1903 entered the provincial legislature of Manitoba. Since 1926 when he retired from active medical practice he has lived in his farm at Griswold.

AMBASSADOR VISITS TORONTO

Toronto, March 18—(CP)—Hon. James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister to Canada, placed a wreath on the cenotaph here today and was tendered a civic reception in the city council chambers. He was presented with a golden key and an address of welcome.

Mr. Cromwell and his wife, the former Doris Duke, arrived here by plane last night from Ottawa. They later will visit Washington during the course of a 10-day Easter trip and Mr. Cromwell probably will confer with President Roosevelt.

STEPS TAKEN TO PERFECT WARTIME COLLABORATION

Anglo - French Agreement Ratified by Heads of Colonial Offices

MacDONALD LEAVES

Paris, March 18—(CP-Havas) — Anglo-French agreement on steps to perfect the wartime collaboration between the two colonial empires was announced by the British Embassy today as Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald left for London.

After a conference this morning with the French Minister of Colonies, Georges Mandel, Mr. MacDonald lunched at the Colonial Ministry. He arrived by plane Saturday and had his first talk with M. Mandel that day.

The Embassy communique follows:—

"Mr. MacDonald, British Secretary for Colonies, and his French colleague, Georges Mandel, who had already conferred together at length on Saturday and yesterday, met again this morning and agreed upon further measures to be taken to perfect the collaboration between the British and French colonial empires.

"In many parts of the world their colonial territories are neighboring, and the two ministers feel that both governments have much to gain from the experience of the other. They have therefore decided that the colonial office and the Ministry of Colonies should henceforth keep in constant touch, and that an organization should be created both in London and in Paris to maintain a permanent liaison between the two departments.

Parleys from Time to Time

"This collaboration, which must have as its principal object the well being of the colonial peoples, will be extended to the colonies themselves. There will be conferences from time to time between the governors of neighboring British and French colonial territories. This contact will also be established between administrative and specialist officers of these territories.

"For instance, the heads of medical services in the colonies are receiving instructions to exchange information and co-ordinate their activities on matters of common concern.

"As regards matters affecting the successful prosecution of the war, there has been already much co-operation between the colonial authorities of the Allied powers. The two ministers resolved to perfect this.

"Thus in the economic fields they agreed to examine the possibility of framing a co-ordinating program of production and marketing of the various colonial products, the object being to make the fullest possible use of their joint resources.

"French and British experts will meet very shortly for this purpose. Meanwhile officers of the Colonial Office who accompanied Mr. MacDonald have taken advantage of their visit to Paris to settle with their French colleagues a number of common problems regarding production, trade and communications."

Prompt Action Probably Saved Lives of Fifteen

Ottawa, March 18 — (CP) — Prompt action on the part of Mrs. Sam Parent, 28, saved the lives of probably 15 persons when fire broke out in an apartment and store building here today, (46 Garland St.)

Mrs. Parent was awakened by smoke and hustled her three small children out by a side door into a lane. She then climbed an outside stairway to arouse 12 persons who were sleeping in an upper apartment. All escaped safely in their night attire and shivered in the cold of early morning while flames spread through the frame building. Damage was estimated at $2,500.

Latta

Mrs. N. Wilder of Rednersville spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilder. Mr. N. Wilder and Mr. Ross Snell spent Monday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wilder.

Miss Annie Hamilton returned home from Wellington on Sunday night after spending a week with her cousin, Mrs. Charles Thomas, Wellington.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rollins attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Watt at Foxboro on Monday afternoon.

Sudbury Fliers Rescued by Finnish Laborer and Little Girl

Two Broken Legs Set in Splints and Fliers Then Taken to Hospital

PLANE CRASHES

Sudbury, Ont., March 18—(CP)— A Finnish farm-laborer and 14-year-old Nellie Smeagle rescued two Sudbury fliers and set two broken legs in splints at the side of the wrecked plane on Lake Ramsay last night.

The plane, a home-made machine piloted by Stan Baxter, cracked up on the lake when the flier attempted to make a forced landing at dusk.

With Baxter in the plane was Mel Bucher. The sound of the crashing plane was heard a mile and a half away by the third hand on the farm of Mrs. Mike Smeagle. Accompanied by Mrs. Smeagle's daughter, Nellie, the man, whose name was not available, set out in a sleigh with a team of horses in the direction of the crash.

The man and girl revived the fliers, but when they attempted to move them it was found both had broken legs. Baxter gave instructions and the rescuers fashioned splints and applied them. Then they lifted the injured men into the sleigh and rushed back to the farm-house.

This morning Dr. Webster treated Baxter for a broken foot and set Bucher's fractured hip. Both were badly cut and bruised, he said, but "in good condition."

Roslin

Roslin — The March meeting of the Roslin Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon, March 14th. at the home of Mrs. M. Fargey with an attendance of fourteen.

The president, Mrs. W. White, presided and the meeting opened in the usual way. A number of pairs of socks and a pair of wristlets were handed in. These will be forwarded to the Red Cross headquarters in Belleville. It was decided to purchase more wool.

The chairman of the school board, Dr. Welsh, addressed the meeting and suggested that the Institute undertake the wiring of the school for electricity. After some discussion the matter was laid over until the April meeting.

Mrs. Slingerland was in charge of the following programme: Mrs. Gillespie read Lady Tweedsmuir's reply to a message of sympathy sent her by the Canadian W.I. Mrs. A. Bates read a paper prepared by Mrs. Slingerland on the motto, "Those who use what they have seldom lack for anything." Little Misses Mary and Norma Bates sang together "When He Cometh." Miss Hazel Wilson gave a paper on the topic, "What would we do without our forests." All joined in singing several selections.

All joined in a Tree contest. The singing of the National Anthem brought the programme to a close after which the hostess and her assistants served lunch and all enjoyed a social hour.

The March meeting of the Women's Association was held Wednesday afternoon, March 6th. at the home of Mrs. J. Colden with an attendance of eleven.

The March meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Thursday evening, March 7th., at the home of Mrs. Harry Sills. The devotional and business periods were conducted by the president, Mrs. Gillespie. Mrs. Beazer was in charge of the program. All joined in repeating the Litany. Mrs. Beazer read an article on the origin of a hymn. Rev. Mr. Beazer sang a hymn.

The meeting closed with prayer after which the hostess served refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Black of Belleville and the Misses Wilson were Sunday visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chisholm.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Grey entertained a number of relatives and friends at an oyster supper in honor of their daughter Mary, (Mrs. Orlean Parks) on the occasion of her birthday on Wednesday evening, March 6th.

Mrs. Russell Morgan is in Windsor where she is visiting her sister, Mrs. Carleton, who is ill.

NO CRIMINAL CASES

Cobourg, Ont., March 18—(CP) —Spring assizes docket had no criminal cases when Supreme Court opened here today, Mr. Justice Green being presented with the traditional white gloves.

Moscow May Raise Nickel Mine Question n North Finland

London, March 18—(CP Cable) —While a Finnish delegation headed, by Juhu Paasikivi is flying to Moscow to clear up final details of the peace treaty with Russia, reports reaching London today suggest the question of the Canadian-operated nickel concessions in northern Finland is likely to be raised at the Kremlin.

A Rome propaganda broadcast heard here said the subject will be one of the most important to be discussed before final ratification of the treaty.

The German newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung was quoted as saying Germany is paying close attention to the question of utilization of the mines and that "Russia is not prepared to tolerate any British privileges in these important mines."

The broadcaster took this to mean that both Germany and Russia will attempt to prevent Britain profitting from the concessions, hitherto held by the International Nickel Company of Canada.

Infant Survives 110 Degree Temp.

Spokane, Wash., March 18—(AP) —An infant girl was reported improving today after surviving a temperature of at least 110 degrees.

The child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Yount, was brought to Spokane Friday night. The father and A. A. Shuler kept the baby alive with artificial respiration while Mrs. Shuler drove the 55 miles from Ritsville, Wash.

Dr. E. J. Barnett said the baby's temperature Friday night was "at least 110—our thermometers won't go any higher." Dr. Barnett ascribed the child's condition to a "disturbance in the heat regulating centre of the brain."

Mother, Daughter Convicted on Shoplifting Charges

A mother and daughter were arrested on Front Street Saturday night on charges of shoplifting. Today in city police court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., both pleaded guilty to charges of shoplifting. The woman, who gave her name as Mrs. May French, Marmora, was remanded in custody for sentence, while her 17-year-old daughter, was given a year's suspended sentence.

The pair were arrested by Detective Fred Isard and P.C. Wright following complaints from three local chain stores, Zellers, Kresges and Woolworths Ltd. relative to cases of shoplifting being prevalent. Employees of one store pointed out the mother and daughter, both of whom were arrested after leaving one store. Their apprehension caused considerable excitement among the late Saturday night shoppers along Front Street, as both denied the charges and claimed the goods, which were in their possession but later identified as the property of the above-named stores. Silk stockings, a lady's purse, fountain pens and other small articles were recovered.

After the woman had pleaded guilty in today's police court, the daughter was permitted to return home. "I thing the mother should be punished for this crime," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. His Worship intimated he desired some time in which to consider the matter and remanded the mother to the custody of the county jail for one week.

Schooner Overdue With 7 Men Aboard

Boston, March 18 —(AP)—Four patrol boats and four planes of the United States coast guard searched the New England coast today for the overdue Gloucester fishing schooner Providenza with seven men reported aboard.

The 41-foot craft, which sailed Wednesday to fish southeast of Cape Ann, failed to return on schedule Saturday.

Welles Takes No Part In Foreign Negotiations

Washington, March 18—(AP) — State Secretary Cordell Hull said today that Summer Welles, Under-Secretary of State, had taken no part as an intermediary in negotiations among foreign powers during his conferences for President Roosevelt in the capitals of Europe.

Welles, he added, went to Europe on a strictly pact-finding mission and has adhered to it.

19-YEAR YOUTH FATALLY SHOT RACING POLICE

For No Apparent Reason Than Passing Red Light William Hook Leads Police in 80-Mile-Per-Hour Race

JUST BETROTHED

Detroit, March 18—(AP) — The romance of 18-year-old Ruby Scott and William Hook, 21-year-old steel worker, was shattered by a police bullet.

For no apparent reason other than passing a red traffic light, Hook led a police car on an 80-mile-an-hour chase through Detroit and Dearborn streets Sunday and finally was shot fatally. The wild ride followed an evening during which Hook and his fiancee danced in celebration of their betrothal.

"We decided we could elope just as soon as Bill made a few more payments on his car," said Miss Scott. "He had a pretty good job."

Why Hook decided to race the police, no one knew. He drank nothing but soft drinks during the evening, his fiancee said.

SIDNEY COUNCIL

The March session of Sidney Council was held recently. The minutes of the regular February meeting also of a special meeting held February 16 read and adopted. A deputation from Johnstown headed by Mr. Walter Harder interviewed the council requesting that S. S. No. 6 be divided into two separate sections.

As a result of this interview the council authorized the clerk to notify the parties concerned, also the public school Inspector that at April meeting of the council to be held April 1st the question of dividing S.S. No. 6 will be fully discussed with the view of arriving at a satisfactory settlement. The following resolutions were moved and adopted:

That the hospital account be paid with the exception of one item held over for investigation.

That the Reeve and Deputy Reeve be a committee to investigate Mr. L. Hendricks re-construction of a hydro line from the 3rd concession road in to the residences of Mr. George Parry and Mr. Frank Jeffery.

That the Treasurer be authorised to refund 1939 debenture payments to the ratepayers of S. S. No. 10.

That the following accounts be paid: Belleville Hospital $8.50; Hastings Co. $111.70; Provincial Treasurer $1.00; A. Clare $1.00; M. Chard $5.00; News-Argus $18.00; G. W. Shortt $15.00; G. A. Rush $15.00; H. W. Donnelly $2.00; Jas. T. Howard $32.40; Laurie Lewis 50c; J. F. Wilson $25.00; S. M. Nicolson $25.00; J. Gallivan $4.00. —Carried.

Council adjourned to meet April 1st at 1 o'clock p.m.

W. H. Nobes, Clerk.

Labor Member Asks For Vote Censuring Shipping Ministry

London, March 18 (CP)—Asserting that Britain may starve to death unless her shipbuilding program is speeded up, Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, asked the House of Commons today for a vote censuring the shipping ministry.

He scored the ministry for delays which he said were due to lack of organization, and declared that complaints were rolling in as "ships are lost, lives are lost and hundreds of thousands of pounds frittered away."

The effective cargo-carrying tonnage of the British Merchant Marine is only about 10,000,000 tons at present, Mr. Shinwell claimed, and not "18,000,000 tons as the First Lord of the Admiralty (Winston Churchill) would have claimed."

He declared the available tonnage had been depleted both because the Queen Mary and other large ships are now tied up and because a number of other vessels have been taken over by the Admiralty.

Thousands of Refugees Being Cared for by Salvation Army

The flag of the Salvation Army in the 75th year of its founding, now flies in 97 different countries and colonies throughout the world. On every continent, in every clime, with no distinction as to class, creed or color, the Army's activities affect the lives of millions.

The extraordinary opportunities for service accorded to the Salvation Army in the 1914-1918 war are unhappily being duplicated in the present hostilities. It is the pride of the Army that it is always ready for any emergency, and on many fronts the war work proceeds.

Finland — Salvation Army Officers are feeding in the interior of Finland some 75,000 refugees. Relief operations are being carried on in sixty different centres. Long before the bombers came, the Salvation Army was ready with plans for the evacuation of the non-combatant population from the danger zones. One Salvation Army officer has been killed by bombs and three others have been wounded.

Great Britain—More than 100 war work centres are now operating in air ports, camps, railroads and troop concentration centres, all directed by Salvation Army workers. A fleet of mobile canteens, sponsored by Queen Mary, is being utilized for the emergency service of food. At seaports, temporary shelter and assistance are being given to survivors of mined and torpedoed vessels.

At the front in France—Salvation Army men and lassies are again at the front with the troops of the British Expeditionary Forces. They are setting up twenty behind-the-line canteens for troops carrying out the fine traditions for courage and service which were established in the first World War. Three hundred officers, men and women, are appointed to this work.

China refugees—The largest war refugee camp in all China is being directed and operated by the Salvation Army in Shanghai. Food, hospitals, recreation, schools, religious services—all these have been provided for many months for 25,000 refugees from war-torn China.

New York Board of Higher Education To Deal With Russell Appointment

Church Organizations Opposed but Philosophers Back Up Appointment of Lord Russell to Chair in College of City of New York

New York, March 18 (CP)—New York's Board of Higher Education meets tonight to settle a major academic controversy which has focussed the eyes of United States churchmen and educationists on a member of Britain's peerage, the third Earl Russell, more commonly known as Bertrand Russell, philosopher, publicist and world-famous mathematician.

Less than a month ago the board approved unanimously Earl Russell's appointment as Professor of Philosophy at the college of the City of New York.

The appointment of so outstanding a figure in the world of thought to America's foremost civic college at first met with wide approval, and many praised the idea of having a philosopher-peer lecture to the boys from the east side and the west side.

Protest Raised by Bishop

But a protest was registered by Bishop William T. Manning of the Protestant Episcopal Church, who charged Earl Russell was an enemy of religion and morality and a defender of adultery and quoted from the philosopher's book "Marriage and Morals." The cry was taken up by other religious leaders, and was finally brought back to the Board of High Education by Chas. H. Tuttle, member of the Board and a prominent Episcopalian who asked that the body reconsider the appointment.

City Council Urges Appointment be Rescinded

Last week New York's city council passed a resolution also urging that the Russell appointment be rescinded.

Philosophers and educationists throughout the United States have protested this attack by the church against the savant and a manifesto sent to the board during the week-end by City College professors said that a reversal by the board of its appointment "would constitute a great blow to the prestige of our institutions and a gross disservice to intellectual freedom."

The manifesto, declaring that "appointment of a scholar does not imply a blanket endorsement of his personal view of life or of his social philosophy," said that "to insist that the views on all questions of candidates for appointment to a public college be four-square with those of religious, political or other organizations, would serve to give various pressure groups a veto on all appointments to our institutions and would clearly violate the traditions of our constitutional democracy in which church and state are separated."

Catholic and Episcopalian groups have argued on their side that the appointment would be "offensive to religion."

Acting President Nelson P. Mead of City College, has said that Professor Russell would teach mathematics and logic and would not discourse on sex and morals.

Britain Speeds-up Gibraltar Inspections

Washington, March 18—(AP)— Examination of United States ships by British authorities at Gibraltar has been speeded up in March, the State Department announced today.

Delays have shown a steady decline since November, when the average length of detention was 14 days. In January this was down to 4.2 days, in February to 2.8 days and in the first half of March to 2.7 days.

VOTE ON BARGAINING

Detroit, March 18 — (CP)—The National Labor Relations Board today set April 17 for elections at which an estimated 25,000 employees of 59 General Motors Corporation plants throughout the United States will vote on bargaining representation.

The election will be the largest in N.L.R.B. history.

In most plants the contest for designation as bargaining agent is between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and American Federation of Labor Unions known as the United Automobile Workers of America. Workers also may indicate a desire for neither union.

WAR BRIEFS

Birmingham, March 18—(CP) — Three men charged with possessing 20 sticks of gelignite, a high explosive, were remanded in custody here today. They were arrested in a raid last night.

If the explosives had been used they would have caused "tremendous havoc", according to public prosecutor P. M. Hugh. The men were William Joseph O'Hanlan, 26, Arthur Fitzgerald, 22 ,and Terence Perry, 18, all laborers of Birmingham.

London, March 18—(CP)—The Newcastle Steamship Tiberton, 5,225 tons, today was given up for lost with all hands since she is a month overdue,

The Aberdeen trawler Soar was wrecked today and six of the crew drowned.

Wellington, New Zealand, March 18 —(CP—Reuters)— Prime Minister Michael Savage's continued ill health, which has confined him to bed, precludes his participation in any public functions, his physicians announced today.

Brussels, Mar. 18 (CP-Havas).— Hope that Belgium's neutrality policy, recognized by all belligerents, will keep her out of the war was expressed today by Foreign Minister Paul Spaak.

Addressing a meeting of Socialist Workers' Organizations, he said: "Our point of view was recognized by our neighbors. First France and Great Britain, and later Germany, guaranteed the inviolability of our territory. This policy has spared us six months of war. I profoundly hope that the same will be true in the near future."

London, Mar. 18 (CP). — London heard today that an Anglo-Spanish trade agreement will be signed in Madrid tonight. The object of the agreement, it was said, is to restore trade between Britain and Spain to the status existing before the Spanish civil war.

Rotterdam, Mar. 18 (AP).—Two men convicted of using a secret wireless to transmit weather reports to Germany were given the maximum sentence of six years in prison today. The weather reports were intended for use by the German Air Force.

Sherbrooke, Que., Mar. 18 (CP). —Word of the death of Sergeant-Major Maurice Ptulin of the Royal 22nd Regiment at the Aldershot Military Camp in England was received during the week-end by his father, J. Aime Ptulin here. The cable said Ptulin died after a motorcycle accident.

Copenhagen, Mar. 18 (AP). — Four airmen from a German bomber which crashed early yesterday on the Island of Lollard, off the Danish coast, were apprehended today when they sought food at a farmhouse. They will be interned.

The Danish fishing boat Mari, en route from Denmark to the Netherlands, reported today it had been bombed and machine-gunned by an unidentified flier 155 miles west of Denmark but escaped without casualties.

An official announcement of his trip today said it was essentially for "rest" and that he was using the opportunity only incidentally to see the Italian leaders.

London, Mar. 18 (CP).—Reuter's News Agency reported from Berne, Switzerland, that Swiss anti-aircraft guns and warplanes went into action today when foreign planes twice flew over Swiss territory.

Oslo, Mar. 18 (CP-Havas).—Two unidentified planes were brought under fire by defence batteries when they were sighted flying at high altitude over Bergen today, the Norwegian admiralty announced. The planes disappeared, flying to the west.

London, Mar. 18 (CP).—Seven sticks of gelignite, a powerful explosive, were found today in a basket near Hyde Park corner. Experts examined the explosive, believed to have been placed by Irish Republican Army terrorists. Experts believed the explosives failed to go off because the fuse and detonator were damp.

PLAINFIELD W. I.

Plainfield Women's Institute meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Erle Denyes on Thursday afternoon. The meeting opened with community singing led by Mrs. Fred Hall. The Roll Call was "Do's and Don'ts for the baby." It was decided to get more plates and cups to be used in the new Orange Hall. Miss Isobelle Elliott played an instrumental and also played with Mrs. H. Harrison, her music teacher. A reading was given by Mrs. Ed Emerson and an instrumental by Miss Watson of Actinolite. Mrs. E. Outwater welcomed the speaker for the afternoon, Dr. Lily B. Matheson of Belleville, who gave a very helpful and interesting address on the "different diseases of the heart." A vote of thanks was tendered the speaker, who is always so willing to come and help the Institute.

Mrs. Kenneth Hall favoured with an instrumental number.

The meeting closed with "God Save the King." Lunch was served by the hostess and helpers and a social time was spent.

Editor of Ciano's Paper States No Peace Plan Proposed to Submit to Sumner Welles or Anyone Else

RAPPROCHEMENT TALK

Talk of Rapprochement Between Italy and Soviet Russia Before Any Three-Way Division of Balkan Spheres of Influence

Rome, March 19—(AP)—A declaration that Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini had worked out no peace plan to submit to Sumner Welles or anyone else was made today by Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano's Leghorn newspaper, Il Telegrafo.

Ansaldo, who usually speaks for Count Ciano, said the Hitler-Mussolini conference yesterday at the Brenner Pass was "not linked with any inter-continental mission, or any peace plans elaborated by the ministries of the "two Romes"—Fascist Italy and the Vatican.

"Furthermore, the meeting was brought about through Italy's desire to change her attitude which rests and will rest, as is well known, first of all, upon the scrupulous observance of undertakings of honor and then on care of Italian interests and ideals."

Why The Weather?

Science Service Meteorologist

Air and wind! Almost everyone remembers how as a child he recognizes the wind, for it "made the trees bow down their heads", while the still, odorless and invisible air had no place in one's childhood philosophy. This was and still is the attitude of adult primitive peoples. They do not recognize a gas unless they can see, smell, or feel it. In the air is life-giving oxygen, but air in motion (wind) is better for health and increases bodily activity. Still air, no matter how pure, may be unbearably hot and stifling, but if a wind comes up the same air becomes more bearable. Wind brings us also new air, it cools the skin, and in general distributes temperatures.

All Food Imports From Canada Affected By Licencing Order

London, Mar. 19 (CP).—Practically all food imports from Canada are affected by the new import licensing order requiring open general licences or special licences for imports, it was explained here today.

However, it was stressed that this should not be regarded as cutting down the trade. It merely gives the Ministry of Food iron-clad control of imports.

The order affects Canadian agricultural and vegetable products valued at $107,000,000 in 1938 and animals and animal products valued at $73,000,000.

Such products as apples and honey require only an open general licence but others, such as canned goods, formerly unrestricted, will need a special licence. Wines, spirits, fresh and cured fish, and live animals are exempted.

The open general licence gives broad power to import. For a special licence it is necessary for the importer to tell the Ministry of Food of his wish to import a certain commodity from Canada.

The Ministry can say whether it will allow the complete request or grant it only in part. The whole thing is tied up with the problems of exchange and conservation of shipping space.

In the case of such products as bacon and honey there have been special agreements with Canada.

British Liner May be Sent to Boston for Overhauling

New York, March 19 —(AP)—The 80,000-ton liner Queen Mary may be sent to Boston for drydocking and overhauling, a British spokesman hinted today.

Although Cunard Line officials refused to comment on future plans for the Queen Mary and the 35,000-ton Mauretania, which were believed being prepared for wartime duties—possibly to transport Australian troops—the spokesman said it "would not be unreasonable to assume" the Queen Mary would be sent to Boston, where the largest drydock in the United States is situated.

The waterfront near 50th Street buzzed with activity today as new crews swarmed over the British ships. A small army of workmen began loading the Mauretania with sand ballast, indicating that she was preparing to sail.

MANION CHARGES GOV'T LINKED WITH "BIG INTERESTS"

Liberals Emphasize Canada's Participation in War at Several Meetings

KING GIVES STATEMENT

Prime Minister Says He Has "Grounds to Believe" Speakers Insert Passages They Know Will be Deleted

(By The Canadian Press)

New emphasis by the Liberals on the question of Canada's participation in the war and charges by Conservative Leader Manion that the government is linked with "the Big Interests," are high lights of the Dominion election campaign with the vote just one week from today.

The welfare of Canada's [illegible] and apple industries also was discussed by speakers last night and several campaigners re-opened the conscription and soldier ballot issues.

At a Toronto rally, Dr. Manion declared that the choice before the electorate is government by the people and for the people or government "by the King Government for the Big Interests'.

QUARREL LEADS TO BLACK EYES

Fist Fights Occur in Lower House of Japanese Diet Over Asama Maru Case

Tokyo, Mar. 19 (AP).—Fist fights produced a crop of black eyes in the Lower House of the Japanese Diet today in a new quarrel over the Asama Maru case.

A member of the Social Mass Party questioned Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita about the incident in which a British warship removed 21 German passengers from the Japanese steamship Asama Maru Jan. 21.

Speaker Shoju Koyama ruled that the foreign minister need not reply. The questioner rushed to the rostrum and demanded an answer, but Koyama still refused. Social Mass members surrounded and began to manhandle the speaker, whose Minseito (political party) colleagues sprang to his defence, and the melee ensued.

Occupants of Bus Suffer From Carbon Monoxide Gas Fumes

Faulty Muffler Believed Cause of Accident When Bancroft - Peterborough Bus Becomes Stalled East of Apsley

FOUR AFFECTED

Bancroft, March 19 (Special) — Monoxide gas and highway hazards played the leading roles in a strange drama of the north country highways near this Hastings County village last night. Other actors in the drama, a driver and three passengers are recovering today from experiences that saw them escape from serious injury and possible tragedy.

The strange sequence of events started at 10 o'clock last night, when Arnold Farthing driver of the Peterborough-Bancroft bus, failed to negotiate a small ice-covered hill approximately fifteen miles east of Apsley, while enroute to Bancroft. The vehicle slid backwards down the gradient, careened into the ditch and came to rest in a deep bank of snow.

All efforts to extricate the bus failing, Lorne Webster, Peterborough, secured a horse from a farmer named Walter Kidd, residing a short distance from the scene of the accident. The horse's efforts proving ineffective, Webster secured another horse from a man named Evans.

Moans Heard

Meanwhile the passengers and driver taking advantage of the comfort of the interior of the bus stayed there while the work of extrication of the bus was proceeding. A few minutes later, Kidd, who was working near the door of the bus heard faint moans coming from inside the bus. Opening the door, he discovered the driver and passengers in a state of semi-consciousness, and a strong odor of monoxide gas evident. A faulty muffler, it is believed, caused the gas fumes to penetrate the vehicle after passengers had turned on the heater to ensure comfort during their wait.

The victims were taken from the bus and revived. Kidd telephoned Apsley for medical aid. None being available, Miss E. Ferguson, nurse at the Red Cross Hospital at Apsley was rushed to the scene of the accident by one Dan Whitmore. When they arrived, the bus had been hauled from the ditch and was proceeding to Bancroft, where they arrived at five a.m. today after seven hours of strange experience on the highway.

Mr. Webster and Miss Loretta Fitzgerald were put to bed in Bancroft while the driver and the remaining passengers were taken to the former's home where at present they are under medical care. All four will recover.

SAFE AFTER MINE DISASTER

A dazed, blanket-draped miner is shown being led from the mouth of the Willow Grove Mine, St. Clairsville, Ohio, where disaster struck, burying nearly 200 miners. Two rescuers were killed while attempting to reach the entombed miners and officials of the company stated that they estimated 69 men were trapped with little hope of their safe recovery.

DR. MANION URGES CANADA TO REVISE MINING TAXATION

States Basis of Mine Taxation as Applied by King Gov't. Detriment to Gold Production

FAIR DEAL FOR ALL

Toronto, March 19—(CP)—Revision of mining taxation "to permit expansion of all properties without hardship," was urged by Conservative Leader Manion in an address before 15,911 persons here last night.

Depicting gold mining as one of the most important industries in Canada, Dr. Manion said he had been informed "that the basis of taxation on mines, as applied under the King Government Excess Profits Tax Act, has halted the increase in production of gold."

"New mines, particularly suffer under the Excess Profits Tax Act. An Excess Profits Tax Act was tried out in South Africa but was abandoned due to a decline in the number of mining operations.

"It is claimed that the development of new mines is not keeping pace with the depletion of old mines, and that prospectors are very severely handicapped in their efforts and very much discouraged in their work due to taxes and restrictions of one kind and another."

But it was the junior mine, just starting to gather financial strength which seemed to suffer most under the Excess Profits Tax Act. In one breath the government said "produce more gold" and in the next dared the mines to do it "in the face of heavy tax penalties to be imposed."

$30,000 FIRE LOSS NEAR LINDSAY

International Cooperage Company Plant Near Eagle Lake Destroyed

Lindsay, Ont., March 19—(CP)—Loss was estimated today at more than $30,000 in the fire which destroyed the plant of the International Cooperage Company near Eagle Lake north of Haliburton. The blaze was discovered in darkness last night by the watchmen and by the time help arrived it was beyond control.

The plant was the chief source of employment for many residents of Haliburton County. It had been operating for little more than ten years and was destroyed by fire and rebuilt four years ago. Cause of the latest blaze has not been determined.

SMALL HANGAR AND PLANE DAMAGED NEAR SOO

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., March 19 —(CP)—A small hangar and an airplane of the Ontario Provincial Air Service at a winter landing field two miles east of here were destroyed by fire yesterday. Fumes from a liquid with which mechanic George Doan was treating the fabric on the plane are believed to have reached a small stove in the hangar, catching fire. Doan had his hair and cap singed by the flames.

TRY TO GET NICKEL MINES

Stockholm, Sweden, March 19—(CP-Reuters)—The Moscow correspondent of the newspaper Aftonbladet today reported that during her forthcoming trade negotiations with Finland, Russia will seek to acquire control of nickel mines and other ore deposits in the Petsamo region in northern Finland.

Up to the outbreak of hostilities between Finland and Russia Nov. 30, the Petsamo nickel deposits were being developed by the International Nickel Company of Canada.

Admiralty Announces Nine British, Neutral Ships Lost in Week Ending on Sunday Night

DENY NAZI CLAIMS

Weekly Average for 28 Weeks of War is 12 Ships Totalling 42,000 Tons

London, March 19—(CP)— The Admiralty announced today that nine British and neutral ships were lost by enemy action in the week ended Sunday at midnight. Tonnage totalled 23,992.

Most of the casualties were listed as due to "illegal" mines, with only four ships sunk by German submarines since Feb 24. The opinion was expressed that submarines which have escaped destruction have been recalled temporarily.

The week's losses were described as three British ships, totalling 5,[illegible] tons; two French, 3,172 tons; [illegible] in convoy.

One source said the Admiralty's weekly list of Allied and neutral merchant shipping losses "is the British answer to fantastic and

PREMIER TELEKI WILL CONSULT WITH MUSSOLINI

Hungary is Reported to be Seeking Clarification on Germany's Intentions in Southeastern Europe on Carpatho-Ukraine Frontier

(By Maurice Negre, Havas Staff Writer)

Budapest, March 19 — (CP-Havas)—Premier Paul Teleki left today for Italy to seek from Premier Mussolini, it was understood, assurances against possible invasion of Hungary by Germany or Russia.

Hungary, her foreign policy linked more closely to Italy's than to that of any other power, was reported planning to seek clarification from Mussolini on the following points:

1. Germany's intentions in southeastern Europe, with particular emphasis on the fact that if the Reich decided to invade Rumania her best route of March would be across the Hungarian plains.

2. Russia's concentration of armed forces on the frontier of the Carpatho-Ukraine, which Hungary acquired from Czecho - Slovakia, and Italy's plans in the event Soviet imperialism should burst across the border in that sector.

3. Italy's own Balkan projects in the light of Mussolini's talk at Brennero yesterday with Adolf Hitler.

4. Hungary's undiminished irredentist aspirations for repossession of Transylvania, ceded to Rumania following collapse of the old Austro-Hungarian empire after the First Great War.

Norway, Sweden In Grave Danger Says Chamberlain

Allies Are Ready and Watchful for Any Outcome From Hitler-Mussolini Meeting at Brenner Pass — Chamberlain Says Allies Were Ready to Send 100,000 Men to Finland Before End of Tpril —Tells of Appeals to Norway and Sweden to Allow Passage of Aid for Finland — Sweden Was Guaranteed Protection Against Germany

SCAPA FLOW RAID FAILS

Chamberlain, in Answer to Call for 'Drive' in War, Says Allies Cannot be Hustled Into Adventures Which Appear to Possess Little Chance of Success and Chances of Danger and Perhaps Disaster—[illegible] trals Excep[illegible] Neution to Defend Selves and Join With Others Who Are Willing to Aid in Their Defence'

London, March 19.—(CP)— Vowing to fight on for a "moral peace", Prime Minister Chamberlain today proclaimed the Allies' readiness for anything the Axis powers are preparing, defended his government's course in the Finnish war and warned Norway and Sweden they are in grave danger.

A packed House of Commons heard the Prime Minister make these statements in a sweeping resume of policy. He termed the German air raid on Scapa Flow Saturday a failure and declared "the time and place for us to strike" must be decided by experts.

Mr. Chamberlain compared Britain's aims with the "moral peace" outlined Saturday by President Roosevelt.

"We intend to fight until it has been secured,' he said.

Very Long Reviews of War

His speech, one of the longest war reviews he has made, contained these salient points:—

1—The Allies are ready and watchful for anything which might evolve from the Hitler-Mussolini meeting at Brenner Pass.

2.—Sumner Welles, gathering information for President Roosevelt, had a chance to see the Allies' "unity of purpose".

3.—The Finnish-Russian peace terms brought danger to the very doorstep of Sweden and Norway.

4.—Before the Northern war ended the Allies were preparing 100,000 men to help the Finns as well as their Scandinavian neighbors who were threatened with German attack if they allowed passage of foreign troops.

5—Only one warship was damaged in the Scapa Flow raid Saturday; all battleships and battle cruisers came through unscathed.

Attack on Government Policy

The Government's policy was attacked, after Mr. Chamberlain spoke, by the two opposition leaders, Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal, and Clement Attlee, Labor, and by Leslie Hore-Belisha, who was dropped as War Secretary in a Cabinet shake-up on January 5. All three scored the government for allowing Germany to keep the initiative in the war.

Mr. Hore-Belisha, chief critic of the Government's policy in last week's brief common debate, declared today that events have shown it was "unfortunate that the Allies allowed their intended initiative to be wrested from them."

Asserting that the blockade was the "sole offensive weapon they have employed to bring about the defeat of Germany", Mr. Hore-Belisha asked "Is it enough or must we intensify our pressure in other directions?"

He declared that those who visited the Finnish front were uniformly of the opinion that "a powerful reinforcement in the air could have broken the Russian onslaught".

"Britain and France hesitated, the enemy acted and Finland was lost", Mr. Hore-Belisha said.

London, Mar. 19 (AP). — Prime Minister Chamberlain today declared that Britain is ready to meet anything that may arise from yesterday's meeting of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini at the Brenner Pass from [illegible] ered this war," [illegible] to be diverted said.

Then in an ironic tone he added: "For all I know these gentlemen may have spent their time discussing the conditions under which an Italian ship was destroyed yesterday by a German mine."

Addresses Packed House.

Addressing a packed House of Commons with a statement on the conduct of the war, Mr. Chamberlain called the German air raid on Scapa Flow Saturday a failure.

He said that 121 high explosive bombs and 500 incendiary bombs were dropped on land in the Orkney Islands over an area of 100 square miles.

Only one British warship was damaged, Mr. Chamberlain said, and this damage was minor. No capital ships suffered any damage whatsoever, he said.

Whatever the outcome of the Hitler-Mussolini meeting, Mr. Chamberlain said, Britain is ready to meet it.

He said the government had been happy to welcome Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's emissary, and to inform him frankly of its views.

Prepared To Send Aid.

Asserting the Allies had been prepared to send at least 100,000 men to Finland's aid before the end of April and also to aid Sweden against any German intervention, the Prime Minister described the Allies' readiness to enter the northern conflict.

The prime minister declared Britain took up arms to obtain a moral peace as defined Saturday by President Roosevelt and added that "we intend to fight until it has been secured."

He said Sumner Welles, the President's emissary, had been able "to see for himself the unity of purpose with which we all are inspired."

Sees Lesson In Finland.

Mr. Attlee declared: "I want to see a war cabinet that lays down war principles, that makes decisions."

"A policy of sitting quiet would be suicidal," he said. "No one wants the area of this conquest enlarged, but we cannot see German influence extended, converting a friendly neutrality into enforced cooperation. We have to show skill and initiative to prevent the slipping away of our friends."

Peace Headlines Appear to be Empty Says Presidential Secretary Early

Washington, March 19—(AP)—Stephen Early, a Presidential secretary, said today that on the basis of authoritative reports received by the United States Government, "peace headlines would appear to be very empty."

Early asserted that no information had been transmitted to the United States Government to support published stories that 11 points had been suggested as a basis for peace at yesterday's conference between Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

Asked whether he could say anything about reports from Rome, Early replied:—

"Nothing more than that I think you can say, on the basis of all authorized reports received by this government, which have been made available to the President and have been carefully read and analyzed by him, there seems to be no basis in fact for reports published in London, Paris, Rome, Berlin, or other capitals that give an authoritative basis for peace: that the publication of those reports should not change the opinions of newspaper readers of this country and others by giving them hope for peace or cause for despair of peace."

"In other words," Early continued, "on the basis of authoritative reports this government has received from representatives through the world, particularly in Europe, peace headlines would appear to be very empty."

MUSICAL REVIEW PROVIDED BY F. STONE ENJOYED BY AUDIENCE

Featuring Freddie Stone, Belleville's violinist and imitator deluxe, as well as Sr. finalist in Ken Soble's Amateur Contest, the personal stage appearance of a Belleville boy who has contributed greatly to the airwaves, went over in a big way at the McCarthy theatre last evening. A crowded house greeted Mr. Stone and his band-box musical revue which is comprised of many of the city's entertainers and the hearty applause given the performers showed the sincere appreciation of the audience as numerous melodies and realistic imitations were given. Also included on the program were varied numbers by Mildred Day, tap dancer, Ellen MacFarland, Betty McCann, the Sligh brothers, Clarence and Billy with their guitar duet and Johnny (Nimble Fingers) Lloyd as banjoist.

BRUCE LATTIMER WINNER OF SHOES IN SELLING CONTEST

Finishing in the top bracket of a razor-blade selling contest sponsored by the Tamblyn Drug Company, Bruce Lattimer, Front Street druggist, was notified today that he is the winner of a handsome pair of Dack shoes.

A large number of drug stores throughout the province competed in the contest which finished last week.

CITY STREETS HARD TO NEGOTIATE

City motorists experienced considerable difficulty in negotiating Belleville streets last night during a slight downpour of rain, which frozen on the streets as rapidly as it fell. Pedestrians, as well as motorists, found progress treacherous and hazardous al[illegible] walks and streets. Motor cars were seen to skid into the curbs, especially while trying to negotiate intersection turns, but fortunately police reported today that no serious motor accidents occurred and no personal injuries resulted in Belleville.

A collision that resulted in some $65.00 worth of property damage at the intersection of Market and Pinnacle Streets was reported, however. A truck driven by Wm LaPeer, Toronto, skidded while making a lefthand turn and collided with a northbound motor car driven by L. E. Mylks, Niagara Falls. The damage resulted to Mr. Mylks' vehicle.

P. OF W. SCHOOL IS SCENE OF RALLY OF CONSERVATIVES

Dr. J. Howard, Dr. Kinnear, Dr. Walters, Dr. Morgan and Reeve of Thurlow R. Robson Are Speakers

A quartette of speakers with the reeve of a municipality levelled their verbal guns at the King administration in the Prince of Wales School last night, laying down a barrage of sharp criticism that was interspersed with the expounding of the policies of the National Government and its leader, Dr. R. J. Manion.

Speaking for George H. Stokes, National Government candidate for Hastings South, Drs. J. Howard, J. W. Kinnear, Austin Walters, W. C. Morgan, and Reeve Roscoe Robson of Thurlow township, addressed a gathering that was plentifully sprinkled with the youth of the district. The candidate, who arrived near the end of the meeting, spoke briefly.

Denouncing the King policy of "misrepresentation" which takes two aspects, "unity, and the war effort as regards the armed forces," Dr. Howard told his audience that a glaring evidence of the unity that exists within the King ranks is seen in the fact that more Independent Liberals than ever before are in the electoral running.

"One-third of the Quebec constituencies," he charged, "have two or more Liberals running against the National Conservative candidate. That kind of unity is the kind you see at a hog-trough," he said.

Refutes Charges

Refuting the charges of the King administration that the R. B. Bennett government was responsible for the lack of suitable equipment for the overseas troops, Dr. Howard admitted that this regime had cut down militia estimates because of the severe depression, unemployment conditions and other stresses which the country was passing through at that time. "Actually, Mr. Bennett did very well for the national defence. The efficiency of Canada's militia was greatly increased," he said, "and he com-pleted [illegible]

He challenged the statement of the Hon. Norman Rogers, that Canada's war effort was going steadily on. "He has said that supplies and equipment were readily obtained," he said. "Where are they? The First Division was equipped with a lot of old rubbish left over from the last war. The new British battle-dress was in evidence six month before war was declared," he said. "We have some cotton affairs in the Argyll Light Infantry for the purpose of the men working around the tanks they never saw."

Defining Mr. Rogers statement that "we must wait until the war started before obtaining equipment," as absolute rot, the speaker asserted that all British equipment had been thoroughly tested four years previous to the war.

Two-thirds of Canada's non-permanent militia do not know where they stand. "They are completely at sea and haven't the foggiest notion when and how they will be used. The other third, that was used, as well as the troops of the overseas divisions was called to make political propaganda for the King Government."

Dr. J. W. Kinnear

The electorate should become informed on the issues of the day as well as the politicians, Dr. J. W. Kinnear stated. "If not, the latter will, get away with everything," he added quoting the Aberhart government of Alberta, and the Hepburn government of Ontario as "two glaring examples." He charged the latter with speaking sensationalism during the Oshawa strike, and reducing motor license fees purely to get back into power. "The Ontario premier was a friend and an enemy at the same time," he said, referring to the recent Ontario Government vote of censure, "who pulled a rabbit out of the political bag, while his ministers sneaked away and platformed for the King Government."

"If we as electors, want honest government, we must think for ourselves," he warned, "the only way we can understand the issues is to study them for ourselves and not believe what the politicians tell us."

He advocated the following of the National Government policies, "one that is keeping the traditions of the old Union Government which so many good Liberals joined."

Dr. Austin Walters

Scathing criticism of the King administration was levelled by Dr. Austin Walters, who charged that huge orders for planes had been diverted to the U.S.A. because of the Prime Minister's failure to accept the Imperial Air Training plan prior to the war. "These have now been held up," he said, "because we had a Prime Minister who is an arm-chair politician, a fence-sitter, who roams around like a hunter lost in the woods."

The National Government, he declared, represents a true concerted effort on the part of all for the successful prosecution of the war.

Reeve Roscoe Robson

Terming the King unity a "deliberate smoke screen and a camouflage to cover up his mistakes," Reeve Roscoe Robson told his listeners, that Mr. King never had a better chance for unity than he had with eight Liberal provinces, "but B. C., Ontario, Quebec and Alberta are all dissatisfied with his unity program," he declared.

Criticising conditions regarding soldiers' allowances, the speaker declared the Government had made a bargain which it has failed to keep. "It has failed miserably and if for nothing else, Mr. King and his government should stand condemned on this point alone. It has not been fair with the soldiers," he added.

Dr. W. C. Morgan

Scoring the King administration for alleged failure to co-operate with Britain with regard to air-training, Dr. W. C. Morgan stated that the Prime Minister denied Canada a big economic enterprise that has been lost forever. "It was turned down in such a way that the people did not know a thing about it. The information came out only through a slip," he said.

George H. Stokes

In a brief address toward the close of the meeting, the candidate stated he wished to correct a wrong impression that had appeared in the Toronto press. "I did not," he said, "as I was quoted as doing, secure the franchise for Indians living on the Mohawk Reserve. I did secure franchises for those Indians who reside off the reservation, through contacts with Ottawa."

The polling of the soldier vote, he found to be very confusing. "Regulations are being changed every twenty-four hours," he said, "and sometimes every twelve."

He paid tribute to the Young Conservatives of the riding, who had rallied to his side. "It shows that Dr. Manion has something very attractive to offer to the youth of Canada," he said.

Interspersing the addresses was entertainment furnished by Arthur Snare, accordionist; Jack Scott, elocutionist, and Mrs. McCluskie, elocutionist. Jack Ketcheson acted as chairman, while Wilmott Shortt, president Sidney Young Conservatives, gave a brief address.

Mayor is Asked to Proclaim D.S.T. From April 28 to Sept. 29

Shortest Session of Year Conducted by Members of Council

REPORTS RECEIVED

With one dissenting voice, the City Council at their regular meeting on Monday evening recommended that Mayor Glencoe Thompson proclaim Daylight Saving in effect in this city from Sunday, April 28th to midnight of September 29th. These dates are the same as to be observed by Toronto and other large cities in the Province and Dominion. Alderman William Harvey was against the motion, while Ald. A. M. Kennedy, who was in the chair in the committee of the whole did not vote. The members were agreed that Belleville should adopt Daylight Saving Time along with the larger cities so that there would be no interruption of business and that tourists would be accommodated as most of them travel on this time in the summer.

The meeting was one of the shortest of the year and the session was concluded shortly before nine o'clock with the council spending about three quarters of an hour in the council chamber. The [illegible] Account for the month of February was passed which showed a total of $6,567.86 a decrease of $1,288.85 over the same month of last year and it can be seen from the figures that relief is on the decrease especially in this city. The council agreed to an extension phone being placed downstairs in the number two fire hall, while the recommendation of Fire Chief Lynch to send some men to the Training School at Kingston in April was referred back to the Fire Committee for further action. The council will advertise for tenders to purchase the number one fire hall, that is not being used by the department at the present time, fifty feet with buildings to be sold.

Take Full Page Ad.

The city will take a full page ad in the Elevator, the B.C.I. and V. S. publication providing the book is printed in this city. Clinton H. McDonald, who purchased a lot from the city with the understanding a house was to be erected on the property within a year was given a year's extension. A recommendation that F. G. Chamberlain be appointed Secretary of the Old Age Pension Board and the Mothers' Allowance Board was referred back for further consideration. Due to Mrs. Alice Logie leaving the municipality and being a member of the Public Library Board, Edgar Bateman was appointed to fill her unexpired term, which runs till the end of the year.

Alderman R. B. Cooper will replace Alderman H. J. Clarke as a member from the council on the Hospital Board, the Special Property Committee was given permission to sell vacant property owned by the city at the price set by the council without getting ratification of the sale from the council. The V.O.N. was granted a tag day on May 25th and the I.O.D.E. was given the same privilege for one on May 18th. A report from the special committee on the C.N.R. Bridge on North Front Street was handed to council and after contents noted was ordered filed by the members. The report speaks for itself and is as follows:

Belleville, Ont., March 14, 1940.
His Worship Mayor Thompson and Aldermen of the City Council,
Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen,—

Re: C.N.R. Bridge on N. Front Street, No. 14 Highway

Your Special Committee, appointed to consider the matter of improving the traffic conditions at the overhead C.N.R. bridge on North Front Street, beg to report as follows:

On Tuesday, March 12th, Mr. H. M. Balfour, Assistant Engineer of the Department of Highways, met our committee in the engineer's office at 1.30 p.m. A plan of the bridge and the approaches leading thereto was examined and a general discussion took place on the existing conditions, etc.

We were informed by Mr. Balfour that the entire matter should be submitted to the Board of Transport Commission by the Canadian National Railway Company for consideration. The board would in all probability set a date for a hearing to be held in this city in order to obtain a complete report from all parties concerned.

The City of Belleville should first discuss the matter with the Canadian National Railway officials and make a request that this company have the present traffic conditions remedied at this location. A meeting is being arranged for the immediate future between this committee and the Canadian National Railway officials and a further report will be made to this council at a later date.

In conclusion, Mr. Balfour stated that the present conditions at this location were unsatisfactory and did not comply with Department of Highway regulations. He also stated that the Department of Highways of Ontario had no jurisdiction over such matters lying within the boundaries of a city, although he assured our committee that his department would submit a good report to the Board of Transport Commission when requested to do so.

H. J. ALLIN, Chairman of Light.
H. ROLLINS, Chairman of Public Works.
R. A. PRINGLE, (Ald.)
CHARLES A. MOTT, City Engineer.

Report on Gas Plant

The special committee appointed to confer with the Public Utilities Commission with respect to the Gas Plant also reported and their report is hereby given:

Belleville, March 18th, 1940.

Your Special Committee appointed on February 19th, for the purpose of interviewing the Public Utilities Commission in regard to the serious condition confronting the Gas Department and its resultant consequences to the citizens generally, begs to report as follows:

Your committee met with the Utilities Commission at 4.30 p.m. on Feb. 22nd, the members absent being His Worship the Mayor and Alderman Haig. Your committee was advised that the commission would require for the current year 1940 an amount totalling $13,000.00 in connection with the operation of the Belleville Gas Plant, of which $8,000.00 had been estimated for the purpose of relining retorts and the sum of $5,000.00 estimated for the increase in operating expenses over profits.

Your committee also heard evidence from the commission as to the general condition of the gas plant and was informed particularly as to the bad condition of the city gas mains. Your committee was also shown pieces of pipe taken from different parts of the city showing that the pieces observed were in bad condition. A gas operating statement was also submitted to your committee which showed a marked decrease in the operating surplus between the years 1938 and 1939.

The condition of the Belleville gas plant was discussed generally and the meeting then adjourned.

Subsequently the life of this committee having been extended at a meeting of council on the 4th of March, your committee in common with other members of council had the opportunity of hearing Mr. W. A. Caunt, representing Twin Cities Gas Company briefly outline to council a plan which in his opinion would have the effect if properly taken up by the City of Belleville of producing a good quality gas at a reasonable price, which in his opinion would put the use of gas on a proper footing in the City of Belleville.

Your committee therefore recommends:

1. That the Public Utilities Commission give audience to Mr. W. A. Caunt for the purpose of hearing his proposition with regard to the manufacture of gas in the City of of Belleville with a view, if at all possible, that the production of gas in Belleville be continued with a view to causing no embarrassment or further difficulties to users of gas in the City of Belleville.

2. Your committee further recommends that if the proposed plan of Mr. Caunt's be acceptable that proper co-operation be shown in the manufacture and selling of gas in the City of Belleville.

3. Your committee further recommends that the Public Utilities Commission as required pursuant to the Public Utilities Act furnish to the council a complete statement of the operation of the Belleville Gas Department during the last three years, such statement to show a proper breaking down of all items making up expenses charged against the Belleville Gas Plant including depreciation, salary, maintenance, etc., and also any income from all sources during the last three years, and a further statement covering the last three years showing that portion of income from the Belleville Gas Department which may have resulted by reason of the sale of gas equipment.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

E. O. BUTLER, Chairman.
J. E. LOGAN.
W. H. ROLLINS.

SEED FAIR GRAINS BRING GOOD PRICES

Registered oats sold at $1.10 to $1.20 the bushel at the auction sale which concluded the Quinte District Seed Fair on Saturday in Port Hope. Commercial oats were disposed of at from 70 to 90 cents the bushel, while top prices for barley were $1.40 and $1.50 the bushel.

The highest price paid for potatoes was $2.50 for the "Warba" variety. Clover and alfalfa brought good prices owners.

At the last regular meeting of the Knights of Columbus held March 11th, Grand Knight Geo. Lee in the chair, announced that another First Degree would be exemplified on Sunday, March 17th. After the general business was discussed the lecturer Frank Domenico introduced the speaker of the evening, Past State Deputy A. B. Collins who gave a very fine talk on the Knights of Columbus insurance and its benefits to the members advising all to take advantage of same, after which a letter was read from the Salvation Army Red Shield Campaign, the Grand Knight was instructed to send them a donation of 25 dollars to help in the good work they are doing in providing comfort for the soldiers at home and overseas, also a donation was sent to I.O.D.E. Finnish Relief Fund.

At the special meeting held on Sunday afternoon last another class of candidates received the first degree which was exemplified by Past State Deputy A. B. Collins assisted by District Deputy T. V. Scanlan. Harold Barrett and J. Murphy and Past Grand Knight Chas. Bawden acting as Warden. Another first degree will be held sometime in April and the Major Degrees in May.

Grand Knight appointed a committee for the banquet which will take place after the Major Degrees, Committee consisting of Ted Royal, Chairman, T. Morrell, F. Domenico, J. V. C. Truaisch, Frank Deacon, T. Hutchinson, after which meeting closed with prayer.

Motion Picture Director Joins Canadian Navy

Ottawa, March 19 —(CP)— John Farrow, Hollywood motion picture director husband of Maureen O'Sullivan, the screen actress, was sworn in Monday as a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Navy, it was disclosed by Rear Admiral Percy W. Nelles, chief of naval staff.

A British subject, he came to Ottawa six weeks ago for a physical examination which he passed easily. Lieut. Farrow is no novice at seamanship for he sailed his own ships for years and rounded Cape Horn on one occasion.

Following the war, he and his wife plan to live in British Columbia. His wife could not come to Ottawa with him but if Lieut. Farrow is stationed here for more than a few weeks, she will visit him.

U-BOAT CAMPAIGN NO PUZZLE TO KRUSCHEN

Despite loss of 50,000 packages

The recent loss of 50,000 Giant Packages of Kruschen Salts at sea has interfered only slightly with Canadian supplies. Other shipments have been landed and distributed thinly but evenly among drug stores across Canada.

Those who suffer from rheumatic pains, headaches, blotchy skin, indigestion and other troubles usually caused by constipation—and those who know and like to enjoy "that Kruschen feeling" are urged, under the circumstances, to get their Gaint Packages at once while they last. It is not known when they will again be made available to the Canadian public.

The Kruschen Giant Package is a bargain. It contains a regular bottle plus a free trial size bottle. You may use the trial size bottle first and if not satisfied return the regular bottle unopened and get your money back. But act quickly. Your druggist has a limited supply.

B. V. S. STUDENTS ADDRESS ROTARY

Bob Hunter, Perry Everett and Frank Morton Heard on Various Topics

Members of the Rotary Club heard, three fine addresses from members of the Belleville Vocational School, at their luncheon meeting yesterday in the Quinte Hotel. Bob Hunter spoke on the Co-operative Training Plan; Perry Everett on Youth and Educational Problems, and Frank Morton on the Student and the Vote. All the addresses revealed original thought and suggestions towards solving the problem of placing young people into a position, where they can go forward in life.

The Co-operative Training Plan said Bob Hunter, was really a happy marriage between the school system and the long lost system of apprenticeship. The plan already is functioning in certain of the southern United States with students going to school in the morning and spending the afternoons in commercial and industrial establishments gathering a first-hand knowledge of industrial and business processes. The speaker thought a change was needed in the present high school curriculum, with education directed in three channels: college preparation, general and trade.

Another suggestion from Mr. Hunter was that a liaison be established locally between high school students and the various businesses, with a survey to ascertain what positions would have to be filled in the future, and then selecting students to serve as part-time apprentices for the positions. He intimated that one Belleville factory already was pursuing this system. If education and business could be brought into co-operation the shortage of skilled labor would soon disappear.

Speaks on Youth

Speaking on Youth and Educational Problems, Perry Everett pointed to the growing importance of university education for technical work in industry. The main difficulty of those with mental capabilities just short of the scholarship group was that they lacked funds to carry them through a university course.

Today, he said, it was quite different than 40 or 50 years ago. Then processes of manufacture and trade were more simple and a good education was not so essential. With changing conditions the educational factor had become more important, but our school system had not kept pace with the times.

"There should be equal opportunity for all those with outstanding mental abilities to achieve a higher education," he declared. "I believe it should be a national responsibility to correct this uneven system."

The country provided money to look after criminals, simple-minded and those otherwise afflicted, he pointed out, but the vital factor of providing skilled men to develop the nation's industrial, mineral and commercial resources had been left aside. When a proposal of educational grants was placed before the Dominion government the reply was that if the provinces would contribute an equal share the grants would be made. Four provinces had agreed to the plan, but Ontario is not among them.

"The cost of one machine-gun," declared Mr. Everett would provide one year's tuition and expenses for a student at university."

Student and Vote

Frank Morton reviewed the ancient forms of government in Greece and Rome as the genesis of our present democratic institutions of government, in speaking on the subject of the Student and the Vote. He carried on through history down to the days of open voting in this country. It was a vulnerable system, he observed, capable of being upset by strong men. The present system of ballots was introduced in 1874.

There is no fault with the present system, said Mr. Morton, any fault resting with the people themselves and their attitude towards the political setup.

He believed there are high-minded people in our parliaments today, and urged that our government of tomorrow would depend on the knowledge and training of the young people of today. The youth of the country should not be left to form their political opinions from the haphazard information passed on by their parents and others, but should be given a thorough grounding in the science of government and international relationships.

The speakers were introduced by Jack Deacon, and Dr. James Semple commended the students for the care and originality they had put into their remarks, and thanked them on behalf of Rotary.

Howard Clarke, president, was in the chair.

A YOUNG LADY'S BACKACHE GONE! FEELS FINE AGAIN

"Mosby's Tonic is Splendid," says Miss Heggs—Suffered with Sharp Pains over Kidneys—Felt so Worn Out Could Hardly do her Housework — Now Relates How Mosby's Tonic Gave Splendid Relief.

"I never would have believed there WAS such a medicine!" That is what people are saying about MOSBY'S TONIC all over Belleville and throughout this entire section. This is the mixture of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Ingredients, now being introduced to the public daily in this city at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street, your Tamblyn Dealer in Belleville. Some of the best-known residents of Ontario and this whole section are coming forward daily with sincere statements, publicly endorsing this New, Scientific Compound.

MISS PHYLLIS HEGGS

Describes Relief from Violent Backaches

Among the many people who praise Mosby's Tonic, none is more enthusiastic than Miss Phyllis Heggs, of 239 Robert St., Hamilton, Ont. Miss Heggs is a member of the United Church. Read what she has to say about this Splendid Medicine. Her statement follows:

"I got such splendid relief from Mosby's Tonic that I gladly give my statement, endorsing this medicine and I hope what I say here will help many others." said Miss Heggs. "For a long time I suffered with violent backaches and felt so weak and exhausted all the time that I could hardly do the lightest kind of housework. It just seemed like I had no energy at all.

"I read so much about Mosby's Tonic and so many people had recommended it that finally I made up my mind to try it. Will say that I could see results from the VERY FIRST. So I kept on with it and now I feel like a DIFFERENT PERSON. It relieved those sharp pains in my back, and now I feel fine. I have more energy than I had in a long time and my housework is a pleasure. This medicine is ALL THEY CLAIM. I gladly give my statement endorsing it to others."

Acts on Bowels, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys

MOSBY'S TONIC accomplishes several things within the human body at the same time. That is because it contains 20 ingredients, including 15 Roots and Herbs. It cleanses the bowels and clears gas and bloat from stomach. It enlivens the liver, cleans old bile from system and relieves biliousness and sick headache. It invigorates the kidney action, thus stopping backache. Weak, worn out people soon feel like different men and women.

Interesting Play By Pupils of St. Michael's Academy

In St. Michael's Auditorium on Sunday evening the Intermediate School of the Academy presented "The Paverello", a drama depicting the life and spirit of St. Francis of Assisi. The auditorium was filled to capacity and the excellent performance by the youthful actors was thoroughly appreciated by the audience. Between acts, vocal numbers and choral presentations, examples of music taught in the Academy, and selections by members of St. Michael's Band, presented in perfect style and in keeping with the occasion added to the enjoyment of those present.

"The Paverello", a religious drama of great beauty and inspiration was interpreted with earnest feeling by the students who played in a most commendable style, roles which would tax the art of experienced actors. The play in ten scenes, portrayed the compelling sincerity and fervour of the gentle St. Francis and his inflence in the lives of his followers. Each character introduced in the development of the play was presented in a very convincing manner, the pupils taking the various parts showing unusual talent, and careful training by the Sister in charge. Especially noteworthy was the work of Bob Wilson as St. Francis and Bob Temple as the skeptic Don Marco, who played the leading roles in a very finished manner.

Stage settings were carefully arranged and the costumes, in the authentic styles of the period, were splendid. Special lighting effects were added to the beauty of the various scenes, while the final tableau, the death of St. Francis, made an unforgettable picture.

The play was introduced by Tom Mascaro who explained the action of the plot in an interesting speech. The stage management was in the capable hands of Mr. Maurice Callaghan who was assisted by Lawrence Bradshaw, Harold Graham, Albert Bunton, with Edward Buckley in charge of the lights. The ushers were John Punnell, Bob Shepherd, James Lorimer and George Wilson.

Incidental music, the effect of a Sisters' choir singing in the distance, was beautifully rendered. Between acts a musical program was given by students of the Academy and the splendid performance reflected credit on the careful training that is part of the curriculum. The numbers included: 'My God, Accept My Heart", (Montant) a trio by Helen Ryan, Angela Paolini and Fraser McAuley; solo—"The Prayer Perfect (Stenson) by Carol Kiser; a duet by Carol Kiser and Rose Soaft; and a solo by George Shepherd "Ca Per La Salva Bruna" (Bach) in the play.

The Elementary Choir gave a fine group with Margaret Kiser and Billy Graham as soloists. The voices of the children were very sweet and true. Those taking part were: Kathryn Barrett, Bobby Brennan, Leo Callaghan, Teresa Callaghan, Dorothy Ciceri, Vincent Campbell, Mary Domenico, Jack Ethier, Frances Feeney, Gerry Flurey, Catherine Fortin, Richard Gill, Lillian Graham, Sharon Lucy, Elizabeth McNally, Mona Pritchard, Louis Scanlan, and Douglas Soaft.

The senior choir, whose beautiful singing showed the results of advanced training, sang "Sanctus" from the Mass in honor of St. Joan of Arc; Gounod's "Ave Verum" and the "Magnificat" (Rossini). The group included Helen Ryan, Frances Cannon, Robert Flurey, Ina Amo, Angela Paolini, Robert Lucy, Fraser McAuley, Kathleen Callaghan, Marjorie Doucet, Agnes Graham, Betty Feeney, Betty Shapee, Catharine McMahon, Helen Soaft, Hazel Alexander, Rose Soaft, Jean Huffman, Carol Kiser, Lorna Kiser, and Rita Chapelle.

Assisting in the concert were members of St. Michael's Band and never was this group of young musicians heard to better advantage. Their numbers were played in perfect style and would rival that of an adult band. Specialty numbers included saxophone duets "The Rosary" (Nevin) and "Just for Today" (Seaver) by Agnes Marie O'Connor and Bobby Young. Nora Flurey played a mellophone solo with accompanying clarinet parts by Betty Flynn and Dolores Clapp.

The delightful evening's program was concluded with "God Save the King."

VOTERS' LISTS UP 500,000

Approximately 6,487,010 Eligible to Vote in Forthcoming Election

Ottawa, March 19. — (CP)— In the Dominion election a week from today probably 500,000 more persons will cast ballots than in 1935.

Preliminary returns of names on voters' lists, made public here by the chief electoral officer, Jules Castonguay, show a total of 6,487,010 voters and it is estimated that this will be increased by 50,000 in revisions. In 1935 the total was 5,918,207 persons and 4,452,675 voted.

With the increase in the voters' list, this election bids fair to establish a record number of voters for any Canadian election. In 1930, there were 3,992,481 ballots cast.

The active service vote overseas and in Canada could mean a change after the civilian vote is known only if the civilian vote shows a close result, it was indicated here. With about 90,000 members of the fighting forces entitled to vote, this would mean an average of a little under 400 for each of the 243 constituencies. Result of the active service vote will be known a week after civilian balloting on March 26.

In the 1917 Wartime election, 237,000 valid ballots were cast by men in the fighting forces and there were 14 turnovers from the civil vote with all seats going to the Union Government.

QUEEN MARY AND MAURETANIA MAY SAIL SHORTLY

770 Extra Officers and Men Arrive in New York and Go Directly to Boats

DECLINE COMMENT

New York, March 19.—(CP)—Two peacetime giants of the British Merchant Marine swarmed today with new crews.

The 81,000-ton Queen Mary and the 35,000-ton Mauretania were believed ready to slip out of harbor wartime duties—possibly to transport Australian troops overseas, according to New York newspaper opinion.

Arriving in New York with 770 extra officers and men yesterday, the Cunard-White Star liner, Antonia docked beside the Mauretania and soon 300 of the new men went aboard her. A short time later the balance of the new complement went by bus to the Queen Mary to join 110 already there as a skeleton crew.

The Queen Mary was given a new coat of Admiralty gray, and a dredge cleared away mud which had gathered about her hull since she was laid up at the start of the war.

BELLEVILLE

HON. NORMAN McLEOD ROGERS, Minister of National Defence for the Dominion of Canada, will tonight outline the extensive war programme adopted by the King Government since the Declaration of War. Anthony Eden praised the efficient Canadian Forces yesterday in a wire to Prime Minister King in which he stated that the "Canadian troops were healthy enthusiastic and in good spirits."

McLEAN HAIG

The "Win-the-War Policy" of Mackenzie King has confirmed and reinforced Canadian unity. Throughout the Dominion there is evidence of the common determination of all Canadians to share in the struggle and the sacrifice towards winning of the war.

With Mr. King being returned to Ottawa, on March 26th., I suggest to the electors of Hastings South that a Liberal would best look after your interests.

I solicit your support on March 26th. and again pledge myself to your service and to that of my fellow Canadians in the larger sphere of public affairs.

CANADA AND THE LADY TWEEDSMUIR

The Lady Tweedsmuir will always be remembered by the Canadian people. She has after nearly five years' residence in the Dominion come to know the people as her late husband, the Governor-General, knew them and understood them. Lady Tweedsmuir in that time made a double contribution to Canadian life, both as the wife of the representative of the King and in her own capacity.

"I shall always be proud to count myself as a part of Canada, wherever I am," she said on Sunday night as she said farewell by broadcast to the people. Canadians will feel similarly towards her, that they are proud that she has been a part of Canada and will continue to count herself a part of the Dominion. Canadians will not forget how she and her husband came into the closest relationship with their people and came to understand them as Canadians probably do not quite understand themselves. This has been of great importance to Canadians to know how they react in the estimation of those who come from the Old Land, particularly in such capacity as Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir came.

The association of the Lady Tweedsmuir with the Canadian Women's Institutes is one that will live long and will leave enduring results. She made particular reference to her "libraries" for groups of people in all isolated parts of Canada. How she holds the welfare of the Canadian countryside in her heart is apparent from her words linking British and Canadian Women's Institutes in the warmest friendship and closest association and her expression of hope that we shall continue to work as ardently in the future for the welfare of the countryside as we have done in the past.

When the Lady Tweedsmuir leaves for her home in Britain, the ties will remain which have been binding Canada to a family which it has appreciated and loved. Canadians will always follow the lives of the Lady Tweedsmuir and her family, not only for themselves but because of the late Lord Tweedsmuir whose death occurred while he was in office.

HITLER AND NAZI 'PEACE'

Hitler is reported interested in a peace drive at a time when the world is alive with rumor and with activity of diplomats in various parts of Europe.

But a peace which it is clear Hitler would give would be a peace that no free nation would accept.

The lasting peace that British and French would agree to would mean the removal of Nazi and Hitler influence in German or world politics, and it would mean the restoration of the Austrian, Czech and Polish nationalities and nations. The peace the Allies seek is a peace of justice and one that will lead to the creation of a new order in international affairs.

The Allies demand a lasting peace, protected by every necessary guarantee to assure the world that it will not be broken.

No mere Nazi peace would be acceptable for the Nazi policies and methods have destroyed faith in their pledged word.

In Allied countries the opinion is held that any peace not founded on the principles enunciated so often by British and French leaders would be a peace of short duration, which would but allow a breathing time for the Nazis to consolidate their gains made at the expense of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria and that when the time was opportune it might be expected that the peace would be broken. Therefore the determination is that the war must go on to a victory for Allied arms.

Nazi Germany must be taught a lesson, the lesson she has not learned or which Hitler would not allow her to learn, that the way of the aggressor nation is a tragic one.

In the very nature of things Britain and France are fighting for the sake of the world as well as themselves,, while Germany is battling for what will ruin her and would ruin and crush the rest of the world if it is not opposed and overthrown.

On Saturday President Roosevelt of the United States in a worldwide broadcast for the Christian Foreign Service Convocation, said that "today we seek a moral basis for peace. It cannot be a real peace if it fails to recognize brotherhood. It cannot be a lasting peace if the fruit of it is oppression, or starvation, or human life dominated by armed camps.

"It cannot be a sound peace if small nations must live in fear of powerful neighbors. It cannot be a moral peace if freedom from invasion is sold for tribute. It cannot be an intelligent peace if it denies free passage to that knowledge of those ideals which permit men to find common ground. It cannot be a righteous peace if worship of God is denied."

Referring to the words of Mr. Roosevelt, one of the English newspapers said that the "great German peace racket was dramatically exposed by the one man in a position to expose it—President Roosevelt"

Another said it laid the basis of what a real peace should be. French Government sources approved of the words of Mr. Roosevelt, that no peace can be sound "if small nations must live in fear of their powerful neighbors." They said that this was a war aim of the Allies.

This gives a notion of the potency and widespread character and justice of the democratic spirit against which Germany has hurled herself by adoption of Nazism and the law of force.

SPRING AT HAND IN WINTER SETTING

While the weather turned and provided a snowy setting for St. Patrick's Day, it did not dull the ardour of the Irish in this part of the world. They went forward with their celebrations on Saturday and the air was rich with the sounds of Celtic melodies on Sunday.

Another event is at hand. Spring is "just around the corner," to use a phrase which was almost worn out during the depression. But spring is not like depression. Spring is a stirring feeling and spring is actually here on Wednesday, March 20th., not the 21st., the reason of course being that a day was added in February while the sun went marching right on, because the calendar is an adjusted affair while the sun follows its schedule.

Though spring is at hand, none is so extravagant as to believe that snow may not yet fall. March is associated with either a lion or a lamb in the adage and so storms are not looked upon with surprise.

Those who like to be critical of spring can say with the old Greek philosopher, Aristotle, 'one swallow does not make spring, not yet one fine day.' But others look forward to the days which Robert Burns tells of

Now nature hangs her mantle green
On every blooming tree,
And spreads her sheets o' daisies white
Out o'er the grassy lea.

Those days are some distance ahead. Here it is rather as Coleridge says, "spring comes slowly up this way."

Adelaide Ann Proctor speaks of spring in these words:

Hark! the hours are softly calling bidding spring arise.
To listen to the rain drops falling
From the cloudy skies.

To listen to Earth's weary voices,
Louder every day,
Bidding her no longer linger
On her charmed way;
But hasten to her task of beauty
Scarcely yet begun.

George MacDonald says:

The holy spirit of the Spring
Is working silently.

Whittier is eloquent:

'Tis springtime on the eastern hills!
Like torrents gush the summer rills;
Through winter's moss and dry dead leaves
The bladed grass revives and lives,
Pushes the mouldering waste away,
And glimpses to the April day.

Stevenson suggests a scene later in spring

It is the season now to go
About the country high and low,
Among the lilacs hand in hand
And two by two in fairyland.

For spring is fortunately a season, not a day. It is not a single event but a whole spirit of change in nature and of growth until the air is alive with song and the fields with greenness and the trees with leaves, months hence.

Meanwhile winter lingers and man waits spring.

LYNCH-STAUNTON, SENATOR, DIES

Noted Legal Counsel, 81, Called to Senate in 1917

Hamilton, Ont., March 19—(CP)—Senator George Lynch-Staunton, noted legal counsel, died here today. He was 81 years of age.

Mr. Lynch-Staunton had practised law in Hamilton for more than half a century. He was called to the Senate on Jan. 22, 1917.

He was born at Southampton, Ont., Sept. 2, 1858, son of Francis H. Lynch-Staunton, K. C., and Victoria (Corbett) Lynch-Staunton, and was educated at St. Mary's College, Montreal, and Upper Canada College, Toronto.

He was a noted figure on the lecture platform in earlier years. From 1911 to 1913 he was Chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Investigation Commission, and was counsel for the Province of Ontario in many important cases. He had appeared many times before committees of the House of Commons at Ottawa when Provincial rights were in question.

On How to Win the War By Drinking Sherry

Letter in London Spectator

Sir—Mr. Oldmeadow's letter in your last issue comes as a ray of light in a darkened world. He shows us in a few words how to finance the war. "When I buy a dozen bottles of sherry, I give the revenue £1 4s. out-and-out .... the sherry gives pleasure to my few black-out callers; I strengthen my country's export position; and I do a bit for anti-bolshevist Spain." So says his friend, the "plain citizen" whom he quotes with approval.

Could anything be simpler? We have only to drink more sherry, and, if there is a limit to our capacity in that direction, smoke a great deal more tobacco, and all Sir John Simon's difficulties will vanish. But a great deal can be done with sherry alone. There must be at least twelve million persons in England who, if they realized it was a patriotic duty to do so, would drink a bottle of sherry a day.

That would mean a million dozen, or £1,200,000 daily into the Exchequer. An equal amount could probably be raised by heavy, patriotic smoking. We could thus get yearly the equivalent of a loan of 860 millions without any liability to repayment. Meanwhile our export trade would be working to full capacity, for the sherry and tobacco must be paid for. Our wine and tobacco merchants would be making vast fortunes. Our dock-laborers would have increased employment in unloading the sherry and tobacco ships.

Think, too, of the useful work for our gallant Navy—who are probably finding time hang heavy on their hands—in escorting the addition shipping outward and inward. Think of the happiness of our black-out callers. Think of the joy in anti-bolshevist Spain. Yes, we should be fighting the bolshies, too! Why not drink more sherry?

Some foolish people are still preaching self-denial. Yours faithfully,

T. C. MACAULAY.

King's Mill, Painswick, Glos.

Finland Still Needs Help

The fighting in Finland is over and the spotlight shifts—perhaps to swing back soon, perhaps to light up some new scene of agony and heroism. But the duty to help does not rest less lightly on American shoulders. If some of us feared a week ago that a too generous gesture might bring us too close to the fringe of war, we can be easy now. There is no war in Finland. There are only cities and towns burned and shattered from the air, an experiment in destruction which is of interest to the German and Russian flight commands. There are only women and children and old people, some driven from their homes by the advance of the Russian "proletariat," some bombed out, some left in poverty because their men folk are wounded or dead. There is only a shattered, impoverished nation, whose offense in the eyes of the great bullies of Europe was that it struggled to remain free.

Help has gone from Finland from many quarters. Sweden, herself perhaps next in the line of march, threatened by Russia and Germany alike, has aided magnificiently. We have helped a little. Now comes the opportunity to show that our sympathy was more than words, that our neutrality was not selfishness. The Finns cannot eat words of praise, or clothe themselves in them, or shelter themselves under them. They need what money will buy. By responding generously to the appeals now being made for relief in Finland we can strengthen the confidence of a heroic people. Perhaps we can even strengthen our confidence in ourselves as a nation which does not believe in war but does believe in the brotherhood of man.—New York Times.

An Admiralty source said the weekly average for 28 weeks of the war was 12 ships totalling 42,000 tons.

Losses listed for the past week were: British—Melrose and Gardenia and the trawler Halifax; French—Capitaine Augustin and the 35-ton fishing boat Rose Effeuillee; The Netherlands—Amor, Eulota and Sint Annaland; and Yugoslavia—Slava.

(Loss of the Sint Annaland, 2,248 tons, and the Slava, 4,512 tons, had not been recorded previously, although the Sint Annaland was damaged by gunfire from German planes March 1.)

1873 Hotel Register Located in City

Reminiscent of the old horse and buggy days a Belleville hotel register of considerable vintage was unearthed in the attic at 191 Front Street, the site of the old Dominion House hotel recently and bore the date of 1873.

While making plumbing repairs upon the building, Leo Doyle, employed by the Murray Black Company, discovered the ancient hotel register, which contained the names of personages from near and far, all duly registered. In those early days it was necessary for guests of a hotel to register if they were merely remaining for dinner or lunch. The names familiar to the surrounding country side were found written in the 1873 hotel register of the Dominion House, operated by the Mackie family for many years. Many district farmers' names were found in the 1873 Dominion House register.

Today the register was given into the custody of Fred Robinson, former proprietor of the old Windsor Hotel, who is making a collection of such interesting books. Mr. Robinson possesses several old hotel registers used in Belleville many years ago.

Anonymous Letters

We have received an anonymous letter. It would perhaps be more accurate to say that we have received another anonymous letter, since courageous communications of this kind are familiar incidents in the life of every newspaper.—Quebec Chronicle Telegraph.

Valorous persons who send unsigned letters to newspapers in the vain expectation that they will be published usually have a grievance, seldom are concerned with such practical things as libel laws and the rules of common decency.

There is another sort of letter, with which every newspaper editor is familiar, technically not anonymous but actually coming within that classification. Often it is nicely typed on paper of good quality, signed with a name not always found in the city directory, and showing in the signature no sign of the literacy which went into preparation of the typed document. The trained editor can spot communications of this sort, and in this paper at least they seldom pass him. They suggest a "master mind" somewhere in the background pulling the strings, of a deliberate and organized propaganda for an economic or political or selfish objective, and they are not genuine letters in the sense of being the work of the person whose signature is attached. It is always the privilege of the propagandist to hire a hall or buy advertising space; it is not the duty of a newspaper to subject its readers to the effusions of the theorist with a brand-new scheme for saving the world.

Signed or unsigned, The Journal has not been publishing election letters, and the reasons will be obvious to most people. They are commonly sharp and bitter, often deal with personalities or with individual problems. If they discuss the general situation they cover the ground already reported many times from the election platforms. Furthermore, and perhaps most important, we have in Ottawa a very large part of the population barred by their employment from open discussion of political issues, and it seems unfair to permit a public controversy into which this decisive element is unable to enter.

We are quite sure, however, no reader of this newspaper feels uninformed on the current issues. Miles of types in the news pages have gone into his enlightenment.—Ottawa Journal.

War Without Battles

I used to see a great deal of old Prince Buelow in Rome during the last period of his life. In spite of the pressure of events upon my time—I was then Minister for Foreign Affairs—a conversation with the last great chancellor of William II was a treat I never passed up.

Buelow was writing his memoirs, which, under a superficial varnish of loyal phrases, are a vitriolic exposure of his august master, the present squire of Doorn. Buelow was more faithful to his fatherland and his fellow citizens than he was to his former emperor. What he never wrote about Germany and Germans he sometimes let me have an inkling of, during our walks at the Pincio.

One day he told me: "We have always used for war the most modern technical inventions; they enabled us to be in advance of our enemies in 1866, in 1870, in 1914... In our next war our propaganda Fachleute (experts) will seize Europe by surprise, thanks to a new plan of campaign. You silly, heedless Italians, English, French—you merely amuse yourselves with radio and movies. I shuddered the other day when I learned from a young officer vaguely related to me what the experts plan to do with these "playthings."

And then, suddenly, he changed the course of our conversation, as if he was afraid of having gone too far.

I have reproduced Buelow's words from a little diary in which—very rarely—I used to put down in the evening certain things that had struck me as being more interesting than the usual diplomatic pseudo secrets. The fact that I wrote this conversation verbatim means that the very tone of the old prince had surprised me.

I have unburied the little old diary and reproduced Buelow's words because serious neutral diplomats living now in Berlin have expressed opinions to me that reminded me at once of what the old man had hinted to me in Rome years before.

"In France and in England," these diplomats have said, "they feel that this war is 'strange' because it is without battles; but in Germany some of the most influential leaders think that this may turn out to be the most serious period of the war. At least it is what they think and hope at the Berlin 'psychological laboratory,' where a group of men whose names are unknown to the public have invented, developed and directed all the scandals, all the canards that have troubled and perplexed France and England from 1936 to 1939. The funds officially appropriated in 1936 for German propaganda and for secret political service amounted to some 270 billion rentenmarks. To-day that figure is probably doubled. It is more than corruption; it is a secret invasion that easy-going nations like the French and the English can neither thwart nor even discover."

But it is high time to admit that certain psychological results, which would have been folly to attempt two generations ago, are easily attained in present day Europe. Two generations ago, cultured, humanistic Europe was nearer to the Rome of Vergil and Horace than to the Europe where every house has a radio. In the Europe of books—I say books as an antithesis of radio—the choice men of every intellectual centre, the pick of every country, slowly made up their minds after digesting the information that reached them by mail each day. Even in the times of crisis they remained the leaders of opinion. No psychological landslide was conceivable.

But today the masses are even more subject to direct appeal than in 1914. Many go at least twice a week to the movies, and almost every family has its radio. And one must never forget that the great discovery of the dictatorial regimes is this: a lie is a lie only until it is repeated a hundred times; and when it is repeated thousands of times it becomes an indisputable truth.

So it happened with the legend that "fascism saved Italy from bolshevism." Bolshevism is so opposed to all traditions and ideas of even the poorest in Italy that everybody began by laughing; now, after millions of repititions, the gigantic lie has become a rallying cry.

In 1938 the same thing happened all over Europe in the case of the Sudeten Germans of Czechoslovakia. There were some in Europe who warned that the Sudetenland was an organic part of Bohemia and that Bohemia had never belonged to Germany. But day after day, for months, the radio went on deafening us with the "martyrdom" of the "Germans" of Czechoslovakia, until finally the most level-headed of us began to believe that they were Germans and martyrs.

What is most dangerous, depressing and alarming about this sort of propaganda is that it creates suspicion. It may make citizens of the same nation suspicious of each other; it may make members of the same political party suspicious of each other; it may even make friends suspicious of each other. Because nobody can know whether naivete or corruption is responsible for certain political attitudes taken by public men when they are confronted by the pressure of a dangerous, menacing neighbour.

For example, Lord Runciman was evidently a victim of a masterpiece of German propaganda when he went to the Sudetenland in 1938 and "discovered" only what German agents allowed him to discover. His report to London was worth a great military victory to Hitler. Then the reaction came, but it was too late; Czechoslovakia already had been destroyed. Nobody in England discussed the personal honesty of Runciman, which is beyond suspicion; but, in the British silent way, without scandals, the innocent Briton has practically disappeared from public life.

For another example, I know the cases of a number of good French writers—perfectly honest men—who have received astronomic royalties for the German rights of their books. How many of them are ready to acknowledge that these royalty contracts were made with the object of influencing the authors' opinions of Germany? If I dare to offer a very modest example, I might add that I have been approached more than once by agents offering me princely sums to write on distant historical problems, with the shbtly implied condition that I stop my campaign against the dictatorships.

The most dangerous part of the whole propaganga is that it is impossible to discover—and halt—its operation. The very element of secrecy that surrounds it is an essential element of its success, if only because of the suspicions it engenders in many European nations, where kings, statesmen, writers and journalists are discussed as possible victims of Nazi propaganda and Nazi menaces. One of the leaders of this secret German organization wrote, not long ago: "The campaign of propaganda demands many technical preparations and a very delicate organization; it demands also money and time; but final triumph depends on this branch of activity."

This explains, perhaps more than anything else, why the war in Europe has gone on for six months without a battle.—By Count Carlo Sforga, former Minister of Italy in the Hamilton Spectator.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The meeting of Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler at the Brenner Pass overshadows other diplomatic comings and goings as aerial and land war becomes more active. Results of the meetings of the two dictators, their first since the Munich conference which started Nazi Germany on its career of expansion to the east, probably will become known through events rather than words.

It was rather significant, however, that the first interpretation of the parley should come from Berlin and that it should be taken there as meaning closer economic, diplomatic and military collaboration between Germany and Italy with an eventual Italo-Russian understanding in the offing.

Berlin commentators are fond of talking about the Rome-Berlin Axis but in Rome less is heard of the Axis since the war. The Germans appear eager to find evidences of the solidarity of the Axis.

The decisions reached by the two dictators may be passed on in whole or in part to Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's personal emissary who is still in Rome. They probably will be communicated in greater detail to Count Paul Teleky, Premier of Hungary, who is due in Rome today.

While closer to Germany geographically, Hungary is closer to Italy in foreign policy. If new moves are contemplated in the war situation they are certain to concern Hungary and one of the purposes of Count Teleky's trip to Rome undoubtedly is to obtain directly from Mussolini an account of the decisions made at the Brenner Pass and what is expected of Hungary in the light of them.

WEDDINGS

ATHERTON—ELMY

Roslin, (Special)—St. Paul's Anglican Rectory, bright with Spring flowers and ferns was the scene of an interesting wedding on Saturday, March 16th., when Helen Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elmy of Napanee, became the bride of Herbert Foster Atherton of Roslin, formerly of Aberdeen, Scotland. The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. F. C. Beazer.

The bride was attired in a gown of Marine Blue, with Suez trim. Her hat was of Suez pink flowers with Marine Blue bow and streamers. She was attended by her two sisters, Miss Ina Elmy gowned in Queen's blue with navy hat, and Miss Ada Elmy, who wore an old rose costume.

Mr. Finley Elmy, brother of the bride acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony amid showers of rice and confetti and the good wishes of their Roslin friends, the bridal party proceeded to the home of the bride's parents in Napanee, where a reception was held, after which Mr. and Mrs. Atherton left on a trip to Ottawa. On their return they will reside in Odessa, where Mr. Atherton is engaged as a cheesemaker.

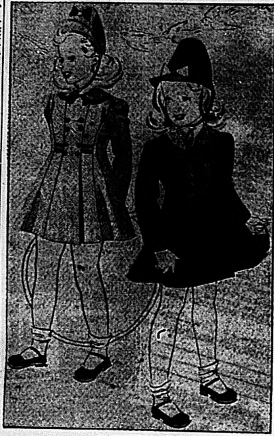
Easter Bonnets Match



By PRUNELLA WOOD

LITTLE GIRLS are fun to dress. First it's the crepe de Chine coat with its babyish smocking—and the English coach. Next comes the toddling age and the brief pastel wool coat. After she's three she's entitled to have tweed or repp with a bit of smart detail and a suggestion of a waistline. This spring's coats, whether expensive or not—and today's aren't—more often than not have their own matching hats. Some are shown, too, with tiny pocket-books in the coat and hat fabric.

A light biege tweed flecked with brown is used for the coat, left, edged around the collar and marked at the waist with brown velvet in back as well as in front. It fastens with bone buttons and has a full-length rayon lining. The bonnet is stitched around the brim and has a velvet bow. Right, navy wool repp makes another double-breasted coat with self-collar under the lingerie and slit pockets at the waist. This has pleats in the centre back, and is also lined.

Both styles from three to six and a half.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Taking Up the Cudgel For Marriage

Dear Miss Chatfield,—

I read with interest your glorification of the unmarried business-woman. You made out a strong case of her but those I have known are average of good, bad and indifferent, same as the rest of us. If in your inimitable style you will have the kindness to balance the account by enlarging upon the good case of the married woman, no doubt it will give comfort to many wives and mothers and it will encourage some young unmarried women who are looking for perfect mates and eschewing marriage because they are expecting to find more good qualities than most men have.

Singleness may be very well for youth and middle age but after this the blessings and privileges of the married woman are away and beyond those of her single sister. For this reason every young woman should in every case be on the look-out for a mate. I think her fear of matrimonial failure has been exaggerated in these latter days by seeing some of her friends mismated. Also she is sometimes over cautious becouse she dreads the care of a family and overlooks the blessedness of motherhood which far outweighs the cares.

An Elderly Admirer

Answer:

Friend, I love your letter. I have never before received one like it. It will take me three days to answer it. I've frequently been chided by single women for implying that a woman's life isn't worth living unless she has a husband, has had a husband, or entertains hope of having one in the future. I've been chided so often that I'm sensitive on the subject and when one of these chiding letters arrives I invariably whip myself into writing a column on the joys and privileges of single blessedness. There are many of them, as every woman knows. But sometimes they are hard to come by.

Occasionally I receive a letter from a single woman who doesn't trust me to make a good case for single blessedness but makes her own points and invariably print that letter in full, hoping it will be read by wistful spinsters, and that they will be cheered by a true tale from the pen of a spinster who isn't wistful because she has searched out and appropriated the compensations to be found outside matrimony.

Why, I wonder, should any woman who has had love, marriage, motherhood and a home be in need of comfort or encouragement. She knows from experience that the pleasure and pride in having children far outweighs the care of them. She should know from experience that the companionship of husband and children is more to be desired and far more satisfying than fame, fortune and freedom in a solo flight through this world.

It's unbelievable that the women who have had all the great experiences of life should need to be reminded that they have had them, that they have lived their days according to nature's plans and have been blessed among women.

—CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

S. S. CLASS BANQUET

On Thursday evening, March 14, the Willing Worker Sunday School Class at Plainfield United Church held their annual Mother and Daughter Banquet at the home of their teacher, Mrs. Harry McCreary.

At seven thirty, thirty guests sat down to candle-lit tables, decorated in pink and white, as their names were called by Miss Helen Carleton.

At the conclusion of the supper, which was well prepared, a beautiful two-storey birthday cake decorated in pink and white with five candles in honor of the fifth banquet was presented by Mrs. Jas. McCreary.

The Rev. Mr. McKenzie acted as toast-master and ably proposed the toast to the King, after which all joined heartily in response by singing "God Save the King."

Miss Helen Charleton proposed the toast to the teacher, Mrs. H. McCreary and it was responded to by the teacher.

"Back in the Old Sunday School" was then sung.

The toast to the Mothers and Guests was proposed by Miss Nellie Hodgen. Mrs. McZenzie responded. The girls sang "Mother."

Afterwards, the guests were invited to the spacious living rooms where music, singing and games were enjoyed by all.

An old-fashioned spelling match by the mothers against the daughters was exciting. The mothers winning the victory.

At the close of the evening every one joined in singing Auld Lang Syne and For She's a Jolly Good Fellow and Good Nite Ladies.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the hostess by Mrs. J. W. Hamilton and seconded by Mrs. McKenzie.

Presto Music Club Monthly Meeting

On Monday evening, March 18, Presto Music Club met at the home of Florence Davis, 318 Albert Street. The program which was miscellaneous in charcter, was arranged by Mr. Anglin and consisted of the following numbers—(1) vocal, Doris Houston, Clouds (Charles); (2) Piano, Charles Kilgour, Songs Without Words, Op 62, No. 1 (Mendelssohn); (3) Vocal, Ann Brown, Pierrot, (Rybner); (4), Piano, Wm. G. Connor, (a) Waltz in A (Levitzski); (b) The Tides of Manaunaun (Cowell); (c) The Harmonica Player (Guion).

Then followed an interesting contest arranged by Mr. Anglin in which the members were to recognize well known compositions and their composers from extracts played on the piano. A very tasty St. Patrick's Day lunch with Lazelle Brown pouring tea and coffee and a social hour brought the meeting to a close.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, March 20
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE MOST advanced ideals and ambitious objectives are under excellent promise of fulfillment and attainment, according to strong lunar influences. It is a time for reaching toward high goals with assurance and initiative, although there may be disturbances, disruption and lack of support from expected sources. Elders or some tricky circumstances in connection with old associations may prove the testing factor.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of eventual success in attaining some very ambitious purpose and high aim in spite of stubborn opposition, sudden upsets and the want of co-operation from desired individuals. Others use as powerful and more willing may step into the gap, if efficiency, important objectives and sincerity, together with personal popularity and prestige, prove convincing.

A child born on this day may have splendid talents and ingenuity with high aims as well a good disposition and warm temperament, which will aid it in attracting powerful support in putting over its ambitions.

At least one dressy felt should be put in the Spring hatbox. A smart model in pale beige fine felt has a pleated brim and tapering crown. Bird trimming and veil are brown.

Pine Grove Branch W. I.

A social evening was held in the Marsh Hill school Thursday, March 14th. Several W. I. branches were invited but due to the heavy snow that fell the same day our own Institute and their husbands and friends were all that were present.

The proceeds were $8.00. A social evening of crokinole, euchre, Chinese checkers was enjoyed by those present. Prizes were won as follows:

Highest score in euchre: ladies first, Mrs. W. Lough; gents first, Mr. H. Coulter. Lowest score, ladies, Miss D. Sharp gents, Mr. F. Campbell.

Crokinole: ladies, Mrs. N. Parks; gents, Mr. D. Hollinger.

Door prize: Miss D. Sharp.

Each of the above received a small prize.

A lunch of sandwiches, cake, tarts and coffee brought to a close a most enjoyable evening for those who so bravely weathered the storm.

PINE GROVE W. I.

The February meeting of the Pine Grove Branch of W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. J. H. Frederick, Thursday, February 29, 1940, with the president, Mrs F. Heasman, the presiding officer.

The meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode, two minutes' silence in tribute to the memory of the late Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir. Roll call showed 16 members and 2 visitors present. The treasurer's report was given. Community singing followed with Mrs. Vanderwater at the piano. Business consisted of suggestions for raising money. It was decided to hold a social evening in the school on Thursday, March 14th. Several Institutes to be invited. Work to be done through the Belleville Red Cross was distributed.

A duet was given by Mrs. Hamblin and Mrs. F. Campbell and readings by Mrs. Marisette and Mrs. M. Dafoe were enjoyed. Community singing followed. Plans for March meeting and the National Anthem closed the meeting. Lunch was served by the committee in charge.

PRESENTATION

Nearly one hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yorke recently to honor their son Kenneth and his bride (Muriel Shorey).

Mr. James Huffman called the gathering to order.

A short program of readings and instrumental music was enjoyed. Miss Ruth Livingstone read an address which was replied to very suitably by the bride and groom.

A bountiful lunch was served after which the company spent some time in games and social intercourse.

The address was signed on behalf of Gilead Community by Olive Clare, Raymond Laurenson and Roy Huffman.

Mix or Match 'em

By ALICE ALDEN

YOU MAY mix your reds and pinks or match them. We saw a red straw sailor with a large pink rose we liked the other day, the colors singing a duet. If today's picture were reproduced in color, the effect would be quite different—bag, jewelry, lipstick, and nail lacquer would all be a hot pink, a dashing accent for the soft grey wool jacket dress and grey beret. Don't imagine, though, that all shades containing red go together . . . .purplish lipstick and fireman's red polish definitely quarrel. Don't became bored, either, by color-matching. At times you'll want to match lipstick and polish to a scarf only, or perhaps to a boutonniere or bow in your hair. The point is, it's easy to achieve harmony in our costumes these days with cosmeticians and designers working hand in hand.

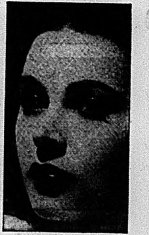
Garden Smartness

By ALICE ALDEN

FIGURING on doing a little patchwork this spring? It's more fun to coax roses and onions to grow if you're getting a suntan at the same time. This ballerina dress is one of the answers, and certainly it's more feminine than denim overalls and brother's old shirt. If a shower comes up in your garden, have no fears—the striped pique carries a promise not to shrink more than one per cent. That means, too, that this dress will look and fit practically new when you get your two-weeks-with-pay this summer. Nothing could be smarter for a game of beach tennis. Stripes are blue or red on a white background.

Massaging Message

by HELEN FOLLETT



HEDY LAMARR . . . facial massages keep complexion beautiful.

DURING the last decade there has been a change in the methods used for facial massage. Time was when a strong-armed amazon got hold of your only face and proceeded to pummel it. But not now. The treatment is given with a delicacy of touch that is brisk and stimulating. Training in beauty schools is thorough. The expert operator has an understanding of the construction of the face, its bony foundation, muscular layers, tissues, blood vessels, nerves and the strata of skins right out to the epidermis that carries your war paint.

Professional treatment are a delightful luxury, producing a state of relaxation that is worth the price you pay for them. The skin is given a thorough cleansing, nourishing creams are kneaded gently into the flesh, tonic lotions are used. The complexion will carry an appearance of freshness for days afterwards.

However, the beauty budget, ravished by necessary hair trims, shampoos, finger waves, permanents and manicures, may not permit this indulgence. In which event the beauty quester should buy herself a good massage cream, applying it after the nightly face washing, spreading it on with flattened fingers, always using an upward movement which should be followed by a brisk tapping and slapping session. Make hammers of your fingers and plump them down, one after the other, working with both hands at once.

When you put on your gladsome dry goods, you just have to tuck a pretty something in your hair. But do, please, for the sake of the cause of beauty, get it where it does the most good.

It is a mistake for the girl with the full face to pose a nosegay over her forehead. What she needs is a perky floral spray placed at the left side of her head. Anything flat on top adds to the width of the feminine portrait.

Naive and piquant is a lovely decoration placed back of the ear, a portion of the head that never deserves beauty medals. Bandeaux are becoming when the face is oval. Of course, all hair ornaments are suitable only for the grand and festive occasion.

Playboy's Secretary

by Louise Raybold

CHAPTER V

Toby Martin could not remember when he had not thought of Sara Sidney as his girl. It had begun long ago, when they were scarcely more than children. In the years following—through high school, through four years of working his way through college—he had not wavered in his devotion.

When he had graduated from college, he had ventured to make things binding between them—had stammered out a shy proposal, asking her if she would marry him as soon as he was earning enough to support her.

She had given him an evasive answer. "We're still so young, Toby. We can't either of us know yet — for sure—whom we want to marry."

"Maybe you don't — but I do!" he had retorted.

Despite this setback, he had continued to hope that, eventually, he could win her. He had landed a small-salaried job with an advertising company and, full of ambition, had plugged along with but one thought in mind—to get ahead as fast as he could so that he would have something to offer Sara.

However, since that first shy proposal three years ago, he had not mentioned the subject again—not even when he had received his first raise. He had made up his mind to wait until he was really sure he was on the way up in the world.

Now, today, as he sat smiling across at Sara at a little table in Pedro's, his eyes were alight with excitement — for he was ready at last to speak again.

"I can imagine," he was saying, "how your eyebrows must have lifted when I suggested Pedro's for lunch — I, the miserly, penny-pinching Toby Martin! Were you surprised, honey?"

Sara smiled. "A little bit. Have you inherited a fortune or something?"

Drawing a deep breath, Toby glanced about him before he answered. At other little tables sat other young men with fair companions, but not one he reflected proudly, had so lovely a companion as his Sara. His eyes returned to her.

"It's not a fortune, but you see before you a man who's been handed a raise of ten dollars a week. Ten whole bucks! What do you think of that?" he beamed.

Sara rose to the occasion. "How utterly grand, Toby dear! But I've always said you were good. Zenith Advertising was just bound to appreciate you."

"And with the raise goes much more responsibility," Toby went on. "Greenwald called me into his office the other day and had a long talk with me—told me just what opportunity there would be for further promotion if I make good in this new work he's giving me. It's a swell break! It means—" he paused and gulped.

"It means there'll be no stopping you now," Sara smiled. "Already I can see your name in black letters on a glass door—'Mr. Toby Martin, President.'"

Toby laughed. "Not so fast! But it does mean I can plan ahead with more confidence now. It —it means——"

Again, he paused. He fumbled in his pocket and drew forth a tiny, square jeweler's box.

"It means this, Sara," he said earnestly. "Forgive me for doing this in public but—but I couldn't wait...."

He snapped the box open, revealing a gleaming solitaire diamond ring. He set it down on the table between them, and gazed at Sara anxiously.

"You — you will say yes, now, won't you, darling? You will wear it, won't you?"

Then, quick anger swept through her. How dared Toby take so much for granted—how dared he put her in this position? He must have spent his weekly salary many times over to buy that ring—and now, she must hurt him dreadfully by refusing to accept it. It wasn't fair! Why hadn't he asked her first?

She quelled her anger, and tried to answer him as gently as she could.

"Toby dear, why— why did you do it? What have I ever said or done to make you believe——"

She stopped, her heart wrenched as she saw the happy light die out of his eyes, saw sharp pain take its place.

"You—you mean it's — no?" he faltered.

"How can it be anything else, Toby — when — when I'm not in love with you? What have I ever said to lead you to think I would marry you?"

"Nothing, I guess," he answered dully. "But it's always been you with me — you know that — and we've been friends such a long time, I — I just hoped you had come to feel the same about me as I do about you. Well.... forget it!"

He swept up the little box, snapped it shut, and replaced it in his pocket. For several minutes, there was an uncomfortable silence.

Then, Toby forced a smile. "Well that's that! But even if you won't marry me, how about helping me to celebrate the raise by coming on a picnic with me next Sunday?"

"I'm sorry, Toby — I can't, I think I'm going away for the week-end — out to the Carrington place on Long Island."

"Oh!" His eyes suddenly narrowed, and his face flushed angrily. "So that's the answer! You're stepping out now with the upper crust! No wonder you won't look at a mere nobody like Toby Martin!"

"Toby! Stop talking like that!" "I won't! It's true!" He leaned forward, and went on bitterly. "It's only been since Mr. Upper-Crust Curtis Carrington has been dazzling you with his attention that you've changed. Well, let me tell you this! When he gets through giving you the run-around, and you come crawling back to me, don't be too sure I'll be waiting! I can find some one else, too! There's Sonia Lester, for instance. She thinks I'm quite a guy—even if you don't!"

Sara knew that Sonia was a beauteous copy-writer in his office—had heard him speak of her before. But his bitter words did not make her angry. She knew how he was feeling—and only felt sorry for him. It would be a good thing, she thought, if he did turn his attention to some other girl.

"I think we'd better go, Toby," she said quietly.

In silence, he paid the check. In silence, they walked out to the street. They stood there a moment in the warm mid-day sunshine. Then, Toby lifted his hat, and turned away.

CHAPTER VI

It is possible that the memory of Toby's misery would have stayed longer with Sara, had it not been for something which happened shortly after her return to the office and served to turn her thoughts elsewhere.

She was standing beside a filing cabinet, checking an address, when she became aware of some one at her side, and looked up to find Curt.

"Miss Sidney," he said, making a point of being as businesslike as possible before the other girls in the office, " hate to ask this of you, but could you stay overtime this evening? The Remo Dam blueprints need some checking, and I won't have time to get to them this afternoon. If you could stay, we can work on them after hours. The deadline for submitting bids for that contract is only a couple of weeks off, and I want to get everything in shape as soon as possible."

"Of course, Mr. Carrington, I'll be very glad to stay," said Sara.

Her heart was pounding. It would be a joy, not a hardship, to work after hours with Curt. In her anticipation of it, her troubled thoughts in regard to Toby were forgotten.

That evening, as she and Curt worked side by side at the broad, shiny desk in his private office, she let half of her mind indulge in daring little daydreams.

"Suppose," her imagination ran on blithely, "these blueprints were plans for a lovely colonial home in Westchester...." No, she mustn't have such fancies. And yet — men did sometimes marry their secretaries. Princes did run off with Cinderellas....

"Just a minute, Sara," Curt's voice cut in. "That last figure, I'm afraid, isn't quite right."

"Oh! I'm sorry."

Snatched abruptly back from her castle-building, Sara flushed guiltily. She saw Curt looking at her with amused gray eyes, and this only increased her confusion.

He shoved the blueprints aside. "I'm having supper sent up from the restaurant. Let's knock off until we have eaten. Meanwhile, let's just talk."

He leaned back in his chair, folded his arms and regarded her quizzically.

"Tell me about yourself, Sara Sidney. Do you realize I don't really know very much about you?"

She smiled, bringing into play the provocative little dimple in a corner of her cheek.

"There is very little to know," she replied, also leaning back, her slim hands demurely folded in her lap. "You've met my mother. Then there's my sister Vicky. She's happily married to a nice fellow named Bill. He's a city clerk, and they have two adorable children, Bill, Jr., and Wendy. That's all the family there is."

"But I want to know about you, not your family," Curt persisted. "For instance, are—are there any young men trying to persuade you that two can live more cheaply than one?"

Sara's face sobered, and she felt a little pang at the memory of Toby's stricken look when she had refused his ring that noon.

"Well .... there's one," she answered. "A boy named Toby Martin whom I've known practically all my life. But —well, I just never have thought of him in a romantic sort of way."

"I take it he feels differently about it," Curt said searchingly. "Am I right?"

"Yes," Sara sighed. "I'm afraid he does."

Their conversation was interrupted by the arrival of the supper trays. Sara was surprised by the sumptuousness of the repast when she saw it spread out on a table that Curt pulled out from the wall.

As they ate — just the two of them sitting cosily opposite each other in his office—a feeling of great peace and happiness filled her. Outside, a lavender twilight was softly veiling the city. Here and there, yellow oblongs of light in other office buildings told of other delayed workers like themselves.

"By the way,' said Curt, "I spoke to my Mother about next week-end, and she's writing you a note. I daresay it's on the way right now."

"It's sweet of her to invite me,' Sara said shyly.

"Oh, Mother adores company."

Curt began describing Yellow Gables and its surroundings — a summer home his father had built on the ocean side of Long Island."

"The surf is grand—especially in a storm. It can be— well, simply tremendous. Whenever I can, when there's a storm, I tramp for miles over the dunes, reveling in it."

"My sister and her husband have a shack on the Sound," said Sara. "Mother and I get down there frequently. In fact, we had spoken of going this evening."

"And I am keeping you here!"

"Oh, I'd much rather —" Sara began, then stopped short. She blushed. "I mean I—"

"You mean you're a very loyal employee of Carrington and Broderick," Curt came to her rescue. He paused, then added gravely, "And we can't have too many at this particular time."

Sara saw his gray eyes cloud and thought of the rumors about the firm that had been going about the office lately.

"It's pretty important for us to get this Remo Dam contract, isn't it?" she asked seriously.

"Yes — very important," Curt hesitated, then went on. "I'll tell you this confidentially, because I know I can trust you not to discuss it with the other girls in the office. If we don't land that contract—well, we may be in a bad spot."

He was silent a moment, then smiled and shrugged.

"But no more shop talk now!"

During the rest of their meal, there was talk only of new books, plays and movies. For a while, even after the trays had been removed, they still sat talking. Finally, however, there was no excuse for not returning to the blueprints.

But as Sara, too, stood up and moved toward the desk, he reached out quickly and caught her hand stopping her.

"Sara...."

Then, suddenly, he swept her into his arms, pressed his lips against hers. Sara, taken completely by surprise, was for a moment inert in his embrace.

Neither of them heard footsteps approaching —nor saw the girl who stopped abruptly in the doorway.

"Well! So this is what goes on after office hours!"

CHAPTER VII

There was a hard glint in Juliette's eyes, but she assumed an amused smile and strolled into the room with perfect poise.

She gave a little laugh. "I've heard of office flirtations, but this is the first time I've actually interrupted one!"

Curt, his face red, said brusquely, "Hello, Juliette. What on earth brought you down here?"

He was angered by her sudden, unheralded appearance—and also puzzled. She was not in the habit of coming to his office at any time —had, in fact, been there only twice before. Hence, her visit at this odd hour was surprising to say the least.

"I came to see you—naturally," she replied calmly. "When I phoned your apartment, they told me you were still at the office, so I hopped in the car and buzzed down. There was no one in the reception room, so I just walked in—inopportunely, it seems."

She threw a cold glance toward Sara, who had retreated to the desk and, to cover her embarrassment, was busying herself with the blueprints.

"Well, what do you want to see me about?" Curt demanded.

Had she, Curt wondered, came here to spy on him? After seeing him with Sara last night and then learning this evening that he was working late, had she cooly come down here for the express purpose of seeing whether Sara was with him?

"I want merely to remind you," she said, with mock sweetness, "that you have a date with me tonight."

"What?" Curt's face was blank.

"Yes, darling—don't look so surprised, even if you have forgotten it. You're taking me to the Littlefields' dance."

Curt clapped a hand to his forehead. "Gosh! Is that tonight?"

"Yes — tonight. It was obvious that it had slipped your mind, so I decided I'd better come after you."

Curt, put in the wrong, changed his tone. "I'm sorry, Juliette. I— I thought it was next week." He glanced toward his desk. "Darn it —I'd hoped to get the work on those blueprints finished this evening. Look, Juliette, are you really awfully keen to go to that party? Can't we just skip it?"

"Of course we can't skip it! We've accepted!" Juliette flared "What's come over you, Curt? Why all this sudden devotion to your job? Or is it your job that's been absorbing you so much lately?" she added, with another glance toward Sara.

"It's like this, Juliette," Curt explained. "The firm is after an important contract for a dam down in South America. We've just got to land it. Frankly, if we don't, we'll be in a bad way. You see, we — well, things have been going none too well in the past year or so."

Juliette stared at him with sudden interest. "You mean Carrington and Broderick is—is in danger of failing?"

"I didn't say that!" Curt said hastily. "But it will make a lot of difference to us if we get this contract."

Juliette rose and strolled over to the desk. "What have these blueprints got to do with it?"

"They have to be submitted with our bid."

Juliette fingered them curiously. "Aren't they fascinating? Did you make them, Curt?"

"No — fellow named Fowler, one of our men down in South America, prepared them. But they need a lot of checking before they will be ready, and our bid must be submitted in a couple of weeks."

"A couple of weeks! Surely, that gives you plenty of time. Why does this work have to be done tonight? Can't it wait until tomorrow?"

"Well, yes —I suppose so. I was just anxious to get it out of the way." Curt shrugged. "But if we have to go to that dance, I suppose we have to."

Juliette laughed, "Don't make it sound like such an ordeal, darling." She slipped an arm through his. "I must say, you're not very flattering—having to be literally torn away to go out with me!"

"I didn't mean it that way," said Curt.

He was aware, however, that thought of his father had something to do with his yielding. He knew that, if he should break his date with Juliette, his father would be furious. He remembered, too, the fact that she had turned to George Poulton last night when he had failed her. If he should let young Poulton cut him out in her favor, Sturges Carrington would never forgive him. After all, it was just as well to keep Juliette and her wealth on a string — just in case the affairs of Carrington and Broderick should go from bad to worse.

He turned to Sara. "You've been a brick, Sara, to stay and help me. Thanks a lot."

"I was glad to stay," she answered quietly. "Is there anything else I can do before I go?"

"No, thanks." Curt started rolling the blueprints up. "I'll go down and get a taxi for you."

He slid the blueprints into the safe, then turned to follow Sara out.

"I'll wait here for you, Curt," said Juliette, sinking into a chair. "Good night, Miss—er—Sidney."

"Good night," Sara murmured.

On the way home in the taxi Curt had paid for Sara gave way to depression. Was Juliette Carter always to spoil things for her? First last night, and now again this evening.

Memory of Curt's kiss both thrilled and tortured her. Did it really mean anything —or was it just a cheap, stolen kiss, as Juliette's scornful words had made it appear? Was Curt just amusing himself with her? When he tired of her, would he drop her and turn back to this society girl who acted as though she owned him? He had been so impersonal, when he put her into the taxi and said good night—as though he had already forgotten their kiss. In a few hours, he would be dancing with Juliette, holding her in his arms—perhaps murmuring endearments into her ear....

"Toby . . . what have I ever said to you to lead you to think I would marry you?"

Sara knew that, in this other girl, she had met a formidable and implacable enemy—one to be feared.

Sales of Aircraft To Foreign Countries Reduces U.S. Costs

Washington, March 18—(AP) — Charles Edison, United States Secretary of the Navy, said today that sale of domestic aircraft to the Allies, instead of interfering with the navy's procurement program, had tended to reduce costs and to expedite deliveries.

In a letter to Chairman Carl Vinson placed in the congressional record, Edison said that in at least one instance, sales to the foreign governments had resulted in earlier deliveries to the Navy Department than usual.

In another case, the Secretary said, a manufacturer's export orders enabled him to reduce overhead costs which saved the navy department $575,000.

4th Sidney

4th Sidney — At present the snow is fast disappearing with the beautiful sunshine and house-cleaning is again on its way with some ladies while the men are seen on their wood piles splitting and piling before spring really gets in force with so many farm duties.

On Friday evening the L. A. monthly supper was held in the dining hall with a good attendance under Group Leader No. 1, Mrs. C. Vermilyea and her helpers. The tables were very prettily trimmed in keeping time with St. Patrick's Day and all enjoyed the Irish stews pies, tarts, and etc. Contests and games were played and prizes were given to the lucky ones having the most answers correct. Proceeds were $5.10.

GAME TIED 6 TIMES

After being tied on six different occasions, the Glen Miller "Paper-makers" rammed home three goals in the last minute of play to down Wallbridge 10 to 7 in the third and final game for the rural hockey championship of this district at the Hume Arena last night. Some 500 wild and exceedingly biased fans cheered their favourites throughout, the game being held up on several occasions as the officials cleaned the ice of hats, gloves and other debris tossed to the surface in excitement by the rabid followers of both squads. In victory the "Paper-makers" won the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy, emblematic to the rural hockey championship of the Bay of Quinte area.

"Vandy" Vangates the Hero

To "Vandy" Vangates, veteran Glen Miller forward, went the lion's share of the victory, Vangates scoring three goals in the last 90 seconds of play to cinch the game and the district cup. Wallbridge was playing short-handed, when the winning counters were scored, however. Glen Miller literally swept the "Townhallers" off their feet in the last half of the tussle, out-scoring the losers seven to two after the halfway mark had been reached, although the game was tied at the middle mark of the last period at seven-all. The score by periods was 2-2 and 5-5.

Markers Evenly Divided

Goyer, Green and Ronsky had two goals each for the losers, Semark getting the seventh counter. Vangates with four goals led the champion Glen Miller on the attack, as Davis and Johnson bagged two each with Anderson and Beale proving effective on the Paper-makers' attack. The winners packed too much speed for the Wallbridge sextette and literally carried the play offensively, being able to cope with the "Townhallers" attacks by virtue of their speed on the return plays. Both squads played a hard rugged type of hockey and despite high sticks and considerable personal contact, only one minor skirmish of fisticuffs ensued. The victors were presented with the Dr. Robertson trophy as they celebrated their winning of the championship in a hilarious dressing room, filled with enthusiastic and cheering supporters.

The line-ups:

Wallbridge — Goal, Carson; defence, Goyer and Semark; centre, Ronsky; wings, Green and Rowbotham; subs, Christopher, Vermilyea, Muir, Jarrell and Wood.

Referees—Howie and Colling.

Summary:

1st Period

Industrial League Teams Bolster for Tonight's Games

With reports that all teams in the league have strengthened considerably since the opening of the loop one week ago, the City Industrial Hockey League will resume activities at the Hume Arena this evening when the league-leading Canada Cement sextette meets the second place Corbin Locks team in the opening game of a dual bill, with the Belleville-Sargent second slotters clashing with the Alemite tail-enders in the nightcap affair.

Legitimate employees of representative industrial firms only are permitted to play in this league, but reports along the industrial hockey front this morning were to the effect that several highclass pucksters have been added to the payrolls of the club forms since last week, assuring better hockey for the patrons of the game. These City Industrial League hockey games will ring down the curtain on Canada's national winter pastime in Belleville.

BOSTON BRUINS FAVORED TO WIN STANLEY CUP

Three Series Which Will Lead to Possession of Mug Starts Tonight

LEAFS MEET HAWKS

Bruins and Rangers Tangle While Amerks Take on Detroit Red Wings

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Hopes, jaded by a long season's play, rose anew today as six of the seven National Hockey League clubs prepared for tonight's opening of the Stanley Cup series for the world championship.

Only Montreal Canadiens, who finished the league schedule in last place, remain on the sidelines as the rest start on even terms for the playoff gold. The six managers have only to recall that Chicago Black Hawks won the cup in 1938, when rated sixth-best, to know they all have a chance.

The Black Hawks, who finished fourth start at Toronto in a best-of-three round against the third-place Maple Leafs, whom they defeated in the astonishing finals of 1938.

New York Americans, who ran fifth, are in Detroit for their meeting with the Red Wings in the opener of a best-of-three round.

The winner of the Chicago-Toronto set will meet the Americans-Detroit survivor for the right to play Boston or the Rangers in the finals, which are to be on a best-of-seven basis.

Bruins Installed Favorites

The Bruins, who won both the N.H.L. title and the Stanley Cup last year, have been installed favorites. They should be favored, too, after coming from behind to edge out the Rangers and after developing the highest-scoring forward line of the year, the sauerkraut kids from Kitchener, Ont.—Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Woody Dumart.

Anything can happen in the play-offs and each club is working on that idea. Last year Boston never would have got by the first round against the Rangers but for the sensational overtime play of Melvin (Sudden-Death) Hill, a rookie right wingman from Saskatoon, Sask.

Hill fired three goals in overtime to give the Bruins three of their four victories in the seven bruising contests with the Rangers. The youngster had been turned down by Manager Lester Patrick of the Rangers a few years earlier.

In the Rangers, Boston meets a club with one of the most remarkable records in sport. The team went 19 straight games without defeat this season before Chicago tripped it up.

Expect Leafs to Outfight Hawks

Manager Conny Smythe admits the Leafs were out-fought when Chicago beat them in the finals two years ago, but he feels the present crop will out-fight the Hawks. Besides, Sylvanus Apps is back in shape to combine with Gordon Drillon in what was the hottest bit of team play in the N.H.L. in 1937-38 and 1939-40. Robert (Red) Heron has proved a find at centre-ice between Pep Kelly and Sweeney Schriner in Toronto's last four games.

Paul Thompson has done the coaching job of the year at Chicago. He has made regulars of two youngsters just out of junior hockey, Johnny Chad and Bill Carse, and he has made over almost his entire team.

The Americans have been crippled by the loss of Wilf Field through injury, while Harvey Jackson's appendix may not let him play tonight. But Manager Merwyn (Red) Dutton has his club punching again and Eddie Shore, who has seen only part-time service this season, will be on the defence for all three games.

Plans to Divide Time

Shore, owner of Springfield Indians, plans to divide his time this week between the International-American League playoffs and the cup series. If Springfield goes the three-game limit in its round with Pittsburgh, he will play six games in six nights.

Detroit's lineup has undergone frequent changes during the winter but always there has stood out the work of two veterans, Captain Ebbie Goodfellow on the defence and Tiny Thompson in goal. Their steadiness and the possibilities of three eager forward lines, of which Syd Howe is the star, make the Red Wings favorites to pull past the Americans.

Six Nationalities In Nets For Canadiens

Some sort of a record for nationalities employed in their nets must go to Canadiens, the Montreal entry in the National Hockey League.

Recently, after injuries to Claude Bourque, their original back-stop of the year, and Wilfrid Cude, his replacement, Canadiens secured Mike Karakas, of Chicago Black Hawks, an American of Croatian descent. He was the sixth nationality which has appeared in the nets for the team that represents French-Canadians.

Canadiens' original goaler was the late Joseph Cattaranich of French-Austrian descent, born on the shores of Canada, but educated as in French-Canadian surroundings, accepted as a French-Canadian, and later the owner of the club. He was followed by the immortal Georges Vezina, a French-Canadian, who for 14 years played in the Canadien nets without a substitute. He collapsed in November, 1925, during a game between Canadiens and Pittsburgh, died soon after. Vezina was followed by Alphonse Lacroix, of French-Canadian descent, but born near Boston, and an American citizen, who played most of his hockey in amateur circles, on the Boston front. After Lacroix, came George Hainsworth, of English descent, born in Canada, holder of the all-time shut-out, and low-goals-against records in the National league. Lorne Chabot, a French-Canadian succeeded Hainsworth. Then came Wilf. Cude. His parents are Welsh, and Cude, himself, was born in Wales, the land that gave to sport Lightweight Champion Freddie Welsh, Flyweight Champion Jimmy Wilde, and the durable Tommy Farr.

MIKE KARAKAS

Cude was succeeded by Bourque, who is an Acadian, descendant of that romantic race around which centred the legend of Evangeline, and born in that very district which Longfellow immortalized. Now he and Cude are followed by Karakas, the second American-born goaler to play for a Canadian team, the sixth nationality to guard the cage for the colorful French-Canadian entry — French-Canadian, French-American, English-Canadian, Welsh, Acadian and now Croatian-American.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

Fort Myers, Fla., March 19—(AP)—Although Bill Terry has been coaching New York Giants in base running a lot this Spring, he evidently forgot to tell his Rookie pitchers what to do when the other fellow starts to run.

One of the Boston Bees' tallies in their 7-4 victory at Bradenton yesterday came on a steal of home by Carvell Rowell while Rookie Jim Lynn was taking an elaborate wind-up. It was revealed afterwards that a couple of photographers were Boston's third-base "coaches" who suggested the steal.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—If Sunday's All-star game didn't prove anything it did provide a lot of fresh enthusiasm for Brooklyn's Dodgers as a result of Luke Hamlin's and Pete Coscarart's work. The team was so full of vigor yesterday that Manager Leo Durocher forgot his lame arm and Peewee Reese his bad hand and both were tossing the ball around against doctors orders.

Los Angeles—Philadelphia Athletics are looking more like themselves now that their long barnstorming trip is under way. Frankie Hayes, holdout catcher, finally is in the fold and played an inning at first base yesterday "to get the feel of things", and Bob Johnson, who tore a leg muscle March 7, is ready to play again

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Don Padgett, holdout catcher-out-fielder, has arrived in St. Louis Cardinals' camp and it is intimated his contract troubles may be over as soon as a meeting with General Manager Branch Rickey. It's reported here Rickey reached an agreement with Padgett before he left his Bostic, N.C., home.

Miami Beach, Fla.— Rookie Bob Bragan may open the season at shortstop for the Phillies. He played errorless ball against Cleveland yesterday and banged out three singles for six hits in two days against major league pitching. George Schrein, 1939 regular, is weak with the stick.

Fort Myers, Fla., —If it becomes a case of staying with Cleveland Indians as a substitute outfielder or returning to the minors where he could play regularly, Clarence Campbell, rated "most likely to succeed" of the crop of Rookie gardeners would like to stay.

"I think well enough of myself to believe that once I get in the line-up, I'll be awfully hard to get out", he said.

MAKI HOMESICK FOR WIFE, BABY BACK IN FINLAND

Would Rather Face Bullets Than Autograph Seekers in United States

SPEAKS NO ENGLISH

Orange Juice and Pink Ice Cream Two Favorite Dishes of Track Star

Finland pulled Maki out of the trenches and sent him to the United States to pick up dollars for its late war chest. He's done quite well, too—about $5,000 in three meets.

Last, night, before absorbing his first American defeat, Maki extended his warmup to outrun a horde of signature seekers. But the Helsinki liquor store clerk found two American products to his liking. One is orange juice; the other pink ice cream.

Whenever possible Maki eats with Naylor Stone, his tour manager, who permits the frozen delicacy. It is taboo when Sgt. Paavo Nurmi, his companion and the former flying Finn of the track, watches the menu.

Maki has another peeve. She's the American girl. His apple cheeks and curly brown hair make him popular with feminine fans everywhere but they can't make Taisto understand. He speaks only four words of English. The one he uses when they approach is "goodbye".

Both Runners Homesick

Both Maki and Nurmi are homesick, especially 29-year-old Taisto, who has a wife and daughter in the homeland. Both realize the importance of their mission, however, and will complete their month's schedule. Funds they raise will be used for rehabilitation instead of bullets.

Maki, holder of five middle distance records, took the lead at the start of his 24-lap, two-mile exhibition and held it until the final turn. Then Walter Mehl, the Wisconsin graduate, edged by to win by a step.

The time of 9:06.5 on Municipal Auditorium's new board track was eight seconds slower than Mehl's listed record, recently bettered by Notre Dame's Greg Rice. It was Maki's first American attempt at the distance and he made it under protest. Three nights before he galloped three miles, his favorite race, in world record breaking time of 14:01.9 on an indoor dirt track in Chicago.

"The Story of Churchill Downs and the Kentucky Derby" in compact booklet form was received by this corner over the week end, a gift from Franke G. Menke, well known New York sports authority and statitician. In the prologue Mr. Menke tenders his personal thanks to 79-year-old Col. Matt J. Winn of Louisville, Kentucky, who personally has seen every running of the 65 Kentucky Derbies. In the publication "The Story of Churchill Downs and the Kentucky Derby" many interesting facts of this historic turf event have been compiled to make interesting, as well as educational reading. Although the Ontario running of the King's Plate is the oldest continued turf event on this continent, the Kentucky Derby is a close second, having its inaugural race in 1875. This year 127 thoroughbreds have been nominated to the Derby, with Bimelech and Andy K. being the favorites. As the Derby approaches we'll occasionally use some excerpts from the works of Col. Winn and Frank Menke, two true lovers of "the sport of kings."

The number of nominations for the 1940 Kentucky Derby—127—is the highest since 1931, when 130 names, with Twenty Grand the ultimate winner. Twenty-two of the horses nominated this year never went to the post as a two-year-old. Besides Bimelech and Andy K., previously mentioned, we like the chances of a two-year-old, of which little is known. Carrier Pigeon only started as a two-year-old twice last year, but both times won in an impressive manner. Bimelech, as a two-year-old, won races in as many starts and was the largest 2-year-old money winner last season, earning $135,090 for the Bradley stables. However, Bimelech faces an exceedingly bad jinx. Last year the Bradley-owned horse won the Belmont Futurity and no two-year-old to win the Furturity ever won the Kentucky Derby this next season in the history of the Derby. Experts say Bimelech is the horse to prove the exception, but superstitious turf followers are somewhat skeptical and are predicting little.

A few years back everybody was feeling sorry for Jim Thorpe once famous as the world's greatest athlete, outstanding football star at Carlisle, and a National league outfielder. For Jim had gone down the ladder until the best he could do to make a living was to wield a pick and shovel. But that wasn't for long. Jim started at the bottom, after his athletic collapse, and worked up swiftly. He was out of the trenches in no time.

But he isn't idling. He is writing his autobiography, and that will bring in some important money.

Do you remember when—A Canadian record of 24 years standing for the 40-yard dash was smashed at Hamilton four years ago today when Sammy Richardson of Toronto made the distance in 4.5 seconds, 1 1-10 better than Bobby Kerr's 1912 mark.

New rural puck champions were crowned at the Hume Arena last night when the Glen Miller "paper-makers" triumphed 10 to 7 over Wallbridge, winning the hard way. To "Vandy" Vangates, their veteran forward, who reminded all Belleville fans of Buster Whitton with his fast, short skating efforts, went the big honors and lion's share of the victory. With less than 90 seconds to play Vangates broke loose to score three goals and assure his Glen Miller supporters, of which there were many, of the Dr. J. J. Robertson trophy. Strangely enough the game was tied up on six different occasions and stood at seven-all with but 90 seconds to play. It was like old times, when the fans took hockey seriously in Belleville. In the excitement last night rabid supporters hurled their hats, gloves and other articles handy to the ice in celebration of goals, penalties etc. On the night's play the better team ultimately won, simply because they assumed the offensive early and kept driving on the Wallbridge goal until the entire structure collapsed under the heavy strain, but it was a good series and had Wallbridge not have been short-handed in the last four minutes of play, maybe there'd have been another story, but it looked as though the "paper-makers" had too much reserve strength. The series would well bear repeating another season, as the fans were just warming up to it when the championship was won.

Tonight at the Hume Arena another post-season series continues when the City Industrial League swings into action with a double-header when Canada Cement, Alemite, Belleville-Sargent and Corbin Lock factory teams all swing into puck action. Incidentally we understand some of the plant teams have bolstered their squads since last week's game, which is good for employment at least.

Officially Spring arrives shortly after noon on Wednesday, but the fore runner or harbinger comes tonight with the opening of the Stanley Cup play-offs. The Chicago Black Hawks flew by aeroplane to Toronto for their game, but the interesting series will be the Ranger-Bruin go. Detroit and the Americans are also playing a series. Incidentally dynamic Eddie Shore will participate in two post-season series, playing with the Americans in the Stanley Cup eliminations and his Springfield Indians in the International League play-offs. Incidentally there is talk of Shore and Red Dutton purchasing the New York Americans another year.

SPORT SPICE — Sydney "Millionaires" crushed the Hull Volants 6-0 in their first Allan Cup game last night. . . . Local sports will have additional daylight this year, as the city council voted to adopt daylight saving from April 28th until late in September this year. . . . Oshawa's junior "B" pucksters beat the packed Brantford Lions 6-5 last night, all of which adds more headaches to the management of the local Quintes. . . . The O.A.S.A. has broken away from the C.A.A.U. of C. and will enlarge its executive numbers this year.

Police Blotter

Apprehended on two charges of fraud, William LaRue, of this city, was taken into custody by Provincial Police at Marysville late last night. Upon instructions from the office of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., today, LaRue was charged with obtaining $50.00 by fraud and also of obtaining an automobile by the same means. The accused was arraigned before a Justice of the Peace by Provincial Constable D. Adair, who apprehended him last night. LaRue was remanded in custody, pending further charges, the authorities revealed.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours leaving the cell block available for eleven transients, who sought dry and warm slumbering quarters, free from the cold freezing rain of last night.

Easter Drama Given By Senior B. Y. P. U.

The story of the Resurrection was beautifully told in an Easter drama presented by the Service Group of the Senior B.Y.P.U. in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church Monday evening. Players in the cast included Jean Thompson as Mary Madgalene, Jean Stephenson as Salome, Bernice Hannah as Mary, mother of John, Chas. Franklin as Peter and Art Wynne as John. In the epilogue Edith Looker played the part of a modern maid. The drama, which was received with appreciation by the large gathering, was directed by Mrs. Chas. Franklin.

During the devotional exercises Miss Mary Cook read the scripture lesson and Mrs. Chas. Franklin gave a reading. A lovely Easter hymn was sung very sweetly by Miss Betty Shorey, who was accompanied by Miss Bernice Saunders at the piano. Miss Mary McCoy performed the duties of chairman and also gave the benediction.

Liberals Challenged to Discuss Campaign Issues on Platform

J. M. Simpson, K.C., Issues Challenge on Behalf of G. J. Tustin, National Conservative Candidate for P. E.-Lennox

FAVOR PICTON AS SITE

Picton, March 19—A challenge to the Liberals to meet them on any platform and discuss the election issues, were made by J. M. Simpson, K.C., of Napanee, here yesterday on behalf of George J. Tustin, National Conservative candidate. He was one of the speakers at a rally in the theatre in the interests of Mr. Tustin. Rev. A. W. Downer, M.L.A., for Dufferin, Simcoe was chief speaker.

Today, the local papers carried a challenge from H. Weese, Liberal candidate, to Mr. Tustin to a joint debate at Napanee Armouries on Monday. The National Conservatives however favor a Picton meeting and the details will have to be ironed out if the debate is held. Neither candidate spoke at the nomination at Napanee since only 40 were in attendance.

"The Hepburn-McQuesten vote of censure was not the reason Mr. King dissolved Parliament," said Rev. A. W. Downer, M.L.A., for Dufferin, Simcoe. "There were 69 reasons why he did not dare to face Parliament. It was because of 69 motions asking questions." Mr. King knew if the lid came off he was in the soup."

"We have to believe Hepburn", said Rev. Downer referring to the St. Thomas investigation and attacking the statement of Mr. Rogers.

Condemned Bacon Importation

In this agricultural centre Rev. Mr. Downer criticized the government on the importation of U. S. bacon into Canada and the lower freight rates given the west than Ontario. With the high cost of feed farmers cannot make a profit with the price of hogs set at nine cents. He charged that in five months of war Quebec had received contracts worth 37 millions and Ontario only 13 millions.

"If Mr. King is sincere in opposing conscription, why didn't he have the act taken off the statute books during his three terms of office," asked Mr. Downer.

King was the bitterest critic of Bennett's defence estimates, he said, charging that though Mr. King knew war was coming Canada was not prepared.

He regretted that Canada had been slow to announce her intention to stand with Britain.

If Mr. King had accepted Britain's air training plan in 1938 Britain would have spent two or three hundred million dollars here, paying all the cost. Under the present plan Canada pays the biggest share.

National government is gaining strength every day, said the speaker. People of all parties feel this a time to forget party for country and present a united front. We should follow the example of Britain, Australia, New Zealand and France and form a National Government, he urged.

King Cabinet Criticized.

The King cabinet was criticized by H. S. Colliver, ex-M.P.P. because of its composition. He said that 11 of the 16 members were lawyers and four school teachers and compared this with cabinets of Federal and Provincial Conservatives which he said always contained farmers to represent the farmers.

George J. Tustin, the candidate, said that Premier King might just as well have dissolved parliament by issuing a statement to the press instead of calling parliament at a great expense and then dissolving it.

He believed the millions of dollars this election is costing could have been saved if Mr. King had been willing to co-operate. "They 'scuttled' parliament because they could not stand up to criticism and threw the opposition's questions into the waste paper basket," he declared. Prime Minister King had said he had realized for three years that war was coming but when the First Division mobilized, Mr. Colliver said, there was not an adequate supply of shoes, uniforms or guns and equipment for training was still lacking. "You in Picton saw for yourselves how inadequately the men were equipped and Hon. Mr. Rogers can say what he pleases but both you and the soldiers know differently."

Mr. Tustin criticized the costly commissions of the King government. He felt members should do the work instead of commissions. Dr. Manion, he said, offers a new deal for agriculture; he will investigate the packing industry; stop unnecessary public construction until after the war. Electors, he said, had the chance of a do-nothing Liberal government or a National government such as Great Britain and Australia have. He praised Dr. Manion as a man of ability and courage, a great Britisher, soldier and Canadian.

Mr. J. L. Simpson, K.C., of Napanee, referred to the account in the Picton Times regarding the arrangement about making speeches at nomination, saying the report was incorrect in that regard.

"If Mr. Weese and his supporters are so anxious for a scrap we'll give them a chance for it, any time, afternoon or evening. We'll be glad to meet their seconds and arrange terms any time."

He said Mr. Tustin had been a friend of both Liberal and Tory. He said there was a serious lack of leadership in the King government. He read a letter from a "Liberal" overseas which asked that Mr. Tustin be elected.

"We've got to stop being Grit and Tory during the war," he declared, "and the issue is win the war first and a fiscal policy second".

Alan B. Sprague Gives Address To Young Men

At the weekly session last Sunday afternoon of the Young Men's Class of Bridge Street United Church an outstanding address was given by Mr. Alan B. Sprague, B.A., L.L.B., of the legal firm of Cameron and Sprague.

His subject for discussion was The Christian and Government, and proved to be very interesting.

The effect upon those present was noteworthy in that the speaker for the occasion was one who has come up out of the ranks of the Sunday School and church activities.

Introduced by Mr. Percy McGuire, the scholastic accomplishments of Mr. Sprague was referred to and tribute paid to his achievements at Queen's University, Kingston, and Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia. His experience as a barrister in Nova Scotia and for a while in London England furnished the speaker with a wide experience from which to draw material for his address.

Mr. Bryson Leslie as president of the class of boys and youths conducted the exercises of the afternoon in the church auditorium.

A hearty vote of thanks was moved by Harold Bankier and seconded by Ralph Clapp for this inspirational and timely message.

"IRISH" NIGHT IS ENJOYED BY Y'S MEN'S CLUB

Prospective Members Hear Talk on "Salient Facts of India"

W. B. HOWELL, SPEAKER

In keeping with the 17th of Old Ireland, the annual St. Patrick's Night program proved doubly interesting at the weekly luncheon of the Y's Men's Club held in the Y.M.C.A. building Monday night when the "Irish" were feted, coupled with the introduction of "prospective members night." Not being superstitious, 13 prospective members were introduced by President Harold Vaughan, all being part of the city's younger business set.

Irish songs dominated the club's community singing, under the baton of Y'sman Don Ridley, while the tables were decorated with shamrock plants and gay green and white colorings. Sergeant-at-Arms Y'sman George Pauley exacted the assessed fines attired in a brilliant green jacket, silk plug hat and carrying a threatening blackthorn shillelagh. During the program a popularity contest was held to select the glamour Y'sman of the club. Although closely contested, Y'sman Ken Colling drew the applause and was declared winner and is now known as "Powder-puff" within the club circles. The evening's musical entertainment was most ably supplied by Leo B. Riggs with two splendidly presented piano solos.

Speaker Introduced

The speaker of the evening, Mr. W. B. Howell, father of ex-Alderman Sid Howell, spoke on "The Salient Facts of India," after being introduced by Alderman Bob Pringle.

"There are many problems surrounding India. For instance it has a population of four hundred million people, which is four-fifths of the population of the British Empire. India has a larger area than the continent of Europe, excluding Russia, but is split up by diverse sects. They speak 200 languages and have many creeds," stated Mr. Howell.

"In comparison, India has the tallest mountains and broadest ranges in the world, they have fabulous wealth on one hand and the greatest poverty on the other," added the speaker as he dwelt on the early history of the country before speaking of Ghandi, the great Indian leader of the day. "Ghandi was born of high caste parents and was educated in England, being called to the bar late in the 18th century. He did much work to assist the Empire in India and Africa and readily admits he obtained his moral strength through Christianity," said Mr. Howell as he closed his educational remarks with a general outline of the present political conditions in India and their importance to the Empire.

EXPENSES 3.85% HIGHER

Ottawa, Mar. 19 (CP).—Net operating revenues of the Canadian National Railways increased $14,788,007 in 1939 as compared to 1938, according to the annual report received today by Transport Minister Howe from S. J. Hungerford, president of the system. The figure for 1939 was $20,854,418.

"After payment of fixed and other charges (excepting charges to proprietor's equity under the provisions of the Canadian National Railways Capital Revision Act, 1937) the deficit for the year was $40,095,519, an improvement of $14,218,676 compared with 1938," the report said.

Gross operating revenues for the calendar year 1939 reached the highest figure since 1930, a total of $203,820,186 and a gain of $21,578,463 or 11.84 per cent over 1938.

Operating expenses amounted to $182,965,768, an increase of 3.85 per cent. The report said this was a moderate increase in relation to operative revenues and the operating ratio, 89.77 per cent was the best since 1929.

Net revenue available for interest was $10,635,023.33 an increase over previous year of $14,184,071.86. Interest on funded debt held by the public totalled $49,814,377.90 and the interest on government loans $916,165.01.

"It would be a mistake," said the report, "to attribute all of the increase in traffic to the war; the increase was progressive throughout the year. In the first quarter, the total revenue was about equal to that of 1938, after which the quarterly increases were 11.9 per cent, 14.7 per cent and 18.6 per cent."

Large Wheat Crop Help

The largest wheat crop in ten years accounted for much of the freight traffic increase of $20,485,407, or 14.6 per cent. Grain tonnage increased 1,437,554 tons. There were substantial increases in anthracite and bituminous coal shipments, in lumber, iron and steel, motor vehicles, and parts and other manufactured commodities.

Passenger revenue decreased 1.5 per cent and commercial telegraph revenue 3.8 per cent. There were increases in both mail and express revenue, or 1.4 per cent and 13.4 per cent respectively.

Expenditures for maintenance of property and equipment increased $3,724,000, or 4.93 per cent during the year. Of this amount $495,357 was due to increased rolling stock retirements on Canadian lines, the total write-offs to operating expenses on this account having been $6,763,525 as compared with $6,268,168 in 1938.

Transportation expenses increased $2,679,000 or 3.11 per cent. Snow removal in 1939 cost $357,000 more. The Pension roll increased by $222,000 and wage adjustments cost $622,000. Protective services necessitated by the war amounted to $433,000. Larger provision was made for retirement of miscellaneous structures such as sidings, retired from service and not replaced.

Taxes increased by $148,274 to $7,095,147. In addition, $3,171,500 was paid in sales tax on the cost of material.

Revenue from hotel operations increased $186,629, and after meeting operating expenses and taxes the net operating income was $302,363, an increase of $76,350 over 1938.

Chamber of Deputies Holds Secret Session

Paris, March 19 (CP-Havas) — The Chamber of Deputies decided today to go into secret session to debate questions concerning the conduct of the war against Germany and the Finnish-Soviet war.

Premier Daladier will answer formal questions by eleven delegated members in a closed session similar to that held last Friday by the Senate, which gave the government a unanimous vote of confidence.

Concerning Adolf Hitler's Brenner Pass conference with Benito Mussolini yesterday, the French press insisted in the absence of official interpretations by the German and Italian governments a passing peace could not be negotiated under existing conditions. The government's position has been that no "peace with security" can be concluded safely with the Nazi regime.

The Chamber session is expected to close with a vote late tonight and to be followed in the next day or so by formation of a compact and more energetic cabinet.

The motion to go into secret session, put by Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber was passed without a recorded vote shortly after the deputies had convened. The Chamber had its last secret session in February.

HIRED MAN FACES MURDER CHARGE

William Hayes, Aged Farmer, Dies Allegedly From Injuries Received in Fight

Bowmanville, Ont., March 19.—(CP)— William Hayes, 73-year-old bachelor farmer, died in hospital today allegedly from injuries received in a fight last Friday, and a charge of murder was laid against his hired man Harold Eddy 25. Eddy at present is in The Ontario Hospital at Whitby, recovering from frozen feet.

Police said that Eddy wandered into the home of Melville Graham, two miles from Hayes farm, last Friday, and told Graham there had been a "fight" in which he was attacked and beaten by Hayes.

Graham went to Hayes' house and found the aged farmer unconscious. He was unconscious until his death.

Coroner Dr. V. H. Storey of Bowmanville, 30 miles east of Toronto, said that an inquest would be held and there would also be a postmorten.

Germany and Vatican Negotiate to Safeguard Interests of Catholics In Annexed Territories

Vatican City, March 19 (AP)—Germany and the Vatican are negotiating an arrangement to safeguard the interests of Catholics in territories annexed by Germany, a reliable source said today.

The informant said the negotiations were being conducted in Berlin by Monsignor Cesare Orsenigo, Papal Nuncio to the German government.

Pope Pius was believed to have discussed the matter with foreign minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop when he was received in audience here March 11.

The conversations are expected to result in a "modus vivendi" or temporary working agreement, regulating freedom of worship, religious teaching in schools, the status of ecclesiastical seminaries and theological faculties in universities, and state financial support of parochial institutions.

The agreement would apply to Austria, the Bohemian - Moravia protectorate and German Poland.

Spring Arrives Officially Tomorrow But Minus the Balmy Breezes

Date is One Day Earlier This Being Leap Year

VERNAL EQUINOX

Spring, this year will officially begin early in the afternoon of March 20th, due to the fact that this year is leap year. Generally spring is credited with arrival on March 21st, when the official first day of spring is heralded ,but precisely at the hour of 24 minutes after one o'clock in the afternoon of March 20th, spring will have actually begun. This statement was released through the government meterological bureau.

Leap year affects the time of springs' arrival. The exact length of a year is a trifel less than 365-1-4 days, causing an extra day each four years, except for the 100th year when there is an extra day in the 400 years only, the year 2000 will be a Leap Year," but 1900 was not.

In the 16th century astronomers found that the earth made its normal journey around the sun 11 minutes and 14 seconds faster than the 365 1-4 days. This meant that the universal clock was losing three days in every 400 years. Therefore the astronomers reduced the number of leap years falling in a 400-year period from 100 to 97, by making the last leap year of each century a common year—except where the number of the century only is divisible by four.

Therefore the meterological bureau today makes the official announcement, that spring will be officially ushered in at Belleville precisely at 1.24 p.m. on the afternoon of March 20th. Probs for Wednesday are colder with snowflurries.

CARS DAMAGED AT INTERSECTION

Property damage amounting to nearly $150.00 resulted to two automobiles at intersection of East Dundas and Newbury streets this afternoon. An automobile driven easterly on Dundas Street by N. E. Hardy, Toronto, collided broadside with another motor car, driven by Oscar Babcock, 78 South Foster Avenue, as the latter driver was making a lefthand turn off Dundas Street, into Newbury Street. Detective Fred Isard investigated and found that over $100.00 damages had resulted to Mr Hardy's vehicle, the entire front being demolished, while both righthand doors and the rear fender of Mr. Babcock's car suffered severe damage.

Conservative Rally Held at Marlbank

A well attended and enthusiastic Conservative rally was held in the interests of Mr. George Stokes, National Government candidate for Hastings South, at Marlbank on Saturday, March 16th., with addresses by many prominent speakers enlightening the audience on the topics relative to issues of the election campaign. The hall was jammed long before the hour scheduled for the opening of the meeting and Mr. William Marlin, acting as chairman for the evening, introduced the following speakers: Mr. R. A. Pringle of Belleville; Mr. J. M. Simpson, K.C., of Napanee; Mr. Harold Varty of Sulphide; Mr. W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P., of Tweed, and the candidate, Mr. George Stokes of Belleville.

Musical entertainment was provided the audience with the inimitable Mr. Jack Scott of Belleville, doing several numbers, while Mrs. G. Brown also helped with the musical part of the program.

ADVANCE POLL OPENS THURSDAY

The advance poll for commercial travellers and others in that electoral category will open at 221 George Street, on Thursday, Mar. 21, and remain open for the following two days. The accommodation is for those whose occupations leave uncertainty about their being here on election day, and applies to employees of railways, boats and transport companies as well as travellers.

Chamberlain Refuses To Give Undertaking

London, March 19—(CP)—During the question period in the House of Commons today preceding Prime Minister Chamberlain's formal statement, Mr. Chamberlain refused to give an undertaking which might hamper the strategy of the Allies.

He had been asked for assurance that parliament would be consulted before any troops were dispatched to aid a state with which Britain had no treaty obligations. Adding to his refusal to give such an undertaking, he said Britain had obligations to Finland under the League of Nations.

PREMIER HEPBURN OFFERS LAND TO FINNISH REFUGEES

Arable Clay Belt in Northern Ontario Area Offered by Premier

CONSUL INFORMED

Toronto, March 19 — (CP) — Kingsley Graham, the Finnish consul in Toronto, said today that an offer by Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario to aid in settling 100,000 Finnish refugees on the arable clay belt in Northern Ontario has been communicated to the Finnish Consul-General at Montreal.

"I know that he will be very interested and will relay the message to the Finnish government," said the consul. "It is a matter for the governments to decide. It is a very cordial offer on Premier Hepburn's part and one which must be carefully worked out."

The suggestions came from Premier Hepburn in a letter to the Finnish consul yesterday. The Premier's letter pointed out that the admission of immigrants is purely a federal matter and that the Dominion government would have to take the initiative.

Mr. Hepburn stated in his letter that Ontario at present is working on a new highway from Hearst and Geraldton which will open up "great new areas of agricultural land which could be made available to industrious, thrifty people like the Finns."

Premier Writes Letter

Premier Hepburn wrote to the Finnish consul that he was prepared to carry out a previous announcement that the province has sufficient unsettled land in the clay belt of northern Ontario to accommodate if necessary at least 100,000 persons, or about 25,000 families, "to be brought from the Finnish territory which Russia has ruthlessly taken from the little republic which you represent."

The Premier's letter to the Finnish consul here added: "Our province is quite prepared to give full co-operation to these settlers, provided the immigration policy of the Dominion government will be in accord with this humanitarian policy and this will also, I believe, result in a substantial benefit to our province and the Dominion as a whole by the bringing in of this type of very desirable settlers to this country."

Hon. Jas. Cromwell Speaking at Toronto States Safety and Liberties of All Democracies Dependent on Allied Victory

RIVAL IDEOLOGIES

Toronto, March 19 (CP)—Hon. James H. R. Cromwell, United States minister to Canada, in an address here today said that if the Allies win the war he could see "no threat to the well being, to the peace, or to the social and economic order of the neutral democracies, be they large or small."

As to the outlook should Germany triumph, he asked what kind of rule was being applied in the countries which had been victims of the Nazi Lebensraum (living room) plan of extension. "Did the Austrians, Czecho-Slovakians or the Poles have a voice in the determination of their present form of government?"

Speaking before a joint meeting of the Canadian Club and the Empire Club, Mr. Cromwell said he was at a loss to understand how any intelligent citizen of any neutral democracy could state with conviction that he has no interest in the outcome of the war, or that there are no issues at stake which can affect him.

Dependent on Outcome

"To me it is only too apparent that the life, the liberty, the livelihood and the very safety of this same neutral citizen may be dependent upon the outcome of the present war. Whether he recognizes the fact or not, his future and the future of his children's children are in all probability now at stake."

Mr. Cromwell said considerable comment seemed to have been evoked by a statement he made at Val d'Or, Que., recently, that the Allies were fighting for the perpetuation of individual liberty and freedom.

"Perhaps comment was occasioned because the diplomatic representative of a neutral nation expressed an opinion concerning the war aims of a belligerent power. Perhaps some people were surprised because they feel that the utterances of a diplomat should be confined to platitudinous pleasantries.

Many Fail to See Implications

"Certainly that is the feeling of many of my countrymen—indeed some of my very distinguished countrymen who, it would seem, believe the fulfilment of the handwriting on the wall can be avoided by pretending the handwriting is not there.

"Well, that is not my idea of the functions of a diplomat. To me a diplomat is still a citizen. The duty of every citizen is to uphold and defend the institutions and the social and economic order upon which the government of his nation is founded."

"When a diplomat-citizen sees approaching a force which frankly seeks to destroy institutions and the social and economic order upon which the government of his nation is founded, it is his duty to tell his fellow citizens what he sees.

"Upon this interpretation of my duties as a diplomat I am content to risk my official head."

The reason his Val D'or statement of opinion was considered so significant was because "certain short-sighted and cynically minded groups in the United States" declare there is in actual fact little to choose between one belligerent and another.

"How easy it is for unthinking people to proclaim that what happens in Europe is no concern of theirs and to pretend the dangers that threaten their future safety do not exist. How easy it is to shut one's eyes and thus seek to avoid the horrid sight of the bloody and seething world revolution which threatens to overwhelm us all."

As an economist Mr. Cromwell said the present conflict appeared to him "not only as a clash between rival political concepts but also as a clash between rival and totally different economic systems of which the forms of government are but the outward manifestations."

"Do not let yourselves be deceived by the frequently proferred description of the democratic-capitalistic system as one which is old and outworn, ready for the scrap heap, and to be superseded by some autocratic idealogy. For it is the latter which has misruled and misgoverned the world from time immemorial.

"It was not until the industrial revolution took place early in the 19th. century that true democracy on a broad basis of universal suffrage and individual freedom, as we conceive it on this-continent, became possible.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 19 (CP)—The Toronto market firmed today on the lightest trading of the year only 78,000 shares were traded in three hours. All four indices were narrowly higher at noon.

Food, steel, senior oil and beverage issues posted more gains than losses. National Steel Car added a point and minor gains appeared for United Steel and Dominion Steel B.

Lake Shore, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Hard Rock, Preston and Pickle Crow were gainers in the gold group and in the base metal list better prices were posted for Waite-Amulet, Smelters and Steep Rock.

WALL STREET

New York, March 19 —(AP)— Aviations today took the lead in a selective stock market rally. Gains of fractions to a point or so predominated near the fourth hour.

Bonds, especially Scandinavian Dollar Loans, did better and commodities improved after a hesitant beginning.

Among stocks United Air Lines and American Airlines moved into new high ground for the year. Rails, Utilities, Coppers, Oils, Rubbers and Motors held to a narrow range.

On the Canadian list fractional improvements were shown in McIntyre and Lake Shore Mines. Canadian Pacific inched back while Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram rested unchanged.

Canada 4's, in the Bond Market, were steady.

A-med. and Pullets Eggs in Demand

Toronto, March 19—Eggs showed the only inclination of making headway in trading on the Toronto open produce market yesterday as butter lacked energy.

Grade A-medium and pullets were in good demand on the egg market, and these grades advanced 1 cent per dozen in the retail section. Supplies were sufficient to cover requirements of the buyers. Government inspected lots of graded eggs continued to move at 1-2 cent premium. Although production is increasing with the approach of spring, the export movement so far, states the Dominion Department of Agriculture, is taking care of all surplus stocks.

The butter market opened the week quietly steady. Buyers apparently have enough supplies on hand to meet their immediate needs and only small lots of Ontario solids changed hands. Fresh receipts, however, were light, while holders were not pressing for sales.

Montreal Produce

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 29c to 29 1-2c and first grade solids, jobbing price, 28 1-2c to 29c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 25c; A-medium, 23c; A-pullets, 22c; B, 21c; C, 19 1-2c; B-large unquoted. Receipts: 703 cases.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, March 19 — (CP) — Calves slipped 50 to 75 cents in early trading on Montreal Livestock Markets today, while all other grades held steady, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

A few cattle offered were of plain to only medium quality and sold at prices about on a level with yesterday's sales. Canners and cutters made $3 to $3.50, common cows $3.50 to $4.50 and medium $4.50 to $5.25. Bologna bulls brought $4.25 to $5.

Calves ranged from $7.50 to $10.50 with the bulk of sales between $8.50 and $9. Medium veals sold around $9 to $9.50 and good veals $10.50.

Hogs were mostly $9.35 and bacons fed and watered with $1 premium on selects and the regular cuts on off grades. Sows made $6 to $6.50. Rail grade hogs made $12.40 hot weight.

Toronto, March 19 (CP)— Trade in cattle was dull up to mid-session on the Toronto Livestock Market today with prices steady at Monday's decline. Veal calves were steady at Monday's prices. No price was established for hogs. The lamb and sheep sections were steady. The holdover from Monday was 1,200 head of cattle.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle 800; calves 600; hogs 1,000; sheep and lambs 1,075.

Weighty steers sold at $7.15-$7.25 with common selling downward to $6. Butcher steers and heifers ranged from $7-$7.15 for good with comon selling downward to $6. Good butcher cows brought $5-$5.25 with common selling downward to $4. Canners and cutters sold at [illegible] $3.75. Good butcher bulls traded at $5-$5.25 with common selling downward to $4.50. Good to choice fed calves ranged from $8-$8.50 with medium selling downward to $6.50. Good stockers sold at $6-$6.25 with common selling downward to $5.75.

Good to choice veal calves sold at $10.50-$11 with tops at $11.50 and common selling downward to $6.

One load of western lambs sold at $11. Common to medium local lambs brought $8-$10. Light sheep sold at $5.50-$6.50 with common selling downward to 3.

CANADA'S EFFORT IN WAR PRAISED BY G. B. BAGWELL

CANDIDATE HEARD

Deseronto, March 19.—(Staff) — Coming staunchly to the defence of Canada's war effort as prosecuted by the Mackenzie King Government, Mr. George B. Bagwell of Toronto, speaking in the interests of Mr. McLean Haig official Liberal candidate for Hastings South, at a Liberal rally held here last night, emphatically denied the statements made by Dr. Manion, that the dependents of the enlisted men in the Canadian Active Service Corps were being neglected. "Already over 40,000 applications had been received by the allowance board and some 37,000 cheques were going out to dependents every month, with the other three thousand being under consideration", stated Mr. Bagwell, "and in many cases, where the allowance had been applied for and not received, investigation has proven there was usually a good cause for the delay".

Allowances For Dependents

In comparing the allowances received by dependents in this war with that received during 1914-18, Mr. Bagwell said that a soldier was now entitled to assign $20 of his pay each month to his wife, she was allowed $35 separation allowance and $12 per month was allowed to each of the first two children, making a total of $79 per month. In addition to this a soldier's dependent mother could also receive an allowance of $20 per month.

Mr. Bagwell said that it was indeed fortunate that this country had such men as Mackenzie King, Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Hon. Norman Rogers and Hon. C. D. Howe to carry on Canada's war effort. "Mackenzie King realized at the outset that this would be a long war and that we would have to fight it on both the economic and military fronts, and it was because of the guiding influence of such stable men as who comprise the cabinet in the Liberal government that Canada was able to present a unified war effort. Only one dissenting voice was heard when Canada declared a state of war to exist between herself and Germany", stated Mr. Bagwell, and he asked "could Hepburn, Duplessis or Dr. Manion command such an unanimous vote as this?"

Wartime Basis

"Immediately war was declared Mackenzie King set about to put Canada on a wartime basis and concentrated on a co-operative effort to win the war. In keeping with this, the War Supply Board was formed so as to co-ordinate the industrial effort of the Dominion to help win the war. So effective was this board, which has as its head the very best brains industry could supply, that the price of contracts to manufacturers had been shaved so closely as to leave practically no profits", said Mr. Bagwell.

The Wartime Prices and Trades Board had been formed as the result of a lesson learned in the last war and had eliminated profiteering. The Foreign Exchange Board takes care of foreign investments in Canada and prevents the removal of capital from Canada during wartime.

War Efforts Praised

"With the war only six months old we have already over 90,000 men in active service forces, said Mr. Bagwell. We have one division overseas, a second in training and a third being regimented, while the air training scheme was being pushed by all the forces of the King Government.

"There is only one question which remains open", assured Mr. Bagwell, "and that is, 'who is going to run the country during the next crucial five years'. Is it to be Mackenzie King with a tried and proven cabinet or is it to be Dr. Manion and his 'shadow' government". Dr. Manion was trying to sell the people of Canada on his "surprise package cabinet, said Mr. Bagwell, and although he has dressed the National Government up in a fancy label, after the whitewash has come off there will only be the same old "Tory" party remaining.

Says Gov't Already National

Holding as it did 180 seats out of 245, the Liberal party is already a National Government and will continue to be if it is returned to power on March 26', said the speaker, but advocated a continuance of the party system as the only way to run a country with a proper opposition to see that the other party "behaved itself".

"The question which you will have to decided on March 26 is, which government do you want to control Canada's destinies. Do you want Mackenzie King with his steady and reliable Cabinet around him, or do you want Dr. Manion with his 'surprise package' government?", askd Mr. Bagwell in conclusion.

War Measures Recounted

Mr. McLean Haig, official Liberal candidate for Hastings South, spoke briefly, touching on the establishment of the various wartime boards by the Mackenzie King Government, as well as recounting Canada's effort on the military front. He compared the present strength of the Canadian Navy with that of 1930-35 when the Bennett Government was in power. In the year 1935 we had in the Air force 23 aircraft, not one of which was fit for war service, said Mr. Haig, and quoted Air Vice-Marshal Bishop as saying of Canada's airforce of that time that it was "inferior to any in the world". Only a short time ago in Toronto the same man had said that Canada's airforce was "superior to any in the world".

"This is not just another election", said Mr. Haig in conclusion, "but upon the result determines the government which will conduct Canada's war effort. Remember that you are not only voting for a candidate, but also for whether you want Mackenzie King, or whether you want Dr. Manion and his "phantom" ministry to conduct the war".

Dr. H. A. Boyce acted as chairman for the evening and spoke briefly in refutation of Dr. Manion's statement that the soldiers of the first Canadian division, which went overseas, were not completely equipped with clothing.

"The first and only issue of this election is the successful prosecution of the war", stated Dr. Boyce in closing, "and although the Liberal party has often been tried, it has never been found wanting". The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

NORWAY, SWEDEN IN GRAVE DANGER

The Labor leader said the lesson to be learned from Finland was that "if you want to defeat aggression you must stand together."

Mr. Chamberlain had declared that the doctrine of neutrality under which Norway and Sweden had acted in the Finnish war was based on the assumption that anything was better for a small neutral than to be involved in a war between Germany and the Allies, and that it was a matter of indifference to small neutral states whether Germany or the Allies won. Of this Mr. Attlee said:

"Unless these assumptions are abandoned and the necessary deductions drawn from that abandonment, the policy of neutral states will neither correspond to realities nor be adequate to safeguard their interests."

Of Sumner Welles Mr. Attlee said: "I think he realizes the determination of the people of this country. I think he will know we all want peace and I think he will know too that we want a real peace, a peace of principle."

Answering critics who have been demanding a more vigorous government policy in the conduct of the war, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"When the responsibility rests upon the shoulders of the government we cannot be hustled into adventures which appear to us to present small chance of success, much chance of danger and perhaps disaster.

"The time and place for us to strike must be decided upon with the most expert advice that we can command.

Sees Danger Closer to Neutrals

"Nothing will or can save neutral countries," said Mr. Chamberlain, "but a determination to defend themselves and to join with others who are ready to aid them in their defence."

Answering his own question whether the security of Norway and Sweden had been preserved by the Russo-Finnish settlement, Mr. Chamberlain said "On the contrary, the danger has been brought closer than ever to those two countries; today it stands upon their doorstep."

Of Mr. Welles, the Prime Minister said: "I am confident he was able to get the actual views and sentiments of all sections of the community and see for himself the unity of purpose with which we are all inspired."

Answers German Claim

As to the claims of the Germans that they were bombing military objectives and not civilians at Scapa Flow, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"Whatever their intentions may have been, the House will know the facts and the responsibility for the consequences must rest upon the authors."

The government previously had announced that one civilian was killed and several injured in the raid.

"More Drive" Asked by Attlee

As soon as Mr. Chamberlain sat down after one of the longest war reports he had made, Clement Attlee, leader of the Opposition, rose and demanded more drive in the prosecution of the war.

"The initiative must not be left with Hitler," said Mr. Attlee, "We cannot have a policy of wait and see."

He demanded a strengthening of the home front and declared "the Prime Minister must in war be ruthless with inefficiency."

Approved By Council.

Speaking to a packed and often cheering House, the prime minister said the expedition had been approved by the Allied Supreme War Council Feb. 5 and was ready to leave at the beginning of March—two months before Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim, the Finnish commander, had asked for it to arrive.

Mr. Chamberlain said Baron Mannerheim in mid-January informed the British government he did not require men then, as his resources were sufficient to last until the spring thaw.

Making a vigorous defence of the help Britain and France had offered and given Finland, Mr. Chamberlain declared:

"We felt we must be ready also to provide a force to come to the assistance of Sweden if she were attacked by Germany."

He declared Germany had threatened Norway and Sweden with intervention if they gave assent to the passage of an allied expeditionary force.

"We decided to provide the largest force which would be permitted by the physical conditions we had to encounter," Mr. Chamberlain said, and added that Finland was informed "we were prepared to increase the original force to any extent and as rapidly as possible in the light of experience and military developments."

Did Not Hesitate To Meet Need.

"We did not hesitate even at risk of ourselves to meet the Finnish needs as far as possible and without delay," the prime minister continued.

The force ready to go, he said, would have begun to arrive in Scandinavia in March and all would have been there before the end of April.

Mr. Chamberlain said the Russo-Finnish peace was "a great tragedy" which had compromised Finland's "independence and integrity".

He declared that suggestions the Allies had failed in their obligations should come "least of all" from "individuals in countries far away from the seat of war".

Citing figures on what had been promised and sent Finland, he reminded the House that Britain herself was at war with "an unscrupulous and very powerful foe" and that "all requests received from neutrals must be continually weighed against our own needs."

May Help Finland Yet.

"That applies to Finland," he said, but in another passage asserted "perhaps our power to help Finland is not yet at an end."

In making public the list of military supplies promised and given Finland Mr. Chamberlain said:

"When charges were being bandied about that the aid which this government promised was out of proportion to what we were asked for, I think it right to give the list."

The prime minister said Finland was informed in February of the British-French plans with a suggestion that a public appeal for help be made not later than March 5. After that Britain proposed also to make a formal appeal to Normay and Sweden to allow passage of troops, he said.

Sweden Refused Request

"Finland replied that she would prefer to make an informal approach to the Swedish Government," Mr. Chamberlain continued. "The Swedish government replied that they would permit and facilitate the passage of munitions and volunteers in small groups, but that they could not grant passage for any regular armed forces because that would enlarge the area of war and turn Sweden into a battlefield."

Despite this, he said, " we did not discontinue preparations for dispatch of a force", but, he declared, "we could not possibly have forced help upon Finland"

Mr. Chamberlain went on to explain the negotiations for an expedition and finally Finland's failure to make a formal appeal and then her acceptance of the peace terms.

The House was so crowded that some members had to sit in the galleries.

Making his first statement on the progress of the war since he announced he Russo-Finnish peace March 8, Mr. Chamberlain said "I wish I could say that further reflection since then had in any way modified our first impression that a great tragedy had occurred".

Accepted Under Compulsion

"But unhappily", he added, "closer examination and consideration of the peace terms only confirm us in the view that they were in fact such as only could have been accepted by a proud people like the Finns under dire compulsion".

He declared that "inspite of all we did we were unable to save Finland from her fate, but perhaps our power to help Finland is not yet at an end."

This brought loud cheers.

Mr. Chamberlain spoke in a House so crowded that some members were compelled to sit in the galleries.

"If further aid is required I know this country will gladly take its share in contributing to the regeneration of Finland", he said.

"It was a bitter thought for all lovers of freedom that the prolonged and heroic defence of the Finns was in the end unable to withstand the overwhelming superiority in numbers and in equipment of their foes.

"If the Finns did in the end suffer defeat their stand was not in vain. They have preserved their honor. They have won the respect of all the world. Their government which fought the war still holds office. Their army is intact. The spirit of their people is unbroken.

"The collapse of Finnish resistance was a profound shock throughout the world. Once again we were compelled o see a small state the victim of that policy of aggression we have taken up arms to resist.

Mr. Chamberlain continued:—

"It was only to be expected that German propaganda would use this even to move responsibility from themselves and throw it upon others. But she (Germany) cannot escape her responsibility.

"Finland would never have been invaded if it had not been for the pacts between the Soviet and Germany. It was only German threats which terrified the Scandinavian countries into withholding help which might perhaps have saved her.

"No one can suggest that this country and France had failed in their obligations to do their utmost to assist Finland. Least of all should such suggestions come from individuals in countries far away from the seat of the war."

Prolonged cheers interrupted the Prime Minister here.

He continued: "It was right that we should ask ourselves whether we had a clear conscience in this matter and whether we did all we possibly could."

Reminding the House that Britain herself is at war, Mr. Chamberlain said "We are facing an unscrupulous and very powerful foe."

Germany Ready for Weeks

"For many weeks," he continued, "his forces have been mounted ready for an attack which could be delivered in a few hours.

"On our side we have been straining every nerve to build up our own forces of defence and of attacking, so necessarily all our strategy has been directed towards the main objective.

"All requests received from neutrals must be continually weighed against our own needs. That applies to Finland.

"It is well to bear in mind the geographical position of Finland in relation to this country, which renders the transport of material exceedingly difficult."

Recounting the diversity of requests for material made by Finland, Mr. Chamberlain said:—

"The Finns were justified in carrying their requests to us, but these variations made it difficult for us to plan ahead. Nevertheless every request was promptly considered and met as far as possible in view of our own needs."

Not Different from Promise

"On the whole," Mr. Chamberlain continued, "I think it will be found that what we sent was not very different from what was promised.

"As the position became more serious, the demands increased in number and in character. Some of the most pressing demands were received so late that although we promised to meet them we did not have time to dispatch the material before the terms of peace were announced."

Mr. Chamberlain said that 152 airplanes were promised Finland and 101 were sent, 223 guns of all kinds were promised and 114 sent, 297,200 shells were promised and 186,000 sent.

Other figures were: Vickers guns, 100 promised, all sent; marine mines, 500 promised, 400 sent; hand grenades, 50,000 promised, 20,700 sent; aircraft bombs, 15,700 promised and sent; signalling set, 1,300 promised, 800 sent; anti-tank rifles, 200 promised and sent; respirators, 60,000 promised and sent; great coats, 100,000 promised and sent; battle dress suits, 100,000 promised and sent; anti-tank mines, 20,000 promised, 10,000 sent, and ambulances, 48 promised and sent.

Finland and Sweden Nervous

"At the same time," continued Mr. Chamberlain in telling of the last-minute demands, "we were given to understand that both Finland and Sweden were narvous about reactions of Germany and they hoped that any forces sent would not be sent officially.

"These views of Baron Mannerheim were at once considered by the British cabinet. The cabinet felt that an effective force for aiding Finland was not possible on a volunteer basis and that reinforcements required for May would only be available if raised on an official basis as a properly organized expedition."

Food, Coal Shipping

Mr. Attlee asked whether everything possible was being done in regard to food, coal and shipping, and said:

"We want more intense work on supply and a greater utilization of our manpower. There still are 1,-400,000 unemployed. We are resolved to carry this thing through successfully, but do not make any mistake as to what we are up against."

The Liberal leader, Sir Archibald Sinclair, following Mr. Attlee said:

"The government seemed to have failed to realize soon enough the gravity of the situation in Finland. We must seizez the initiative and hold it.

"Everybody is asking what Hitler is going to do, what Mussolini is going to do, what Stalin is going to do. It's about time we asked what Chamberlain is going to do."

MAKING IT LOOK LIKE THE REAL THING

A very realistic effect in a Southampton street when a German plane "crashed" into a house during one of the largest A.R.P. demonstrations ever held in England. British soldiers comprised the crew of the plane and their attitude resembled nothing so much as dead airmen.

THUMBS UP!

The first squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force to arrive in England for service overseas were in high spirits as they disembarked from their transport ship. Typical of the Dominion's first air unit to arrive in England for active duty are these members of the 110th squadron.

There Were 2 Irishmen

By J. Y. BARBER

Seumas Gavan was Number One man and the only Irishman in the fourth ward—and there wasn't the whisper of a doubt about that. On Monday he lamented the need of hiring a dago to tend bar for him in his South street speakeasy, but by Saturday he was glad of it. Irishmen aren't temperamentally suited for co-operative occupations; they won't do as they're told. He was glad his blue-eyed Kathleen never argued with her father.

'Way back in the ancentry there may have been some weak strain that accounted for her passivity. It made Seumas more conscious than ever that he was the only Irishman in the ward. The only man of intellect and discernment, he'd almost say, except for that scavenger of the streets, Adolphus Gonwerz, whose insufferable exposes appeared now and again between the scrofulous lines of the local paper.

'Twas a black day indeed when Kathleen met Adolphus Gonwerz in the bar where Kathleen had no business at all. And a curse on the day when she came to her kind old father, him that was nearly killed with worry over trying to get a respectable liquor license, to ask his good will to their marriage.

"He's not the man," Seumas said abruptly.

"How, not the man?" Kathleen said too quietly even for her.

"He's the sort," said Seumas, "who writes about people that have died of murder. And it's insulting, he is, when he blackguards some worthy citizen in public life."

She would not, she said, let him alone. She said why she wouldn't and it took her five minutes to say it.

"Bu-but, he's a drinking man, he is," Seumas said with appeal. "He drinks like a fish and he be no good at all."

"Aye" said Kathleen "and that coming from you! May God have mercy on your soul for the narrowness of your heart. You've little to do to speak of that when it's your own grog he drinks. And it isn't true that he's no good. He's the best newspaper man in the town. And I like him. I love him!"

The debate had reached a point where Seumas realized he would have to assert himself. He leaned forward in his chair. He hissed softly. "I could break him. You know my power when I want to use it. Frame him! How would you like that?"

But Kathleen never moved. She looked at her father boldly. "Aye," she said. "Well, two can play at that game—if it's a fight you're looking for!" And with that she ran out of the room and out of the house and he didn't see her for days. The shame of it!

"I want to see her just try and marry that spalpeen," Seumas said to himself all day on Friday. Customers heard him as he whispered under his breath. They thought he was reciting the list of witnesses who would appear when he came up for his license hearing on the morrow and they let him concentrate.

But Seumas had forgotten all about the hearing until his attorney came down and took him to court. His reception there lulled him to contentment. Mr. Gavan was well thought of up town in certain circles. Not for long, however, did he smile benignly this way and that. His bright green eyes froze to the witness box. For there in the middle of everything sat Adolphus Gonwerz.

Not being familiar with the expediencies of the newspaper business Seumas didn't know that Adolphus had merely wandered in there in the course of his routine and that in ten minutes he would be discovered by a court attache and thrown out on his neck. Seumas' pain was so great that he beat himself upon the chest. Could Kathleen have been so angry then to put this notorious exposer onto him?

"I'm going home," he said to his attorney. "I'm sick now. No, I don't care about the license; to hell with it." And so Mr. Gavan went home feeling the power ooze out of him with every step of the way.

Evening came to Seumas Gavan in the little office that he maintained upstairs. He sat sullenly beside the speaking tube that connected his office with the bar and he wished that he had anticipated Katheen being at least half an Irishman. That was bitter, bitter! It made him very sorry. So absorbed was he that he failed to hear the buzzer until its third buzz.

The bartender's voice floated dimly to him through the tube:

"Kathleen's come home!"

"Aye" Seumas said noncommittally. He was abruptly the old Seumas and he had the look of a hawk over a calf. It would be now! and he would be brief but annihilating. The bartender took up a familiar refrain:

"Adolphus Gonwerz wants to know if he's good for your daughter—and he wants to congratulate you on getting your license today, sir!" It was incredible!

"Ha—have I got it?"

"You have!"

"He is!!"

Minto

Minto — On Thursday evening the Salem Young People held a progressive crokinole party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George McMaster. The meeting opened with hymn 156. Rev. Delve led in prayer. The Scripture lesson was read by Murney Johnston. Della McMaster read the minutes which were adopted.

The president then called on Della and Earl McMaster to take seats of honor while Annis Johnston read an address.

The address was signed on behalf of the Y.P.U. by Norma Sarles, president.

They were each presented with a lovely Bible. Della and Earl very capably responded. Hymn 109 was then sung. The Benediction was repeated.

The crokinole games began. The prizes were awarded to the following: ladies, Lela Johnston; men, Ernest Broadworth; ladies' consolation, Mae Johnston; men's consolation, Nathan Sine. Lunch was then served.

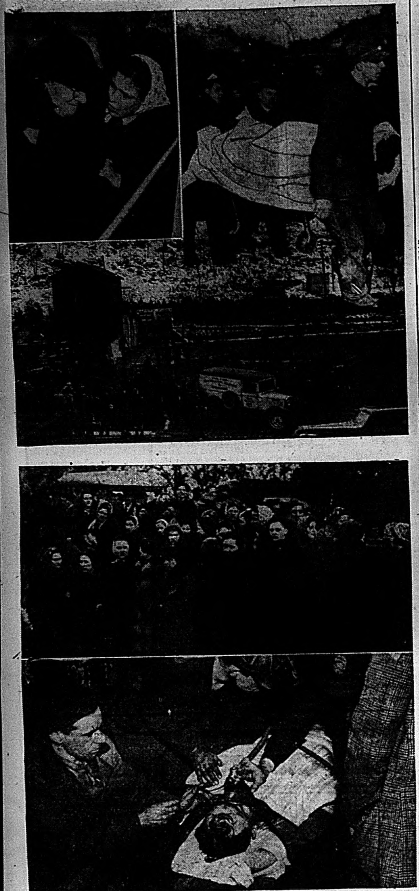
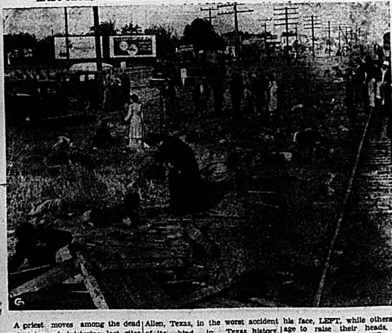
WHERE 65 MINERS WERE GIVEN UP FOR DEAD IN BLAST



These graphic photos from the scene of the explosion-torn Willow Grove coal mine at St. Clairsville, O., show a view of the mine, the sorrowing wife and daughter of one of the entombed men and a victim being carried from the mine. Rescue crews saved 113 but 65 others were given up for dead.

LAST RITES FOR DYING FRUIT PICKERS KILLED IN CRASH



A priest moves among the dead and dying administering last rites to some of the 25 fruit pickers who were riding in a truck when it was struck by a railroad train at McAllen, Texas, in the worst accident of its kind in Texas history. Twenty-five—women and children as well as men—were killed and 17 hospitalized. One of the dying holds his face, LEFT, while others manage to raise their heads. Almost like a scene from "Grapes of Wrath," these pickers, out of work for many weeks, were in search of a job at the time of the accident.

CANADA'S NAVAL OFFICERS STUDYING ABOARD SHIP THAT NEVER PUTS TO SEA

Lt. B. G. Siverts, instructor, second from right, is shown with Lt. St. Clair Balfour, Lt. W. Evans and Lt. S. S. Barr, grouped around the binnacle of the H.M.C.S. Stone Frigate.

One of the most important lessons taught aboard H.M.C.S. Stone Frigate is the use of the sextant and Lt. S. S. Barr, of Montreal; Lt. A. G. Osburne, of Vancouver; and Lt. D. D. Armour, of Oakville, Ont., are pictured on the quarter-deck of the Stone Frigate "shooting their position."

Hand-picked from Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve centres in all parts of the Dominion a group of young Canadian naval volunteers, averaging just under 30 years of age, are undergoing strenuous eight weeks' course aboard H.M.C.S. Stone Frigate at Kingston, Ont., to qualify as officers in the Canadian navy. These young men are smart. They are tough, too, and they have to prove their ability and smartness before they are aallowed to tread the bridge of a destroyer, a mine-sweeper or a sub-chaser. Tying knots is still an important part of every seaman's training and, ABOVE, a group of future officers are learning the fine points of tying the various knots used by sailors and seamen the world over.

SLEET STORM MAKES DRIVING DIFFICULT

A driving sleet and rain storm, beginning shortly after the supper hour last evening and continuing until ten o'clock when it turned to snow made driving conditions difficult on streets and highways throughout the district during the night. Traffic on all highways was slowed to a snail's pace, as drivers desperately tried to keep their vehicles in the road. So slippery did the roads become than even a slightly crowned surface was sufficient to send the car sliding towardsthe ditch and only a ridge of ice and snow left by snowplows at the curb kept many cars on the road. With a turn for the colder, however, conditions were considerably improved and many motorists who were held up earlier in the evening were on their way again at midnight.

TOGETHER AGAIN

Reunited after being a prisoner of the Spanish government for three years, Harold E. Dahl is shown coming down the gangplank with his wife after she had met him upon his arrival in New York. Flying for the Loyalists, Dahl was captured and would have been executed by General Franco's forces, but for the written pleas of Mrs. Dahl, a professional dancer, to General Franco.

BOMB TOO DEADLY

Bomb designer for the Baltimore Glenn L. Martin plant, Lester P. Barlow told the U. S. Senate Military Affairs Committee of an explosive so destructive that minutes of the session were burned to prevent the formula from falling into the hands of a foreign power. A combination of liquid oxygen and carbon, it is intended, he said, for use in mines. Barlow is shown with an aerial bomb he invented.

OVERHEATED PIPES GIVES BRIGADE RUN

Overheated stove pipes at the residence of Mr. J. Smith, Mary Street, led to an alarm being turned in at the local fire department yesterday afternoon but upon the arrival of the reels the danger was found to be over with no damage resulting, according to fire officials this morning. The excitement occurred in the absence of Mr. Smith who was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital recently as the result of three broken ribs suffered when he fell down the stairs at his home.

AN IMPASSIONED PLEA FOR PEACE

BRITAIN'S ANSWER TO U-BOAT WARFARE

A general view of one of the shipyards in Scotland where work goes on night and day building ships and more ships to fill the gaps created by German U-boat warfare. A merchant ship is launched every few days from a British shipyard and Britons claim that "we can build ships faster than U-boats can sink them." One of the reasons given for the transfer of the giant liner Queen Elizabeth to the safety of New York was that the great ship was occupying space badly needed in England.

WOMEN TAKE UP MEN'S DUTIES IN ENGLAND AS WAR MEASURE

With every available bit of manpower doing soldiery and filling in on jobs suitable to only men, women are being pressed into service to a greater and greater extent in England. Dr. Faith Polles, watched by Dr. Boycott, is shown at work with microscope, LEFT. They are but two of the number of women doctors who have been appointed to the Royal Army Medical Corps. The first time in history females have filled these roles. The women hold the rank of lieutenant and are being trained for work in France. Rosemary Smith, 16, CENTRE, has taken over the job of postman in Glynde. The man who held this post has been called to other duties. Miss Thala Bowman a tap-dancer, RIGHT, has gone back to the land and is seen here driving a tractor.

Italian newspapers refrained, as if by government suggestion, from writing of a possible "peace offensive," war offensive or any contemplated change in Italy's non-belligerency.

In diplomatic circles speculation on what transpired at the Brennero meeting centred on the possibility that Hitler and Mussolini are considering ways of "neutralizing" Germany's Balkan flank so as to free her for an offensive on the western front.

Talk of Rapprochement

There was talk, too, of a possible rapprochement between Italy and Soviet Russia before any three-way division of Balkan spheres of influence.

Diplomatic observers saw "neutralization" of the Balkans not only as a flank protection for Germany, but also as a means of assuring her an unbroken flow of supplies overland to counter the Allied naval blockade.

These sources believe that Hitler in his two and a half hour railway car conference yesterday with Il Duce sought assurance that Italy stands ready to consider throwing her active military support to Germany if the Reich should suffer too heavy losses in a smash on the western front.

Conjecture was the only available answer to the question of whether Hitler went back to Germany with such assurance.

New War of Nerves

(In London it was thought unlikely that Hitler attempted to persuade Mussolini to enter the war. Diplomatic circles there looked for a new phase of the "war of nerves," followed by a peace offensive, as the outcome of the Brennero talk. The idea of extending the axis to Moscow was regarded as an opening shot in the expected diplomatic campaign).

One foreigner may receive inside information on the talk—the United States Under-Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, who sails for the United States tomorrow to lay before President Roosevelt an extensive, detailed report on the European situation after nearly a month of inquiry in Rome and belligerent capitals.

Mussolini is expected to inform Mr. Welles of last minute developments before the diplomat leaves today for Genoa to board the liner Conte Di Savoia.

Whatever happened in the Premier's parlor car yesterday on the siding at the frontier station of Brennero it seemed to have pleased Mussolini for when he stepped from his train at Rome last night he wore a smile and at one point on the return trip, Bologna, joined a welcoming throng in the singing of Fascist songs.

Il Popolo Di Roma said "Revelations" published in the foreign press were "only the fruit of imagination."

"It can be said that Mussolini and Hitler must have examined all those questions which characterise the present moment in European politics," the newspaper went on, adding:

No Anticipation

"It would be useless and perhaps harmful to draw a hasty conclusion especially concerning Italy, which from the beginning, on last Sept. 2, clearly fixed her line of conduct toward the prime events in the war.

"Nothing today can authorise anybody to anticipate. What took place yesterday between Il Duce and the Fuehrer certainly cannot be a matter of easy comment".

The Italian government explained its non-belligerency on Sept. 2, the day before Great Britain and France went to war with Germany, by saying Hitler then considered aid unnecessary.

Il Messaggero commented that "the importance of events under way, their possible evolution and the intense diplomatic activity of recent weeks gave ample reasons for the meeting and long talk between the two chiefs—within the Axis, the Italian-German alliance and later agreements".

This newspaper sought to allay the nervousness of Italians over what might be in store for them, reminding them that "Il Duce is watching over the destinies of the Fatherland".

To Berlin's talk of a Rome-Berlin-Moscow Axis, usually well informed Rome sources replied that neither Russia nor Italy had taken a step toward improved relations, but it was acknowledged that Germany might assume the role of "matchmaker".

There were rumors of an impending conference between Von Ribbentrop and Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff, either in Berlin or Moscow.

HOW TO OVERCOME
ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

DR. MANION URGES REVISION

Says King Favors Big Interests

Dr. Manion said the choice before the people of Canada on March 26 is government by the people and for the people, or government "by the King Government for the big interests."

"If this country is to attain its great destiny, we must give a fair deal to all the people, to the farmers, to industrial employees, to business. If we permit a few to exploit this country, there will be an end to our system."

Although he recognizes countless big businessmen were performing great services to the country, there had been "a little clique of big interests" trying to dominate the scene. This little clique had said "come" and the followers had "come."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his colleagues are linked with this "clique," Dr. Manion said. The Conservative party had been the party of the masses and would so prove itself again.

Mr. King had accused him of scuttling the Conservative party in proposing a National Government, but to the contrary he was "leading the Conservative party in it's best traditions—placing the country first and the party second, and rising in the emergency above political ambitions."

Dr. Manion said Mr. King was both mentally and temperamentally unsuited to handle Canada's affairs in a time of crisis. The Prime Minister's record was one of futility, incompetence, unemployment, lack of defence—although Mr. King was boasting he had seen the war coming for three years.

While Liberals were describing his National Government as a phantom government, all governments were phantom until actually formed after election.

Responding to a roaring welcome, Dr. Manion said this meeting substantiated a growing indication of a great sweep on March 26.

Basic Issues Unchanged

Dr. Manion said the basic issues of the campaign had not changed since his first campaign speech of Brockville, Ont., on February 8. Those issues still were:

1—The record in peace and war of the King Government;

2—Parliamentary institutions;

3—The need of a National Government.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King had asserted that the issue was National Unity but Mr. King and his Quebec lieutenants".

While Mr. King posed as a great defender of democracy on one hand, on the other he stopped broadcasting of such meetings as this, had "gagged" parliament and was censoring speeches broadcast from studios.

Mr. King's whole history was a record of similar inconsistencies, of promises unfulfilled, as though a promise without action solved a problem.

No Freedom of the Ballot for Troops in Service

Freedom of the ballot has been destroyed for Canadian troops on active service, Lieut. Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative Leader, charged.

"Mr. King has good reason to know the men in uniform do not need to be told of his gross incompetence," said Col. Drew. "And so he has denied them the secrecy of their ballots.

"Under this system devised by Mr. King without consulting Parliament the soldier is handed a ballot which is put in an envelope, on which he must write his name and regimental number. Today in Kingston members of the Liberal committee are at the polls at the Vimy Barracks at the Signal Camp and at the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery Camp.

"Their purpose has not been left in doubt. The Minister of National Defence is running in a riding which has a very large percentage of military votes. No one in Canada will benefit more than Mr. Rogers from this outrageous denial of the right of free voting to the soldiers of Canada."

Col. Drew said "the very method of voting as planned and prepared before Parliament sat, and as soon as Mr. King dissolved Parliament he put into effect the decrees he had planned before that dissolution just as other dictators have done before."

The Prime Minister by repetition of the statement was seeking to convince the people of Canada that the First Division sent overseas was fully equipped and that our defence forces in Canada were fully prepared for the defence of Canada. Neither statement was correct, even though Defence Minister Norman Rogers might repeat them.

"I do not intend to waste any time on what Mr. Rogers says. That dyspeptic little son of Mars has been a standing joke in every military camp since he blossomed forth as our new war lord last September. Mr. King is the man who has been running this government as an absolute dictator, and, Mr. King is the man who must answer for the conduct of his government."

MANION CHARGES

Linked With Small Clique

The present government, he said, was linked with a small clique of "Big Interests" while the Conservative Party as it was had been the party of the masses and it would so prove itself again.

At Ottawa Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in a prepared statement that "there is no official censorship whatever or broadcasts in the present political campaign."

Political speakers and managers of privately-owned radio stations were put on what has been termed an "honor system", the Prime Minister said, to guard against broadcast of any statements infringing the defence of Canada regulations.

Mr. King said he had "grounds for believing" some speakers had inserted in their broadcasts statements which they knew in advance violated the defence of Canada regulations and which would be deleted by the station manager.

Smart Political Tactics Claim

Describing this procedure as "smart political tactics," the Prime Minister said he desired the people to know that restrictions regarded by the defence services as a war time necessity are not "a desire on the part of the government to limit discussion by its political opponents.

Censorship regulations set up immediately after the war provided "rigorous control" of dissemination of information on war matters and particularly of information broadcasts from Canadian stations.

These regulations were modified shortly after the election was called, Mr. King said, putting privately owned station managers and political speakers on their honor.

"In other words, censorship of political speeches on the radio was suspended during the period of the election campaign.

"Necessity to observe the Defence of Canada regulations obviously remains, as there also remains the necessity of observing existing laws in regard to sedition, libel and other matters. For years this necessity has placed a responsibility on owners of radio stations, proprietors of newspapers and others."

Mining Industry Neglected

At Geraldton, Ont., Charles McCrea, former Ontario Conservative Minister of Mines, charged that the Dominion administration of Prime Minister Mackenzie King had neglected the mining industry and that the Excess Profits tax was a "death blow" to new mines.

"It is time we had someone down in Ottawa with knowledge of the mining industry to safeguard it throughout Canada," Mr. McCrea said.

Canada was a "prize" at stake in the war and the King Government had made inadequate preparations for the conflict. Mr. King had stopped completion of national arsenals which would have provided needed armaments and equipment for Canadian troops.

Must Accept Sacrifices

At St. Lambert, Que., Hon. Sam Gobeil, former Conservative Postmaster-General, said that to obtain victory in the war "we must accept all the sacrifices, including conscription, if that be necessary."

"Conscription is the logical conclusion of participation," Mr. Gobeil said. "The Prime Minister, the Leader of the Opposition, the Liberal and Conservative leaders are all against conscription. That is their right. But it is not logical.

"But, when they go to the point of saying that there will be no conscription, they go much too far, and I fear that they are letting themselves be carried away by the desire to gild the pill for the electors."

"We are at war to defend the integrity of the realm, to defend our political liberties and our religious rights," Mr. Gobeil said. "We must therefore pursue the war to the limit, to victory. To obtain that victory, we must accept all the sacrifices, including conscription, if that be necessary.

"When the Liberal Government, over the signature of Mr. Lapointe ((Justice Minister), ratified the declaration of war promulgated by the King, at that moment, young men, the government took a mortgage on your lives and decided that you would go to war. The number of soldiers is a matter to be decided by circumstances. When voluntary enlistment is no longer sufficient, you will have conscription."

A Sacred Duty

Participation in the war—up to the limit of conscription—is "a sacred duty," Works Minister Cardin said at Rigaud, Que.

Mr. Cardin said, "I am in favor of Canada's participation and I know this is no popular thing to preach here in the Province of Quebec.

"Answering the call of duty is not always the thing that draws plaudits. But I am convinced that our participation is a sacred duty—participation, that is, up to the limit of conscription."

The Liberal Government had urged participation in the war not because Britain had requested assistance, but because Canada was alert to her responsibilities as a free nation.

Mr. Cardin asked if it were not true that under British Dominion French-Canadians—and all Canadians for that matter—had reached the highest pinnacle of liberty. If religious principles and the unaleinable right of language had remained inviolate in Canada it was due primarily to the protection of the British flag.

Oppose Participation is Claim

Supporters of the National Government party in Quebec were those who opposed Canada's participation in the war in the provincial election last October, Hon. C. G. Power, Postmaster General, said at Hamilton. (In the Quebec election, the Liberal party succeeded the Union Nationale Government).

There was a growing interest throughout the Dominion as to how Quebec felt and what it would do in the Federal election. Quebec had settled its stand on war—it was whole-heartedly in support of the country's pledge to stand shoulder to shoulder with Motherland.

Mr. Power, who represented Quebec South in the last parliament, said Quebec asked Ontario and all Canada to join in keeping the country united. Quebec was not lagging behind but was prepared to carry its full burden. In this conflict Quebec was actually ahead of the rest of Canada, for it had declared its stand in a provincial election.

After three years under the Union Nationale Government the province "had been so honey-combed with favoritism, partisanship and graft" that it was brought to the verge of bankruptcy. Maurice Duplessis, then premier, "to save his face and his government" had appealed to the fear of conscription in the hope of being returned to office.

The Dominion Government had appealed to the people of Quebec with the result that they had voted solidly in support of Canada's war effort and placed a Liberal Government in power.

A United Canada

"We brought a United Canada into the war", said Mr. Power.

At Brockville, Ont., Trades Minister Euler charged that Dr. Manion had voiced a different policy for each part of Canada visited.

The question before the electors of Canada was whether the government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King will be given a mandate to continue Canada's good work toward the successful prosecution of the war or turn the task over to an inexperienced party leader who had failed to enunciate a platform for his proposed National government.

The Mackenzie King Government had carried out its preparation for war in such an efficient manner that within three weeks of its declaration, 64,000 men had been enlisted and equipped. Twenty-five thousand Canadians were across the Atlantic a month before Australians and New Zealanders arrived in Egypt.

Youth Program Urged

A youth program "in recognition of the humanitarian needs of the young people of Canada" was urged at Toronto by Denton Massey, National Government candidate for Toronto Greenwood riding, in a half-hour broadcast address over a network of Ontario stations.

Mr. Massey outlined a 12-point program proposed by the National Government party under a ministry of youth "to deal solely with the problems of Young Canada, in time of war, and to prepare to meet the problems in peace following the war."

"This program provides for the creation of jobs, not just a work-and-wages program so that tens of thousands of young Canadians may earn a temporary living off the government, but in the development of the natural resources of Canada and in stimulating and giving encouragement to new industries".

Dependent on Taxation

At Middleton, N.S., Revenue Minister J. L. Ilsley said that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation could not be made to pay for its own way and was absolutely dependent on taxation of one form or other to provide the necessary service.

Mr. Ilsley said the present radio licence fee of $2.50 a year for each receiving set was necessary to provide the service demanded by radio listeners.

The Revenue Minister believed more assistance must be given to Annapolis Valley fruit growers. And if the apple industry was to be preserved more assistance must be given the growers in relation to costs of production.

Supporting participation Premier Godbout said at Quebec "we entered the conflict to prevent from spreading over the world Nazi domination which would destroy civilization, our spiritual life and the fear of our economic life. We will go back on none of our duties."

At Prince Albert, Sask., J. G. Diefenbaker, Saskatchewan Conservative leader, said the National Government would raise the price-level of Agricultural products.

The conscription question also was mentioned at Petrolia, Ont., by Captain Roy Brown, Canadian flying ace of the first Great War, who said "regardless of who gets into power we are going to have conscription in this country."

Speaks on Ballot

M. A. MacPherson, National Government candidate in Regina, said at Victoria that an Order-in-Council providing for Canada's Active Service vote put the secrecy of the ballot in jeopardy. In Toronto, Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, declared freedom of the ballot had been destroyed for Canadian troops on active service. Col. Drew also continued his attack on Defence Minister Rogers and said the Minister "has been a standing joke in every military camp since he blossomed forth as our new war lord last September.

AT THE BELLE

"I TAKE THIS WOMAN"

America's Number One Glamour Girl and the king of the screen's character stars are joined romantically in "I Take This Woman", dramatic romance of New York with Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr, now at the Belle Theatre.

Directed by W. S. Van Dyke 11, the play deals with a social butterfly who, after a wrecked romance, finds her real love and happiness at the side of an earnest scientist working for the public good in a tenement clinic. Action ranges from fashionable night clubs and fashion salons to the tenements. Dramatic highlights include an attempted suicide and rescue, an encounter with a former lover, and a powerful dramatic sequence in which the woman realises she is about to ruin the life of the man she really loves.

Verree Teasdale has the chief comedy role and Kent Taylor plays Tracy's rival in love. Other players include Laraine Day, Mona Barrie, Jack Carson, Paul Cavanaugh, Louis Calhern, Frances Drake; Marjorie Main George E. Stone, Willie Best, Don Castle, Dalies Frantz and Reed Hadley.

Elaborate settings include the Zebra Club, its pillars formed by huge carved zebras an elaborate fashion show with beautiful models in colorful new modes; penthouses and other typical bits of New York. Miss Lamarr wears of number of exotic gowns, and an elaborate musical score contributes glamour to the romantic sequences.

Emergency Squad, Thrilling

The daredevil heroes of the "suicide battalion", those romantic trouble-shooters who take on a big city's toughest assignments, go into action once again—this time on the screen—in Paramount's newest thrill drama, "Emergency Squad", which is announced as the companion feature attraction.

Whenever the "Emergency Squad", is called out, you can count on action, and this holds true for the first film to deal with a service that performs a thousand deeds of heroism in the course of its normal work, yet hardly ever gets in the headlines!

With Louise Campbell, William Henry, Richard Denning and Robert Paige turning in interesting and energetic performances as a girl reporter and three young men in service, "Emergency Squad" recounts the amazing adventures of the "suicide battalion" as seen through the eyes of a lady of the press assigned to get a story on it.

Highlight of the seven important news events revealed in the popular Belle News of the Hour are, Britain's 85,000-ton Queen Elizabeth braving submarine-infested sea on its dramatic maiden voyage, arrives in America for safe keeping. Giant $20,000,000 floating palace zigzagged across the North Atlantic in 8 days under convoy, running Nazi gauntlet of bombs, mine and U-boats.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Remember the Night"

Good boy meets bad girl. Result—great picture.

That's "Remember the Night," the scintillating, fast-moving romance starring Barbara Stanwyck and Fred MacMurray which is now playing at the Capital Theatre. It's a cinch for a top spot in any "ten best" list.

Directed by Mitchell ("Midnight") Leisen from an original screenplay by Preston ("Strictly Dishonorable") Sturges, "Remember the Night" is remarkable because it is both "sophisticated" and "homespun" at times, and thoroughly entertaining throughout. It's funny, it's clever, it's tender and it's sympathetic wholesome entertainment for the whole family.

"Remember the Night," is the story of a young district attorney, played by MacMurray, who goes soft on a young and beautiful jewel thief whom he is trying to send to jail, and bails her out so that she won't have to spend Christmas in jail. But the girl has no place to go and tags along with him on a trip back home to his mother's farm in Indiana. He falls in love with her and there follows a series of adventures and situations which reach a new high in screen entertainment.

The supporting cast of "Remember the Night" is headed by Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson and Sterling Holloway, all of whom turn in excellent work.

A group of select short subjects complete the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

Fredide Stone, Belleville's violinist and imitator extraordinary, whose wizardry with his chosen instrument has earned him a finalist position with Ken Soble's amateur program in Toronto, was a feature at the McCarthy theatre on Monday night.

Freddie delighted the audience with his band-box musical revue which featured Ross Sweet as master of ceremonies, Ellen MacFarland in a Highland Fling, Betty McCann, the girl with the golden voice and Mildred Day, the tip-tap girl with lots of oomph. Billy and Clarence Sligh, the guitar kings, and the inimitable Johnny Lloyd on the banjo provided the supporting musical entertainment for Mr. Stone while Mr. Lloyd's solo singing had to be heard to be believed.

Entirely local in flavor the revue was exceptionally well presented and was a decided treat to a splendid movie bill of fare. Richard Dix Chester Morris and Lucille Ball headed the cast of a rollicking, adventurous movie story entitled "The Marines Fly High." You may take it from us that Freddy Stone's new imitations are the goods. There is magic in his touch and his violin innovations were given with such a novel flair that they are almost unbelievable. After seeing them we can well understand why he made such an outstanding hit with the Toronto movie audiences.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was on my stummick half ways through Paul Peppy Under the Sea, and pop said, Have you done your homework?

I was just going to finish this chapter first, I said, and pop said, Then you'll just do your homework first. Procrastination is a long word and you may not even know it in its uncooked state, but when I boil it down to laziness you'll reckonize it immediately in a conscience stricken burst of light, he said.

Well aw G, pop, what good's homework, I mean I'm almost sure to forget everything in my homework, but I bet you can ask me any question about any Paul Peppy book I ever read, I said, and pop said, What's on page 82 of Paul Peppy Caught in a Mouse Trap?

There's no such of a Paul Peppy and I mean a serious question such as what Paul Peppy swapped the South American Indian for his map to the berried treasrue in Paul Peppy in the Andes, and I bet that's more than you can say about the things in the homework you used to study, I said. I bet you cant even tell me how many bones in the human body right now? I said, and pop said, Of course I can.

Then how many? I said, and pop said, That depends.

Well why does it, they've all been counted, haven't they? I said, and pop said, Yes indeed, they've been checked and double checked, and most of the time they come out exactly the way they were counted, but if you ever happen to have the flue so badly that every bone in your body akes, you'll find to your consternation that their number is legion, wich is Frentch for terrific, and that's what I mean when I say it depends, and if you think you can trap me into telling you the answers to your homework you're quite wrong, and now get busy.

Wich I did feeling against it.

Tonder, Denmark, March 20 (CP)—Shore observers today saw that one of the four anti-aircraft towers between the mainland and Sylt was missing after the British attack on the German base there was resumed with violence almost equal to the great seven-hour raid of last night and this morning.

Fog lifted at 4 p.m. (10 a.m. EST) to permit observers some idea of the damage caused by the terrific bombing. The missing anti-aircraft tower apparently was the victim of a direct bomb hit. The towers are manned by machine-gunners.

Why The Weather?

Spring equinox! Some ancient monuments still standing indicate certain astronomical relations, as, for instance, fixing the direction of the sun's rising and setting at the solstices (June 21 and Dec. 21.) This was done by sighting along two stones. Equinox is midway between the solstices. Today the sun rises due east and sets due west; and at both the North and South Poles, it is seen all day long just at the horizon. Spring Equinox marks the beginning at the South Pole of the long winter night, and at the North Pole of the six-month day. It is the beginning of spring, and marks the passing of winter's severity and the coming of the gentler Spring for all in the northern hemisphere.

POLITICAL PARTIES NOT DESIGNATED ON THE BALLOTS

Electoral Laws of Canada Forbid the Placing of Party Affiliation After the Candidate's Name

STATEMENT BY KING

(By the Canadian Press)

A dispute over war contracts threatened today to dominate the last days of the Dominion election campaign following Conservative Leader Manion's accusation that the Liberal government is trying to win the election by bribery.

A lagging campaign was sparked into new activity last night by Dr. Manion who told a Montreal meeting he had received a telegram advising him the government had awarded a $5,000,000 war contract in a western Ontario town in what he described as an apparent attempt to buy the riding's support for the government candidate. He did not name the town.

The government is going "to try and buy up the country," he stated. "I'm going to warn them that they cannot attempt to win with bribery like that in the last week of the elections."

Meanwhile in Windsor, Ont., Labor Minister McLarty told a meeting in his constituency that he visualized the end of unemployment in the district as a result of the $5,000,000 war contracts for industries in Windsor, announced yesterday.

(The War Supply Board in Ottawa last night announced the placing of an order for more than $9,000,000 worth of motor vehicles, the orders to be equally divided between motor plants in Windsor and Oshawa, Ont.)

At Ottawa, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in a prepared statement, said the government had no responsibility to see that party affiliations of candidates were made known to voters and also denied statements of political opponents that the Active Service vote was not secret.

Not Government Responsibility

Of statements relating to failure of candidate lists to show party affiliations, the Prime Minister said opponents of the administration had tried to make it appear this was a government responsibility.

"The complete answer to this misrepresentation of the facts is contained in the electoral laws of Canada which, in the particulars mentioned, have been the same since Confederation," Mr. King said in a 1,000-word statement.

"Under these laws no political party is recognized as such. The printed ballots and the printed lists of names of candidates contain only the names of candidates, their addresses and occupations.

FRENCH PREMIER AND HIS CABINET RESIGN OFFICE

Over 300 Absentees When Vote of Confidence Taken and Daladier Decided to End Government

MAY FOR ANOTHER

President LeBrun Likely to Ask Daladier to Form New, Smaller War Government

Paris, March 20.—(AP)—Premier Edouard Daladier resigned today amid criticism of France's prosecution of the war against Germany and President Albert LeBrun asked Finance Minister Paul Reynaud to form a "war cabinet".

The President called in Reynaud, who has been notably successful at his Finance Post, after Daladier's Radical-Socialist party announced the retiring Premier's refusal to attempt a new combination.

Daladier declined in conformity with "parliamentary tradition", it was announced. That meant he interpreted as an expression of disapproval of his conduct of the war a minority vote of confidence which the Chamber of Deputies had given him earlier in the day.

Although the vote was 239 to 1 in his favor, there were more than 300 abstentions in the total Chamber membership of 551.

Daladier handed the resignation of his 22-man government to the president at Elysee Palace shortly after a vote of confidence from the Chamber of Deputies which, because of about 300 abstentions, represented active support from only a minority.

The vote was 239 to one and was accomplished by a call for acceleration and extension of the war against Germany—similar to an earlier mandate from the senate.

Daladier had given notice that he intended to revise his government and it was likely that Lebrun, after accepting the collective resignation, would call on Daladier to form a new, smaller war government.

LEADER OF SECT AND 100 OTHERS ARRESTED AFTER CLASH

Bombay, March 20—(AP)— Inayatullah Khan, Cambridge-educated leader of the Khaksar Sect, and 100 others were arrested today as a sequel to a clash between Khaksars and police at Lahore yesterday in which 28 persons were killed, including two policemen, and 37 injured.

The Khaksar organization, made up of militant Moslems armed with spades, has been declared illegal.

BLACKBIRDS DIE BY HUNDREDS

Shreveport, La., Mar. 20 (AP).—Blackbirds by the hundreds dropped dead from the sky at Barksdale Field, cluttering the army airbase so thickly that its police were called out to clear the ground. A soldier said large flocks of the birds would break flight suddenly and plop to the ground. Some of the dead birds were taken to the post hospital where flight surgeons began autopsies.

War Supply Board Has Placed $150,000,000 in War Contracts

Ottawa, Mar. 20 (CP).—War contracts worth more than $150,000,000 have been awarded by the War Supply Board and its predecessor, the Defence Purchasing Board, including a contract of more than $9,000,000 for motor vehicles and a $1,135,000 contract for converting two Canadian passenger vessels into armed merchant cruisers.

The board, headed by Wallace Campbell, Windsor, late yesterday issued latest figures on its activity showing contracts let from July 14, 1939, to March 1, 1940, were valued at $142,573,838. A few hours later it was announced that an order for 7,302 vehicles had been placed with General Motors of Canada at Oshawa, Ont., and with Ford Motor Company of Canada, Windsor, Ont.

The vehicles include general service trucks, lorries and tractors to be used by the first and second divisions of the Canadian Active Service Force and Auxiliary Forces. The contract will be divided about equally between the two motor companies.

Two Passenger Ships Converted.

The two passenger ships being converted into armed merchant cruisers are the Prince Robert and the Prince David, purchased some years ago by the Canadian National Steamships, Limited, for the triangle service between Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle.

The Prince Robert, which carried the King and Queen from Victoria to Vancouver last May 31 during their visit to Canada, will be converted by the Burrard Drydock Company, Limited, of North Vancouver, B.C., and the Prince David by the Halifax Shipyards, Limited, of Halifax. The Prince Robert has been in the Alaskan service recently while the Prince David has been laid up in Halifax for several years following an accident in the West Indies.

Other war contracts include practically every article needed by a modern fighting force, with the exception of weapons, and most of them were announced previously in the board's weekly lists.

Canada's War Effort Theme Of Minister of Defence At Rally for McLean Haig

No Political Nor Personal Interest Allowed to Interfer With Unity of War Effort, Says Hon. Norman Rogers Speaking at Collegiate Institute Here

MANION ASSAILED

Defence Minister Says King Government Offers People of Canada Ideal National Government — Declares No Troops Ever Left Canada So Well Equipped as First Division of the C.A.S.F.—Discusses Equipment

No political nor personal interest has been allowed to interfere with Canada's war effort, stated Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, speaking at the Belleville Collegiate on Tuesday evening in behalf of the election of Mr. McLean Haig, Liberal candidate in South Hastings. The minister, who opened his address with a prediction of an overwhelming victory for the King Administration, spoke for about eighty minutes on the work of the government in fitting Canada to play her part in the defence of the Empire and democracy.

"I have yet to find any instance where a military officer had received an appointment through political patronage," he asserted.

He attacked the Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, National Government leader, for his vague charges against the Department in Canada's war effort and said he had repeatedly called for the facts in connection with such charges. Charges should be specific so that there might be an investigation. Instead of presenting such specific charges, Dr. Manion, the Minister said, had continued making the charges.

Mr. Rogers said that "if criticism passes normal bounds it affects our fighting services and my duty is to protect the morale of our fighting services and I intend so to do."

Organized for Long and Total War

The war effort was organized on the basis of a long and total war, he told the audience.

He said that he had never for a moment denied there was a problem over equipment due to transition from a peacetime to a wartime basis. The plan of the government had been to organize as soon as possible a continuous stream of equipment as the services might require it. There had been a tem-

"Fact Finder" for President Roosevelt Has Visited 4 Capitals in Europe

Genoa, Italy, March 20—(AP)—Sumner Welles, United States Under-Secretary of State and fact finder for President Roosevelt, sailed for the United States today on the Conte Di Savoia, winding up his tour of European capitals.

Before leaving Rome yesterday Welles said that no peace plan or mediation proposals had been offered him by any belligerent or other European government.

He also declared emphatically that he had not conveyed suggestions for peace to any European power. He said he was taking "facts" and no peace proposals back to Washington for study by President Roosevelt.

FINLAND RATIONS MEAT

London, Mar. 19 (CP).—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Helsinki said Finland's first meat rationing—of pork and pork products—was begun today.

BRITAIN FIGHTS IN HER OWN WAY NOT IN CRITICS'

War Secretary Says Critical Neutrals Teach Dangerous Lesson

NO ONE INDIFFERENT

Britain Wars Against Ideals of Germany, 'Those of Attila the Hun'

London, Mar. 20 (CP).—War Secretary Oliver Stanley replied to critics of Britain's war effort in the United States and other neutral countries by declaring to a luncheon audience today that "we intend to fight in our own way and not in their way".

He said the foreign pres shad criticized Britain for a lack of enterprise and initiative.

"This is a dangerous lesson for neutrals to teach," he said, adding that "we are now learning that persons who ignore the rights of neutrals" receive their admiration.

Mr. Stanley, addressing the National Defence Society, lashed out at those who call this, "in language culled from the ringside, a phoney war."

Ocean No Barrier To Ideas.

This is a phrase, said the war minister, used by people who, after a good dinner, sit down and urge two fighters to tear each other to pieces.

Speaking of 'Germany's challenge', Mr. Stanley said that people across the ocean are thinking "how are we going to keep out of it, but they are in it."

"No one can remain indifferent to the result of the struggle," he said. "Do they (neutrals) really think that if we lose life can go on as they know it?

"An ocean may be a good barrier to aircraft, but it's no barrier to ideas."

Against Ideals of the Hun.

Mr. Stanley said Britain is fighting for an end of German ideals—"those of Attila the Hun."

He said that if Britain had not gone to war the people in the United States would have said, "Why aren't you fighting?" Today people in the United States are saying, according to Mr. Stanley, "We can't understand the war."

"None can remain indifferent to the result of the struggle," he said. "They may be lucky. We may fight their battles for them."

Roman Hackle Wins Cheltenham Cup

Cheltenham, England, March 20.—(CP Cable)—Miss Dorothy Paget's Roman Hackle, the even money choice, today won the Cheltenham old Cup, 3 1-4 mile steeplechase second in importance only to the Grand National. It was Miss Paget's sixth victory in this race.

Roman Hackle won easily, finishing 10 lengths ahead of Mrs. C. Jones' Black Hawk, 20 to 1, with a further two lengths separating Black Hawk and Mrs. Camille Evans' Royal Mail in third place.

Royal Mail, winner of the Grand National in 1937 and a candidate this year, was backed at 100 to 8 in the field of seven.

DEAD CLAMS CREATE PROBLEM

Longport, N.J., Mar. 20 (AP).—This small seashore town is worrying about what to do with Mother Ocean's latest gift: several million dead clams. For weeks the ocean has been washing them in at high tide, and now in some places the beach is covered three feet deep with clams. Four years ago the ocean presented Longport with the remains of a 20-ton whale. That crisis was met with a match and 500 gallons of fuel oil.

Claims Defensive Measure Would Clash With Treaty

Russian News Agency Announces it Was Authorized to Publish Statement as Government's Position

BOTH PARTIES BOUND

Defensive Pact Among Finland, Norway and Sweden May be Pressed Despite Russia's Declaration

Moscow, March 20.—(AP)—Soviet Russia has turned thumbs down on any defensive alliance among Scandinavian States and Finland on the ground that it would be "aimed at the U.S.S.R." and in conflict with the Russian-Finnish Peace Treaty.

The official Russian News Agency, Tass, announced today that it was authorized to publish this as the Russian Government's position.

"The Foreign Press alleges that negotiations are going on among Finland, Sweden and Norway on conclusion of a so-called 'defensive alliance' for the purpose of military protection of the frontiers of Finland", said the announcement.

"It is also alleged that the Soviet Union does not object to such a 'defensive alliance, among Finland, Sweden and Norway.

"Tass is authorized to state that these reports on the attitude of the Soviet Union do not correspond to the facts".

Situation Clear

Tass added that statements in the Norwegian parliament had made it clear that such combination "would be aimed against the U.S.S.R. and would directly contradict the (Finnish-Russian) Peace Treaty".

Article 3 of the March 12 Treaty at Moscow, which ended 3 1-2 months of war between Finland and Russia, binds each party not to conclude an alliance or join any coalition against the other

(Some Finnish and Scandinavian quarters had held that a defensive alliance, if not directed specifically against the Soviet Union, would not be barred by this Article.)

The Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, guiding body of the Russian parliament, last night followed up the Finnish parliament's ratification of the treaty with its own formal approval. Two Finnish representatives, Juho Paasikivi and Vaino Voinonmaa, had arrived by plane a short while before for the exchange of ratification instruments.

May Be Pressed

Stockholm, March 20—(AP)—Intimations that a suggested defensive pact among Finland, Sweden and Norway may be pressed despite Soviet Russia's declaration that it would be aimed at her came today from official Scandinavian quarters.

"The Soviet views appears founded on a misunderstanding," said Swedish Foreign Minister Christian Gunther. "The suggested alliance could not be other than a purely defensive arrangement in which the three countries would provide common resistance to any attack."

In Oslo, Norwegian Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht confined his comment to a statement that no negotiations on the pact had been started and that Moscow apparently was in error on this point.

In Helsinki, Finnish Foreign Minister Vaino Tanner reiterated previous statements to the effect that the suggested alliance would "not be directed against any specific state" but would be designed to "keep northern states' neutrality intact against any aggressor no matter who he may be."

Visit of Girl With Her Niece Brings About Confusion, Tumult in Home

Boston, March 20.—(AP)—This is the story of a girl, her cat, her dog, her white rat and her aunt Take a deep breath and begin:

Jean Scola, 188, visited her 10-year-old niece, Palvora Starr, last night. The stork visited Palvora's cat, Puccini. Puccini, distraught at becoming a mother for the first time, attacked Snookie, Palvora's white rat.

Jean went to the rescue. The cat bit her finger but Jean retrieved the rat and held it under a faucet in an effort to revive it. The rat drowned. This tumult in the kitchen brought Palvora on the run. She took after the cat, which ran into the bedroom.

In the room was Beauty, Palvora's puppy. Palvora picked up Puccini which is the cat, and started to chastise her for biting the rat, whereupon Beauty which is the dog took a nip out of Palvora.

Palvora and Jean went to city hospital for treatment, physicians ordered the cat and dog tested for rabies, and police, after reconstructing the details, retired, exhausted.

Napanee, Ont., March 20. (Staff)—"The time has come when the Canadian Criminal Code should be amended to the point where it would be a criminal offence, punishable by a jail sentence without the option of a fine, for any man to inadequately equip the armed forces of Canada in wartime", declared Lieut.-Colonel Geo. A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader in a scathing attack upon the war efforts of the King Administration, here yesterday afternoon.

Speaking before an enthusiastic crowd of six hundred people in the Armouries, the speaker lashed the alleged inadequacy of the equipment of Canada's overseas and home divisions. He laid down the full force of his eloquence on the Large Array of Business Men Organized for S. A. Campaign

25,000 Workers Under Chairmanship of Senator Meighen Engaged in Raising Funds

LITTLE PAID HELP

Brigadier H. Chas. Tutte, the National Campaign Director of the Red Shield War and Home Service Campaign of the Salvation Army, stated in connection with the opening of the great nation-wide campaign, that a widespread organization, under the chairmanship of the Rt. Hon. Senator Arthur Meighen, P.C., K.C., has been built up in the towns and cities of the Dominion and over four hundred campaign committees are now in operation.

This campaign was launched under the distinguished patronage of the late Lord Tweedsmuir, Baron of Elsfield, P.C., G.C.M.G., G.H., Governor-General of Canada.

The confidence of the citizens of the Dominion is shown in the splendid array of national leaders who have endorsed the campaign, and also the array of business executives numbering approximately 25,000, who are organized to raise the necessary funds to carry on the Army's activities, both at home and overseas. The Salvation Army enters the campaign hopefully.

Office accommodation for Campaign Headquarters in many cities has been given rent free and the National Campaign Headquarters, in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, was voluntarily placed at the disposal of the National Director and his staff, free of charge. Many hundreds of office workers have generously given, and are still giving, their service for the preparation of lists and cards.

Probably no campaign of this kind has been put on with less paid help, and where assistance for technical work has been necessary, it has been employed at the request of local committees, secured economically and in no case on a percentage basis, which is entirely foreign to Salvation Army principles.

POLITICAL PARTIES NOT DESIGNATED

The responsibility of ascertaining the party affiliations of candidates is that of the voter himself.

"Since political parties are not officially recognized by the constitution it would be improper for the officials who administer the Election Act to attempt to give party labels to the various candidates"

Mr. King said it had been alleged that the vote of Active Service electors is not secret. He described the method by which the Active Service vote is taken, under which the voter marks his ballot secretly, places it in an unmarked envelope which is then placed in a second envelope bearing the voters name and address.

OBITUARY

REV. W. S. BOYCE
(Brighton)

Brighton, March 20 —(Special)— Rev. W. S. Boyce, retired United Church minister, died yesterday in his seventy-second year at his home in Brighton. He retired sixteen years ago after ministries at Flinton, Arden, Morgan, Courtice and other places in the Bay of Quinte circuit. He was born in this district and educated at Albert College and McGill University. After retiring, he came to Brighton to reside.

Surviving are his widow, a son, W. T. Boyce, Hamilton, and two daughters, Mrs. D. Penfound of Courtice and Mrs. E. Clarke, Oshawa. Funeral will be Thursday with interment in Brighton.

THE LATE JAMES WILLIAMS
(Rawdon)

Rawdon, March 20 —(Special)— The funeral of James Williams was held on Monday afternoon at Mount Pleasant Rawdon United church with a large number of Rawdon friends in attendance. The pastor, Rev. J. E. Beckel, brought a comforting message to the bereaved using the text found in 1st John: "We shall be like Him." The choir rendered "Unto the hills around do I lift up my longing eyes," and the hymns were favorites of the deceased, "Abide with me," and "O God of Bethel." The pastor said the cemetery adjoining would ever remain a monument to the deceased and truly he had run the race and received his crown.

The following pall bearers were chosen by the deceased and were all members of the official board of Rawdon circuit: Messrs. B. C. Tucker and C. U. Heath of Bethel; Edward Todd and Carl Clancy of Wellmans; Frank Spencer and Ross Hoard of Mount Pleasant. The honorary pall bearers were members of the board who were present, namely Messrs. John Holmes, Roy Thrasher, Irvin Reid, Edgar McKeown, Allan Bailey, James Sharp, Ernest White of Mount Pleasant, George Watson and Clifford Clancy of Wellmans.

Several members of the I.O.O.F. No. 239 attended in a body and conducted the last rites of the order at the vault where the remains were laid, Brothers George Weaver, Chaplain, and Earl Fox conducting the solemn ceremony.

The three daughters, Blanche, Mrs. Will Millsap of Napanee; Mae, Mrs. Will Laycock of Montreal; Lottie, Mrs. George Henry of Saskatoon, Sask., attended the obsequies. Just a year ago at the Easter season Mrs. James Williams passed away and now the last link with the old home is broken and deepest sympathy is extended to those who mourn.

Rae Lancaster Enjoys Meeting Skating Star

"Thrilled to death" was Rae Lancaster's reaction to skating with the Swedish skating champion, Miss Vivi Anne Hulten at the Toronto Skating Club last Saturday. The fifteen-year-old Rae is a member of the Quinte Skating Club here, and skated two numbers with the attractive Swedish champion. He also enjoyed his favorite sport at the Toronto Granite Club over the week end. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Lancaster, 300 Foster Avenue.

A PLEASANT DUTY FOR BELLEVILLE HOMES

What can the people of Belleville do to make life more pleasant for the men from Canada and the British Isles now stationed at the airport?

A logical answer to this question comes as a result of a conversation with two of the "other ranks"—entertain them in our homes.

One of these men came from Winnipeg; the other from Ireland. When asked what they missed most in their former civilian life they answered with one accord: "Home life."

With little encouragement they went on to explain that, while food, housing and other circumstances of Air Force life left little or nothing to be desired, when evenings and weekends come their thoughts turn longingly to home.

Here is a very effective way in which Belleville people can "do their bit." Why not establish a register of those who would undertake to entertain R.C.A.F. men, and then request the commanding officer to open a registration of those who desire to be entertained. Then it would be a simple matter to develop a regular weekly R.C.A.F. visitors' quota.

The most suitable time for such entertainment would be on Sundays. A large number of the air personnel are off duty for the entire day. Arrangements could be made to contact the guests in time to take them to church, then have dinner and a "family" afternoon.

There need be little fear of having these men as guests under this plan. The airmen come from good homes and are endowed with truly gentlemanly qualities.

Here is a task that the service clubs might well sponsor—that of bringing lonely R.C.A.F. men and Belleville homes together. And, incidentally, as every man has his "chum," it would be better if such entertainment was planned so that the men could come in pairs.

With memories of the kindly hospitality of the homes of England during the war of 1914-18 and more recently towards the Canadian troops now in England, we commend this suggestion to the people of Belleville with confidence that they will rise to the occasion.

'MORAL PEACE' ALLIED AIM

Britain and France will fight on until a "moral peace" is secured. In that statement of Prime Minister Chamberlain is summed up in the main the war aim of the Allied nations. There are other aims involved and included is that of the attainment of a "moral peace."

Britain and her French ally are ready for any developments, the Premier told the Commons, while he warned neutral states of their danger unless they have a set determination to defend themselves and join with others who are willing to aid in their defence. Here is a proof of the justice of the Allied cause for it is not the Allies but the Nazis who create this danger. No neutral has anything to fear from Britain and France.

The British Premier warned against being "hustled into adventures" which seem to possess small chance of success and much chance of danger and perhaps of disaster.

Then he declared: "The time and place for us to strike must be decided upon with the utmost expert advice that we can command."

In the speech he pointed out that the Allies had been prepared to send 100,000 men to Finland during March and before the end of April.

Finland had preserved its honor and won the respect of the world. Their army is intact and their spirit broken. Mr. Chamberlain made it clear that there was a profound shock felt across the world that "once again we were compelled to see a small state the victim of that policy of aggression we have taken up arms to resist." He placed the blame for the invasion of Finland on the German-Russian pact. He said: "No one can suggest that this country and France had failed in their obligation to do their utmost to assist Finland," he declared.

'HAIL, FINLAND!'

Christian Science Monitor in an article "Hail, Finland!" points out an analogy from the growth of Christianity as a hope that better days will be. It says:

"History shows the triumphs of brute force, physical size, and destructive organization, much more efficient than Russia's in Finland, to be triumphs of a moment only. The story of mankind, the story of nations, is one long unfoldment of the power of ideas and ideals to which Finland since its independence in 1917 has given inspiring expression.

"Consternation over reports that Finland has lost its fight will be tempered in Christian nations by the history of Christianity itself. The early champions of this spiritual liberty, no less than defenders of political liberty, contended against powers of darkness as awesome in their time as to some of us today. But though early Christians lost their human lives without—as it seemed at the moment—winning their cause, we of today know that they did not lose their battle."

BRITISH PREMIER HAS BIRTHDAY

Britain's Prime Minister has entered another year, his seventy-second. On Monday he observed the seventy-first anniversary of his birth.

For six and a half months he has been bearing a tremendous burden since a peace-loving nation went to war for the sake of international justice and the protection of the weaker nations against the Nazi Government which has flouted civilization. But even on his birthday he does not allow his personal affairs to take time from the task he carries. He took no special notice of the day. He made his usual routine of a walk through St. James Park, carrying his walking stick as a soldier carries a rifle.

But even in the midst of war his friends could not forget the man who was trained for business life and who has found himself on the scene as defender of world democracy against an unscrupulous foe. His friends sent him many congratulatory messages on the day.

In his seventy-second year yesterday he made a statement of the Allied cause and aims and the progress of the war. In this he showed his powers of mind and body at their best.

Inspection of the 15th. Battalion, A.L.I., will take place on March 26th.

An Athletic Club has been formed in connection with the employees of the Hydro Electric Commission in this city.

At Holloway Street Church last evening Mrs. A. M. Leavens, who is leaving the city, was presented with a handsome chair and a casserole by members of the Sunday School, the Ladies' Aid and the Women's Missionary Society. The pastor, the Rev. A. H. Foster, presided at the gathering; the address was read by Miss I. A. Martin and the presentations were made by Mrs. George Bacon and Mrs. Myron Ellis. The address was signed on behalf of the Sunday School by Mrs. Robert Anderson, for the Ladies' Aid by Mrs. Charles Pearce, and for the Women's Missionary Society by Mrs. L. Forbes.

Bottle Messengers Of the Sea

Fate of Ships and Men Has Often Been Disclosed This Way

While the Nazi prison ship Altmark ploughed across the Atlantic, British seamen aboard endeavoured to attract rescuers by dropping overboard bottles containing messages. Messages were dropped almost daily, but whether any of them were picked up by British warships hunting for the "Hell Ship," has not been revealed. A bottle is small and the Atlantic ocean is big, but the chances of a bottle messenger being found are not, perhaps, so small as might be supposed.

x x x

The first information gained by the British Admiralty about the German raider Wolf in the Great War was from a bottle containing a message washed up in the East Indies. Before this message was picked up, the raider had steamed thousands of miles, laid several mine fields and sunk a number of merchantmen, and a combination of skill and luck had enabled her not only to elude pursuit, but even to cause doubts as to whether she existed!

The victims of her mine fields were believed to have been sabotaged. The ships she sank herself "disappeared without a trace." But for the sauce and pickle bottles dropped by Captain Meadows, master of the Wolf's first victim, the Turritella, the activities of this raider might have continued to baffle the Allies for many months.

At one time the importance of bottle messages was considered so great that an official was appointed to open all bottles washed up on British shores, and it was made a capital offence for any one picking up a bottle on the beach to uncork it. This strange official, whose position was abolished only about 150 years ago, was appointed as a result of the finding in the 16th century of a bottle message stating that the Dutch had seized Nova Zembla, the first intimation received in Britain of this "aggression."

News of the sinking of a number of vessels has been conveyed to the world by bottle messages. Three years ago the small steamer Taylor sank off the Aberdeenshire coast with the loss of all hands. Six months later, a bottle was picked up on the beach of Jutland. In it was a message which read: "S.O.S. Life and death. Help. Taylor cargo ship off Rattray Head. Hurry. Life or death—Blair." The bottle was sent to the Board of Trade by the British Consul in Copenhagen and read at the inquiry.

For any practical purpose or rescue, the bottle message is, of course, much too slow. A bottle may be picked up in the course of a few days or it may drift thousands of miles and remain in the sea for many years.

Four years ago a bottle was picked up on the coast of British Columbia. Inside it was found a faded fragment of a newspaper dated November 8, 1899, and the message: "To whom it may concern. This was thrown from the S.S. Crown Princess Cecilia off the coast of Sweden at Varberg, on November 19th, 1899. God Save the Queen. Captain Charles Weleerishen." The bottle had therefore been in the sea for 37 years and been carried across the Atlantic and somehow into the Pacific, possibly through the North-West Passage. A piece of driftwood in an Ottawa museum was proved to have made this remarkable passage, and although it is astonishing that the bottle was not smashed by the ice, it is difficult to believe it reached British Columbia by the only other route via Cape Horn.

This is by no means a record period for a bottle to remain afloat. A bottle which had been adrift for 42 years was found near New York some years ago. It gave the name and address of the sender apparently an Irish girl, and ended: "I hope some nice boy returns it soon!" If the girl waited for her bottle to bring her romance, she was a spinster of 60 at the time it was washed up on the other side of the Atlantic.

A bottle message bore the news of the sinking of the liner President almost a century ago. The bottle was picked up at sea when the President, bound from the U.S.A. to Liverpool, was long overdue. The message was brief and said that the liner was sinking in a gale. It was signed Tyrone Power—a noted comedian of the time. The liner was lost with all hands.

After the loss of the French airship Dixmude in 1924, a bottle was picked up by fishermen in Corsica carrying the message: "Petrol exhausted, we are drifting at the mercy of the gale. Crew of Dixmude. Good-bye and long live France."

Bottles bearing strange messages are sometimes found. A bottle washed up near Cork last year contained a tip for the Lincolnshire handicap signed, "English Emigre off Liverpool en route for Melbourne." Amazingly enough, the tip came up and thousands of people who had backed the horse on the strength of the message had to thank the unknown tipster who had chosen this strange way of broadcasting "inside information."

Bottles thrown into the River Rhine have been used for smuggling anti-Nazi propaganda into and out of Germany so much so that any bottles now seen floating in that river are considered suspect by the Gestapo.

Much of our knowledge of ocean currents has been gained by the systematic dropping of bottles. Just after the Great War some 2,500 bottles were dropped from the Bell Rock, Moray Firth and the Shetlands, each containing a postcard in five languages asking the finder to insert the date and place of recovery. Some of the bottles were weighted to keep them near the bottom. About ten per cent. were recovered in the following year and gave useful information on ocean and local currents. The majority drifted across to Norway.

A north country sea captain who died some years ago had made a habit all his life of dropping coloured bottles in all parts of the world. Some dozens were returned to him. One of the most interesting in his collection was returned to him from the stomach of a shark caught in Sydney harbour! One of his bottles travelled from New Zealand to Cape Town, another from the Cape of Good Hope to Newfoundland. To every one who returned a bottle the captain used to

Prime Minister Chamberlain went a long way towards deflating the significance of the Hitler-Mussolini meeting at the Brenner Pass when he spoke in the House of Commons.

In line with the firm attitude Great Britain took towards Italy in the seizure of the ships taking German coal to Italy recently, Mr. Chamberlain said yesterday that Great Britain was ready to meet anything which might arise out of the meeting of the two dictators.

If the Nazis planned a new war of nerves Mr. Chamberlain's remarks could be taken as the first shot from the Allied side. If they banked on new moves for a compromise peace which would leave Germany with the bulk of her recent conquests Mr. Chamberlain's condemnation of aggression gave a forecast of the British reply to such proposals from whatever source they may come.

And if Hitler secured any new promise of Italian military co-operation the whole tenor of Mr. Chamberlain's speech was a clear warning to Italy that Britain will not be over-awed.

German propaganda sources continued to make the utmost use of the meeting of the two dictators but Italian commentators treated the affair with strict reserve and warned against unauthorized interpretations placed upon it elsewhere. Most interpretations originated in Germany . . .

CANADA'S WAR EFFORT THEME

porary shortage but that had been overcome.

Regarding the equipping of the First Division he declared that no force had ever left these shores with better equipment than that with which the First Division went overseas. There had, he said, been no neglect.

Mr. Rogers stated that the King Government contained the true spirit of a national government, that is, one with a national outlook.

The Collegiate band played before the arrival of the Hon. Mr. Rogers. The Minister was piped in by Mr. Jamie Clark playing Highland music and wearing the Highland dress. In the party were Mr. Haig, the candidate; Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, who was the chairman of the evening, and many others, including a number of South Hastings ladies who took seats on the platform.

Mayor Extends Greetings of City.

His Worship Mayor Glenco Thompson brought greetings from the city of Belleville. Mr. Robertson, chairman, said, "we appreciate the act of Mayor Thompson in coming here and think it is a fine gesture for him to come and give an address of welcome to the Minister of Militia, our speaker."

Mayor Thompson said that as mayor it gave him great pleasure to welcome on behalf of the city the Hon. Norman Rogers, who is in charge of the Department of National Defence, one of the most important at any time, and especially in war time. "The city is honored in having Mr. Rogers here tonight," he said. The mayor occupied a seat on the platform.

In the course of the evening Mr. Rogers expressed his appreciation of the gracious welcome the mayor had extended and said that he would treasure the memory of the welcome as one of the most pleasant moments of his life.

Mr. Robertson, the chairman, in his introduction of the Liberal candidate, Mr. Haig, said that he was a prominent business man, that he had served the community in many capacities as a member of the city council, as a member of which he had with the other members been able to bring about a four-mill reduction in the city tax rate this year, that he was prominent in various organizations, the Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary Club, the Hospital Board and had generally helped in extending the city's influence into the community about Belleville.

P. E.-Lennox Candidate Present

Senator H. H. Horsey and, Mr. Howard Weese, Liberal candidate in Prince Edward-Lennox riding, were on the platform and were introduced to the meeting.

The pleasure fell to Mr. A. B. Collins of presenting the Hon. Mr. Rogers to the audience. Mr. Collins stated that this election was the most important since Confederation. He referred to the life of Mr. Rogers as a soldier of the Great War and of his remarkable scholastic career and his high place in the university and public life of Canada.

Tribute to Mr. Haig

"I have come to this riding to speak on behalf of Mr. McLean Haig, and my first meeting with him made me realize his keen interest in political matters," said Mr. Rogers. "I support him, first, because he is the official candidate of the Liberal party in this constituency. I want you to know that he is recognized as such by the leader of the Liberal party, the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King. Beyond that I am pleased to give my support to the Liberal candidate because I believe there is a place for him and men like him in the political life of Canada to make a serious and valuable contribution to the discussion of the nation's problems there. I believe you will be doing a service to Canada in electing Mr. McLean Haig."

Confident of King Government Victory

The Minister of Defence, whose subject was the organization of Canada's war effort, said: "I have never been more confident than I am now in the overwhelming return of the King Government. If I ever had any doubt of that, that doubt would have been removed by the action of Dr. Manion." The man who wins does not lose his temper, he said.

Hon. Mr. Rogers stated that part of the cause of Dr. Manion's display of temper at Windsor "was my repeated request for facts and for specific charges that could be backed into a corner—rather than vague charges.

"Dr. Manion," said the Minister, is sensitive to my repeated requests for specific charges.

Specific Instances Requested

"All I ask is that when he makes charges in respect to the equipment of the Canadian corps he make specific instances." Mr. Rogers said that Dr. Manion had plenty of time to be definite in his complaints. As early as one day in November last Dr. Manion, the Minister said, declared that Canada's war effort was being handicapped by patronage and profiteering. The next day Mr. King asked Dr. Manion to give the information on which the charges were based, but Dr. Manion, he said, repeated the charges, but failed to present a single instance to the Prime Minister so that it might be investigated. Then for a time there was silence. Now, again, Dr. Manion claims that Canada's war effort is being handicapped by patronage and profiteering.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

"I ask you what specific charges he has presented," remarked Hon. Mr. Rogers.

The Minister said that Dr. Manion had made a charge that an army hut was being built by patronage, but he gave no date nor other information by which the charge could be verified or proven incorrect. Was that information that would enable a Minister of Defence to conduct an investigation? Mr. Rogers asked.

Tabulation Asked

When Dr. Manion made a charge of patronage, Mr. Rogers asked him for a tabulation but it was not produced, he stated.

"I ask if that is the best Dr. Manion has been able to do after repeated requests for facts."

"I knew something of the manner in which the war effort in the war of 1914 was vitiated by persons in high places," Mr. Rogers declared. He declared that he knew too, how in the last war the path of promotion and commissions was often the path to the door of some powerful person at Ottawa. So when Mr. Rogers went to the Department of Defence last September he was determined that there would be no repetition in the Canadian war effort at this time.

Preferred List Disregarded

The Minister related to the audience how he had sent out directions in respect to materials and employment of labor in the various districts that no special consideration was to be given any specific firms, that the preferred list such as ruled in both parties in peace time should be disregarded, that labor was to be got on the open market and not according to the lists. These directions were sent out to officers commanding and confirmed verbal orders previously given.

"This policy we have done our utmost to follow and will continue to follow," the Minister of Defence affirmed. Letters were sent from the Minister to the members of parliament that in order to carry out the war effort of Canada it was essential that, according to the Prime Minister's address, "no political or personal interest would be allowed to interfere with the war effort which required a unity of spirit; that personal influence could have no part in the service or in promotions, that the intention was that purchases should be made in the open market; that to grant requests on political or personal basis would be a handicap and that no influence was to be allowed in appointments. In this regard Mr. Rogers stated that he believed the people of Canada would endorse this and the result would be a strengthening of the war effort at this time.

Political Patronage Removed

"Though here and there there may have been found misunderstandings of instructions sent out, the war effort to this time has been devoid of political patronage.

"I have yet to find an instance where any military officer has received an appointment through political patronage," Hon. Mr. Rogers declared.

He went on to say that Dr. Manion and his followers might be well advised to turn their attention elsewhere, "but if they persist in making vague charges, I say again, give us the facts." Dr. Manion, he remarked, had had time to present all the facts in the charges he made in respect to the war effort.

Soldiers and Equipment

The Minister of Defence referred to a charge that a large number of men from a British Columbia regiment had been taken ill, it being charged it was due to lack of proper clothing the soldiers were ill. Mr. Rogers said, "I received reports on this and found that only two men of that British Columbia battalion had been obliged to remain and were not permitted to proceed overseas and that none of the men were obliged to go to hospital through lack of clothing.

"But Dr. Manion goes back to his charges," went on Mr. Rogers. "He follows it up by saying that his information came from medical officers but that he would not give names.

"You see me here before you," remarked the Minister. "Do I look like the head of a Gestapo? I do not look at my duties in that way."

War Equipment

The Minister referred to Dr. Manion's reference to guns and rifles sent over with the First Division.

The Minister described how the First Division was equipped with certain types of rifles and guns, which were considered satisfactory. "I was in a city the other day and talked to men of the Ordnance Corps and they resent that remark of Dr. Manion's," Mr. Rogers said.

The rifles which Canadian soldiers have today supplanted the Ross rifle given to Canadians in the last war.

"When the First Canadian division goes to France it will be as well equipped as any British division in the field and in some respects the equipment will be superior.

Full Complement Taken

"It took over to England no artillery as Dr. Manion has said, but it took its full complement of guns." Mr. Rogers described them.

The Minister declared that those who say that a certain gun is not up to date were wrong as there are large amounts of ammunition being made for the Allied powers for that type of gun.

"Where?" asked a voice.

The Minister of Defence declared that he had a duty to the department which he intended to carry out in that respect.

Continues to Ask for Facts

The Minister of Defence mentioning that Dr. Manion had claimed that his information came from officers, and that he would not give the information because they might be subjected to little reprisals, asked:

"Does Dr. Manion mean that officers informed him that the First Division went overseas without artillery? Do you now wonder that I have kept after Dr. Manion and Col. Drew? Do you wonder that Dr. Manion and Col. Drew will do everything they can to attack the genuineness of the statements I have made?

"Sometimes it is well to have the right kind of enemies. Dr. Manion, Col. Drew, Mr. Hepburn and M. Duplessis—they can keep on attacking me as long as they like. I shall keep on asking for the facts.

"I do not often speak as warmly, but I shall avoid recriminations."

Canada's War Effort

The minister turned to the war effort. It is not the work of the government and department alone but was made possible by the careful work of the general staff of our fighting services, the spontaneous response of the people and the wholehearted co-operation of industries and labor in the prosecution of the war. The First Canadian Division was the first expeditionary force of any of the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations to arrive in the Old Land. Mr. Rogers cited the strength of the ancillary troops and the Co-Operative Squadron of the R.C.A.F., the first unit of the R.C.A.F. to represent the country overseas.

He spoke of the organization of the Second Division which will proceed in due course overseas. He spoke of the defences of Canada's seaboard. He referred to the non-permanent militia, which will in due time be the means by which Canada's war effort will be expanded. He spoke of the strength of the Canadian Navy and of plans for the expansion of the navy, and of orders for ships which will test the capacity of the shipyards.

Canadian Navy's Noble Record

"We have resolved that our Canadian navy which is today doing such noble service in protecting the coast will have other vessels.

Mr. Rogers spoke of the gigantic undertaking of the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. He referred to the strength of the R.C.A.F. which he gave as an indication of the steady growth it has had. "When you hear Dr. Manion and Col. Drew speak of lack of growth, I ask you to remember our R.C.A.F. was born under Liberal administration, that it was almost suffocated under the Conservative administration, that under the Liberal administration it was given the equipment whereby it could serve effectively in time of war. I have a fact for every statement."

He related that the Conservative administration had cut the $7,000,000 air force outlay to $1,700,000 and that thereby Canada had lost some of the best men. He stated that at the time when the R.C.A.F. came back, there was not a single equipment for training—that was the result of the conditions under the other regime. "I say this only to reply to charges of unpreparedness," he said.

Civil Aviation's Part

Mr. Rogers touched on the encouragement given civil aviation by the Liberal Administration. He asked: "What government gave encouragement to civil aviation? The Liberal administration. The great Transcontinental Airways was formed under Liberal rule and it holds its own with the best on the continent."

"It is because the R.C.A.F. has been revived under Liberal administration, because we had the Transcontinental Airways, because we had flying clubs, that the government said we were ready to undertake the Empire Training Plan. Mr. Chamberlain said this might well be the deciding factor in the war," Mr. Rogers remarked.

"Sometimes comparisons are made between this war and the last war. But this war is of an entirely different pattern. In 1914 you may remember those who left Canada were told they might be back in six months or a year. People talked then of a short war. The Germans were advancing, the demand was for man-power. This war is different."

The Minister said that as far as he knew there had been only one casualty on the western front from this district.

Plan For Long Total War

"The government began to plan for a war that might last three years. With that knowledge the government had to plan quietly, slowly if you will, for our effort was not to be subject to ups and downs but to be sustained grimly to the end. I ask you to remember that when we are sometimes charged with taking too long, we have already taken measures that were not taken until the third year in the last war.

"One of the reasons why this war effort has been organized is that it has been organized for a long war, it had to be organized for a total war.

Enlistments in 1914 and Now

"May I remind you that in the first six months of the last war there were 67,000 Canadians overseas and in Canada under arms while in the first six months of this war we have today over 90,000 Canadians under arms overseas and in Canada.

"I have never denied for a moment that we had a problem over equipment. It was inherent in the transition of peaceloving people from a peacetime to a wartime basis. We had built up a peacetime requirement and have made that the nucleus of the wartime requirements.

Question of Uniforms

"But for items of personal equipment we admit we did not fill our shelves with clothing and shells? What do you say? Suppose we had purchased 100,000 uniforms and put them in storehouses. What should we have gained? Nothing. Only a few months before the war, Britain adopted the completely new battledress. Had we purchased 100,000 or 200,000 uniforms the men who are condemning us now would have gone about condemning us for what they would call an appalling lack of judgment (applause).'

"So the plan of the government was to organize as soon as possible a continuous stream of equipment as we might require it. That is what we have been doing. Of course there was a temporary shortage but we have overcome that for the first and second divisions. The only requirement for the future is a sufficient amount of wool from Britain.

First Division Fully Equipped

"The first concern was equipping the First Division in a manner to bring pride to the people of Canada. We checked on the deliveries day by day, hour by hour. I have said and I do say that no force ever left these shores with better equipment than that with which the First Division went overseas."

A leading artillery officer said of the Canadians in a letter to him, said the Minister, that he thought the Canadians excellent, that the battledress was the finest he ever saw. Mr. Rogers said that he had also letters from Oliver Stanley and Anthony Eden.

"No Oversight, No Neglect"

"I should like you to believe that in the first Canadian division when it was sent overseas there was no oversight, no neglect.

There is no notion who is to be in Mr. Manion's government or what would happen if Dr. Manion should lose in Fort William, who would be the National Government? Is he going to take in Mr. Hepburn (laughter), Col. Drew and others, hovering in the background? Who are the men?

"I say, in the course of the campaign Dr. Manion has given no sign of that restraint of language needed by a country in a leader in a time of war."

To the voters Mr. Rogers said that "the decision you make as indicated on March 26th will decide that fundamental and simple issue whether the government with which Canada entered the war and which has been in consultation with the British government on matters relating to the war is to be asked to continue or if this country is to make a leap into the unknown and put the gravest responsibilities on Dr. Manion and the men of his National Government.

Mr. Rogers closed in expressing the hope that the King Government would be given an inquestioned mandate from the people to continue the Canadian war effort which it has so far directed. unwarranted charges now being made", said that "those who denounce us are equally on trial."

'Sound Measures' Taken

Equipment has reached a steady delivery of 1000 battledress uniform a day. He had seen soldiers in various parts of Canada, and when questioned they said they were happy and in excellent condition. "I say we took what appeared to be, and I say are, sound measures in changing from a peacetime to a wartime organization," said the Minister.

He spoke at some length of the care the Department had taken as to hospital equipment. Reference was made to a neurological hospital which it was felt would save lives in cases which in the last war would have resulted in death. Medical experts were consulted in this regard. Much care was given to the dental service. "With respect to dental care our troops are superior to any army in the world," Mr. Rogers asserted.

Best Army Rations in World, Minister Says

Rations attracted the attention of the department, experts were consulted with the result, according to the Minister that "we have an army ration superior to any known army ration anywhere in the world. I have gone over the menus. In the last war there were no apples, eggs, little cheese. Today there are fruit, canned goods, eggs and so on. I have learned some men had gone up as much as eight pounds. The ration allows the greatest variety in any army in the world.

"There never has been any lack of careful planning for Canada's war effort. Day in and day out we have been planning, not for a spectacular effort but for long-range results to be attained in a long-range war.

"I ask you have you had any war policy from Dr. Manion?, Col. Drew, or Mr. Stevens? Have they told you there would be fewer or more soldiers overseas? I have not heard if they have told. Have they told you what they were prepared to do in the naval service as an efficient arm? If so, I have not heard of it. Have they found cause to complain of what we have done for army rations and for dental services?

'Vague Nebulous Promise'

What is Dr. Manion asking the people of Canada to vote for, Mr. Rogers queried. "All you are asked to vote for is for a vague national government. I think there are many Conservatives who would have preferred if Dr. Manion had gone to the country as a Conservative. All you have over and above this policy of confusion is the vague nebulous promise of a national government.

"What is a national government?, Mr. Haig put it very well when he said a national government is a government with a national outlook and a national sense of responsibility and if that is the kind of Government you want, I say that is the kind of Government that is offered you in the open by Mr. Mackenzie King. I say to you this Government under Mr. Mackenzie King has in all it has undertaken in connection with the war acted with the keenest sense of responsibility. That is why the King Government ignored party patronage. That is why various organizations were consulted with a purpose—the direction of our war effort under a political party, if you will, but a political party whose efforts would not be used for mere party purpose but for what must be a compelling effort of the Canadian people. I submit that kind of national government in the open is infinitely preferable to that vague national government Tak e 7 Hon Norman Rogers asic'l

Mr. Haig Speaks

Expressing his appreciation of the welcome extended to the Hon. Mr. Rogers by His Worship Mayor Thompson, Mr. Haig paid tribute to the Chief Magistrate in reminding his listeners of the years of co-operation he had enjoyed as an Alderman. He also considered it a personal compliment on the part of Mr. Rogers to visit Belleville and address the electors on his behalf.

Referring to the allegations that Mr. King had "scuttled Parliament" Mr. Haig asked his listeners to recall the fact that in spite of criticism levelled against the government on its war effort, when the Premier of Ontario, the banner province that boasts 50 per cent of the country's population, with the support of the Opposition leader, passed a vote of censure, it became a matter of national importance. "If the Ontario Premier and his Legislature passed a vote of censure on behalf of 50 per cent of the Canadian population, then it was high time the Federal government required a fresh mandate from the people", he said.

Total War

"The war today is different from that of 1914-18" the speaker said. "It is a total war in that it not only involves the battle front but requires the entire mobilization of the industrial and financial resources of the country so that we can get adequate support for not only the army in the field but the forces at home".

Canada's people would never stand for preparedness for war in peace time, the speaker said, adding that the country was prepared for home defence, and speedily set up a war effort after hostilities had been declared.

National Defence estimates had been slashed in 1932, the speaker charged, which resulted in the reduction of Canada's Air Force.

"Today", he said, "Air Marshal Bishop has declared that our Air Force rates second to none in the world.'

Says King Gov't Truly National

National government, he declared is one that is represented from coast to coast and consist of all classes of people. Taking the term in all sense, the Liberal Government in Ottawa is truly National for it is an adequate representation of the cross section of the population of nine provinces, and of the two great races, Anglo-Saxon and French-Canadian.

It will be impossible for Liberals to join Manion's Government, for if he is returned it will mean a vote of lack of confidence in the King Administration. Mr. Manion will then be forced to look to the other parties for his Cabinet; and forced to go outside the House of Commons for the supermen, he suggests will form his Cabinet.

"He will establish a precedent if he requests his colleagues to relinquish thair seats to make way for members of other parties," Mr. Haig said.

He had enjoyed the campaign, although one opponent had made him the sole plank in his platform, the speaker said. "I have been attacked publicly but to my horror and amazement, they have been saying things in private which they are afraid to say on a public platform".

He appealed to the electorate to exercise their franchise.

A highlight of the meeting were two solos given by Jack Deacon, Belleville's outstanding tenor. Mr. Deacon offered the "Open Road" as his first number and followed with "Sylvia". Mrs. Deacon, an accomplished piano favorite, accompanied her husband.

PERSONALS

Mr. W. J. Embury and Mr. R. C. Embury, Detroit, Mich., have left for their home after attending the funeral of their father, the late Roderick Cameron Embury, Thurlow. They were accompanied by their sister, Mrs. B. A. Clarke.

A number of friends of Mrs. E. Bacon gathered at her home, 4 Hillside Street, Monday evening, in honour of her birthday. The birthday cake was a beautiful creation, trimmed in pink and with a large shamrock on the top bearing Mrs. Bacon's initials recalling her Irish ancestry. She received numerous gifts of flowers, candy and other items. The evening was spent in recalling old times and in singing old hymns, with Miss Mildred Bonter presiding at the piano.

Comrade Club Presents Comedy At Tabernacle Church

'Sophronia's Wedding' Given by Club on Fifteenth Anniversary

The Comrade Club of Tabernacle Church, famous for its successful dramatic presentations surpassed all previous efforts with "Sophronia's Wedding", the comedy offering, which gave a crowded auditorium two hours of hilarious entertainment last evening. An interesting coincidence was the fact that fifteen years ago Tuesday the Comrade Club was founded and the success of its anniversary celebration showed that the organization had continued in enthusiasm and numbers with the years.

Rev. D. T. McClintock, pastor of the church, in a brief address at the opening of the program drew attention to the fact that $6,871 had been raised by the Comrade Club, for the work of the church, since its organization. Of the original seven members, two are active participants in the work today and the unselfish spirit of the group is expressed in their magnificent achievements.

Mrs. W. Embury introduced the members of the cast, who in their costumes of fifty years ago presented a quaint and amusing appearance.

"Sophronia's Wedding", the chief event of a small village's summer had thrown the "Tabernacle Uplift Society" into confusion, with curiosity and censure vieing for dominance in the attitude of the good ladies of Society. The prime object of the Society was to uplift and to discourage gossip, and in their second object they failed utterly.

The first act portrayed a typical meeting of the Society and the characteristics of its dominant members. These included the President, Mrs. Uriah Snodgrass, who ruled with a firm hand and a prying disposition played in masterly style by Carmelita Mott. Seraphina, her "angel" daughter, a part taken admirably by Louise Hicks, who showed her versatility by appearing later as the admiring mother of Sophronia; Mrs. Abner Doddridge, described as fat and gossipy and splendidly interpreted by Edith Robson; Miss Mossy Spriggs, whose acidy nature, Carrie McGuire presented very realistically and Mrs. Joshua Perkins whose gentle disposition and uncertain voice were perfectly reproduced by Gladys Cummings.

The registry of the Society also numbered Mrs. Elmer Killemquick, the role, that of the wife of the young doctor, being taken in fine style by Viva Salisbury; Mrs. Peace Peabody, the village post-mistress, whose mannerisms were characterized with a fine art by Irene Arnott; Flossy Snippem, the village seamstress, who dispensed gossip lavishly, a part well enacted by Florence Greenleaf; and Mrs. Caleb Savinsoules, the minister's wife whose tolerant and peaceable manner was splendidly shown by Kathleen Lent.

Twin sister spinsters, Lobelia and Pamelia Witherspoon gave the audience some riotous moments as delightfully portrayed by Edna Wonnacott and Edith Irwin. The circle was completed by Lottie Anne Sykes to which part Mary McLeod gave a vigorous performance and Elmira Pennywhistle (Lottie Moorman), who in a brief entrance made an instant impression.

The part of Sophronia Piper, a lovable character who was carried away by modern styles but who still worked with earnestness for everybody's good, was taken in a very finished manner by Muriel Joss. Concerning Sophronia's doings the Uplift Society became a storm centre, but her unfailing friendliness and charming spirit completely won over her critical old friends. Genevieve Van Houten Sophronia's up to date bridesmaid was vividly personified by Muriel Wardner; while Gary Salisbury as the minister's small son who transmitted news of fresh crisis at home to his distraught mother and Margaret Fenn, as Tilly Tucker, the maid of all work completed a well-balanced cast.

Under the excellent direction of Mary Lockhart, the players drew the utmost in entertainment from the amusing plays, the comments on local citizens bringing down the house.

Between acts music by Miss Florence Davis, and community singing led by Mrs. Morely Duff was enjoyed by the gathering.

Mrs. Irwin on behalf of the Club expressed appreciation to all those who assisted the play in any way. At the conclusion of the play, Mrs. Wonnacott made a presentation to Miss Lockhart, conveying the sincere thanks of the Club to the director for her patient and careful coaching which ensured the success of the entertainment.

Building Spirit For Posture's Sake

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

YOU AND I have been guilty of saying to the child of five or 15, "Sit up!" or, "Don't stand that way!" It made us feel better to issue such commands. It relieved our conscience, suggesting to us we had done our duty to the child. Incidentally, it also reminded us of our power and importance. The trouble is we have had an unintelligent conscience and a feeble-minded sense of power.

You and I may keep "hollering our heads off' at our children to improve their posture, with no results except to make their posture worse and lessen their regard for us.

When the tot or adolescent feels well and comfortable and full of vim; when he is happy; when the world looks bright and promising to him, and when he feels aware of his personality as a worthy one among his family and comrades, he holds up his head, stiffens his spine pulls his stomach in and practically always sits up and stands erect.

When we nag at him continuously about anything, we create in him an uncomfortable attitude; we make him feel less worth while, less optimistic toward himself and toward the world, and, therefore, more inclined to slouch.

What it Means

Any child, who is not tip-top physically, not well nourished and is underweight who meets continuous discouragements in his work and play, has many emotional conflicts and is forever being bossed, almost surely has bad posture. Bad posture is one of the first signs of malnourishment, nervousness or bad adjustment to his family and playmates.

When, therefore, you find your child habitually sitting, standing or walking with a slouch, say nothing to him about posture. First, go with him to your physician to make sure about his physical welfare. This guaranteed, study his habits and emotional expressions. See that you avoid all unnecessary annoyances to him, and work out ways of helping him acquire more happiness through more successes in relation to his home conduct, his work at school and his contacts with other children. Avoid such comments as, "Why don't you always stand that way?" or, "I wish you would always walk and stand as Martha does".

Suggestions Vexed Him

A fellow-psychologist said to me one day, "A year ago I found myself suggesting to my adolescent boy that he should try to keep his head and shoulders up. I guess I repeated the suggestion many times. Always my remarks seemed to vex him.

"In the meanwhile, numerous good things have come his way. He has been selected in his school as director of intra-mural sports, elected to Hi-Y and the National Honor Society, and has become the captain of the church basketball team.

"What a change has come to him! I wish I might emulate his posture now. So far as I can figure out, the difference has been wholly psychological".

Solving Parent Problems

Q.—I am a high school teacher (woman). One of the boys of my school has a "case" on me. How should I treat him?

A.—Treat him kindly but be too wise and dignified to respond to any of his expressions of admiration, and too discreet ever to accept a "date" with him while he is a student in your school. Nothing could be more disastrous to you socially or professionally.

The Stars Say

For Thursday, March 21
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of great success and the reaping of liberal rewards for industry integrity high purpose and fidelity is presaged from the mutual and lunar configurations. There is likely to be much stirring action possibly drastic and strenuous, to the point of somewhat perilous performance in putting over major programs. Impetuosity, recklessness, over-aggressive measures and quarrels would prove detrimental.

Those whose birthday it is will find themselves launched in a year of very active or drastic situations, in which much enduring success and recognition for worthy past performances may be reaped: Industry integrity and loyalty may achieve high rewards and much stability for the fortunes and personal well-being.

A child born on this day may be profound, studious, steadfast and industrious, although having flashes of temperament or temper. Generally it may be generous, noble, friendly with strong inner urges to the humane and social betterment of its fellows, succeeding notably in co-operation with groups.

It's a fact that a new hat can do more than anything else to revive drooping spirits. A gay toque is fashioned of yellow-pink roses with black ribbons in back caught at the nape of the neck with more roses. Misty rose-coloretd veiling.

It's a honey of a blouse, this suit model of honey-brown silk crepe. The square neck yoke is marked by rows of honeycomb smocking repeated on the cuffs. Black closing with bee-shaped buttons.

MANION CLOSES QUEBEC CAMPAIGN WITH 2 ADDRESSES

Declares Any Attempt of Liberals to "Buy up Country" With War Contracts Will be Aired

MANY CHARGES LAID

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, March 20.—(CP)—Any attempts by the Liberals to "buy up the country" with special war contracts and such bribery in this week before election day will be thoroughly aired, Conservative Leader Manion says.

He sounded his warning here last night as he told of receiving reports that a $5,000,000 war contract had just been placed in a Western Ontario town in an apparent attempt to save the riding for the government candidate.

Dr. Manion did not name the town and he said he would check today to learn whether the information contained in the telegram was correct.

"They are going to try to buy up the country", the Conservative Leader said. "I'm going to warn them that they cannot attempt to win with bribery like that in the last week of the elections".

Turned Against Gov't Claim

He charged the Liberals had inserted a big advertisement in a Saskatoon newspaper during a by-election there last fall which had warned the voters they would not get their share of the war contracts if the Liberal candidate were not elected. Yet, Dr. Manion said, the people had turned against the government and elected another man.

Dr. Manion closed his Quebec campaign before a crowd of more than 7,000 which overflowed Maisonneuve Market hall in the French speaking part of the city. Earlier in the evening he spoke in Westmount on behalf of R. S. White, veteran representative of St. Antoine-Westmount, before a capacity audience of 500 in Victoria Hall.

Doing it For Votes Claim

The Liberals were attempting to "split the country up the middle" by taking one attitude in eight of the provinces and another attitude in Quebec, Dr. Manion told his Maisonneuve audience. They were doing it "for the sake of a few votes."

"If we all spoke the two languages (English and French) we would have less misunderstanding in our country than we have today."

Dr. Manion labelled the Dominion government's war record as one of "bungling, favoritism and extravagance." The government leaders "are trying to deceive you—they have broken faith with you and they will break it again."

"If Mr. King scuttles parliament today, someone else will scuttle it tomorrow and parliament will be closed completely. A vote for Mr. King is a vote to do away with parliament and minority rights."

Dr. Manion concluded with an appeal to "throw out these men who are trying to separate Canada."

Should Restrict Wartime Imports

In his address at Westmount, Dr. Manion suggested Canada should restrict wartime imports by licence, as Britain, Australia and other nations were doing. Canadian markets were carrying a complete line of imports when they should be conserving their foreign purchasing power.

The Conservative leader continued his attack on the make-up of the present Federal cabinet, submitting that a National Government cabinet could not be worse "if we tried." He criticized the fact 10 of its 16 members are lawyers.

"Mr. Ralston (Finance Minister Ralston) is the best man they have and he's nothing extraordinary. There are probably a dozen in the House at least fully as good.

"I have in view as Finance Minister a man whom the whole country will rise up and acclaim—and he's not a lawyer, either."

Marmora Resident Marks 86th Birthday

Marmora — Celebrating her 86th birthday in good health in her home here on Monday, March 18th, Mrs. Urina Pinner recalls interesting developments of the village of Marmora where she has spent eighty-four years of her life. Born in Springbrook in 1854 she moved to Marmora with her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Wellington McWilliams at the age of two years. Having a keen memory she can discuss happenings in the village for the greater part of a century. Mrs. Pinner is one of a family of twelve, six boys and six girls, of which the only other surviving member is a sister, Mrs. J. Atkinson of Winnipeg. In 1874 she married George Pinner at Stirling, the ceremony being performed by Rev. William Scales. Mrs. Pinner's son, Fred, resides with her in the home, also a son, Will, resides at Fort William. She also has two daughters, Mrs. T. J. Butler of Toronto and Mrs. George Hartley of Marmora. Her husband and three children, Percy, Jenny and Bruce passed away several years ago.

Mrs. Pinner was the recipient of many gifts and letters of felicitations on Monday among which was a letter from Mr. W. J. Cottrell, an old friend, who is convalescing in Nicholl's Hospital, Peterborough, after a serious operation. Mrs. Pinner is very active for her years attending to all her household duties and enjoys a game of euchre at her home or her neighbors' at every opportunity. Her many friends wish her many more years of health and happiness.

The funeral of the late Miss Mary McCallum was held at Sacred Heart Church on Monday morning when a High Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. H. J. Farrell. The pallbearers were Dan Shannon, William Flynn, Michael O'Connor, L. P. Hughes, Geo. Forestell and James Brady. Interment was made in Sacred Heart Cemetery.

Mrs. L. Robillard, of Toronto, and Mrs. (Dr.) Ells, of Ottawa, sisters of the deceased attended the funeral.

Personals

Miss Isobel McCroden of Trenton spent the week-end with her brother, Mr. Jack McCroden and Mrs. McCroden, Deloro.

Mrs. T. J. Butler of Toronto spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. U. Pinner.

BABY'S HOT LITTLE HEAD IS A DANGER SIGNAL

Mr. Robert Stanton is spending a few days in Toronto.

Little Benny's Note Book

My birthday is coming next month and I was standing around the letter box with the fellows talking and arguing about different subjects and Skinny Martin said, Hay Benny, are you going to have a party for your birthday? and the other fellows said, Are you, Benny, are you. are going to have a party?

Sounding as if they were all hinting for a invitation wich they proberly were, and I said, Well, I dont know, I'm not sure. I haven't exactly asked about it, but I kind of made a suggestion, and that's far as I got, I said. But hay, if you guys want to give me a surprise party, then there couldn't be any doubt about it, because all you'd have to do would be to ring my doorbell carrying all the different things and they'd have to let you in I said.

Why would they, there's no law about it, is there? Puds Simkins said, and Shorty Judge said, G wizzickers they might think you knew all about it and it was your idea in the first place, so they just wouldn't leave us is to serve you right. People get funny ideas, he said.

Well okay, I'll find out if they'll leave you in and then it'll be settled, I said.

And after supper I said to pop, Hay pop, I've got an idea the fellows are going to ring our bell in a crowd on my birthday and give me a surprise party. I'm not sure because if I was sure it wouldn't be a surprise, but what do you think of the idea, pop? I said, and he said, I'd think it was a better idea if they had it in one of their houses, because that would make it such a surprise that you'd never guess, do you see what I mean?

Me not saying anything elts on account of not wanting to look too intristed, being all the further the party has got so far.

DON'T DRENCH FOODS WITH WEAK SAUCES

Use just a few drops of concentrated relish

ADDING large quantities of weak-flavoured catsups or sauces soon uses up a bottle and runs up expense. From the viewpoint of economy and for your own enjoyment of fine flavours, you will be wise to use a concentrated relish such as H. P. Sauce. Many people claim this is the most savoury sauce in the world: It has such rich, fruity goodness.

Prove the value of H. P. Sauce yourself. Try it in soups, stews, meat pies, salads, macaroni and cheese dishes. Use it with steaks, chops, tenderloins, fish, fowl and other things. H. P. adds a piquant, relishable flavour to all foods. A little goes a long way.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

KINGSTON HOTEL SOLD TO TORONTO INTERESTS

The British American Hotel, Kingston, one of Eastern Ontario's best known hostelry landmarks has been sold to Toronto interests announcement from the eastern city revealed today. The new owner, Mr. Nelles Megaffin, proposes to take over his new holdings on April 1st. B. H. Leggett, former owner and well-known to hotel circles throughout this district, will retire after thirty years of service to the public, on that date.

CLEARING OF DRAINS COMPLETED TODAY

City workmen today completed the clearage of drains and catch-basins in preparation for the Spring flow of water. A light skim of ice that covered the channel in the bay south of the C.P.R. bridge was also removed.

CHIMNEY FIRE SOON EXTINGUISHED

Firemen were called to a shoe shine and cobbler's stand situated at 180 Front Street, shortly after nine o'clock last evening, when a passerby noticed a chimney fire in progress as he glanced through the window. Owing to the absence of the owner, who is visiting in the United States at the present time, it was necessary to break down the door of the establishment to gain admission, stated Fire Chief Lynch this morning, but with the use of chemicals the blaze was soon under control with no damage resulting.

B. Y. P. U. Holds St. Patrick's Party

The wearing of the green was in evidence Tuesday evening when the Intermediate B.Y.P.U. of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church held a jolly St. Patrick's party in the church parlours.

During the brief devotional period Miss Marjorie Payers read the scripture lesson, a reading was contributed by Miss Margaret Moore; vocal duets were sung by Misses Jean and Verna Fox and two solo numbers by Miss Anna Hogle. Miss Kathryn Bateman acted as chairman.

Several Irish airs were lustily sung by the assembly and considerable pep was injected into the programme when Oscar Post and Lorne Dougherty played a mouth organ duet. Games and refreshments rounded out a well balanced programme of fun, food and fellowship.

WEATHER UNSUITABLE FOR SAP RUN SO FAR

A warm south wind and a few cool nights, otherwise no sap. That is the opinion of County Clerk Erle Denyes, himself a prominent maple-sugar maker, who went farther to say that unless the above-mentioned weather occurs in the immediate future, lovers of maple syrup will be forced to go without their favorite delicacy over the Easter holiday.

"No one has tapped yet to any great extent, although a few bush-owners have experimented with a few trees with no noticeable degree of success," he added.

VOLLEYBALL

The Y.M.C.A. and O.S.D. volleyball teams of the local house league won two straight at the "Y" last night as the firemen went down to defeat 15-11 and 15-10 at the hands of the "Y" men while the Knights of Columbus quintette came out twice on the bottom end of a 15-11 score. The teams:

Firemen: MacDonald, Thompson, Pomeroy, O'Brien, Post and Snell.

Y.M.C.A.: Clare, Weir, Saunders, Townsend and Maclean.

O.S.D.: Grassion, Brown, Robertson, Bartu, Haslett and May, subs, Cork, Singer and Quinnell.

Knights of Columbus: Doran, Ciceri, Donovan, Moher, Holland and Powers.

Police Blotter

A transient, who gave his name as Arthur Johnson, and no address, was arrested by city police last night following complaints of citizens regarding the man's actions. Police reported Johnson was intoxicated and molesting people by pan-handling. He was held in custody.

With no other arrests necessary the cell block at the city police station was available for the 16 transients who sought shelter there last night.

PLANE VISITS SHETLANDS IS DRIVEN AWAY

London, March 20—(CP)— An airplane believed by onlookers to be German visited the Shetland Islands north of Scotland today, but was driven off, according to an official announcement.

The air raid warning was in force 30 minutes, but no bombs were dropped.

HEAVY SNOWFALL ACROSS ONTARIO GREETS SPRING

Traffic is Difficult as Visibility is Lowered and Roads Treacherous With Ice Under Snow

CONDITIONS IN CANADA

(By the Canadian Press)

While flowers bloomed in British Columbia, one of the heaviest snowfalls of the season struck parts of Ontario today—officially the first day of Spring. Temperatures generally throughout Canada were below freezing, with thermometers in Manitoba and Saskatchewan ranging from zero to 10 above.

Between three and seven inches of snow fell in western and central Ontario overnight and the fall will reach Eastern Ontario and Quebec later today and tonight. Many side roads were blocked to all traffic except horse and cutter and huge ploughs and gangs of men worked throughout the night and today in an effort to keep main highways clear.

Traffic is Slowed Up

The driving snow made visibility poor and traffic proceeded slowly because of the treacherous ice beneath the white blanket. Temperatures throughout Ontario were fairly high, although generally below freezing.

Spring came to Northern Ontario with a promise of more snow and cold weather. The temperature was around zero in some districts.

Normally, the first day of Spring is March 21, but because this is leap year, the sun crosses the equator at 1.24 this afternoon to begin the vernal equinox officially.

Despite the reluctance of Springtime to come to Ontario, many thought the blizzard was old King Winter's "dying kick." On the other hand, Indians on a reservation near Caledonia predicted a late Spring because a flock of 100 wild geese was seen flying south.

Snow Plentiful in Quebec

In Quebec, snow still is plentiful and skiing likely will be a major week-end sport for the next couple of weeks. Two inches of snow fell overnight in some sections of New Brunswick and the temperature today ranged at 35 degrees above. The sun shone in Nova Scotia but a brisk northwest wind kept the temperature just above freezing.

Flowers bloomed in pleasant weather on the Pacific Coast. At Vancouver, a slight mist was clearing in the morning with prospects of a sunny, warm day.

Conditions in West

The sky was heavily overcast in Southern Alberta following a light rain yesterday. Thermometers showed 30 above in the Calgary district. The temperature showed zero in Southern Saskatchewan and 10 above in the northern section. A blanket of snow covered icy ground.

Under bright sunshine, Winnipeg and most of Manitoba temperatures ranged from zero to 10 above. In the Hornepayne-Schreiber territory of northwestern Ontario the thermometer showed a reading of nearly 20 degrees below zero.

6 Persons Injured In Car Collision On Tweed Highway

Tweed, March 20—(Special) — A serious motor accident, which fortunately was not attended by fatal results, occurred yesterday (Tuesday) afternoon a short distance west of Chapman's Corners, south of Tweed, when a car driven by Mr. Joseph Chapelle of Roslin crashed head-on into one operated by Mrs. Milton Burtt of Tweed. Several passengers, all children, riding in the latter car were more or less painfully injured. Strangely enough all were hurt about the nose. Mrs. Burtt herself, in addition to nose injuries, suffered body bruises. The children riding with Mrs. Burtt were her four-year-old son, Ross; Elaine Gehan; Betty Jane Gehan, and a nephew. They were motoring to Belleville to visit Mrs. Bateman, a sister of Mrs. Burtt, who is in the Belleville General Hospital.

The injured were taken to the office of a Tweed physician where it was found that Elaine Gehan had received facial cuts and abrasions in addition to shoulder bruises.

Mr. Chapelle was taken to the office of Dr. H. E. Welsh at Roslin where it was discovered that he had received facial injuries and a severe shaking-up. Both cars were badly damaged by the impact.

Chief J. C. Hayes investigated and it is understood that charges of careless driving will be laid.

London —(CP)— Three out of every four of the 670,000 young Britons called before army medical boards before Feb. 10 entered Grade 1 as fit for active service, or capable of being made fit, the Labor Ministry reports.

Garage Operators Convene in City

The regular meeting of the local branch of the Garage Operators' Association was held recently in the Queen's Hotel, Belleville, with the largest attendance on record in some time. All parts of the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward were represented as well as several from outside points. President Jack Trudeau occupied the chair and gave a resume of the proceedings of the last Provincial Council meeting held in Toronto in February. He outlined that over ten thousand mechanics in the Province are now holding Government certificates as a mark of their ability, and that garages in the Province are now represented on the Department of Labor Advisory Board and on the Safety Association Board. He mentioned that the Head Office of the Garage Operators is working with the Better Business Bureau to improve methods of advertising, etc., and that special training for mechanics is being instituted.

The meeting closed with door prizes being drawn. First prize which was presented by the McQuay-Norris Company was won by Sam Naimen of the Trudeau Motor Sales and second prize, presented by Keyes Supply Company, went to Scotty Barron of Uptown Tire & Battery.

KIWANIS CLUB CELEBRATES ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Although the Kiwanis Club was not able to meet on St. Patrick's Day it did not deter the members from enjoying a swell Irish program at their luncheon on Tuesday at the Queens Hotel. Bill Anderson presided and Bill Lynch collected the fines with Harold Carruthers leading in the singing of Irish airs. Every member was given a clay pipe and soon the room was filled with smoke curling from the implement that made Ireland famous.

The program was conducted by Jim Barclay, who presented Mr. Drake of Toronto and he pleasingly entertained with a number of violin solos that were composed of Irish jigs and reels. Charles T. Dolan was the speaker of the day and one can easily imagine the laughter that could be heard as Charlie in his own inimitable wit told Irish story after story and everyone better than the one preceding. Charlie was forced to give an encore to his address, something that seldom happens at a club luncheon but the members felt they had not had enough of Irish stories.

CAR SIDESWIPED BY TRANSPORT

Five Occupants of Motor Car Narrowly Escape Serious Injury

Five men miraculously escaped serious injury and perhaps death, when the automobile in which they were riding was completely demolished after being sideswiped by a truck one mile east of Shannonville shortly before 5.00 a.m. today.

David Stevens, Napanee, was proceeding easterly in his automobile accompanied by four friends, when a large transport, driven by Aubaron Robertson, Trenton, is said to have sideswiped the automobile driving the smaller vehicle into the south ditch, Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine reported after investigation of the accident. The motor car was a complete wreck, but no serious injuries resulted. Charges will be preferred against the truck driver, Constable Ervine stated later today.

Chapter Night Program Presented by the Women of the Moose

A meeting of the Women of the Moose Belleville Chapter 435 took place in the Moose Auditorium on Tuesday evening with Senior Regent Mrs. J. Chapman presiding. A good attendance of co-workers was present. The regular business was transacted. The "Chapter Night" program for March was sponsored by the Social Service committee. Owing to the absence of chairman Mrs. A. Burk, the chaplain, Mrs. E. McGinness, substituted and gave an outline on Social Service work and stressed upon the hard work that Miss Katherine Smith, Washington, D.C., put forth to accomplish the great need of service to dependant children and the helpless aged of the fraternity and in the local communities.

Mrs. B. Mossman won the Sunshine prize at the close of the meeting. Cards were played. Mrs. G. Ritch won first prize for euchre and Mrs. St. Louis second. Mrs. L. Connell was the winner at rummy, the second prize going to Mrs. E. McGinness, following supper was in charge of the Home Making chairman, Mrs. J. Jeffrey, assisted by Mrs. J. Chapman. The table was very pretty with green candles in silver holders and tables centred with a silver dish of candy. The traditional color of green and white was carried out in the favors of pipes, mystery packages and souvenirs, in keeping with St. Patrick's Day. Much credit is due to the committee for the delightful evening spent.

"Hon. Robert James Manion of Fort William, is an experienced parliamentarian who has many of the qualities that mark a statesman. He has been a fighter since boyhood. He was an all-round athlete in his youth. He put himself through University by working in newspaper offices."

"Dr. Manion has proved his loyalty to Canada and the Empire. He detests bigotry. His experiences and associations have taught him to respect the opinions of others. He sees that national understanding is essential to the maintenance of confederation."

"There is every reason to expect that Dr. Manion will measure up to the highest tradition of Canadian public life. He has boundless energy, torrential eloquence, and a desire 'to go places' that will make him no mean opponent. No government will be able to stand still while he is prodding it along. The people of Canada of all political persuasions will wish him success in the discharge of the duties pertaining to the great and honorable position in our parliamentary system of government that has been entrusted to him."

Opposed Ottawa Empire Trade Agreements.
Scuttled Parliament.
Main Interests: Mackenzie King and the Liberal Party.
An Independent View: Editorial, TORONTO GLOBE and MAIL, January 27, 1940.

"Mr. King admits, inferentially that he cannot stand up to the threatened criticism of the Opposition or totally ignores the authority of the parliamentary institutions he has defended so often and so zealously. It is a regrettable situation for a democracy.

"In England the Government is able to sit and face the music increasing confidence by so doing. Why not in Canada?

"It is deplorable that, as one of his last official acts in Canada, Lord Tweedsmuir should have been asked to sign a document which in effect, gagged Parliament and stifled criticism, defying the democracy we are fighting to preserve."

"The impression will not die easily that the unexpected dissolution was both a piece of political trickery and an act utterly discreditable to a country offering its blood for political freedom."

CHAPTER VIII

Juliette, left alone in Curt's office while he went downstairs to put Sara into a taxi, was a prey to angry thoughts. Though she had carefully maintained her composure when she found Sara in his arms, she had inwardly seethed with jealous fury.

Had that girl really got a hold on him? Juliette rose and restlessly paced the floor. He had completely forgotten his date with her tonight. And then, when she had dared to come here and remind him of it, he had first been rude to her and then consented only grudgingly to keeping his engagement.

It all added up. He was in love with that Sara Sidney! He must be!

Juliette's lips tightened. She had no intention of giving him up without a fight. It was ridiculous that a little nobody could take him away from her — Juliette Carer! No! She'd find a way to get him back.

At that moment, she happened to glance toward the open safe, and her eye fell on the blueprints Curt had placed there—rolled into a cylinder and held by elastic bands.

She paused suddenly in her pacing and stared at them, remembering what Curt had said. If Carrington and Broderick didn't get the contract for that South American dam, they would face financial difficulties — might even fail. And these blueprints must be submitted with their bid....

Juliette's eyes narrowed. Suppose the blueprints should disappear....

They couldn't be replaced quickly, for a man 'way down in South America had prepared them. Before he could send others, it would be too late. Carrington and Broderick wouldn't be able to submit a bid—would lose their chance of landing the all important contract.

With the fortunes of the firm toppling, Curt surely couldn't refuse the millions she could dangle before him as bait. Pressure from his family, the thread of financial ruin, the dread of consequent publicity—all would fight on her side.

It took but an instant for Juliette to reach into the safe, take the roll of blueprints, and wad them into the large-sized handbag she was carrying.

Then, trembling, she sat down again in the big chair where she had been when Curt had left with Sara. For an instant, she had a qualm, then downed it. What she was doing was drastic—but drastic measures were called for. She had wanted Curt Carrington too long to let a snip of an office girl steal him from under her very nose!

When Curt returned, a few minutes later, she was casually touching up her make-up.

"I won't be a moment," he said. "Just have to lock up."

As he moved toward the safe, Julietet held her breath. Would he notice the absence of the blueprints? But, without looking inside, he mechanically closed the safe door, Juliette relaxed.

"I'm awfully sorry I forgot about the dance, Julie," he said, feeling that he really did owe her an apology. "But there's still plenty of time to dress and get there reasonably early."

"You're forgiven, Curt," she said lightly. "Just so you don't do it again!"

As they drove uptown in her car, she was filled with a feeling of exultation and triumps. Soon she would have Curt where she wanted him. Soon she could make sure of him. As he guided the car through traffic, she leaned her shoulder against his, and gloated.

If he but knew what was nestling in her handbag! Strange that so much could depend on that bundle of papers. The fate of Carrington and Broderick, her own and Curt's fate and future—all this was contained in the small space of her bag....

Meanwhile, Sara had reached home. As she listlessly entered the little apartment, and pulled off her hat, her mother greeted her anxiously.

"You look tired, dear. I don't like for you to have to work so late. Mr. Carrington shouldn't make you do it."

"I'm all right," said Sara, stretching out on the sofa. She couldn't tell her mother that it wasn't weariness that ailed her.

"Did you have supper?"

"Yes," Sara answered dully.

She had meant to come home and describe all the delicious things Curt had ordered, but now, the joy had been taken out of that pleasant supper they had had together.

"I hope you weren't too disappointed that we couldn't go out to Vicky's this evening" she said,

"Oh, no — we can go another time," replied Mrs. Sidney. "Besides I had company."

"Company? Who?"

"Toby Martin."

"Toby?" Sara sat up in surprise. Why should Toby call, after what had happened that noon?

"Yes, dear. He said you and he had a little quarrel at lunch today, and he wanted to tell you he was sorry for some of the things he said. I wish you had been home, dear, because I'm afraid——" Mrs. Sidney paused, looking upset.

"Afraid what, Mother?"

"Well, I'm afraid he's made all over again. When I told him you were staying late at the office to do some work for young Mr. Carrington, he flared up. I tried to make him see that you couldn't help it if you were asked to work overtime, but he went away in a huff, saying he had a date with some girl named Sonia. I gathered that he was very jealous of Mr. Carrington. I do wish you'd be nicer to him Sara...."

"Oh, don't worry about him, Mother," Sara sank back onto the sofa. "He'll get over it."

CHAPTER IX

The following morning, when Sara awoke, her feeling of depression had lifted somewhat, and when, just before she left for the office, she received a note from Curt's mother asking her to Yellow Gables for the week-end, it vanished entirely.

Her heart pounded, and her spirits soared. Despite what Curt had said, she had not felt sure that his mother actually would invite her. But now, here was the cordially worded invitation in large, generous handwriting on creamy note paper.

On her way downtown in the subway, she was scarcely conscious of her surroundings. The crowded subway car, with its strap-clutching passengers, might have been a golden chariot filled with angels, for all she knew. So engrossed was she in happy imaginings of what was in store.

A whole week-end with Curt. She would see his home, meet his family. They would tramp the beach together, swim together, watch the moon rise over the ocean....

All morning, she was in the clouds. She did not see Curt, for he hadn't yet come down to the office. When she went out to lunch, he still hadn't appeared.

While she was out, she stopped at a little shop to buy a hat she had seen in the window. She had looked at it longingly several times but had felt she couldn't afford it. Now, however, she felt more reckless. If she was going to Yellow Gables, she must look her best, regardless of expense!

She was still in the clouds when she returned to the office, but she was soon brought sharply down to earth.

"Sara!" Brenda Kraus said, as soon as she reached her desk. "Mr. Sturges Carrington wants to see you. He and Curt and Miss Pickett are waiting for you in his office."

Brenda's tone was strangely ominous. Sara, glancing round, saw that all the girls were looking a bit queer.

"Is anything wrong," she asked.

"I don't know what it's all about, but something plenty must have happened. Pickett looked like she was going to cry when she came out and said to tell you to come in the minute you got back. Then, while the door was open, I heard Mr. Carrington bawling Curt out."

A chill went through Sara. Why was Mr. Carrington angry with Curt And why was he demanding her presence.

Quickly, she hung up her hat and hurried to his office. Curt and Miss Pickett were seated beside his desk, and they all looked worried.

"Ah! Miss Sidney! Just a question or two we want to ask you."

"Yes, Mr. Carrington."

"Something very disturbing has happened." Sturges Carrington paused and gazed at her a moment, then said, "The Remo Dam blueprints have disappeared."

Sara's eyes widened. "Dis—disappeared?"

"Yes. When my son opened his safe to take them out a while ago, they were gone. Now, I understand that you and he were working on them last night, until he had to leave to keep an engagement with Miss Carter. He tells me he left unexpectedly and rather hurriedly, but that he's almost sure he put the blueprints back in the safe before he left. He is not, however, quite certain, and so I want to know whether you recall his doing so."

Sara hesitated, while they all looked expectantly at her. After Juliette's entrance last night, she had been so embarrassed that her memory of details was now blurred. She strove to visualize the scene.

Yes—she remembered now. Just as she was leaving, just before Curt took her down to the taxi, he rolled up the blueprints and slid them into the safe. She had a mental picture of it

"Yes," she said definitely. "I distinctly recall seeing him put them away. It was as I was leaving."

Gwendolyn Pickett suddenly asked sharply. "Then you left before he did"

"That's right, Miss Pickett."

"But you were in his office several times this morning, weren't you, before he arrived?"

"Why, yes," said Sara, puzzled. "I'm in and out of there all the time."

"And, as his secretary, you know the combination of his safe, don't you " Miss Pickett persisted.

Sara's face flamed. Was the woman implying that she had taken the blueprints? Before she could answer, Mr. Carrington broke in sternly.

"Miss Pickett! Of course Miss Sidney knows the combination. My son wouldn't have her as his secretary if he didn't trust her implicity. There's no need for these questions."

Gwendolyn Pickett flushed under her idol's reproof. "I was only trying to find out all the facts. I was thinking that, if Miss Sidney opened the safe this morning and left it open for any length of time, some—some one else might have slipped in and taken the blueprints."

"Did you open it at all this morning, Miss Sidney?" Sturges Carrington asked.

"No—I didn't".

He sighed and shook his head. "It's very strange. Well. . .thank you, Miss Sidney. I believe that's all we want to ask you."

As she moved toward the door, he turned to Curt.

"The only thing to do is to cable Fowler to draft another set as fast as he can, and rush them up here by air mail. We can only hope they'll get here in time! If they don't, and if the others don't turn up . . ."

Sara heard no more. She had closed the door behind her.

In a daze, she returned to her desk. The blueprints gone! And so much depended on them! Curt had said that, if Carrington & Broderick didnt get this contract, the firm might . . .

She pushed that possibility out of her mind, and thought of Gwendolyn Pickett's obvious hostility. "But why should she think I would take them? What reason could I have?"

Then, with a sudden sinking feeling, Sara realized the motive that might be assigned to her. Of course. She had once worked for Poulton, Inc., the firm's chief competiter for the contract! And Miss Pickett knew that.

Did the woman think she might have been paid by the Poulton company to steal the blueprints? Would she put that thought into Mr. Carrington's head? Might she even make Curt suspect her. . . .

AT THE BELLE

"Broadway Melody of 1940"

Teaming for the first time Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell, world's greatest male and feminine tap dancers, "Broadway Melody of 1940" opens next at the Belle theatre.

Ever since each star rose to overnight screen fame it has been the hope of Hollywood to combine their talents in one production but commitments prevented until Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer last spring was able to sign Astaire for this picture.

To give the two stars the best possible musical sittings, M-G-M signed Cole Porter, who has written music for both Astaire and Miss Powell starring vehicles, to do the tunes for this picture. The composer of "Night and Day" has produced five new songs for "Broadway Melody of 1940" and use is made for the first time on the screen of his sensational "Begin the Beguine."

9 Dance Numbers

With the two stars is George Murphy, among Hollywood's leading dance star. Together the three execute nine dance numbers in trios, duets and solos. The cast is given further color by the comedy of Frank Morgan and the appearance in leading roles of Ian Hunter, Florence Rice, Lynne Carver, Ann Morriss, Trixie Firschke and Douglas McPhail. The stellar cast was directed by Norman Taurog, director of "The Big Broadcast of 1936" and "College Rhythm" among other musical hits. Jack Cummings produced.

The story is a sprightly, human story of two male dancers in a ballroom who attract the attention of a Broadway producer. Through a series of mistakes in identity and mishaps, honors fall to the wrong member of the team until he himself straightens out the tangle and permits his superior partner to dance to fame and romance with Broadway's dancing star.

Sophisticated hair styles and one of the most elaborate wardrobes ever to be designed for her by Adrian, bring Eleanor Powell to the screen as a new personality. Sets which exceed in size and splendor even the famous ones of "The Great Ziegfeld" furnish backgrounds for the dances. A chorus of dancers work with the stars and, in several scenes, singing choruses lend interest to the presentation.

"I Take This Woman"

"I Take This Woman" a dramatic romance of New York life and society, brings Spencer Tracy and the glamorous Hedy Lamarr together as Hollywood's most unusual and interesting romantic team. The picture is now playing at the Belle theatre.

A dramatic story of a social butterfly who finds her happiness with an earnest physician in a tenement clinic after her society romance has crashed, the play deals with the sacrifice of the constant lover and the final regeneration of the woman for whom he nearly sacrifices his entire career. Action of the interesting story ranges all the way from gay night clubs, penthouses and fashion salons to the tenements.

W. S. Van Dyke II directed, and assembled a brilliant cast including Verree Teasdale, Kent Taylor, Loraine Day, Mona Barrie, Jack Carson, Paul Cavanagh, Louis Calhern, Frances Drake, Marjorie Main, Geo. E. Stone, Willie Best, Don Castle, Dalies Frantz and Reed Hadley.

William Henry and Louise Campbell are featured in "Emergency Squad" heart-throbbing romantic thrill drama to be presented on the same program with the Belle news of the hour.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Desperate Trails"

Adventures of a handsome law officer during colorful days of the old west — and the astonishing schemes by which he keeps bandits and outlaws in a state of perpetual bewilderment, are found in "Desperate Trails," Universal action drama starting next at the Capitol theatre.

Johnny Mack Brown has the starring role in the story which is said to blend comedy, romance and unexpected thrills. Featured in the supporting cast are Boo Baker, singing star; Fuzzy Knight, cowboy comedian; Frances Robinson and young Bill Cody, Jr. Character roles are carried by Russell Simpson, Clarence H. Wilson, Ed Cassidy, Charles Stevens and Ralph Dunn.

The Second Feature

"Nobody's Baby" a laugh riot from start to finish as Patsy Kelly and Lyda Roberti whoop their way through a gay filled song-packed jamboree! A strong supporting cast includes Lynne Overman, Robert Armstrong, Rosina Lawrence and Don Alvarado.

"Nellie of the Circus" a cartoon and the 9th chapter of the thrilling detective serial "Red Barry" concludes the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Freddie Stone and His Band Box Musical Revue"

Now on the stage of the McCarthy theatre, Freddie Stone, popular Belleville boy and outstanding violinist and imitator, with a group of other Belleville boys and girls, are delighting large evening audiences with their excellent presentation of musical, vocal, dancing and comic entertainment.

Their show is one of the best presented locally in quite some time and this reviewer heartily recommends that all who have not already enjoyed it, should see it without fail.

Chester Morris, Richard Dix and Lucille Ball in "The Marines Fly High", latest Fox Movietone News, an amusing Donald Duck cartoon and Edgar Kennedy in a comedy-howl "Baby Daze" are presented on the screen, preceding and following Freddie Stone and his stage revue.

"Valley of the Giants"

The Warner Bros. hit, "The Valley of the Giants" produced in beautiful technicolor and featuring Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, El Brendel and Charles Bickford, will be presented next at the McCarthy theatre, by popular request and in addition a new first run picture "Two Thoroughbreds" a story which is as unforgettable as the great pictures "A Man to Remember" and "The Great Man Votes," will be the co-feature shown with "The Valley of the Giants."

NOTED BELGIAN DIES

Brussels, Mar. 19 (AP).—Gustavus Sap, Belgian food minister and veteran political figure died today. A Catholic party member, he had occupied the posts of Minister of Economics, Interior, Finance and Agriculture at various times since 1932.

Says King Gov't Failed in Duty To Farmer, Soldier, Working Man

A. W. Downer, M.L.A., Speaks in Interests of Geo. H. Stokes at Frankford

TOO MANY IMPORTS

Frankford, March 20—(Staff)—A charge that the Mackenzie King Government had failed utterly in its duty to the farmer, the soldier and the workingman was made by Rev. A. W. Downer, M.L.A., for Dufferin and Simcoe, as he addressed a Conservative rally held in the interest of Mr. George H. Stokes, National Conservative candidate, at Frankford last evening. "Mr. King has let the farmer, the soldier and the workingman down," said Mr. Downer, who told his audience that unemployment insurance was one of the planks in Dr. Manion's platform and would be instituted if the National Government were elected.

In his chairman's address, Mr. K. Arnott, President of the Frankford Conservatives, referred to the system of patronage which has existed at the Trenton Airport, and also denied the statement made by Mr. McLean Haig, the official Liberal candidate, that the Bata Shoe Company was persuaded to come to Frankford through the influence of the Liberal Government.

Mr. George Spencer, Reeve of Frankford Village spoke briefly, saying that "We, in Canada, were now engaged in two wars, one on the overseas front and one on the home front. The war on the overseas front looks like a long hard fight," said Mr. Spencer, but he promised that the election scrap on the home front would be a short one. Mr. Spencer also touched briefly regarding the political patronage which had existed at the Airport and stated that regardless of a reliefee's circumstances, he could get on at the Airport only if he were a "Grit."

Had Pledged Co-operation

The leaders of the Opposition had pledged their co-operation to Mackenzie King at the outset of the war, said Mr. R. D. Arnott, M. L.A. for West Hastings, but even with the refusal of Mr. King to co-operate with them towards the successful prosecution of the war, these men had withheld their criticism, expecting that the issues would be discussed when parliament opened. At that sitting of parliament, which lasted only three hours, Mackenzie King told the members that the government had accomplished a worthy war effort and took the attitude "we are not giving out any information" Mr. Arnott declared that Mackenzie King, by his attitude, as much as said that he was not accountable to the electors for his actions and by his dictatorial attitude had attacked "the very keystone of the constitutional set-up," and was tearing down the very thing for which he is asking us to fight.

"The Liberals are wanting us to forget that rotten piece of business," declared Mr. Arnott, "and are appealing for votes on a patronage basis." "Why?" asked Mr. Arnott, "should patronage be used as the determining factor when hiring laborers for work on government projects and not when recruiting for the army?"

Mr. Arnott charged Mackenzie King with "muzzling" the radio and stated that political speeches must be submitted to a censor board 48 hours before the talk is given. "Talk about free speech in Canada," said Mr. Arnott, "Mackenzie King is striking at the firm foundation of Canada—trying to cloud the issue."

Before the war, the cabinet of the Mackenzie King Government was opposed to Canadian forces participating in foreign wars, stated Mr. Arnott, but it wasn't long before they were hollering the other way. Mr. King admits the serious state of unpreparedness at the outset of the war, but blames this on the Bennett Government. "You can't blame an administration which sat from 1930-35 for the lack of preparation which was evident in 1939," said Mr. Arnott in conclusion.

Claims Soldiers Poorly Clothed

"The paramount issue of the election is the winning of the war," stated Rev. A. W. Downer as he spoke in the support of Mr. George H. Stokes, "but what has the Mackenzie King Government done in this respect? You only need to ask the soldiers," he said, and quoted parts of a conversation with a soldier who claimed that he had gone five weeks without a change of socks and with another man who said that he had but one suit of underwear.

Mr. Downer claimed that the first Canadian division had gone overseas without necessary military equipment. "According to Hon. J. L. Ralston he said, "they were without military equipment, what guns they had were obsolete and were to be replaced with Bren guns by the British Government." "It was Mackenzie King's claim, however," stated Mr. Downer, "that the soldiers were fully equipped, but if you can't accept a man's word when dealing with the country's war effort, then you can't accept it at any time."

"When the Hon. Neville Chamberlain went to Munich to confer with Hitler, Australia wired to Britain that 'we are with you,' but Canada was silent. Through the silence of Canada, South Africa, India and Ireland, Hitler was led to believe the Dominions would not fight for Britain, and was further encouraged by a statement made by Mr. King, 'we are not sure that we will fight with England every time.'"

"What has the Liberal Government done for farmers?" he asked. "Not one thing." "We have an agreement with Britain to supply 5,600,000 lbs. of bacon weekly but the only way we can keep up that committment is to take pork from storage plants. This will cause a shortage on the local market but the price cannot go up as it has been pegged at nine cents. In order to make up that quota, millions of pounds of United States pork has been allowed to enter Canada to compete with Canadian bacon. The government has also permitted thousands of bushels of wheat from the United States to enter Canada, with this wheat being made into flour and sold to chain stores from where it was retailed at a lower figure than it was possible to sell Canadian flour," Mr. Downer said.

Touching on the war contracts let by the Government, Mr. Downer said that although Ontario represented approximately one-third of the Dominion's entire population, and paid 46 per cent of the entire revenue, during the first five months of the war, the contracts let in the province of Quebec amounted to $37,000,000 while Ontario's share totalled only $13,000,000.

Referring to the Empire Air Training Scheme suggested by the British Government in 1938, he said that Mackenzie King had finally admitted that he had turned down the plan on "constitutional grounds." As a result millions of dollars worth of contracts had been let in the United States, said Mr. Downer, who claimed that Mr. King would rather trust the United States than England.

The only issue of the election is the "prosecution of the war" said Mr. Downer in conclusion, "so let's forget party allegiance, present a united front and vote for the man who is willing to fight for our country."

Only One Competent Leader States G. Stokes

The National Government candidate for Hastings South, Mr. George Stokes, spoke briefly, saying that the paramount question of the election was "who do we want for a leader?" "There is only one leader," continued Mr. Stokes, "who is competent to lead this country while we are at war, and if we don't win the war, there'll be nothing left." Mr. Stokes concluded by paying tribute to the young people of the riding of South Hastings who were taking such an interest in the campaign, an interest, he said, which was entirely due to the Ministry of Youth Welfare which had been promised by Dr. Manion.

Mr. Fred Wilson, Reeve of Sidney Township, spoke briefly, as did Mr. George Ketcheson, Eastern Ontario Organizer for the National Young Conservatives, who explained in detail the Department of Youth which will be included in Dr. Manion's cabinet, if elected on March 26th. Mr. C. F. Copeland of Trenton entertained the audience with several piano solos throughout the course of the evening. The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

HITLER APPOINTS NEW MINISTER OF MUNITIONS

Berlin, Mar. 20 (AP).—Adolf Hitler today appointed Dr. Fritz Todt, builder of the westwall, as minister of munitions with instructions to step up production by all feasible means.

Todt, rated an able engineer, long has been Hitler's chief assistant in his most ambitious building projects. He is largely responsible for Germany's system of super-highways.

DOG BREAKS BOY'S FALL

Pittsburgh, Mar. 20 (AP).—Harold Widner heard his two-year-old son Roy crying and found him on sidewalk beside his dog. "Please wake Ginger," pleaded the boy. Roy had been playing with the eight-months-old pup on a second-storey porch when he slipped off a railing and fell 12 feet. He landed on the dog and killed it but Widner said there was no doubt the pet broke Roy's fall and saved his life.

Hogs closed yesterday at $9 off-truck for bacon and $12 dressed-weight.

Butter Prices Ease at Toronto

Toronto, March 20 — Prevailing slow trading caused butter to drift a shade lower during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market. Prices held about steady for eggs.

Although fresh receipts arrived in light volume and holders were not pressing for sales, the butter market closed off yesterday when demand failed to show any improvement on Monday's dull pace. A few small sales of the first grade Ontario product were reported in the range of 28c to 28-1-4c per pound.

An easier tone developed near the close of the egg market as offerings increased. A good movement for Easter trade was reported throughout most of the session, with best inquiry on grade A-medium and pullets. Government-inspected lots of graded eggs were in fair demand at the 1-2c premium.

Montreal Produce.

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 29c to 29-1-2c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 28 1-2c to 29c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 24 1-2c to 25c; A-medium, 22 1-2c to 23c; A-pullets, 21 1-2c to 22c; B, 21c; C, 19 1-2c; B-large, unquoted. Receipts: 843 cases.

Easter Novelties In Wide Variety Find Ready Sale

There are little bunnies and big bunnies, chocolate soldiers, tiny chicks and mother hens, some colorfully decorated with fancy colored candies, and others attractively garbed in various hues of the rainbow.

There are small eggs and large eggs of all descriptions, from some of which peek chicks of every hue and color, peeping an Easter welcome.

Perhaps never before, at least for some lengthy period of time, according to department store and other places of business where the toothsome Easter merchandise is now on sale, has the spirit of Easter been exemplified in this manner as it has this year.

Manufacturers have excelled themselves in the manufacture of more and newer Easter novelties especially in the children's ranges, one manager said. And the children are responding in a manner that augurs well for a good volume of Easter business.

Counters of various stores in the business thoroughfares are now crowded with the chocolate novelties, and each afternoon sees a crowd of eager children enjoying the delights, if only from a distance, of the quaint colorful little tidbits so dear to the heart of the kiddies at this time of the year.

Bancroft

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Maxwell and children returned home from Toronto last week where they had spent a few days visiting relatives.

Mr. Frank Hubbel, of U. A. Hubbel and Son, who was in Toronto on business at the time of the Hubbel fire, returned home Wednesday night.

Mrs. G. E. Towle, accompanied by Mr. Jack Russel, motored to Toronto on Saturday.

Mrs. H. McCaw spent the weekend in Belleville at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. McCaw.

Mr. Jack McAlpine who is attending Business College in Belleville, was in Bancroft over the week-end.

Mr. Earl Hawley was a business visitor in Belleville on Saturday.

Mr. Percy Gould returned home from Toronto this week terminating a trip in Northern Ontario.

Mr. Wilfred Maxwell and Mr. J. F. Reid, two business men of the village who have been incapacitated through illness are able to be around again.

Bancroft and surrounding district was caught in the grip of a real snowstorm Thursday which nearly reached the stages of a blizzard at times. Snow fell steadily throughout the day and night. A six inch fall of snow was reported by the Forestry Branch. Plows are out clearing the main arteries. Side roads are real heavy and some impassible.

An Indian by the name of LaVallie was arrested Friday night in Barrys Bay by Provincial Constable Johnson and brought to Bancroft where he was handed over to Provincial Constable S. Palmateer. Constable Palmateer accompanied by County Constable G. P. Wells, motored to Belleville Saturday afternoon with the Indian who was under arrest to be placed in the County Jail.

FRENCH PREMIER, CABINET RESIGN

an interim episode in the Daladier administration. Besides the premiership, Daladier has held the national defence, war and foreign affairs portfolios.

The cabinet met early this morning, six hours after the Chamber's reluctant vote of confidence.

The session at the War Ministry lasted a half hour and then Daladier and all his ministers, except one who is in London on government business, trooped out and went to Elysee Palace where Daladier presented the resignation to Lebrun.

Lebrun at once arranged for the customary consultation on a new government. Custom requires that he summon first Jules Jeanneney, aged president of the senate, and then Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies.

In Power Two Years

The retiring government was the product of a Sept. 13 amplification for war purposes. Broadly, however it was the same government which Daladier instituted April 10, 1938.

Missing from today's trip to Elysee Palace was Jules Julien, Minister of Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones, who is in London.

At the end of a 12-hour session, the Chamber followed last Friday's lead of the Senate and returned a vote of confidence, but the vote was such as to leave the burden of proof still upon the premier.

Details of the chamber's secret meeting behind the doors of the Bourbon Palace—little more than the vote was made public — were guarded with the strictest confidence.

Explained Failure

Observers, however, assumed that Daladier—as did the British Prime Minister, Neville Chamberlain, yesterday—explained the Allied failure to get extensive aid to Finland before her peace with Russia, and gave a resume of the war effort against the Nazi regime.

The vote of confidence included this testimonial:

"The chamber expresses to the Finnish nation and army the homage of its admiration for their magnificent courage."

It was adopted by a unanimous show of hands, but the second section of the resolution, the one involving the government itself, found only 239 favoring it and Maurice Delauney, an Independent from the Department of Normandie, with his hand raised in position.

One development indicating a tighter grip on rearguard activities was military tribunal trial of 44 former deputes this morning. They were charged with attempting to recreate the outlawed Communist Party.

YESTERDAY'S SKIS

Banff, Alta. —(CP)— Skiing was introduced into the Canadian Rockies more than 50 years ago, discovery of a pair of axe-hewn skis here indicates. The skis were presumably built by Scandinavian railroad workers.

SEVEN-HOUR RAID

It was reported that an unidentified foreign plane, fired on by Danish anti-aircraft guns at Esbperg during the first big British raid at 1 a.m., later descended and tried to machine-gun the Danish gun crew.

A Danish naval vessel in the Esbperg harbor fired on this plane.

The morning attack lasted 20 minutes, with the concussion of explosions so intense that houses on the Danish coast were shaken. Numerous German pursuit planes later were observed flying to and from the island to the mainland.

It was reported also that bombs fell in Varde, a Danish town 15 miles inland from the Danish coast in the early morning. Several craters were found, but no casualties were reported.

More complete accounts of Tuesday night's attack said the R.A.F. planes dropped numerous parachute flares to aid their marksmanship.

London, March 20.—(CP)—The unleashed Royal Air Force, its appetite whetted by a booming seven-hour continuous raid on the German fortifications on Sylt Island, returned to the scene today with bomb, gun and camera to work more havoc and prove it with pictures.

Air Ministry sources said the main objective of the daylight flights over the 350-mile North Sea expanse was to make photographs, but reports from Tonder, Denmark, said Sylt apparently was being bombarded all over again.

Two planes which took photographs of Sylt this morning returned safely.

Poor visibility, compared with the bright moonlight and drifting clouds that aided the British last night and early today, prevented the Danish coastal observers from estimating accurately the number of planes involved in the follow-up raid.

They said, however, that apparently there were six groups of bombers, with the reverberating explosions equal or nearly equal to those previously, and German anti-aircraft batteries keeping up a terrific defence.

The Danes said they themselves fired warning shots at one unidentified plane which flew over Danish soil, and that several bombs were dropped on the coast of Denmark, on which they said one plane landed with spitting machine-guns.

Railway Line Damaged

Already, on the strength of glimpses caught by the crews of Wheeling bombers in the glare of battle, the Air Ministry reported the gigantic raid had destroyed seaplane hangars, a railway, barracks, jetties and concrete ramps.

What the photographs will show and whether the follow-up flights have dropped any more bombs must wait until "all planes have returned" from this latest mission, ministry sources said.

Reports from Tonder, Denmark, said two planes returned to the scene at 9 a.m. (3 a.m. EST) and dropped six bombs, but more than 100 were dropped in the mass raid of last night and early today.

The bright, thunderous crash of bombs, earth-shaking roars that signified destroyed arsenals, and the leaping red flare of burning hangars and shops gave Britain's reply through the night to Saturday's German raid on the naval anchorage in Scapa Flow.

Sky Lighted Up

This was the picture fitted together from Air Ministry communiques and the accounts of waters in nearby Denmark.

From 8 p.m. (2 p.m. EST) until after 3 a.m., the smashing attack continued. The bark of anti-aircraft guns, the fretwork of tracer bullets and the blue-white glare of searchlights manned by Sylt's defenders contributed to the netherworld scene.

Only one British plane was lost, the Air Ministry said.

"Direct hits on hangars housing seaplanes which have raided the British coast were claimed by crews of several aircraft," the ministry reported in a graphic summation of the results.

Fire Seen to Break Out

"Railway lines and barrack blocks were reported hit. One bomber crew saw a line of four or five bombs dropped by aircraft ahead of them burst just inland of a jetty.

"And their crew reported two hangars burning fiercely as they left the island. Other fires were also seen to break out following the explosion of a number of bombs near a seaplane slipway.

"Though the weather was fine and visibility good, little opposition was encountered from enemy fighters. Ground defences, however, were continuously alive. Anti-aircraft batteries in many parts of the island set up a heavy barrage of fire.

"Shells exploded in multi-colored bursts of flame. Around the seaplane base itself a semi-circle of searchlights came into action as our aircraft approached.

Anti-Aircraft Gun Fire

"In the earlier phase of the attack dropping of bombs was followed by intense light-anti-aircraft fire from batteries within the target area.

"The last of the British raiders to leave the scene of attack landed back in England at 6:30 a.m."

Residents of the nearby Danish coast, who had impromptu ringside seats, counted at least 82 bomb blasts and said four terrific explosions which made the earth quake beneath their feet undobutedly were direct hits on great munitions stores.

Four Danish towns suffered from the bombing, the Exchange Telegraph Agency reported, but the only damage was to windows.

As the smashing raid got well under way, Prime Minister Chamberlain announced the action which was Britain's most spectacular use of her air armada in the 200 days of war.

Parliament Told

A grim smile played about his face as he received the word in a wireless message from one of the raiders and made it public last night before a Parliament which had been calling for more energetic prosecutions of the war.

A series of terse communiques from the Air Ministry related the progress and conclusion of the raid.

None said how many planes and men participated in the continuous wave of flights across 350 miles of the North Sea to the big German seaplane base on Sylt's southern tip.

"Tonight the Royal Air Force attacked and severely damaged the German air base at Hornum, on the island of Sylt," said the first communique.

"This is one of the shore bases from which aircraft operate against our naval forces and merchant shipping. This action follows the attack upon our shore bases in the Orkneys."

At 8 o'clock this morning a communique stated:—

All Return Safely

"Attacks made on Hornum last night were spread over a period of about seven hours. All our aircraft have returned safely with the exception of one which is overdue and must be presumed to have been lost.

"Information now available shows that damage reported earlier is very extensive and icnludes ier is very extensive and includes gars."

(The German news agency, DNB, said last night, after the attack had been in progress three hours, that three separate British raids had been beaten off, with one British plane shot down and the firing of a house the only damage. Early today German officials said they had no further information.)

Danish coast residents told more detailed stories.

The British bombers came in relays, they said, and dived headlong from low clouds. Releasing their bombs in power dives, the raiders zoomed upward and took cover in the clouds again.

Saw Pillars of Fire

There was an incessant chatter of anti-aircraft batteries.

A cafe keeper at Havenby, on the Danish island of Romoe realyed:—

"I saw two foreign planes come diving down through the clouds with crazy speed in the direction of Sylt. They dropped eight bombs. I saw great pillars of fire.

"Later I heard an explosion from a single bomb, and a few seconds afterward an explosion came which changed the sky over Sylt into a sea of fire. There was one explosion after another. A bomb undoubtedly hit an ammunition depot.

"All the anti-aircraft guns of Sylt then opened up; tracer bullets streaked across the heavens in all directions. A wall of fire sprang up along the whole of the long island."

The Danish mainland city of Tonder, about 25 miles from Sylt, felt the concussion from one big blast, and it was a sleepless night for all the coastal region.

The British fliers who started coming back home early today said that they had done some "accurate bombing."

They said the fires started by the first bombs guided the remainder of the raiders accurately to the objective. Bright moonlight and the cloud-flecked skies were of great aid, they said.

Described as Failure

Prime Minister Chamberlain, in his discussion of the war before the House of Commons, described the German raid on Scapa Flow as a "failure" and said only one British ship was damaged slightly in a rain of 121 high explosive bombs and 500 incendiary bombs over a 100-square-mile area.

Lord Stabolgi told the House of Lords that the German attacks "removed any obstacle to our bombing German supply and naval bases," and Lord Halifax, the Foreign Secretary, replied that he did not disagree "as to the very legitimate consequences" that might be drawn.

Then came a tight little drama in the House of Commons, when Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood walked in and handed Mr. Chamberlain a bit of paper.

Sir Kingsley wore a broad grin. Mr. Chamberlain smiled tensely, arose and stated:—

"I should like to tell the House that it has been announoed this evening that the R. A. F. attacked and severely damaged the German air base Island of Sylt. I understand the attack is still continuing."

The Members, some of whom shortly before had shown impatience stood and cheered loudly.

German Communique

Berlin, March 20— (AP) — The German High Command announced today that only a "house" was hit in the British raid on Germany's Sylt Island base. One British plane was said to have been shot down.

The regular communique follows:

"In the West no special events. Yesterday about 8 p.m. British planes attacked the Island of Sylt. A number of planes continued this attack until 2.40 a.m.

"One House was struck, otherwise, thanks to the German defences, no damage was done. Most of the bombs fell in the water. One British warplane was shot down by anti-aircraft artillery.

"In connection with this attack the British planes flew over Danish territory."

Maple Leafs Rally in Overtime To Defeat Chicago Hawks; Rangers and Wings Also Win

Leafs Whittle Down Two-Goal Lead and Win 3-2 in 6 Minutes of Overtime

BRUINS BLASTED 4-0

Howe Scores Winning Goal in 2-1 Victory in Overtime for the Detroit Club

A forward line that stops the Krauts and still scores an important goal is performing one of the National League's rarest feats.

Coach Frank Boucher of the Rangers assigned the task of checking Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Wood Dumart to his roughneck line last night in the first game of Stanley Cup Playoffs at New York against Boston's League champions. The Roughnecks—Phil Watson, Bryan Hextall and Dutch Hiller—asked for the job.

They halted the Krauts almost in their tracks and scored the first goal as the Rangers began the best-of-seven round with a rousing 4-0 victory before 14,421 customers in Madison Square Garden. Yet Schmidt, Bauer and Dumart have been the highest-scoring unit of the year and their breath-taking plays pulled the Bruins into the title in a dash that overtook the Rangers as the schedule ended.

The victory switched the odds on the round to favor the Rangers, who hadn't shown anything like the same kind of fight or cohesion when Boston edged them out of the championship. Play continues at Boston tomorrow.

Detroit and Leafs Hard-Pressed

Toronto and Detroit were hard-pressed to take overtime decisions as the other sets of the opening round began. The Maple Leafs defeated Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 at Toronto, when Sylvanus Apps scored his second goal after six minutes and 35 seconds of extra play. The Red Wings downed New York Americans 2-1 at Detroit on Syd Howe's goal just 25 seconds after overtime began.

The Leafs will continue their best-of-three round at Chicago tomorrow and if a third game is necessary it will be played at Toronto Saturday. The Americans and Red Wings meet at New York Friday and, if necessary, at Detroit Sunday. The survivors of these rounds will meet in a best-of-three round for the right to oppose the Rangers or Boston for the Cup and World Championship.

Krauts Stopped by Kerr

One big opportunity came to the Krauts in the first period and Gaolie Dave Kerr stopped Bauer that time. The best of the show belonged almost entirely to the Blueshirts and Watson finally started the scoring parade after 10 minutes of the second, smashing the puck home after a relay from Hextall and Hiller.

Babe Pratt of the Rangers was serving a penalty when his team scored two minutes later, Alex Shibicky converting Neil Colville's pass. The same forward line accounted for the last two goals in the third. Mac Colville getting them both—one with the aid of Brother Neil and the other from Shibicky.

Uphill Fight for Leafs

It was an uphill fight for the Maple Leafs, who were faced with the memory of the beating Chicago gave them two years ago in the Cup finals. This time, underdogs in the betting again, the Hawks sped into a 2-0 lead in the first period.

Art Wiebe, returning to the Chicago defence after a two-weeks absence through injury, scored less than three minutes after the start, while Sweeney Schriner of the Leafs and Mush March of Chicago were serving penalties. Just before the first period ended March extended the advantage, while his team was short-handed, stealing the puck from Schriner and driving in from the Toronto blue-line.

The home teams bore down through the second period but couldn't crash goalie Paul Goodman's armor until Jack Church rattled in a shot off Wiebe's legs in the third. Halfway through the period, Apps tied the score on a play started by Bingo Kampman and carried along by Bob Davidson and Gordon Drillon.

Apps Scores Winner

Red Heron of Toronto has just returned to the ice, after serving a penalty for tripping March as the Hawk Wingman headed goalwards, when Apps broke up the game. He took Davidson's pass at centre ice, rounded Wiebe and poked the puck past Goodman after feinting a rush around the net.

Detroit also had to come from behind. Johnny Gagnon sent the Americans ahead in the first period on a pass from Tommy Anderson but Alex Motter tied the score in the second with the aid of Ebbie Goodfellow and Sid Abel.

Only the brilliant work of Goalie Earl Robertson kept the Americans in the game through the third. Then Howe took the puck from the faceoff as the overtime began, skirted the New York defence and flicked the rubber over Robertson while the customers were still getting settled for a protracted session.

Perth Blue Wings Score 7-2 Win Over Charlottetown

Ottawa, March 20.—(CP)—Perth Blue Wings' rushing tactics, a feature of their play last year when they eliminated Charlottetown Royals in a Memorial Cup junior hockey playdown, continue to baffle this season's edition of Royals.

Held in check for three quarters of the game by Goalie Earl (Boots) Boates last night, Perth's attack suddenly clicked for five third-period goals which gave them a 7-2 victory in the opening game of a best-of-three Eastern Canada elimination series. Second game will be played here Thursday.

A penalty to Little Jack Coyle of Royals half-way in the third frame gave Perth a break and they made the most of it, scoring three goals in one minute and 27 seconds to clinch the verdict.

Jack Pumple, Stan Rooke and Jack [illegible]gan shared scoring honors for Perth, each notching two goals. Bud Goodfellow got the other, Jimmy Roach and Coyle were Royals' marksmen.

PROVIDENCE REDS IN DRIVER'S SEAT WITH CAPITALS

Win 2-1 Victory Over Indianapolis to Gain a Distinct Edge in Playoffs

INDIANS WIN

Wallop Pittsburgh 5-1 as Hershey Bears Defeat New Haven 4-2

(By The Canadian Press)

Providence Reds, old hands in International-American League hockey playoffs, are in the driver's seat today in their best-of-five games semi-final playoff series with Indianapolis Capitals, making their first bid for the minor league title.

The Rhode Islanders gained a 2-1 victory over the Capitals last night as their series opened in Providence and thus established themselves as favorites for one of the final berths. It took a goal by Harold Jackson, after 52 minutes of overtime, to decide the tight contest.

Meantime, in quarter-final series, Springfield Indians walloped Pittsburgh Hornets 5-1 as veteran Tommy Filmore scored three times and Hershey Bears scored four goals in six minutes in the second period to beat New Haven Eagles 4-2.

Both these series are best-of-three affairs with the winners meeting to decide an opponent in the final for Providence or Indianapolis.

Never in Front

The Capitals, who won the western Division title in their first season in the Int-Am, were never in front against Providence.

Wilf Starr sent Providence ahead late in the first period and rookie Sandy Ross tied the score in the last minute of the second. The teams then played through three 20 minutes periods and 12:23 minutes of a fourth before Jackson fired in the winning goal unassisted.

At Springfield, the Indians, playing without owner Eddie Shore, packed too much power for the Hornets whose only goal was provided by veteran Marty Barry. Filmore scored twice in the first period, with Barry's goal sandwiched in between his pair, and got his third in the second. Normie Schultz and Lloyd Jackson completed the walkaway in the third.

Mcreavy, Gordon Pettinger, Terry Reardon and Shannon scored the goals that sent Hershey into a four goal lead in the middle frame. The Eagles staged a third period rally but it fell short after goals by Bill Summerhill and Earl Robinson.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By the Associated Press)

Bradenton, Fla., March 20—(AP)—The New York Yankees are not worried about old Father Time. Though the present Yank pitching corps is hardly wearing out, Marvin Breuer and Tommy Reis, the righthand rookies, up from Kansas City, have given the champs cause to cheer. The two combined to shut out the Bees yesterday.

Winter Haven, Fla.—Belief that the Giants will have as good a pitching staff as any National League Club continues to gain weight. Latest to give Manager Bill Terry cause to smile is Cliff Melton, the slim southpaw, who pitched four innings of shutout ball yesterday in blanking Cleveland Indians.

Sarasota, Fla. — Dennis Galehouse, Emerson Dickman and Jim Bagby are the three hurlers Manager Joe Cronin has nominated for duty today against St. Louis Cardinals. Cronin, who has shaken his cold, played five innings yesterday and plans to be in today's line-up.

Pasadena, Cal.—Jumping over to White Sox training camp today, the Pirates will seek revenge for the 7-9 drubbing handed them in the rain yesterday by the American Leaguers. MacFayden, Harrell and Heintzelman were scheduled to hurl for the Pirates and Jack Knott, Pete Appleton and southpaw Edgar Smith for Chicago.

'Cementmakers' of Point Anne Lead Industrial Hockey League

Josh Maracle's Squad Down Corbin Lock 5-1, While Alemites Take Sargents 4-3

SMART CONTESTS

Josh Maracle's Canada Cement pucksters made it two straight in the current City Industrial Hockey League when they downed the Corbin Lock 5 to 1 in the opening game of a dual bill played at the Hume Arena last night, the Alemite Corporation pucksters winning the nightcap affair by a 4 to 3 count. The final double-header of the City puck loop will be played at the Hume Arena on Thursday night, which may see the termination of hockey in Belleville for the current year.

Defence Stars

With Murney Green and Bobby Hull on the "cementmen's" defence the Corbin "lock-makers" experienced a torrid difficulty in penetrating that zone with the result, that the only Corbin goal came, when Westlake whipped a loose puck into the Point Anne goal late in the third period.

Bennett and Sero scored for the "Cementmen" in the initial frame, while the veteran Bobby Hull raced through for a counter in the middle session. Carter and Sero registered goals for the winners in the last stanza. In the Corbin net Morris literally kept the victors at bay with his sensational saves throughout the entire piece. Barney Smith and the McGuire boys carried the bulk of the play for the losers, and Green and Hull held the fort as Bennett, Genereaux and Carter carried the mail for the winners.

Alemite Wins

After playing at even terms for two periods, Jack Bundy raced through for a last minute goal to give the Alemite a 4 to 3 win over the Belleville-Sargent in the nightcap affair after the Belleville-Sargent had played the victors even in the initial session and came from behind to knot the score early in the last frame after Cook had scored for the ultimate winners in the middle frame.

Palmer, Cook and Bundy scored for the victorious Alemite sextette, with Bundy getting credit for a goal after Jimmie McGuire threw his stick in the home defence area in the second period. Jimmie McGuire bagged one for the Pinnacle St. "Lockmakers", while Symons notched the other two counters for the losers.

On Thursday night the group-leading Canada Cement team meets the Belleville Sargent and the Alemite clashes with the Corbin Lock with the ultimate play-off positions being involved in both games.

BETTER INFIELD TO HELP HURLERS SAYS FRED HANEY

Browns Lost Number of Games by Faulty Work in the Infield

FAIR PITCHING

Auker, Kennedy, Lawson, Mills, Harris and Kramer Nucleus of Staff

(By Felix R. McKnight, Associated Press Sports Writer)

San Antonio, Tex., March 20—(AP)—Not exactly overloaded with flawless pitching, Manager Fred Haney of the St. Louis Browns, a man of great logic, nevertheless believes his problem goes a bit deeper than the mound.

Haney is one of baseball's distinctive characters. He believes he has a fair mound staff. He further contends that his pitching staff is just about what his infield makes it.

"Didn't I see our pitchers lose ball games last season, usually in the late innings after we had built up a lead, because maybe we were just a trifle slow on a double play or could have stopped a hard one that got through?" he queried.

"Maybe that's going to change this summer. We have a more experienced infield now, one that can function just a little better—just enough to make a big difference in our pitching. We have good pitchers—Eldon Auker, Vernon Kennedy, Roxie Lawson, Howard Mills, Bob Harris, Jackie Kramer and some fine relief men in Nathan Andrews, Big John Whitehead, Slick Coffman, Johnny Niggeling and Bill Trotter."

Quiet George McQuinn is a solid first baseman who can hit—better than his .316 of last season. On second base will be either Johnny Berardino, the rookie sensation of last year who had acquired polish or Don Heffner, the veteran ex-Yankee.

If Alan Strange, voted the Pacific Coast's most valuable player of 1939, doesn't kick up a commotion around shortstop and hit somewhere in the vicinity of his .335 of last season, Haney is guessing wrong.

Old reliable Harold Cliff at third base is looking chirp again after last year's unexplainable slip to a .270 average.

"Now why shouldn't we get better with that bunch around?" asks Haney.

Shortly after noon today—1.24 to be exact—Spring was officially ushered in, despite the fact there are plenty of remnants of snow and ice still at hand to remind us that "Old Man Winter" had a pretty fair fling during the past three months or more. There was not a sign of the conventional January thaw this year to give the poor coal consumer a break. However, with the 17th of Old Ireland passed and now with Spring having been officially announced for 1940, the next move in provincial sports are the O.A.S.A. and Ontario Baseball Association meeting. The former is being held Friday in Toronto and the O.B.A. conclave on April 6th in Welland.

During the 1939 provincial baseball season the O.B.A. operated with a loss of exactly $350., the most of which was expended towards the uplift of minor league baseball in the paying of officials and general operating expenses. However, the O.B.A. today find themselves in a very precarious position regarding its future financial obligations. In past years the Ontaro Athletic Commission donated funds to provincial sports bodies which sponsored minor league athletics, but we understand the Ontario Government will curtail such expenditures in 1940. Last year the O.B.A. received $400. from the O.A.C. for this purpose and if the grant had been forthcoming in 1940 then the O.B.A. would be able to liquidate their 1939 deficit. Actually it will be the minor leagues which will suffer from the doldrums, which now confront baseball in this province. The question as to how to overcome this trouble will be the principal matter on the forthcoming O.B.A. agenda.

As this is the first day of Spring we'll continue along the lines of baseball. We hear Ralph (Highpockets) McCabe, former Belleville moundsman, has taken up residence in Malartic, Que., and will pitch ball for that club next summer. Tommy Foley has again deserted his native Peterboro and returned to Oshawa, which would indicate the Motor City ballsters are contemplating a return to the senior O.B.A. ranks this summer. Toronto Telegram Bunny Morganson suggests the O.B.A. conduct a senior series similar to that played in the O.H.A., one or two large groups in the province. It has been suggested that Hamilton, Peterboro, Oshawa and two clubs in Toronto band together and form a strong senior O.B.A. league, which seems quite practical for both of the former C.O.B.L. clubs, Oshawa and the Petes. In the old days when the Oshawa nine journeyed to Kingston they travelled well over 130 miles one way. Under the new proposed grouping their longest trip to Hamilton, would be but 70 miles.

We observe by the latest O.B.A. bulletin where Niagara Falls is sponsoring two senior ball clubs in the Peninsula League this coming season. It is not over four years ago when senior baseball was a dead issue in the Cataract town, but with such determined men as "Peck" Ward and Fred Caverly at the helm senior ball was completely abandoned. The Falls interests organized city baseball leagues for midgets, juveniles and juniors and carried them on to such a successful end that other centres were "raiding" Niagara Falls junior clubs for the following season's senior material. After four years of striving the Niagara Falls Baseball Association returned to senior ball last year and now have a surplus of good players coming up from their minor leagues, that two good senior clubs are 'available in the "city of the big roar." Baseball in Belleville has reached the stage it unfortunately found itself in Niagara Falls some four or five years ago and until those interested in the diamond game locally come to accept this fact, baseball will remain as is—practically defunct—in this fair city along the shores of the Bay of Quinte. We might well take a leaf from the Falls' ball book.

Do you remember when a light heavyweight boxing champion started on the down road 14 years ago tonight when Champion Paul Berlenbach was defeated by Johnny Risko, Cleveland baker boy, in a 10-round non-title bout at New York. Berlenbach, who had won the crown from Mike McTigue, lost it a few months after the Risko bout to he Canadian Jack Delaney.

The veteran Lefty Grove was the first player on the field and the last to leave when the Boston Red Sox opened their training season with a light workout at Sarasota, Fla., March 1.

Like days of old the Canada Cement pucksters are still leaders in our city league. Last night the "Cement-makers" chalked up their second consecutive win without a defeat in the City Industrial loop. However, the Alemite sextette moved into second position by virtue of a last period rally and now the hockey fans can settle back and take in Thursday night's games upon which hinge the play-off positions. The "Cementmen" cannot be euchred out of a play-off berth, but all of the remaining sextettes will be battling for that remaining play-off berth on Thursday. Scores mean little in in this post-season loop as additional players are eligible upon employment. However, Thursday night the Sargeant boys are on the spot and face elimination in defeat, while the Alemite have a one point margin over the Corbin lads in their clash. The fans are reminded that this may be their final opportunity to see hockey this season.

COL. DREW SCORES WAR EFFORT

Government for the state of affairs that are evident, he said, in radio censorship and suppression of free speech. He levelled a biting criticism of the King Government for its laxity in refusing the British Government permission to establish air training bases here prior to the war.

Instantaneous Flash of Humor

And he injected an instantaneous bit of humor when he declared, after his speech had been temporarily interrupted by the roar of a miniature avalanche of snow that fell from the roof of an adjoining building, "that is the first approach to the sound of artillery I have heard in Canada since war was declared".

After touching upon a challenge issued by the Prince Edward-Lennox Liberal candidate to G. J. Tustin, National Government candidate in the same riding, Col. Drew expressed his regret that the Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of Defence, who spoke in Picton yesterday, was not on the same platform with him. "I would actually cheer up to see him actually doing his stuff in public", he said.

Refuting a statement he attributed to Mr. Rogers that critics of the King Administration, including himself, were "malicious, reckless and slanderous", Col. Drew read a letter purporting to come from a Canadian soldier in Aldershot, in which was included the statement charging the King government with making a mess of things over there. "The good officers are being replaced", the letter said, "with political men. It looks as if King got us out of the country before the election".

This letter, said the speaker, "came from a Liberal soldier. I would like to ask the little gentleman in Picton why a Liberal soldier is asking the Conservatives to do what the King Government failed to do".

Reference to C.N.R.

Declaring it coldblooded bribery, which is destroying the independence of the C.N.R., Col. Drew read press dispatches and a published telegram in a weekly newspaper, in which he charged the Minister of Transport with telling the people of the riding involved that a certain railway line would be reinstated after the Transport Board had declared it closed, if they supported the Liberal candidate.

Mr. King, he said, has suggested trickery in the radio, and charged those who have criticised his radio censorship with not telling the truth. "I would suggest", he said, "that Mr. King take a memory course or hire more secretaries. He has ten already. It would be a refreshing surprise if Mr. King told the truth about one single thing in this election".

Radio Censorship

Declaring the radio censorship to be actual suppression of free speech, Colonel Drew told his audience that the censors have deleted material not contrary to the Defence of the Realm Act, but that which might prove embarrassing to Mr. King. He had travelled all over Canada, he said, and had stood in a radio station to broadcast while a King censor stood behind him and checked every word he said.

"I was told to adhere to the copy censored or I would be cut off the air by one of King's political "gestapo," he said.

Before Mr. King repeats the statement that the First Canadian Division went to England fully equipped with modern small arms and light and heavy artillery, I would like to say to Mr. King that the First Divisions did not have a single modern weapon. If so, let him tell the people of Canada how many they had.

"The eighteen pounder guns the troops had were not even a late model of the last war," Col. Drew charged. "And not one of the weapons they had with the exception of a few rifles will be used on active service. But I tell the mothers and wives of those troops not to worry. They will be fully equipped with the latest weapons from British workshops."

Makes Charge About Guns

"The majority of the Canadian troops have not even seen a modern weapon," the speaker declared, "and only a favored few have seen a Bren gun. There is not a single Bren gun being manufactured in Canada today and it will be some time before there is."

The speaker charged there is a battery training in Canada with a 12-pounder gun that was used in the South African war, while a tank regiment is using ten-inch pieces of rope in lieu of tanks, after 6 months of war.

"Not a single tank has been produced in Canada," he continued. "Out west there is a tractor which has had its face lifted, and is being used as a tank. It is called 'Tarzan,' " he said amid laughter. "Then for training purposes they took a piece of lead pipe, mounted it on wood and wheels and called it an anti-tank gun. If we have modern weapons in Canada, I defy Mr. King to tell us where they are."

Praise for Canadian Mechanics

Calling Canada one of the best automobile-producing countries in the world, Col. Drew said that Canadian mechanics were the best in the world and were logically suited to do tank work.

Attacking the King administration on alleged lack of supplies of necessary equipment and clothing to the soldiers, Col. Drew declared that "no more vivid example of incompetence of the government in this respect is the fact that the Red Cross Society has been called upon to supply these necessities since the war started."

The Red Cross

"The men would have suffered real hardship if the Red Cross had not been doing this work since war began," he charged, "not that the Red Cross are not doing a splendid work, but it soon became evident that some organization must take over this job. This was necessary, and when men in office deliberately do these things, then the people have the right to be told that the Red Cross are meeting the obligations of an incompetent government. This organization has issued necessities which should have been supplied the troops the day after enlistment by Mr. Rogers, our little son of Mars."

The most effective proof that there is a deficiency of clothing in Canada is seen in the work of the Red Cross, Col. Drew said, adding there was no excuse for failure to supply the clothing which could be turned out by thousands of Canadian units.

Empire Air Training Plan

He declared what he called the King refusal of the Empire Air Training scheme to be one "of the most disgraceful episodes in history." What Britain asked was for the transfer of training establishments to Canada under British instructors. Mr. King objected to this he said, reminding his audience that in the last war the U.S.A. turned over a large area in Texas for similar purposes. "Has the time come," he demanded, "when Canada is not prepared to do for Britain what the U.S.A. did for us?"

Veering his attack to the naval preparedness of Canada, Col. Drew praised the work of Canada's sailors in "our destroyers doing patrol duty," but he added "we must be honest with ourselves and Great Britain and admit that not one ship would have got to Great Britain had it not been for the heavy cruisers of the Royal Navy."

Further gross neglect of naval preparedness, he charged, was seen in the "petty squabbling over who would dredge a channel leading to a private drydock in St. John, while civilization hung in the balance."

The "new batteries" claimed to have been established in a certain city, were nothing but obsolete models, built in 1905, placed in huge cement foundations where all tourists could see them. They stick out like a pimple on a pin," he said, "and if an enemy ship loosed a salvo at them it would be goodbye for Mr. King's political propaganda in that park."

Bennett Government and Defence

Facts prove Col. Drew said, that more had been actually done for national defence by the Bennett government than by the entire King administration. The entire Trans-Canada Airways system with its 98 airports had been planned and made ready, and carried into effect by one of Canada's most brilliant soldiers, General McNaughton. The Trenton Airport administration buildings had been completed, so had two of three hangars. Training camps had been established at Valcartier and Petawawa.

The greatest single operation performed by the Bennett Government occurred at Geneva, when the Canadian delegates made it clear that in regard to manufacture of weapons no private concern would profit, the speaker declared. "We had heard of Zaharoff and other armament men, and the Canadian people decided that government manufacture would be their policy Mr. King and Mr. Woodsworth agreed."

"Under instructions of Mr. Bennett, General McNaughton started to erect a huge government arsenal for the manufacture of these weapons," he continued. Plans were started and completed for the making of weapons up to eight-inch guns. When Mr. King came into power 8 buildings had been erected. Col. Drew said Mr. King stopped the continuance against the protest of McNaughton and his own high militia officers, and that instead he opened negotiations with a private concern.

"The production of the Bren gun would not have been delayed one day, if Mr. King had cancelled the contract with Major Hahn. Toronto, and put government men in charge," he said.

Declaring that millions of dollars are going into the U. S. A., for things which could be made here if the government arsenal had not been stopped, Col. Drew stated that with no return flow of money into Canada the Canadian dollar will not maintain its level. This is vital he said, and calls for an organization which will produce in Canada those things that are now being bought from the U.S.A.

Canadian Publications

He deplored the fact that millions of dollars are being spent here on American publications. He was not suggesting that other country's publications be kept out of Canada, but Canadian publishers should have some assistance in competing with the "subsidized press of the U.S.A."

"The time has come," he said, "when we must decide whether Canada is to be Canadian and British, or whether we are to have a diluted form of American opinion paraded before us. Canadian achievements must not be misled by facts as they come along."

In conclusion, the Ontario Conservative leader stated that the forthcoming election would not be a victory at the polls, but a victory of Canada and the British Empire. "No fair thinking man or woman can judge it as being otherwise," he said.

Candidate is Heard

In a brief address prior to that of Colonel Drew, George J. Tustin, National Government candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox riding charged that a whispering campaign was going on in the constituency. "This is only being done to draw a red herring across the trail of the real issue," he said, urging his supporters not to be misled. Answering a challenge to appear on the same platform, issued by Howard Weese, Liberal candidate, in a Picton newspaper, in which the latter asked to 'give the electors the true story how to vote without bribery or trickery," Mr. Tustin stated that Mr. Weese will discover he has made the most serious mistake of his young life when he reads the result of the ballots next week. "Not one person in this riding can say, outside of the Liberal candidate, that I ever resorted to bribery or trickery," he said, amid loud cheers.

Lieut. Colonel Drew, was introduced by the Hon. George Challies, member for Leeds-Grenville and was accompanied to the platform by National Conservative candidates of neighboring ridings. Mr. John Weese, ex-M.P., made a brief address. T. T. Creighton, ex-warden of Lennox County acted as chairman. Music was furnished by the Rotary Boys' Band of Napanee.

At the Barber Shop

By LILA MONTROSE

"Don dear," said Don's sister as Don appeared home from the office early one Saturday afternoon, "I'm so glad you came home. I've been delayed so, and Jerry's hair is disgracefully long. Grandpa Baxter is coming tomorrow—it would never do. Be a dear and take Jerry down to the barber's and have his hair cut. And don't let them shave it up the back. You have to be very firm or they will."

"Oh, all right," said Don. "I'd planned to play golf—but all right." There was nothing very amiable in Don's voice, nor did he look more amiable when his married sister called him "a sweet angel of a brother."

The barber shop at Ventrey's children's store was crowded as usual on Saturday afternoon, and Don found that he would have to take a number at the desk and remain in the waiting room adjoining the barber shop.

Presently a portly, gray-haired woman bustled into the room, a slender young girl of eighteen or so in her wake.

"I simply can't wait," she said, looking appealing around the room for sympathy. "My theatre tickets. I've ordered them for tonight, and they'll only hold them at the box office until four. I can't wait—and yet"—here she looked with a sigh at her young charge—"Maybelle needs a bob frightfully." Maybelle apparently was protesting that she could remain alone perfectly well. "I'm not a child, auntie," Don overheard.

The aunt's eyes had been wandering about the waiting room. She caught sight of Don Baxter, eyed him briefly through her lorgnette and then sailed over to him.

"I'm going to ask a favor of you," she began. "I simply can't wait with my niece, and you look as if you could be trusted. After you have your little boy's hair cut, will you see that they do Maybelle properly? Don't let them use those awful clippers at the back of her neck." She sailed out toward the elevator. Maybelle took a seat rather shyly beside her newly appointed guardian.

"Aunt Bernice is very nearsighted," she said. "She seemed to think you were as old as she is." Then there was a pause. "Isn't your little boy cunning?"

They waited fifteen minutes for Jerry's turn, and then Maybelle followed him into the barber shop and sat beside Don while he gave the barber directions concerning Jerry's haircut.

Then they returned to the waiting room and waited fifteen minutes more for Maybelle's turn and then Jerry and Don went into the shop with her to wait until she was properly bobbed and singed and waved according to instructions.

"Doesn't your wife wear bobbed hair, Mr. ——"

"Baxter—Don Baxter," supplied Don. And then: "My wife? Why, I haven't any wife."

"But Jerry's mother — is she dead?"

Don laughed. "His mother is my sister. Why, I'm just a youngster; only been out of college a year."

They were back in the waiting room and had taken their seats to await the return of the nearsighted aunt, Mrs. Talbot. In ten minutes came a telephone message, by means of paging, saying that Mrs. Talbot had had to go to her dressmaker's. She had forgotten that she had an appointment, and would the gentleman be so good as to take a taxi and bring her niece down to the Washington hotel, where the aunt would meet her niece—for tea.

Then Don remembered that he had arranged with his sister to meet her at the Biltmore at tea time. She was to be downtown and would take Jerry off her brother's hands then. So Don managed to telephone to his sister asking her to change the rendesvous from the Biltmore to the Washington.

Don and Maybelle felt like old friends when they entered the palm room at tht Washington where they were to meet their respective relatives. To their surprise they found Mrs. Talbot and Don's sister already seated.

"Don, it's perfectly thrilling. Here's mother's old friend, Mrs. Talbot. You've heard her speak of Helen Talbot? I didn't even know she was in town, and here I happen to run into her while I'm waiting for you."

Introductions that followed were rather confusing, and it was not until tea was nearly over that the near-sighted Mrs. Talbot became quite clear in her mind that Don Baxter was actually the son of her old friend.

Six weeks later, after their first meeting at the barber shop, Maybelle and Don announced their engagement. Mrs. Talbot beamed with self-satisfaction. "I was attracted to Don from the first. I rather flatter myself that if it hadn't been for me this affair would never have come off."

And Don's sister smiled to herself and her friends when she spoke of the match. "Maybelle is just the sort of girl I always wanted Don to marry. I am so pleased to think that it was I who really brought them together."

Mountain View

Mountain View.—On Monday evening the friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Keeble to honor Mr. and Mrs. William Stanton (Joan Keeble), whose marriage took place recently.

The bride and groom were asked to take their places at the large table and Mrs. Clarke Sprung read an address.

Misses Doris Black and Helen Lough carried in the baskets of gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Stanton thanked everyone and invited them all to visit them in their new home. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." Lunch was served consisting of fruit, candy and lemonade and a social time was enjoyed.

The Mountain View Young People held their meeting on Monday night in the Huff's Island School House with a good attendance considering the poor condition of the roads.

The meeting was opened by the use of hymn 155 followed by prayer. Mr. William Nightingale read the Scripture lesson. Business was discussed and plans made for the hockey banquet and social evening which is to be held soon. Andrew Harris read the edition of the club paper. Collection was taken up.

Mr. Lewis Wight, Christian Culture leader, then took charge. His program was on "Etiquette." Miss Betra Fairman gave a paper on "Embarrassing Moments." Some of the members were called on to tell some embarrassing moments they had experienced. Mr. Harold Motley gave a reading on "Culture." A short discussion followed on shows. Hymn 23 and the Benediction brought the meeting to a close.

On Tuesday night the Mountain View hockey team played the second play-off game with West Lake in the Wellington Arena. West Lake were the winners with a 3-1 score.

On Wednesday afternoon the Vanity Sewing Circle were entertained at the home of Mrs. Ross Snider. The meeting was opened with the roll call and the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Collection was taken up. The afternoon was spent in working on the project. Mrs. Snider assisted by her mother, Mrs. Bristol, served a delicious lunch and a social time was enjoyed. Miss Helen Lough moved a vote of thanks to the hostess, this was seconded by Miss Connie Wood.

On Thursday night Mountain View and West Lake met in the third and deciding hockey game. The game was very exciting with West Lake winning with a 3-2 score. West Lake was then presented with the hockey trophy as the winner of the "B" section.

Miss Hazel Minaker spent the week-end at the home of her brother, Mr. Everett Minaker. Mr. Douglas Minaker was a Sunday guest at the same home.

On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. William Stanton were presented with a Bible as a gift from the Mountain View Sunday School.

Madoc Junction

Madoc Jct.—Mr. Arthur Andrews of Stirling who is undergoing treatment at Kingston Hospital, was for many years station agent here at Madoc Jct. His friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Pte Donald Stapley left last Friday after spending the week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Stapley.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Woodward, Joyce and Gerald, Mr. and Mrs. N. Wannamaker, Laura and Ella and Mr. C. Wannamaker were recent dinner guests at Mr. and Mrs. C. Fitchett's.

A number from here attended the funeral of the late Mr. William Lake, which was held on Friday afternoon at Grace Chapel, Stirling.

Eggleton W.M.S. and W.A.

Despite the rain and snow storm on Thursday, March 14th., members of Eggleton W.M.S. and W.A., a few women visitors, and a number of the men folk of the community enjoyed a bountiful dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stapley. A nice sum was added to the treasury.

During the afternoon the regular March meeting of the W.M.S. and W.A. was held.

After the opening hymn and prayer Mrs. C. Fitchett read the Scripture lesson. Mrs. W. Harlow read the minutes. The roll call was answered by repeating a favorite verse of Scripture.

A splendid paper on "Christian Stewardship" was given by Mrs. Russell Stapley. Mrs. Mina Wilson gave a reading "Immortality of Kindness." A duet, "Lead Me to Calvary," was sung by Mrs. R. Chambers and Mrs. R. Stapley with Miss Lenora Stapley playing the accompaniment on the piano.

Another interesting paper on "Easter" was given by Mrs. Bert Reid, describing some of the early legends and also the meaning of Easter.

The meeting closed with a hymn and the Mizpah Benediction.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow had dinner Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. J. Scott of Rawdon.

Burr's

Burr's — Mr. and Mrs. Morley Meyers, Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Meyers, Toronto, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Fox were at Belleville on Saturday.

Miss Vera Pyne of Wellington Consolidated School spent the week-end at her home here.

Mrs. Herb Parsons and Miss Margaret Parsons, Crofton, called on Mrs. Robert Stanton on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Vancott visited his sister, Mrs. Tom Morden on Friday and called to see Mr. George Fox.

Mrs. Tom Morden is improving slowly.

Mrs. Stanley Brooks and Mrs. Charles Brooks visited Mrs. Merritt Adams on Thursday.

On Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Merritt Adams and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Brooks were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Tice, Lake Shore, Wellington.

Mrs. J. R. Marvin continues very poorly. Her cousin, Mrs. Norman Price, Mountain View, is staying with her.

Doris and Leslie Lough, Mountain View, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lough.

Among those from Burr's who attended the banquet at Allisonville L.O.L. Hall on Friday night, when L.O.L. No. 175 were at home to their families, were Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Fulford, Mr. and Mrs. Murney Parks, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Parks, Mr. and Mrs. J. Moon, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Hubbs, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Clarke, Messrs. George and Floyd Huffman, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lough. Rev. R. A. McRae, Hilton, a former Master of the lodge, with Mrs. McRae and Joyce were in attendance at the banquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Lough visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lough, Mountain View, and Doris and Leslie Lough went home with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stanton moved on Friday to Mr. Victor Bongard's house. Mr. Stanton has hired with Mr. Bongard for the summer.

Mr. Robert Stanton spent over the week-end in Toronto.

Mr. Howard Fox, Crofton, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Fox, on Sunday.

Miss Phyllis Parsons, Crofton, stayed with Mrs. Stanton while Mr. Stanton was in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth O'Neil, Picton, were visitors at Mrs. Stanton's on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Bongard were recent visitors at his mother's, Mrs. M. V. Bongard, Glenora.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Caughey were at Belleville on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Val Squire visited the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Purtelle, on Saturday.

Mrs. Lorne Burr and Mrs. Val Squire attended the Red Cross sewing meeting at Crofton Hall on Tuesday.

Mr. Clifford Hough shipped a load of hogs from Wellington on Monday.

Mr. Norman Fox shipped hogs from Belleville on Monday.

Mr. Percy Lough had wood sawyers on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hubbs, Mount Pleasant, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bride Hough on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Morden of Wellington, visited Mr. and Mrs. Tom Morden on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Parks and Donna visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Maxwell, on Sunday.

THIS SWELL CEREAL IS BETTER FOR ME THAN MEDICINE!

"I couldn't make up my mind which was worse—to endure constipation or try to cure it with harsh purgatives. Now I do neither. I prevent it by eating Kellogg's All-Bran. It's a lack of intestinal bulk that causes this common type of constipation. All-Bran supplies the needed bulk and also the intestinal tonic vitamin B_1. I eat it as a cereal or in delicious muffins. It's great to be 'regular' again." You can get All-Bran from any grocer. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

GERMAN SUB BASES NEXT POINT OF ATTACK

REPORT S. E. EUROPE ORGANIZING INTO BLOC

Admiralty Denies 9 British Warships Lost in Convoy

Only One Norwegian Ship Had to be Abandoned and Another Norwegian and a Swedish Ship Were Hit

30 LIVES LOST

German Agency Admits One Nazi Plane Failed to Return After Attempting to Bomb British Convoy Off Scottish Coast

London, March 21—(CP)— Germany's gun-bristling submarine bases in the Baltic are the next probable targets of British bombers, it was reported today as belligerents reviewed results of their heavy exchange of blows across the North Sea.

The Admiralty denied a German contention that nine British warships and merchantmen had been sunk in an air attack on a convoy off the Scottish coast yesterday.

Actually, it said, only one Norwegian ship had to be abandoned and another Norwegian and a Swedish ship were hit. Two naval planes and anti-aircraft guns drove off 10 German Heinkel bombers, it asserted.

U.S. Consular Officials In Partitioned Poland Ordered to Evacuate

Washington, March 21—(AP) — United States citizens in partitioned Poland were cut off from all direct diplomatic representation today as the United States, acting under German compulsion, withdrew its consular officials.

The State Department ordered the withdrawal reluctantly after unavailing protests to the Berlin Government.

In yielding to the "request" that all consular establishments "must" be evacuated, the Department informed Germany that it was reserving "all of its rights in the matter."

The German order, the State Department said last night, applied to the diplomatic representatives of all foreign countries. This was confirmed by informed sources in Berlin, which said that for visa purposes the lack of consulates in the area was inconsequential because no one can visit the territory without a special permit from its Governor General.

No official reason was advanced for the German order. One explanation offered was that Berlin believed some consulates engaged in undesirable activities, and decided to remove them all.

The State Department arranged to handle all future matters concerning American nationals in Poland through the American Embassy in Berlin. The number of United States citizens resident in Poland was fixed at 532 by the State Department.

THE WEATHER

MANION STATES HALF KING CABINET WOULD JOIN HIM

Would 'Jump at the Chance' to Join Him in Forming National Gov't. Cabinet Says Conservative Leader

CONTRACTS AS BRIBES

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, March 21—(CP)— Despite the official hostility of the Liberal party to the National Government proposal, half the present cabinet would "jump at the chance" to join such a government if they were invited, Conservative Leader Manion declared here Wednesday night.

The official Liberal attitude towards his proposal to form a government of some of the best brains of the country suggested that suitable talent was lacking outside the present 16 cabinet members, but Dr. Manion insisted that among 11,000,000 people there would be no difficulty in selecting a government superior to the "weak, unimaginative" group now in power. In fact, he did not see how he could help it.

In a nation-wide broadcast and in an address before an audience of 4,000 in the auditorium, Dr. Manion appealed for support of National Government as a necessity to cope with the war and its aftermath.

He accused the Government of attempting to bribe the constituents of three cabinet ministers by announcing in the week before voting day the placing of large war contracts in those ridings.

Publicity was given these huge contracts at this time to assist these three Ministers because they were in danger, he said, naming Transport Minister Howe, Labor Minister McLarty and Defence Minister Rogers. Just Tuesday the Government had announced $9,000,000 contracts of this sort.

Dr. Manion said he was not criticising the contracts themselves or the War Supply Board. He had never criticised that Board, he said, but he was criticising the Government for this "bare-faced" attempt to bribe the electors during an election."

The same tactics had been tried in a Saskatoon by-election but the electors there had had the "guts" to turn down the Government candidate. The people of Canada were not going to al'ow themselves to be debauched in this way.

"If the Government has any sense of decency it won't put out the announcements of any more contracts until the election is over," he said.

The Prime Minister had stated he was not responsible for the way the soldiers' vote was being taken. If the Prime Minister was not responsible, Dr. Manion wanted to know who was.

London, Mar. 21 (CP).—Sir John Gilmour, Minister of Shipping, today rejected a suggestion that the giant liners Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary be sold in the United States to provide funds for British purchases overseas. Sir John said the government would not consider the proposal advanced in the House of Commons Tuesday by Oswald Lewis, Conservative.

DALADIER ENTERS REYNAUD CABINET AS WAR MINISTER

Paul Reynaud, New Premier, Will Assume Portfolio of Foreign Affairs

SOCIALISTS IN

Politically, Main Weight of Cabinet in Hands of Radical Socialist Party

Paris, March 21—(CP—Havas)— Premier-designate Paul Reynaud today formed a new government to succeed that of Edouard Daladier.

Reynaud himself assumes the premiership and the portfolio of Foreign Affairs.

He has brought the Socialist Party, largest in the Chamber of Deputies, into the cabinet with representation of six posts, three of them ministers and three under-secretaries.

Ontario Gold Mines Produced $335,956 Daily in February

Toronto, March 21—(CP)—Producing gold at the rate of $335,959 per day, the gold mining industry of Ontario in February bettered the value of the daily output for the preceding month by 4.06 per cent. Gains also were reported in daily recovery and tonnage milled.

The value of bullion won by the industry during the 29 days of the shortest month of the year amounted to $9,742,829 compared to $10,009,478 in January, while the increase over February 1939 was: tons milled, 14.65 per cent; gold ounces recovered, 9.81 per cent ;silver ounces recovered 27.89 per cent; and value, 20.62 per cent. There were only 28 days in February 1939.

Returns were received from 62 mines and one new producer. Morris-Kirkland, which had produced in 1938, resumed operations.

Britain's Reply To Italian Note Sent to Rome

London, March 21—(CP)— In a 10-page reply to Italy's protest of March 3 against the A'lied economic warfare, the British government yesterday reasserted its determination to use every legal weapon against Germany—"an enemy who has on repeated occasions flagrantly disregarded the principles of international law and even the common precepts of humanity.

The problem which prompted the Italian protest—the Allied decision to seize German coal aboard Italian ships—has since been amicably settled, but the government took advantage of the occasion to give a complete outline of its position on economic warfare and the obligations of neutrals.

The British note pointed out that Germany would have a marked advantage if it were left free "to pursue with impunity practices in total disregard of international law and moral principles", while the Allies were expected at all times scrupulously to observe these principles.

Expectant Father Runs Sweepstake On Arrival of First Pride-and-Joy

Minneapolis, March 21—(AP) — George Bestrom got so tired having friends ask him when his first pride-and-joy was due that he started the "Bestrom Baby Sweepstakes."

Now when they ask he sells them a ticket at $1 a chance—29 have bought.

The sweepstake has a slogan: "Yo upays your money and you names the time."

It has a handicap: "The best medical authority indicated about April 6."

It is limited to "amateurs."

The race is:"Name the date and hour."

The rake-off is: "A 10-cent administrative fee deducted from each $1 by the sponsor" (Bestrom.)

The expectant father said he wasn't sure whether "my wife is going to murder me for this" but since everyone seemed so interested in the event he decided to cash in "because it is costing me a lot of dough."

Pictures of Sylt Raid Tonic to Britishers; Greatest Raid of War

Bomber Technique Very Effective and Comparatively Safe Even Under Shell-fire — About Forty Bombers Worked in Relays, Hitting and Ducking Low

(By Guy Rheades, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Britain's hammering of the German airbase on the Island of Sylt set the world wondering today if the Allies were about to steal the thunder of Adolf Hitler's boasted "blitzkrieg," or if both sides in the war of waiting might find mutual strafing cancelled out advantages to either side.

Initially, at least, the advantage appeared definitely on the side of the Allies, for Royal Air Force claims that its bombers had smashed and fired the Hornum airbase were supported by stories from neighboring Denmark, interviews with airmen, and perhaps, will be supported further by publication of photographs.

3 Neutral Ships Damaged

On the other hand Germany's assertion that her planes sank or seriously damaged nine British naval and merchant ships in a reprisal North Sea raid last night drew an admiralty statement that three small neutral ships in convoy had been damaged, one so badly its crew abandoned it.

Germany claims that the only damage in the Sylt raid was to an untenanted house did not fit with stories of Danes who heard huge detonations and saw sheets of flame leaping skyward. From Hornum, itself, came no eye-witness stories.

Doubly interesting to excited Britons was the fact they already knew what the Hornum base looked like, having seen pictures of it in their newspapers months ago. It was the first German air base shown in published photographs.

Pictures Show Men About Hangars

Publication of those pictures, some taken from such low altitude that they showed men working around the hangars, were a tonic at the time to Britons who were starting to complain that leaflet raids—confetti flights, they called them — would not win anybody's war.

Yesterday's raid, six hours long, came closer than anything since the scuttling of the German pocket battleship Graf Spee to blacked-out Britain's idea of how a war should be conducted. For months the man in the street had been urging: "Let's get on with it."

That raid did something else. It demonstrated that the hit-and-run technique of the British bombing squadrons is effective and comparatively safe, even under intense

NUCLEUS OF WAR MACHINE BUILT IN PEACE TIME

Hon. Norman Rogers States Canada Was Ready to go Forward When War Declared

PROBLEMS ADMITTED

Gananoque, Ont., March 21 (CP) —Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, told a Liberal campaign rally last night that any government called upon to adapt itself to wartime problems would encounter difficulties.

"Has any peace-loving country ever built up a war-time organization while peace yet remained?" he asked.

Mr. Rogers, speaking in the interests of George T. Fulford, Liberal candidate in Leeds, asked if Great Britain had its war machinery ready when hostilities started.

"We built up a peacetime organization in time of peace and provided the nucleus of a war machine to be put into operation as soon as it was needed," he said. "If we had a great number of uniforms, as our critics seem to think we should have done, we would have found them obsolete.

"Then those who condemn us for this would condemn us for waste and extravagance. Our Canadian equipment, if purchased and stored, would have had to be adapted to that of the British forces.

"Of course we had a problem. That is what governments are for. We overcame those problems as quickly and efficiently as we could."

Mr. Rogers accused Conservative leader Manion with failing to make specific charges when dealing with deficiencies in the war effort and compared criticisms with the words of Premier Aberhart of Alberta.

"When I read Dr. Manion's latest angry outburst at the beginning of this week, I was reminded of the old axiom that a man who is winning and knows he is winning doesn't lose his temper.

"Mr. Aberhart in Alberta recently reached new heights in the use of invective, calling his opponents such names as 'big shot,' 'depraved reprobates' and so on, but when I consider the epithets of Dr. Manion I realise that Aberhart will have to look to his laurels. The only thing Dr. Manion hasn't doubted is my domestic felicity. He hasn't charged me with deserting my wife and children."

U.S. AMBASSADOR TO CANADA IS PRAISED ON STAND

Michigan Democrat of House of Representatives Wires Personal Congratulations

TARGET OF CRITICISM

Washington, Mar. 21 (AP). — James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister to Canada, who sided with the Allies in a speech at Toronto, last night received support from Representative John D. Dingell, Michigan Democrat, who telegraphed the minister to "stand your ground" and "pay no attention to putty heads and pot bellies".

"You are in harmony with American foreign policy," he wired, "and 95 per cent of our people are in agreement with you.

"Shed your kid gloves and do some boxing and don't pull your punches. Truth has a terrific wallop and there is nothing diplomatic about it.

"I, too, want a copy of your speech to insert in the congressional records as an inspiration to American posterity. Personal congratulations."

Earlier State Secretary Cordell Hull called for an official copy of the speech with a view to determining whether disciplinary measures should be applied.

Target of Criticism.

Meantime Cromwell, husband of the former Doris Duke, 'world's richest girl', was the target for sharp criticism from Capitol Hill. Introducing a resolution calling for a congressional inquiry to determine whether Cromwell was correctly quoted in criticising "American isolationists", Representative Martin Sweeney, Ohio Democrat, said yesterday:

H. & P. E. Regt. Officer Chosen to Attend Lord Mayor's Banquet

Trenton, (Special)—Major Bruce Graham, Officer Commanding "A" Company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, now in Aldershot, England, was signally honored a few weeks ago, when he was chosen representative of the First Canadian Infantry Brigade to attend the annual London Lord Mayor's Show and banquet.

One of the most colorful events in the life of Old London the Lord Mayor's Show as it is called in England, attracts the elite of social, military and diplomatic life of the British capital. To receive an invitation to the famous function, is the envy of many, and Major Graham is one of the few Canadians so honored.

SAYS FINLAND IS REGARDED AS 4TH BALTIC STATE

Stockholm Newspaper Reports Russian Demands for Territory Increased

ALLIANCE OPPOSED

Official Authorities in Helsinki, Finland, Disclaim Any Knowledge of Any Extra Demands

Stockholm, Sweden, Mar. 21 (AP). —Reports that Soviet Russia had made new territorial demands upon Finland in connection with the final delineation of her frontiers were published here today without official confirmation.

Official circles in Helsinki disclaimed all knowledge of any additional demands. Responsible quarters here expressed belief that while some minor controversies might have arisen they would in no way involve extensive concessions by the Finns.

The Stockholm newspaper Tidningen, however, in a dispatch dated Moscow, said the Finns had been compelled to accept several alterations in the boundaries as originally delineated by their peace treaty with Russia.

"It is reported," the dispatch said, "that the Finns have been surprised anew by further Soviet demands in regard to territorial limits which would penetrate Finland farther than expected."

'New Limits' Not Mentioned.

The location of the new limits was not mentioned in the dispatch.

Stockholm, Mar. 21 (CP-Havas).— The Stockholms-Tidningen reported today from Moscow that the Finnish delegation there was "unpleasantly surprised" by a Russian demand for territorial concessions even broader than provided in the Russo-Finnish peace treaty.

This, the newspaper said, came on top of word from Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff that Moscow was opposed to Finland's entry into a Scandinavian defensive alliance.

Russia, it was stated, now considers Finland not as a Scandinavian country but as "the fourth Baltic state". Consequently, the paper said, Soviet policy aims to prevent closer contractual relations between Finland and the Scandinavian countries, not only in the military but also in the diplomatic domain.

Ryti May Remain As Premier.

Helsinki, Mar. 21 (AP). — The newspaper Uusi Suomi said today that Finland's coalition war government, formed by Premier Risto Ryti Dec. 1, the day after Russia started her invasion, is expected to resign immediately after the Easter holidays.

Motor Car, Truck Collide in Blizzard

Port Hope, Ont., March 21—(CP) —John B. Coy of Oak Park, Ill., was killed Wednesday when the automobile in which he was a passenger crashed into a truck driven by Norman Heard of Canton, Ont., during a blizzard on Highway 28 near Bewdley, 10 miles north of here.

Witnesses said the automobile, driven by L. M. Childs of Toronto, was following a snowplough when the truck attempted to pass in the opposite direction.

Will Prevent War Reaching Balkans Says Italian Paper

Italian Paper Calls Movement by Name of 'Mussolini Bloc,' Says it is Favorable to Peace

DISCUSSES TALKS

Il Avvenire of Rome Claims Formation in Process From Pyranees to Black Sea

Rome, March, 21—(CP-Havas)— The newspaper Avvenire said today that all Southeastern Europe is being organized into a "Mussolini Bloc."

The newspaper, reviewing what it termed the two-fold purpose of Monday's talk between Premier Mussolini and Adolf Hitler said:

"Among so many blocs and counter-blocs, the most favorable to peace is the Mussolini bloc which is in the process of formaton from the Pyrenees to the Black Sea in order to prevent the war extending into the Danubian basin."

According to the Avvenire, the Mussolini-Hitler talk revolved around two points—Italian non-belligerency and its anti — comintern policy.

"Non-belligerency," it said, "means production of the greatest efforts to circumscribe the war and the unshakable will to keep it far from the Balkans, where Italy has interests which cannot be compromised by anyone with impunity.

"The anti-comintern means that Russia, if others permit it, may exercise her mania for adventures in the Arctic Ocean and the Baltic Sea, but the Bolshevist colossus with feet of clay would soon again find herself facing her conquerors of the Spanish crusade if she intended to violate the Danube and spread her influence across the Mediterranean."

MAURETANIA AND QUEEN MARY NOW WELL OUT TO SEA

Proud Liners of British Merchant Fleet Ploughing Uncertain Waters

DESTINATIONS SECRET

New York, March 21 (AP)— Two of the proudest liners of the British merchant fleet ploughed uncertain waters today in a gamble with wartime hazards of the high seas.

Slightly more than 12 hours after the 35,739-ton Mauretania slipped out through the misty rain from the pier where she had been tied up for three months, the giant Queen Mary nosed out into the sunlit-Hudson and passed down the bay.

The destination of the two liners was known only to their commanders, who sailed under sealed orders, not to be opened until they were well at sea, but presumably sending them on dangerous missions as troop ships.

Women Spend More on Stockings Than on Dresses, Survey Reveals

Washington, March 21—(AP)— The next time you see a pair of silk stockings go tripping down the street, ponder this, brother: many a woman spends more on them than on dresses.

It has a'l been figured out by the United States Labor Department, which has been doing a little plain and fancy investigating on what city folks spend on clothes.

The average American woman invests more than one-eighth of a $55 clothing budget at the stocking counter. To be exact, she spends $7.61 for hosiery. (That's a little more than 11 pairs at 69 cents each.)

Shoes are the biggest item—$7.85. Dresses come third, a mere $6. The working girl spend a little more, especially if she is a clerical worker; the homebody much less.

Themere ma'e provides no such startling statistics. His big moment comes every two years, when he gets a new suit, price $24 Annually he spends $8 less for haberdashery, etc. than women do for their accessories.

All the figures were based on a 1934-36 survey, with the family income of those questioned averaging $1,524 a year.

Old-Time Medicine No Cure for Spring Fever Say Medicos

Philadelphia, March 21—(AP)— Grandmother probably will never believe it but take the word of experts—she was all wrong when she gave generous doses of sulphur and molasses as a cure for "Spring fever." There isn't any such thing.

That listless feeling you get around this time of year, three medical authorities agreed today, isn't something that you can prescribe medicine for, or put down in a textbook or analyze under cause and effect. It is, well—

"It's all a myth — a state of mind," says Dr. Hobart A. Reimann, professor of medicine at Jefferson Medical College.

"When the weather gets warm, people begin to think of going fishing and going on vacations. But they can't because they have to keep working. So they feel against the restraint and become restless. That's all Spring fever is."

Claims Germany, Russia and Italy Guarantee Balkans' Integrity

Copenhagen, March 21—(CP-Havas)—The Berlin correspondent of the Pilitiken reported today that Germany, Russia and Italy have reached agreement for a joint guaranteee of the territory of Rumania and other Balkan countries.

(Germany has frequently been reported as willing to guarantee Rumania's frontier in return for widespread economic concessions.

(Last week it was said Berlin might be able to get Russia to do likewise if Rumania would make political concessions as well as yielding to Germany's economic demands. So far these suggestions all have been rebuffed by Bucharest).

EUCHRE AND DANCE HELD AT YACHT CLUB

Under the auspices of the Foster Ward Conservative Club, a euchre and social evening was held in the Belleville Yacht Club last evening when upwards to 250 spent an enjoyable evening. The winners of the euchre were Harry Semark, Bert Kellar, Edna Semark and Elsie Trotter. During the evening A. W. Downer, M.P.P., of Dufferin-Simcoe, R. D. Arnott, M.P.P. of this city and Mr. Geo. Reid all spoke briefly in the interests of Geo. H. Stokes, National Government candidate for the riding of Hastings South. The night's entertainment concluded with a dance.

THOMAS F. CUMMINGS RECEIVES INJURIES

Struck by a railway locomotive while working in the railway yards yesterday afternoon, Thomas F. Cummings, 207 Station Street, was taken to Belleville General Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from back injuries. His condition was reported good today. Dr. Kennedy is in attendance.

PT. ANNE MAN FRACTURES LEG

John Sutherby, Point Anne laborer, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital yesterday afternoon suffering with a fractured leg as the result of an accident. Mr. Sutherby was reported to be resting comfortably today. He is under treatment by Dr. MacDonald.

HOLLOWAY ST. MISSION CIRCLE ENTERTAINED

Holloway Street Church Mission Circle were entertained last evening at a supper meeting in the ladies' parlour of Tabernacle church by the Tabernacle Mission Circle. Following the Easter devotional service in which all participated, Mrs. C. McDonald favoured with a delightful Easter number. Miss Marion Daniels gave a humorous reading "At the Photographers."

Mrs. McKenzie of Plainfield, who is the secretary of Mission Circle for the Presbyterial gave an inspiring address on "Are We Alive and What are We Alive To?"

A vote of appreciation was expressed to Mrs. McKenzie for her address.

The meeting closed with a hymn and benediction.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE REPRESENTATIVE HERE

The representative of the Lord's Day Alliance, Mr. Angus McDonald, is making the annual visit for that organisation to this community. In time of war, as well as peace, the need of the weekly day of rest, and respite from the activities of commerce, is recognized by the leaders of the Alliance. Their success in combatting these forces merits co-operation and commendation.

STIRLING SCOUTS HOLD BANQUET

Jones Field, Secretary of Provincial Council is Principal Speaker

Stirling, March 21 —(Special) — With Mr. Jones Field, Secretary of the provincial council of Boy Scouts as guest speaker, the 1st Troop of Stirling held their annual parents' night and banquet in the dining hall of the I.O.O.F. on Wednesday night. Featured on the interesting program which included toasts and speeches by prominent citizens was the presentation of 2nd Class badges to Scouts Ray Tanner and Bert Bastedo in an impressive presentation ceremony conducted by the guest speaker. The room and table were artistically decorated in the troop colors and the troop flag and banner spanned the wall above the head table. Scoutmaster Walter (Doc) Savage welcomed the guests and introduced Mr. W. L. Anderson, who capably carried out the duties of toastmaster. Art Duncan led in lively community singing.

Impressive Toasts

Displaying marked ability in the art of public speaking members of the troop proposed the various toasts of the evening with true scout thoroughness. The toast to His Majesty the King was proposed by patrol leader Ray Tanner. Patrol leader Douglas Bastedo proposed the toast to the parents in which he asked all boys to recognize the sincere devotion with which parents guided the destiny of all. "Let us drink to the health of our greatest ally, Mother and Dad." The duty of response fell upon the shoulders of Reeve W. C. West. Assistant Scoutmaster Russel West proposed the toast to the founder and still head of the Boy Scout movement, Sir Baden Powell with repsonse by the Field Secretary.

Formally introduced as the speaker of the evening by Mr. C. A. Wells, Mr. Jones delivered an interesting address which disclosed marked advances in the movement during the past five years. During the past five years the number of scouts in Canada has reached one hundred and two thousand with over forty-two thousand of these being in the province of Ontario. The scout movement has a real job on its hand and is doing it well. "Boys will be boys is a common phrase of the day, but farsighted men see that boys will one day be men and the scout who dares to be a good scout will be the high-minded worthy citizen of tomorrow." Thanks to the speaker on behalf of those present was ably set forth in a brief address by Robt. Bastedo. Other speakers on the program included: Art Duncan, Rev. W. J. Scott, R. A. Patterson, Murney Hick. The function was brought to an appropriate climax with the singing of the National Anthem.

Roads Blocked by Heavy Storm

One of the heaviest snow storms of the season blocked all sideroads in the Stirling district on Wednesday. Starting at an early hour the snow continued to fall throughout the day accompanied by high winds, drift-filled roads that thus far this season have never been blocked. Many cars were caught on sideroads adjacent to the village.

A staff of workmen are hustling alteration operations in the business establishment owned by Mr. F. N. McKee, which will be transformed into a modern shoe store and exclusive agency for the Bata Shoe Co. of Frankford, with Mr. McKee as manager.

Personals

Mr. Arthur Duncan spent a day this week visiting friends in Peterboro and Norwood.

Mr. Creighton Johnston of Burwash is spending a few days visiting relatives and friends in Stirling and district.

Successful Supper Held

Over three hundred people attended the annual bacon and egg supper sponsored by the ladies of St. Paul's United Church Women's Association on Monday night. The church parlours were artistically decorated in colors of the Easter season and lovely Easter flowers. A capable staff of committee workers prepared and served the splendid meal with marked efficiency and success crowned the efforts of the faithful workers responsible for its organiaztion.

Mr. H. L. Fair spent a few days last week in Port Hope where he attended the annual Quinte Seed Fair. Hastings County was well represented and the judging team in the junior section was awarded second place and Cosgrave Trophy was won by Mr. Herbert Watt also Hastings County entrant in the competition.

SMALL INCREASE FOR MINERS

London, March 21—(CP)— British miners won an additional war wage increase of four pence (aobut seven cents) per shift today in recognition of higher living costs. Their wages have been raised now one shilling and five pence (about 29 cents) since the start of the war and will be reviewed again in June.

SEED DISPLAY AT STIRLING TOTALS 4,000 BUS.

Several Addresses Given by Agriculturists on Different Phases of Farming

DISTRIBUTE SEED

Stirling, March 21 (Special)— In spite of one of the worst snow storms of the year farmers from all parts of the county of Hastings attended the seed and grain display sponsored by the Hastings County Crop Improvement Asscdation in the Stirling community service building on Wednesday, March 20th. Representing well over 4,000 bushels of highest grade seed, the samples displayed created a great deal of interest among the large number in attendance. During the morning association business was conducted under the able direction of Vice-President John McCaffery of Madoc and the adopted project of the association for the coming year dealt with at some length. Three varieties of oats for test growth will be distributed into five townships and it's progress carefully observed from the standpoint of crop improvement, also a number samples of hybrid corn will be distributed in a like manner throughout the county. As a protective measure against the spreading of mustard weed the association will also conduct an experimental research project in Sidney township during the coming year.

Interesting Lectures

During the afternoon several lectures (some illustrated) were delivered by agricultural experts, dealing with subject of vital interest to all those interested in crop improvement. Mr. W. B. George of Kemptville Agricultural school described in a vivid fashion results achieved at experimental growing station now under supervision of the Kemptville School with the purpose of improving growth and yield as well as conserving soil fertility. This survey is carried on also to distinguish the best variety of grain adaptable to growing conditions in various parts of the province.

"Hay, which is recognized as Ontario's most important crop can be brought to a higher quality if more consideration is given to soil fertility. Soil of high fertility is the first essential to secure a good catch of small seeds and to produce hay of higher feeding quality. Experiments have shown that an application of phosphorus at the time of seeding increases the establishment of young seedings and helps prevent winter killing of legumes." The speaker also dealt briefly with the influence of fertilizer treatment on the composition of grass and stated that improved pasture produces more and higher grade milk. Speaking of the value of tripod curing he said "this method furnished palatible hay with digestible protein content. Allows for aftermath pasture, when most needed and is a strong measure in weed control." Mr. George then displayed a group of slides depicting work in the experimental division of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Mr. E. K. Hampson of Hamilton

The next speaker was Mr. E. K. Hampson of Hamilton, Ontario, who congratulated the organization on organizing such a fine display. "The value of such displays, seed fairs, etc., will have much to do with crop improvement of the future. The first essential to good crops is good seed and there is positively no excuse for the use of anything but high quality seed. Farmers must always be on the alert for new methods and yet be able to distinguish good methods from weaker ones by his own experience. We must not be dogmatic in the acceptance of every theory or philosophy advanced great men such as Dr. Hopkins of Illinois who has influenced grain growers in all parts of the Eastern United States and Canada may even be proved wrong from a practical sense and it will be difficult for many of us to disregard his fine work of the past 35 years," said the speaker.

The final speaker of the day was Mr. Carman Tennant, Superintendant of seeds crops and weed seeds for Eastern Ontario, who described the making and building of tripods for what he termed one of the best methods of curing hay. "Erected at one end of the room was an example of the tripod recommended which could be built quickly and inexpensively." Tripods made of seven-foot poles can be used to advantage to cure early cut hay from a portion of the hay acreage. This will give high-quality hay and the area will furnish aftermath pasture. Early cutting with the use of tripods, distributes the period of hay making so that more of the crop can be cut at the proper stage.

Trophies on Display

In addition to the fine display of grain and seed, two trophies were on display. the Haggerty trophy won for the second year in the Hastings County Junior Farmers Seed Judging Competition by Ralph Campbell and the Cosgrave trophy won at the Quinte Seed Fair held recently at Port Hope and won by Mr. Herbert Watts.

"Is This Letter Authentic?"

OFFICE OF THE PRIME MINISTER CANADA

Ottawa,
February 23, 1940

Dear Mr. Haig:

I have been pleased to learn that at the nominating convention held at Belleville on February the 21st, you were selected as the candidate of our Party to contest the Hastings-South constituency at the forthcoming general election.

I extend to you my congratulations upon this expression of the confidence of your supporters. May I add my best of wishes for your return on March the 26th as the Member for Hastings South in the House of Commons.

With kind regards,
Believe me,
Yours very sincerely,
W L Mackenzie King

Maclean Haig, Esq.,
Belleville,
Ontario.

The above letter has been referred to in a very disparaging manner, as not authentic, not written, not even seen, by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

HAVE HASTINGS SOUTH REPRESENTED ENERGETICALLY AND HONESTLY IN CANADA'S NEXT GOVERNMENT

VOTE HAIG IN HASTINGS SOUTH.

Versatility of Students Exemplified at 'Open Night' Collegiate, Vocational School

Students and Faculty Hosts to Proud Parents and Visitors Who Throng Building

FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Graduating Classes of Vocational School Awarded Diplomas for Their Endeavors

Perhaps never before in the history of the school has the versatility of its students in all phases of the curricula of its night and day classes been exemplified to the general public than was last night when students and faculty were hosts to proud parents and visitors at the annual "Open Night" of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School.

Corridors and classrooms, auditorium and gymnasia of what was termed by a distinguished visitor "to be one of the finest schools of its kind in Ontario," were thrown open in an aura of colorful decoration, and hospitality to an interested massing crowd; a cross section of the city and district, which displayed not only a keen interest in the actual display of the tangible evidence of a winter term, but in the program provided for their entertainment by a versatile student body and a thoughtful faculty.

A Large Crowd

Long before 8 o'clock when the doors were officially scheduled to open, a large throng of more or less excited students and interested visitors thronged the corridors of the building. The stirring melodies of the Collegiate Band as its youthful members marched through ordinarily austere corridors and rooms, furnished a fitting foundation for the subsequent entertainment that followed in a sequence that was as enjoyable as it was variable.

There was keen delight and pride of achievement in the sparkling eyes of youthful students as they guided justifiably proud parents and friends through the various departments where on display was the clever evidence of months of application, study and hard work.

But the proudest people in the entire institution perhaps, were the members of the graduating classes of the night vocational school who not only received the culmination of three months of hard work and study in the form of class diplomas, but demonstrated in no uncertain manner in the various departments that their achievements as exemplified in the diplomas, were meritorious awards of months of intensive study, hard work and sincere application.

Under the critical eyes of crowds of curious spectators, young mechanics applied their skill and knowledge gained at the school in the motor mechanics department. Again in the wood-working department where many beautiful works, creative brainchilds of the students themselves in the form of bookracks, furniture, cabinets, boats, stairways, handsomely finished, met the approval of visitors.

Cast Weird Light

Vivid blue sparks cast a weird light in the bright glow of the main corridors as young welders plied their trade in a demonstration that left no doubt in the minds of their watchers as to the ability in their chosen vocation.

Studiously poring over slanting tables, caliper and pencil in hand, youthful draftsmen gave splendid exhibitions of their craft in the drafting rooms.

Modern machines and lathes running silently with oiled precision, furnished the base for machine-shop workers, young men whose sincerity was exemplified in the application to the demonstrations themselves under the mental hazard of public gaze.

Second only to the interest taken in their work by the vocational students themselves was the curiosity, if one may call it that, shown by the general public in the work of these students. Long after the general entertainment had started, lingering queues of spectators watched the untiring efforts of the students of the various classes as they demonstrated their ability.

But there were other interests. Walls of the corridors on the main floor were covered with artistic efforts of students. The Board Room, accustomed to the dignity of members of the Board, was the central place for a handsome stamp collection. The Library was a colorful interpretation of current and patriotic events. Gymnasia provided versatile athletic spectacles. Students in colorful paraphernalia representing the Athletic Club and the Library Club vended soft drinks.

A Splendid Program

In the auditorium a splendid program was presented. The Collegiate Glee Club, under the baton of Mr. Maybee, demonstrated in no uncertain manner the vocal and musical ability of students of the school. Forty girls and boys in part, sextette and ensemble harmony offered a program that for sheer musical entertainment has seldom been surpassed in this city. Recitations and selections by the school band under the leadership of Mr. Cooper rounded out a musical entertainment that was par excellence. The program insofar as the auditorium is concerned was effectively concluded with an address by a representative of the Department of Labor, and a motion picture.

In his remarks, Principal P. C. McLaurin, who acted as master of ceremonies, paid tribute to the band and the Glee Club, and their respective conductors. "We are not the largest school in Ontario," he said, "but we want to make it the best of its kind in the province. We are trying to take a part in serving the young people so well that when they leave they will be absorbed in the fabric of the country, make them good citizens who will take their place in society, live happily and give happiness to others."

Library

In the school library pictorial scenes of the Royal Visit of Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada last May, proved an interesting feature, while other photography of the British Navy, Army and the Air Force added to the present-day atmosphere. The complete display of school reading material was on display, as was a booth for the repair of damaged books. Filing cabinets contained pictures of and clippings pertaining to many subjects, all available to the students of the school. Pictorial data of historic events was also seen by the large number of adult visitors to the Collegiate Library.

Even the Green Room, where dramatics are created and discussed was open to interested visitors, numerous properties of the stages, which had been manufactured within the school were viewed and brought high compliments.

Art Display

The main corridors of the school presented a colorful picture, as the efforts of the school artists were placed upon the walls for the close scrutiny of the visitors. Creative scenes in water colors, crayon and oils adorned the corridor walls, while at the north corridor draftings were displayed for view, all drawings, paintings and draftings being the work of the students. Proud youthful artists stood in close proximity to their artistry always willing to expound upon the scenes and views, which brought high words of complimentary praise from the proud parents and visiting adults.

Stamp Club

Spectators were surprised to find an exceedingly large display of stamps in the Board of Education room, sponsored by the Belleville Collegiate Stamp Club. Several fine collections were admired by all and featured "Spotlights in Canadian History Through Philately." Many valuable collections of Canadian and British and foreign stamps were seen, Canadian stamps dating back to prior to Confederation.

Gymnastics

Both the girls' and boys' gymnasiums drew their quota of spectators, as classes of gymnastics and athletics were presented under the direction of Miss Allison and Mr. Laughlin, in charge of physical training and athletics at the Belleville Collegiate. Group games were presented, as were drills, physical culture and gymnastics on the horse, parallel bars and other more modern forms of healthful training, that is part of the present-day curriculum. Adult spectators were agreeably surprised at the agility and precision with which both the girls' and boys' gymnasium classes presented their efforts. The galleries of both gymnasiums saw capacity gatherings all during the various presentations of physical culture.

To conclude a full evening of complete educational entertainment a dance was held in the school gymnasium during which the student body relaxed from a strenuous evening of close scrutiny at the hands of visiting parents and citizens in general to enjoy a bit of "rug cutting." Moving pictures were also shown in the auditorium through the courtesy of the Shell Oil Company.

Certificates Given

Following a full semester of Night School in the Vocational Departments, adult students to attain high percentages of marks were presented with diploma certificates upon the stage of the school auditorium by Mr. Geo. A. Ferguson of the Vocational School staff. In attendance on the stage were Messrs. D. Harcus, woodworking, W. E. Davis, motor mechanics and Cecil Heard, of the drafting department.

Those receiving certificates were:

AIR RAID ON SYLT

Nazis have very definite proof of what a British bombing squadron can do when they attack an objective. In the raid on the German base scores of Nazi planes were destroyed as the British airmen in six hours dropped 1,000 bombs, that is more than were dropped by German planes and zeppelins during the Great War on London. Hangars were reported in flames as a result of the terrific hammering and pounding by the British bombers, oil tanks were ablaze and railway lines crippled.

Another fact stands out, the Sylt area contains no civilians, having been evacuated long ago. It was a purely military objective, and the results are naturally purely military.

The building up of Britain s air force has been one of the great developments of the past couple of years. It is a herald of that coming strength when the Empire Plan is in full operation.

ALLIED SUPREMACY ON THE SEAS

German efforts on the sea to wrest from the British and French navies the command of the seas have failed. In nearly a month enemy submarines sank only four vessels. The loss by enemy action to Allied and neutral ships last week totalled in all nine vessels, most of the casualties being due to "illegal" mines.

Germany has made a desperate effort to strike at the Allied sea power with little effect, thanks to the heroism and sacrifice of British sailors and fishermen and those who man the patrol ships.

The enemy's attempts with bombers have not made a very impressive showing. The last attempt by a foe squadron at Scapa Flow on Saturday was, as Premier Chamberlain says, a failure.

Germany's diminishing attacks at sea have caused some to believe the U-boats may have been called back to German naval stations.

Germany could have wished for a better showing for all the expenditure of their efforts on the sea, but the relentless policing of the oceans and seas by the Allied warships and fleet of small ships has again proven the importance of supreme seapower. More and more apparent is the evidence that the British and French have been steadily ridding the seas of enemy marauders, whose actions have largely been in contravention of the agreement of nations.

With the reduction in the sinking of Allied ships, goes hand in hand the reduction in the numbers of sinkings of neutral ships. They have both one enemy, the Nazis. When the Nazis fail, the seas become safe. Neutrals should not forget that fact. It is proof that the British and French blockade and sea patrols are a blessing to the neutrals while a terror to the Nazis.

MEETING IN THE ALPS

The Alps have witnessed many scenes. In recent years they have witnessed the passage of Hitler and Mussolini on exchange visits to the capital cities of their countries. The other day these two met in the shadow of these Alps. But the Alps have seen the whole history of western civilization. Hannibal in the third century before Christ took an army from Carthage across the Mediterranean and with 90,000 foot soldiers, 40 elephants and 12,000 horsemen marched through Gaul, now France, in the depth of winter with incredible rapidity and passed through the Alps in nine days, though he lost a portion of troops in the passage. On another campaign he again crossed the Alps to win a great victory over Flaminius. Napoleon also crossed the Alps with his army.

These mountains, the highest in Europe, have always been a barrier. They decided the civilizations and the racial settlements in the lands about their bases. They have witnessed the rise and decline of powerful states. In them is Switzerland, a land of three races, French, Italian and German.

Many of the peaks of the Alps are now ascended by railways. Trains run through the Alps. There is an inn at the top of the Rigi summit. There are many glorious views from the accessible mountain tops. The electric line through the Eiger Glacier to the summit of the Jungfrau is of surpassing interest. The most accessible glaciers are those of Aletsch, Chamonix and Zermatt.

What business drew Hitler and Mussolini to Brennero in the Alps was not the sunrises, but it had to do with the troubled European scene. What will come out of that meeting is not clear.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 21ST, 1920

Shortly before two o'clock this afternoon a telephone message was received in the city advising that a large ice field which had jammed in the river above Lazier's Mill had broken away and was sweeping towards the city. When this ice reached the ice which was piled up above the footbridge it set it in motion and with irresistible force it rushed on towards the bay. At the railway bridges the ice piled up to such an extent that it not only went to the top of the piers, but rested against the iron work. Here it was securely held and it looks as though it may stay there for some time. No serious damage has resulted so far. The footbridge as usual came in for some slight damage and the gangway to the bridge is impassable. There is some water on the lower part of Front Street below the Queen's Hotel.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The prolonged British air raid on the Island of Sylt marked a new departure in aerial warfare apart from serving as an illustration of the apparent British policy of retaliating for every German air venture.

Hour after hour British bombers roared over the fortified base in the North sea unloading their cargoes of high explosive. That they encountered little opposition from German fighter aircraft would seem to indicate some of the first bombs dropped hit hangars on the Island.

Sylt, like all other key areas of Germany, already has been photographed and mapped from the air. Photographs taken yesterday, following the bombing, when compared with those taken previously, will give the strategists of the Royal Air Force accurate information on the damage done. This information, in turn, will serve as a guide to future operations.

The attack followed the German air raid on the British naval base at Scapa Flow but was a more ambitious and more carefully planned operation. The promptness with which it followed the German gesture indicated the R.A.F. had its plan of operation ready and waiting for the occasion. As a result of extensive reconnaissance flights over Germany in the last few months, plans for action against other areas are no doubt also on paper.

Results Flashed But Time Delays Their Printing

Ottawa—(CP)— Election returns, flashing over Canadian Press coast-to-coast wires on Dominion election night, March 26, will lie unpublished in newspaper offices for varying times because of a new rule against publication or broadcast of returns in any province before its polls are closed.

The rule aims to prevent returns from the eastern part of the country influencing voting on more westerly sections where the polls close later because of Canada's four time-zones.

Polls close at six o'clock local standard time everywhere. The Maritime polls (on A.S.T.) will close first, then Ontario and Quebec (on E.S.T.), Manitoba (on C.S.T.), Saskatchewan and Alberta (on M.S.T.), British Columbia (on P.S.T.), four hours after the Maritime polls close, and the Yukon five hours later. Time zones do not follow provincial borders exactly, but it will be presumed so for publication purposes.

B. C.'s Long Wait

Vancouver newspapers, accustomed to publishing extras on eastern results will have to wait almost four hours after they receive the first returns before they can put them in print. Two hours before the B. C. polls closed in 1935, the west coast newspapers could tell their readers that 12 Liberals and no Conservatives had been elected in the east's foresight of the Liberal sweep

After another hour British Columbians knew that the Liberals were sweeping the east with 33 members elected to the Conservatives' nine. Then, at 9:03 p.m. E. S. T., three minutes after the polls closed in B. C., The Canadian Press conceded the defeat of the Bennett government. At that time complete returns from Saskatchewan and Alberta were just being made public.

The rule against publication before polls close will curtail broadcasting as well as publication The Canadian Boardcasting Corporation, carrying The Canadian Press service on the air, will limit its network to the eastern sections of Canada in the early hours, extending it as poll-closings make broadcasting possible in the westward time-zones.

How It Reads

The new rule is section 107 of the Dominion Elections Act, 1933. It reads:

"No person, company or corporation shall, in any province before the hour of closing of the polls in such province, publish the result of the polling in any electoral district in Canada, whether such publication is by radio broadcast, or by newspaper, news-sheet, poster, billboard, handbill or in any other manner. Any persons contravening the provisions of this section (and in the case of a company or corporation any person responsible for the contravention thereof) is guilty of an illegal practice and of an offence against this Act."

Hospitality Club Will Entertain Men From Air Force

A Hospitality Club has been organized in Belleville by a committee taken from a group of ladies in St. Andrew's, [illegible] and St. Thomas' Churches. The object of the club being to make the leisure hours of the men who have enlisted in the Air Force more pleasant.

The club will open with a party at St. Thomas' Church Parish Hall on April 2nd. An invitation will be issued to about fifty men from the Air Force and an equal number of girls from the city. Cards, dancing and singing will be the order for the evening and refreshments will be served. It is hoped that through this means of entertainment the boys away from their homes will have the opportunity of making friends with Belleville people and receive invitations to their homes. The club will try to run a party once a week.

If you like the big hat you'll find many models to choose from this Spring. A charming model is in blue straw, the wide brim lifted in back. At back and over the crown is an enormous cream-colored magnolia with lacquered green leaves.

Get dressed for dinner in one of those casual skirt and blouse frocks. A beauty is in dove gray marquisette the bodice tucked down the front, the skirt with soft fullness. Eyelet-embroidery makes the collar and turn-back cuffs on elbow-length sleeves. Scarlet flowers are thrust through the belt and continue in garlands down the skirt.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Neatness in Letter-Writing Equivalent to Beauty

Everyone who is not a thirty-third degree moron can learn to write a good letter. When the boy or girl friend is miles away a sprightly, well-written letter is an anchor to windward, which prevents straying.

I'm always glad to hear from readers. The more letters I get, the more pleased am I. Yet sometimes I wonder if girls and boys write to their sweethearts with the same "pale and wan" pencils with which they write to me. I put on my strongest pair of glasses and work as laboriously to decipher the communication as an archeologist facing Egyptian hieroglyphics.

Please don't misinterpret this hint. Write to me in pencil if you will, but please see that it's black enough to make a mark. But don't write to your best young man or your girl friend with a pencil suffering with anemia. Ten to one, the beloved object will put it aside until there is plenty of time for deciphering the elusive characters. Often that time doesn't come.

Picking up the morning paper a day or two ago, I read the headline, "Mail Romance Last 50 Years". The story went on to say that He wrote Her two letters. In the second he proposed. She write Him two letters, and in the second she accepted. They met for the first time and were married in 1890. His letter was delightful; her answer even more delightful. And wonderful to relate, they wrote with good black ink, and no magnifying glasses were required to decipher the script. That was all there was to the courtship of Mr. and Mrs. John Melack, who have just celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. There are so many effective assets that make for success, not only in love but in business, that are to be had for the asking and are so often overlooked. Everyone can have a good voice. Neatness, daintiness—is frequently the equivalent of beauty, and as you were reminded in the beginning, everyone who is not a positive moron can write a good letter.

Decent stationery can be bought at any Five-and-ten. Pass up the pinks, greens and blues in favor of unlined cream or white paper. Invest in a bottle of ink and a good pen. And luck go with you. And then, perhaps, like Mr. and Mrs. Melack, you will be celebrating your golden wedding fifty years from now, with someone you charmed a a correspondent.

When you write to me, I don't in the least object to pencil or a page torn from a lined composition book, if the pencil makes a mark. But don't take these chances when you want to make an impression or are writing for a job.

"I thought she was at least fourth grade," a boy wrote to me, "but her letter would have shamed the kindergarten. Besides, I couldn't take a day off to read it." And there, like smoke went up the romance of the pretty girl whom he had met at a dance. When she wrote him, as he had asked, she affected a cure in her first letter. Please don't let that happen to you.

THERE'S A DESIRE always for the casual shirtwaist type of frock that fits into any daytime scene. A nice model of this type is in soft sheer wool in light gray, with scarlet silk arrow heads embroidered at the top of skirt pleats and down the bodice front. Red snakeskin belt.

A touch of color marks many white evening and dinner dresses. A short-sleeved evening frock of white silk jersey has a broad band of fuchsia-colored faille at the neckline and at the hem. The bands are encrusted with pearl beads and pink sequins.

Navy leads in wool frocks for daytime. A lightweight sheer wool in bright navy has inset bands of scarlet faille simulating a short bolero.

Furnishings of Rooms in New Wing Of Hospital Designed to Supply Restful Environment for Patients

Room Decorations Will be Done in Quiet Beige Tones—Furniture to Have Special Features Which Will Add Much to the Comfort of the Patient — Lighting Equipment Will Do Away With All Glare — Radio and Telephone to be Provided in Each Room

APPEAL FOR DONORS

Reflecting the modern trend of hospital room furnishings towards creating pleasant homelike atmosphere in the patient's room rather than the severe environment usually associated with hospital interiors, a room typical of those to be found in the new wing of Belleville General Hospital has been open for inspection. Visitors have been impressed and delighted with the artistic result achieved by modernistic furnishings against a charming background.

This typical room is fitted with the new type hospital door which can be left ajar at any angle by means of a special door closer. Through it one enters a large room finished in beige tones, a deep shade being used on the mosaic patterned linoleum and a softer tone in the walls. The wide windows, fitted with Venetian blinds, and colorful drapes in keeping with the general decorative scheme, ensure good lighting in daytime hours, while the carefully planned electric equipment provides the patient with all the accessories in keeping with modern hospital service.

Special Features.

The furniture of this room was the gift of Wray's Home Furnishers and is the last word in hospital equipment for the patient's room, the various special features of the articles of furnishings adding immeasurably to the comfort and convenience of the occupant. The rich modernistic furniture is in walnut and includes not only the usual hospital bed, dresser, bedside table and chair but an easy chair, side chair, and footstool, all handsome pieces which will be the envy of patients who will probably spend convalescent hours in planning just such a room in their own homes.

The bed is adorned with a beautiful beige spread, finished in green and brown candlewick in the centre of which is the monogram BGH. Of the Gatch type, the bed is of course in walnut finish, and besides being equipped with the finest of mattresses it has all kinds of thoughtful devices which the patient will best appreciate when they are put to use. For instance there is a combination examining lamp or irrigator rod socket at the foot end of the bed. A new style bed lamp has been designed for this bed, and placed conveniently to it are outlets to permit the use of telephone and radio, if the patient so desires. The over-the-bed table, also of walnut has many interesting features. It has a blisterproof Formica top, in three sections, the centre one being used for a book stop, or if reversed it contains a mirror for the delight of the patient when the worst is over and she begins to take an interest in life and complexion. The over-bed table is so designed that it may be used over the easy chair when the patient is convalescing.

Convenient Bedside Table.

The bedside table has drawers that pull out from either side and its blisterproof Formica top, and edging sliding shelf for arm rest, tray or writing are admirable improvements in the usual type. It is built to the floor with inside kick base covered with linoleum and in keeping with the other articles of furniture is mounted on concealed Bassick silent casters.

Over the modernistic dresser, a very beautiful piece, is an equally modern mirror. An easy chair with hand woven doeskin cover in beige and matching footstool, with a similarly finished side chair complete the room's furnishings and provide the finishing touches in a room of charm and decorative appeal. Bedside lamp, reading lamp and dresser fixtures have ivory shades and are specially designed so that the patient never has to contend with glare. Another example of the care and foresight that went into the planning of the room is the night-light, below the level of the bed, which the night nurse can switch on from outside, to allow her to visit the room without disturbing a sleeping patient. Every private room will have a wash room and clothes closet.

This room will be a model for the furnishings of the new wing. The gift is deeply appreciated by the hopital, this donation on the part of Wray's Home Furnishers being the first presentation of its kind to the new wing.

Three Selections For Donors.

Many rooms in the main hospital building bear the names of donors. Citizens or organizations who would like to present similar rooms in the new wing might be interested to know that the cost of furnishing such a room is three hundred and fifty dollars; the de luxe private rooms with bathroom and alcove will cost five hundred to furnish in this style and the semi-private rooms, six hundred dollars.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Negative Listener Stifles Conversation

There are two kinds of listeners. The negative listener and the positive listener.

The negative listener lets the other person talk, says little or nothing himself, listens half-heartedly and with usually not even half his attention. He doesn't look directly at the person speaking, lets his eyes wander to other people or things in the room, and gives the impression of impatiently waiting for a chance to interrupt at the first possible moment. Such half-dead listening brings no stimulation to conversation, no stimulation to the personality of the person speaking, no delight to the give-and-take of social contact.

The positive listener, on the other hand, inspires conversation. He looks directly, and with undivided attention, at the person speaking. By his friendly, sympathetic interest and attention, he pays tribute to the other person's personality. His eyes, the whole expression of his face, kindle with eagerness to hear what the speaker is saying.

Money Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman—

1—We are planning a small bridal shower and would like the guests to bring money instead of presents as the prospective bride has enough of everything. How should this request be written in the invitations?

2—As there will be no reception after the church wedding, should we tell the guests at the shower or send out special invitations, inviting them to the church only? If so, how should they be worded?

F. V.

1—I can never be very enthusiastic about a money shower, except in certain cases where money is the thing that is most needed. shower, suggest that the guests send

Even in these cases, the plans should be carried out with the greatest delicacy and understanding. In this case, when "the bride has enough of everything", a money shower seems to me particularly inappropriate.

Instead of suggesting that the guests bring gifts of money, why not, if you don't really favor another more conventional kind of a certain definitely specified amount to you, as chief hostess, with the idea set forth that it is to be used for one special shower gift? Decide on the gift beforehand, determine how much this would mean for a contribution from each guest, and name that sum in your invitation.

2—Since I judge that this wedding is to be an informal one, the notes of invitation would properly be written by the bride's mother, or whoever is to be hostess of the occasion:—

Dear Mary

Dorothy and Bob are to be married in . . . Church, on Tuesday, the tenth of April, at four o'clock, and it would make us all very happy if you and Tom will come to the ceremony. There is to be no reception.

Dearest love to you both.

Affectionately,

Solving Your Home Problems

By ELEANOR ROSS

HERE IS a grab-bag of household hints, one of which may solve a current difficulty for you. We know this one will, for it is in answer to a query about doing over summer rugs. To do right by a summer porch rug so that it can do duty again, give it a good scrubbing and, when dry, a coat of porch paint. After two days, spread with clear floor varnish and you'll have a rug which will probably give you another year's wear.

Washable fabrics should always be sponged or washed right after the application of patent stain removers.. Many effective preparations of this type contain acids which may be injurious if left in the treated fabrics too long.

A good use for those extra pieces of linoleum left over from floors or walls is to adopt them as coverings for tables, window sills and other flat-topped kitchen surfaces. After they have been measured, cut and cemented to the desired surfaces, they shoud be washed with soap and water, dried thoroughly and waxed like the kitchen floor. Such surfaces are durable, quiet to work on and easy to keep immaculate by mopping with a cloth wrung out by mild, luke-warm suds.

To clean a transparent raincoat, spread it on a flat surface and rub gently with a sponge or very soft brush dipped frequently in warm water and mild soap suds. Sponge with cloth dipped in warm water, then wipe as dry as possible with a soft, dry cloth. Shake and let the garment dry in a room of moderate temperature, keeping it away from radiators or open fires.

Painted Furniture

To wash painted furniture, dissolve half a cup of neutral soap flakes in a quart of water and cool. Then stir in half cup of whiting. To remove the "foggy" appearance frequently found on highly-polished woods, rub with the grain of the wood, using a clean piece of cheese cloth which has been dampened with a solution made of one quart of clear water and one tablespoon of vinegar. To clean crevices in carved pieces, use a cotton-wrapped orange wood stick or a wooden skewer. For antiques or old pieces, use a mixture of two parts turpentine to one part of linseed oil or equal parts of turpentine, linseed oil and vinegar. Apply with a soft cloth and rub. Polish with a dry cloth.

PRIZE WINNER GIVES SECRET OF Baking

MRS. Russell Jermey of Oro Township, Ontario, has not only been a consistent prize-winner at Fall Fairs, but she has been chosen on more than one occasion to act as a judge in Baking Contests.

"What is the secret of your own baking success?" I asked. "I try to get good recipes and I stay with them," she replied. "Care counts always. And then you need the best ingredients you can find, especially flour; if you haven't good flour you are beaten before you start. My mother used Robin Hood Flour and I've used it for years, and now my daughter-in-law uses it, too."

Couldn't Count Her Prizes

"I won prizes at the Fall fairs with Robin Hood Flour, and I can tell to look at a loaf if Robin Hood Flour was used in baking it; it is always so white and smooth in texture. Bread baked with that flour is really high-class bread."

Baking Made Easy

Why not take the word of this competent prize-winner and judge of good baking and order Robin Hood the very next time you need flour! Every bag contains a money back plus 10% guarantee certificate. And if you want some of the finest recipes obtainable, send nine cents in stamps to Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited, Department "O", Toronto, Ont., for the Robin Hood Recipe Book, "Baking Made Easy". It contains all the standard recipes and many new ones, with the method listed in a way that really makes baking easy for the newest bride or even her younger sister.

Diabetes

The morning mail brought me a letter from a man whose grandson has diabetes. The gentleman was greatly disturbed for he was apparently thinking that a child with diabetes can't be expected to live long. A few years ago, this would have been the case, but thanks to the discovery of insulin, his grandson, if he gets proper treatment, should go on living a normal life for many years.

This particular letter isn't the only one I've had on diabetes and children. Many have asked me to explain the disease.

In order for a doctor to hurry out on sick calls or so that a workman can dig ditches, or a child play games, the body has to burn fuel, just like an engine. Our fuel is carbohydrate—starches, and sugar, such as bread, potatoes, rice sugars, and many others. Inside the body these are all turned into a type of sugar that the body can use to produce the energy. Diabetes is the disease that occurs when our bodies cannot properly digest or use this sugar.

Of course, before the body can get any good out of a food, it must use it. If the food isn't used, then there is danger that the food will be harmful. Down in the intestines, digestive fluids go to work on the foods we eat and separate the useful from the waste products. The fluids that do this work are manufactured in the pancreas, a long, tongue-shaped organ situated behind the stomach. Scattered about inside these pancreas are a number of small organs called Islands of Langerhans. Their job is to manufacture a special substance which dissolves the sugars, and prepares them further for our consumption by our systems. This substance is called insulin and it goes into the intestines with the other digestive fluids and there it transforms the carbohydrates into a form in which the body can readily use them.

Diabetes is caused by the failure of these Islands of Langerhans to produce enough insulin. When insulin isn't available, the carbohydrates cannot be used as they should. They pile up in the digestive track and leak out into the blood stream. Then the kidneys step in and try to filter the sugar out of the blood and when this happens we find sugar in the urine. Most of you know that this is one of the best known tests for diabetes—sugar in the urine.

Actually, the kidneys are very good safety valves for this sugar for they get rid of it quite well. The trouble is that every day more and more sugars and starches are eaten by the patient and so no matter how hard the kidneys work, they cannot stop the system from being poisoned by the very material that should give the body fuel for energy.

Since the body isn't receiving this fuel as it should, then the person's appetite becomes greater and greater. In spite of all he eats, his appetite isn't satisfied because what he eats isn't used by the system.

So a child with diabetes will lose weight in spite of his huge appetite. A large appetite without a gain in weight is an important symptom. There is also an increased thirst, a red flush to the face, constipation, a melancholy feeling, drowsiness, weakness of vision, and finally unconsciousness. Of course every patient doesn't exhibit all these symptoms and some only appear after the victim has had the disease for a long time without treatment.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with any ailment is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't fiddle with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble!

Chances are you won't have to look very far if you eat just the things most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk" in your diet. And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means the kind of food that isn't largely consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass which helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, Kellogg's All-Bran, a ready-to-eat cereal, is probably just what you need to keep you "regular." It supplies the "bulk" you need, plus the intestinal tonic vitamin B1.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars"! Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada. Sold by every grocer in two convenient sizes.

Better today than ever

Picobac was always a mild, cool, sweet smoke but today this tobacco is delivering pleasure in double measure. And with good reason.

They've been doing things in tobacco culture in the Burley belt of Sunny Southern Ontario. Improvement after improvement has been made possible through the close co-operation of growers and government experts. Better seeds, better methods of cultivation and curing, betterment all along the line, have produced a finer, lighter, more uniform leaf and the pick of the crop goes into Picobac. That's why it's a better Picobac—better today than ever before.

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

"The old people knew a lot", says Mr. Picobac, "but they didn't know how to grow Burley like you find in Picobac today."

Shall I Vote for

KING OR MANION?

There is only one decision to be made by the Canadian people on March 26th. It is this:

Shall our country's war effort be handed over to unknown, unnamed politicians . . . to a makeshift cabinet with Dr. Manion as the self-appointed leader?

OR: Shall our country's war effort be continued vigorously and faithfully by the known and proven administration of Mackenzie King?

That is the question YOU must answer.

* * *

Up a Blind Alley?—or—Out in the Open!

It is time for plain speaking. Dr. Manion's pretence of offering "national" government is sheer political deceit. Because: even if he were elected to office, Dr. Manion could not organize or lead a truly national government. The parliamentary group which might follow him would fail to represent all Canada. It would not represent the people of the national Liberal party. It would not represent the people of the C.C.F. party. It would not represent the people of the historic Conservative party which Dr. Manion has now scuttled.

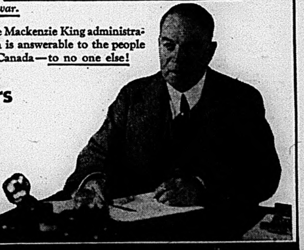
Do not be deceived! Dr. Manion cannot give you National Government. The best he might give you would be government by unknown followers. He invites you to follow him up a blind alley—to vote for a government of his own imagination—answerable to some undisclosed political group.

* * *

Mackenzie King offers you something entirely in the open . . . the most truly National government Canada has ever known. His parliamentary followers represent the people of every province in Canada—every section of our country—every economic, social and racial group. There is not an area of this country . . . not a single classification of our people . . . without proper representation in the Mackenzie King following.

Mackenzie King's cabinet ministers are well-known to you. They are broadly experienced men—eager and able to continue the sort of administration which brought progress to Canada in times of peace and national pride to Canadians since the outbreak of war.

The Mackenzie King administration is answerable to the people of Canada—to no one else!



The Responsibility is Now Yours

Canada is facing the greatest crisis in her history. It is YOUR responsibility to say how she is to deal with this crisis. Therefore: when you go to the polls on March 26th you should consider only what is best for Canada—what is best for the Empire and our allies—what is the sure, direct road to Victory and Peace.

FORWARD WITH MACKENZIE KING

Bruins, Rangers Contribute Greatest Number of Players To N. H. L. All-Star Team

Four Defencemen, All Captains of Respective Clubs, Chosen on First and Alternate Teams

BLAKE WINS SPOT

Left-Winger for Canadiens Beats Dumart for Position on First Team by One Vote

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 21—(CP)—Four great team leaders stand out among the defencemen of the National Hockey League, as the lineups of the N.H.L. all-star teams selected for the Canadian Press will attest.

For the defence positions on the first and alternate teams, made public last night, 28 hockey writers in N.H.L. cities selected the captains of four clubs. Aubrey (Dit) Clapper of Boston Bruins and Ebenezer (Ebbie) Goodfellow of Detroit, were chosen for the first team and Art Coulter of New York Rangers and Earl Seibert of Chicago Black Hawks for the second.

Kerr, (Rangers), goal, Brimsek, (Boston).

Clapper (Boston), r. defence, Coulter Rangers).

Goodfellow Detroit), l. defence, Seibert (Chicago).

Schmidt (Boston), centre, N. Colville (Rangers).

Hextall (Rangers), r. wing, Bauer (Boston).

Blake (Canadiens), l. wing, Dumart (Boston).

Thompson (Chicago), coach, Boucher (Rangers).

Tribute to Defencemen

Apart from the preponderance of Bruin and Ranger players, the most notable feature of the balloting was the tribute to the value of defenceman who can rush, act as ice generals and still play strong blocking games. These are the main attributes of Clapper, Goodfellow, Coulter and Seibert.

But the greatest defenceman of the last decade is absent from the C. P. teams for the second time in the ten years they have been selected. Eddie Shore, traded by Boston to the Americans this season, chose to devote much of his time to his duties as owner of Springfield's International - American League team and he was mentioned only rarely in the balloting.

The nearest unanimous vote was accorded Dave Kerr as goaltender. Winner of the Vezina Trophy as the N.H.L. netminder with the fewest goals against him, he was named to the first team by 25 writers and to the second by two of the other three. Frank Brimsek, who made the first team last year in his first season with the Bruins, was god enough to catch the second squad this time.

Wins by One Vote

The closest squeeze was at left wing, where Hector (Toe) Blake won the first-team nomination by a single vote over Woodrow (Woody) Dumart of Boston. Blake edged out the Bruins' 200-pound scoring star despite the fact he was with the last-place club and Dumart with the league champions.

Milt Schmidt, centre for Dumart on the sauerkraut line, led the league in point-making by nine points and stepped into the all-star team just as handily. Neil Colville, a head man in the Rangers' intricate passing plays, was made pivot man in the alternates.

Bobby Bauer, third member of the sauerkraut combination, had to yield the right wing spot on the first team to Bryan Hextall of the Rangers, who led the league in goal-getting, but the choice of three members of one line to places on either team was a rare tribute to this hard-driving young unit from Kitchener, Ont., whose members are completing their third full season in the big league.

Thompson to Coach

Paul Thompson of Chicago was made first-team coach for his job in making over the Black Hawks and getting them into fourth position, despte the fact more than half the lineup was new to the league. Frank Boucher's feat of piloting the Rangers through a streak of 19 games without a defeat gained him the coaching job on the alternates.

FINAL CITY HOCKEY GAMES PLAYED TONIGHT

Glen Miller Accepts Challenge of Wallbridge for Grudge Game Friday

	W.	L.	T.	Pts.
Canada Cement	2	0	0	4
Alemite Co.	1	1	0	2
Belle-Sargent	0	1	1	1
Corbin Lock	0	1	1	1

The above standing represents how the teams in the City Industrial League compare as they clash in the third and final doubleheader for the S. R. Burrows Trophy at the Hume Arena this evening. The Point Anne "Cement-makers" are assured of a play-off berth, while the remaining three clubs will have to battle it out for the play-off berth.

The opening game sees the group-leading Canada Cement sextette clash with Chuck Barnett's Belleville-Sargent team, while the nightcap match brings together the Corbin Lock pucksters versus the Stewart-Warner Alemite squad.

These final Industrial League games are the only sporting events over the Easter holiday and should attract a goodly following to close out the hockey season at the Hume Arena.

Grudge Game

Feeling they were not eliminated by a better team, the Wallbridge "Townhallers" issued a challenge to the Glen Miller "Paper-makers" today, after the latter team had won the Dr. J. J. Robertson Trophy and the rural hockey championship earlier in the week. Manager Bart Hinchcliffe, of the Wallbridge sextette, openly made a cash wager his charges could beat the Glen Miller team and the "Paper-makers" accepted the challenge, covered Mr. Hinchcliffe's wager and the two teams will clash again on Friday night at the Hume Arena in a grudge game.

Members to Evolve Plan War Program for Troops in Service

Toronto, March 21 (CP)—Softball is a "war baby" and is faced today with the greatest problem in its history—that of evolving a war program of real service to Canadian soldiers, Secretary Verne McIlwraith of Guelph says in his annual report to be presented tomorrow at the 18th annual meeting of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association here.

The report notes that softball had its origin in the Boer war when softball—indoor ball—was instituted by military officials. From this garrison-played competition came the outdoor game of softball. "Today this Ontario sport is the most popular of army games, and according to reports forms a great part of the recreational activities of the British and French soldiers in active service at the front," the report says.

"Here in Canada many leagues have already been formed among military units and it is here that this association finds its main job at present. Every facility of this organization should be placed at the disposal of the military groups."

The report adds that there was a great increase in affiliations during the past year. A total of 23 more teams took part in the provincial playoffs in 1939 and affiliation involved an additional 14 district association. It is estimated that 35,000 players took part in the game under supervision of the O.A.S.A.

"In these days when real sportsmanship in athletics would appear to be fading away, it is refreshing to recount the magnificent gesture of the Meaford club during intermediate "C" playdowns last fall," the report says, in stating that Meaford consented to play Drumo during a rainstorm, after Drumo travelled a long distance to reach the game site, and that Meaford lost.

The treasurer's annual report show a balance of more than $1,000 on hand and of this a reserve fund of $500 has been set aside for emergency use.

Six Senior and Five Junior Teams Still in Running

Winnipeg, March 21—(CP)— Six senior and five junior hockey teams remain in the western playoff picture .

Calgary Stampeders, coached by Marty Burke, the National League veteran who guided Saskatoon Quakers to the Saskatchewan amateur title last year, out-lasted Turner Valley Oilers in a gruelling series and won the Alberta senior championship last night at Calgary.

Stampeders beat Oilers 1-0 in the deciding game of the best-of-five round and qualified to meet the British Columbia representatives, Trail Smoke Eaters, in the Allan Cup playdowns. First game of the best-of-five Trail-Calgary series will be played at Trail March 23 with the remainder at Calgary.

Regina Vic-Aces prolonged the Saskatchewan senior final by beating Moose Jaw Millers 4-2 last night at Regina in the third game of the best-of-five series. Millers won the first two games decisively.

Port Arthur Bear Cats, rolling down the long trail in defence of the Allan Cup they won at Montreal last year, open a best-of-three series with the Manitoba champions, Royal Winnipeg Rifles, in the Lakehead city tonight.

Elmwood Maple Leafs of Winnipeg and Kenora Thistles open a best-of-five series here tonight for the Manitoba junior title. The winner meets Port Arthur juniors in the first round of Memorial Cup playdowns.

The Saskatchewan junior representatives, Regina Abbott-Generals, travel to Edmonton to open a best-of-five western semi-final there Saturday against Edmonton Athletic Club, who lost to Oshawa Generals in the Canadian final at Toronto last year.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

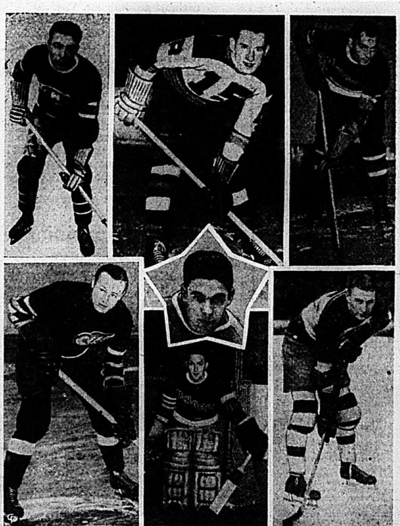
San Antonio, Tex., March 21 —(AP)—To fortify their catching department since Joe Glenn has extended his holdout St. Louis Browns have signed George Susce, who was released unconditionally by Pittsburgh Pirates.

San Bernardino, Calif.: Pitching woes have beset Manager Gabby Hartnett of Chicago Cubs again. Clay Bryant, who pitched only 31 innings last year but was believed recovered from his lame arm, complained yesterday of a new soreness. Vance Page also showed up with a sore arm and asked to be excused from today's assignment against Pittsburgh.

Fort Myers, Fla.: A sensational relief hurler in 1938 and a complete flop in 1939, Johnny Humphries today declared himself a candidate for regular starting mound assignments with Cleveland Indians this season.

In seven innings of exhibition game twirling Humphries has allowed four hits two bases on balls and has not been scored upon.

Sarasota, Fla.: Dom Dimmagio is likely to be the only freshman wearing a Boston Red Sox uniform this season. Manager Joe Cronin, after looking over his rookies thoroughly, already has decided which ones will be included in the first squad cut this week for the Durham and Rocky Mount farms. Most of the rookie survivors probably will wind up with Louisville or Little Rock next week.



CANADIAN PRESS' ALL-STAR HOCKEY SELECTION

In the annual all-star hockey team selection Canadian Press has chosen the ABOVE players to form their first team. TOP LEFT to RIGHT: Toe Blake, of Montreal Canadiens; Milt Schmidt, of Boston Bruins; Bryan Hextall, New York Rangers. BOTTOM LEFT to RIGHT: Ebbie Goodfellow Detroit Red Wings; Dave Kerr, New York Rangers, and Dit Clapper, of Boston Bruins. Paul Thompson, Inset, was selected as coach of the all-star team. Canadian Press, second selection was Brimsek, Coulter, Seibert, Colville, Bauer, Dumart and Coach Boucher.

KIRKLAND LAKE DEFEATS GOODIES IN FIRST GAME

Northern Team Scores Three Goals in Last Period to Clinch Pastime

MORTIMER HURT

Goodyears' Goalie Sustains Cut Eye and Game Held Up Till Wound Stitched

Toronto, March 21—(CP)—Those very crowding tactics Toronto Goodyears used to good effect this season have been adopted by Kirkland Lake which is one reason why the Blue Devils beat the rubbermen in the opening game of the best-of-five series for the Ontario Senior Hockey Championship. The score was 4-3.

Goodyears fore-checked without a let-up as they forged a 3-1 lead in the first two periods of last night's game before 5,996 fans. Blue Devils did the same with four forwards, and sometimes five, throughout the third period to score three goals and a victory.

The second game is scheduled for Saturday at Toronto.

Goodyears' goalie, Herbie Mortimer, suffered a cut eye in the third period and that apparently was the break that decided the game. The game was halted while Mortimer had his eye stitched and the time out gave the Blue Devils a chance to rest. Instead of cooling out they came back to rap in the tying and winning goals, John McCreedy scoring the deciding tally with 36 seconds left to play.

Eddie King punched in two Toronto tallies while Bert Turney got the third. Dick Kowcinak with two and Blink Bellinger with one were Blue Devil's other scorers.

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

Last week we carried an item in the column pertaining to Picton's great junior O.H.A. team of 1909, known as "The Little Men of Metal." Comment followed throughout the district as oldtimers reminisced at length regarding the old days of puck-chasing when carry-alls and open sleighs were the chief method of transportation to the matches. However, this week we received a letter from Pat J. Kelly, now a resident of Campbellford. Mr. Kelly played with the St. Michael's College seven in 1908 and says he vividly remembers Picton's great junior team. He played left wing. Such players as Jerry LaFlamme (noted hockey coach and referee) Jimmy Dissette, Jules Timmis, Joe McColl, Clarence Bolger, Roger Yule and Dohery, the goalkeeper, were some of the players named in Mr. Kelly's letter as members of the St. College team of 1908.

Quoting from Mr. Kelly's letter he continued—"We played Picton in the junior O. H. A. semi-finals that season. Picton built a new rink, but a couple of days before we were able to play there the roof caved in as the result of heavy snows. All they had left was a rink without a roof, four walls and bleacher seats. Every seat was occupied the night we played and a heavy snow storm raged with the result there was about four inches of snow on the ice during the game. I remember this well, as we only won 3-2 and I got two of the goals. The goal that decided the game came by reason on my falling to the ice where I picked up the puck with my hand from beneath the snow. Then I got up and pretended I was pushing the the puck through the snow with my stick and when I got near the Picton goal I dropped the puck and batted it into the Picton goal for the winning counter and no person was any the wiser as it was snowing too hard to see far", revealed Mr. Kelly in his letter.

Mr. Kelly told of the St. Mike's special train getting snow bound between Picton and Trenton and also remembered the Rev. Mr. Armstrong, then a resident of Trenton, joining the party. He also spoke of the two Armstrong boys, who played hockey in Trenton about that time, both of whom were considered outstanding hockey players of their day. Mr. Kelly concluded his letter by adding that over 2,000 fans jammed their way into the roofless Picton rink that memorable night, arriving in town in every conceivable method of transportation. "Yes, Picton had surely gone hockey crazy about that time," added the letter. Mr. Kelly's admission as to how he picked the puck up and carried it in his hand will doubtless prove interesting news to many Picton patrons, who saw the game and perhaps to this day knew nothing of how Pat Kelly scored the goal that beat Picton's "Little Men of Metal" that season. We are indebted to Mr. Kelly for his letter and comments.

Do you remember when—Boston Bruins' defensive trio—goaler Tiny Thompson and defencemen Eddie Shore and Babe Siebert—were placed on the sixth annual Canadian Press all-star National Hockey League team four years ago today, the only time any team's rearguard has received such unanimous acclaim. The same three were renamed two years later but Siebert then with with Montreal Canadiens.

Today, however, a much different picture of the annual Canadian Press N.H.L. All-Star team was announced. The New York Rangers and Boston Bruins placed two each on the first team, with Detroit and Canadiens getting one each and Thompson of the Chicago Blackhawks getting the No. 1 coaching berth. Just how the sports-writers around the N.H.L. circuit could leave Gordie Drillon off either the first or second 1939-40 All-Star teams is puzzling the more rabid hockey fans of the country. After being absent from the Maple Leafs' line-up, due to injuries, for some weeks, Drillon finished a strong fourth in the scoring averages of the N. H. L. The Canadian Press N.H.L. All-Star teams for 1939-40 were released today as follows—

SPORT SPICE—As a final puck gesture of the season, two Industrial League games are on the local sports agenda for this evening at the Hume Arena. . . . In addition they're going to revive the Glen Miller-Wallbridge series Friday night. . . . It seems Skipper Bart Hinchcliffe, of the "Townhallers," is far from satisfied with the result of the rural puck tournament results and wagered his charges could beat Glen Miller. . . Naturally Bart's money didn't go too far afield before it was taken care of and now we've got a grudge game scheduled for tomorow night. . . . The result should be interesting to watch. . . . The O.A.S.A. is proposing to lengthen the pitcher's distance and base lines. Such a move would slow up the game and draw it out to baseball proportions. . . Ralph Hammond, Guelph's lefthanded moundsman now training with the Toronto Leafs Ball Club at Avon Park, Fla. will go to the hilltop in an exhibition game today. . . . Marchildon of Penetang, reported to the Leafs in fine condition, says Manager Tony Lazzeri. . . . Rumours say Leo Dandurand may purchase the Canadiens and if the deal goes through, watch the colorful Flying Frenchmen another year.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, March 21—(AP)—Johnny Paychek is looking worse than terrible in the gym, if that means anything . . . Dick Chapman, the golfing blue blood, is writing a book dealing with the exploits of the 15 best amateurs in the United States. . . . If Herbert Woolf decides to let Lawrin try a comeback, his first start will be made at Churchill Downs where he won the Derby in 1938.

A big to-do was made in the papers when Louis Zamperini, the miler, flew 5,800 miles from Los Angeles to New York and back just to fall down in his race. . . . How about Angelo Puglisi, the boxer, who once travelled all the way from Duluth, Minn., to Australia to be knocked out by the first punch Ron Richards threw to him?

COL. DREW SPEAKS AT BANCROFT

Enthusiastic Meeting Held in Community Hall in Support of Geo. S. White, the National Government Candidate

Bancroft, March 21—An enthusiastic meeting was held in the Community Hall Tuesday night under the auspices of the National Government candidate, Mr. J. L. Churcher, Chairman of the meeting who, after giving a very brief and sound address, called upon Dr. S. S. Lumb to welcome the visiting speakers. Dr. Harold Welsh M.P.P. for East Hastings was the first speaker to be called upon.

Dr. Welsh said that he was proud to be on the National platform this evening to support George S. White, National Government candidate for Hastings-Peterborough and who had fought for the people in last two elections and had done a good job. Dr. Welsh said that the women must be encouraged to vote in this election as they represented fifty-two per cent of the eligible vote in Canada today. Dr. Welsh mentioned the fact that Col. George A. Drew was one of the most outstanding statesmen in the country. Dr. Harold Welsh then had the pleasure of introducing Col. Drew as the main speaker of the evening.

Col. Drew commenced his talk by saying the people in this election had two forms of government to vote for to retain a Democratic form of government. One was for a strict Liberal party government or by a form of government known as a National Government. He said that unity, strength and the security of our people should be exercised in Canada's war efforts. He said that electors have been told that this country is well prepared for war and that no one should shake the confidence of the people of the country by any contradictory political speeches.

Freedom of speech was granted in free countries to discuss affairs and issues by the people while a dictator government did their own choosing and made their own decisions and the people abided by their ruling. A dictator form of government seems to be prevalent in Canada today for first as witness censorship of the radio and press and speech by the Dominion Government and the Provincial Government has banned the showing of the picture "Canada at War." In fact the picture was made possible by the efforts and ideas of one man. Col. Drew said that every Canadian should have had the right to see this picture and form his or her own opinion as to Canada's preparation for war.

Col. Drew said that Canada's coasts were protected by only six destroyers and that Canada would not have been able to send one ship overseas with food or men if Britain hadn't supplied the necessary ships to convoy the supply shipments or detachment of recruits. Citizens have a right to ask the present government what its record has been and what its aims are in regards to war and peace afterwards. It has done nothing in the way of taking care of the unemployment of the country when at this very time the unemployed could well be taken care of in enterprises helpful to a country such as Canada who is in a state of war. Practically any other country finds means to put the idle to work but not so in Canada. The resources in Canada are beyond any other country in the world yet a large number of our men are not able to find work except temporary positions here and there, and some young men have grown up who have not yet had the privilege of having any steady employment. The people have not been prepared to put to work the resources which they are in possession of in Canada today. Unless the present government under the leadership of Mr. King can show that they have achieved the organization to develop the resources then it has no right to come to the people next Tuesday and ask the support of the people. Canada has forest resources greater than any other country in the world, many areas of which have barely been touched.

Col. Drew made mention of the air development in British Columbia. An officers' mess could have been built for a sum in the neighbourhood of $10,000 but no, he said Mr. King purchases from a Liberal in that province a home, which in all probability would have sold for the sum of four or five thousand which would have been an outside figure, for the sum of $94,600.00. That was not all as appropriations were made for shrubs and flowers, fish ponds, etc., to the amount of another approximately six hundred dollars, this latter expenditure was of no material value to an officers' mess.

Col. Drew went on to discuss the manufacture of military machinery which he said should have been manufactured by the government in government-owned factories and not tendered to private companies. When it came to the manufacture of one form of weapon the contract was given to a company in Ottawa who had submitted a price of one cent per article less than that submitted by the Canadian General Electric Company, the most efficient manufacturer of products in Canada. Col. Drew said that upon investigation the company which received the contract had no factory in which to commence manufacture at the time and that the three men comprising the company were insurance agents and that two of the three men were Liberal presidents of local associations and that likely accounted for the awarding of the contract to them.

In mentioning the aircraft industry, Col. Drew said that a company at Malton had been given the job of manufacturing planes and to date had turned out only 28 machines. Two of these were flown to Trenton at one time to be placed in hangars instead of placing them in use for training. The propellers of these machines were then trucked back to Malton to be attached to more machines so that they could be flown to Trenton. All this was caused by the fact that then Canada had only two propellers which could be thus used. Since then plenty of propellers are now on hand but still only twenty of the twenty-eight machines are yet delivered due to an oversight on the King Government in not ordering sufficient engines to complete the planes so we still await the arrival of at least eight engines to complete the order at Malton. The planes used so far in the training of our men have a top speed of 140 miles per hour which care has to be exercised to keep out of the paths of the Trans-Canada Airways for the latter machines have a speed of 100 miles over that of the training class so anyone can see how inadequate even this branch of the air training is when pilots should be piloting planes capable of 400 miles per hour which they will have to do in overseas duty.

Col. Drew ended his address by stating he had thoroughly discussed the issues of this election and trusted that the people would place country ahead of their politics in exercising their vote and vote for a National Government which would put an end to such conditions which now prevail in Canada under the present King administration.

George S. White was the last speaker and his speech dealt with the present conditions of the soldiers. He said that Mr. King made the statement that the soldiers in the First Division were fully equipped but Mr. White pointed out that any soldiers he had contacted were not so equipped as their guns and bayonets were those used by the men of the last war, that their boots were not all new issue as some were half-soled before issue, that the underwear supplied to many were fleecelined instead of being wool, that their socks were donated by the Red Cross, and that many of the overcoats were so old they were moth-eaten and rotten under the arm pits. Mr. White mentioned that if he was elected as the National member for Hastings-Peterborough he would endeavour to rectify the soldiers' conditions and also provide a better mail delivery than this northern section of the county is now enjoying. Mr. White said that opposition speakers had stated many times that Dr. Manion would introduce conscription if the National Government was elected but Mr. White made it clear to his audience that this was not the case and that the National Government was not in favour nor would it ever introduce conscription while it would be in power.

The meeting was brought to a close by a few remarks by the chairman and the program ended with the singing of the National Anthem.

Nation at War Requires National Government Says Speaker at Stokes Rally

Fred H. Gardiner, K.C., of Forest Hill Village, Charges King Government on Attitude Towards Empire Air Training Plan — Refers to War and Post-War Problems — Radio Licence Fees Discussed—George H. Stokes, Conservative Candidate, R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.L.A., and Ex-Mayor G. A. Reid of Belleville Also Speak

Trenton, March 21.—(Special)—Fred H. Gardiner K.C., of Forest Hill Village outlined the National Government policy at a meeting in the interest of George H. Stokes, the Conservative candidate to contest the riding of South Hastings on March 26. Close to 450 residents of the community braved last night's storm to be at the Capitol Theatre to listen to the addresses. Mr. Gardiner in his remarks assured his listeners that if Dr. Manion was returned as leader of the National party Canada would be united to fight a vigorous and earnest war against Hitlerism.

At the same time the speaker told his audience that the National Government would never introduce conscription reminding his listeners that compulsory enlistment in the last war was proven a definite failure. Of the 600,000 Canadian soldiers who gave their services to Canada he said only 10,000 of them were conscripted. Mr. Gardiner promised mothers and fathers that they could rest assured that conscription would not be introduced as long as the National Government was in control of the country. He charged Mr. Lapointe and his lieutenants with attempting to split Canada by using the conscription "bogey" in their campaign in the Province of Quebec. "There is no need to worry about Quebec" he said, "the French Canadian people are sufficiently loyal to realize that Canada must do her duty to defend democratic rights".

Says Manion Opposes R.R. Amalgamation

"Another important plank in the Liberal platform is the railway question Mr. Gardiner said, declaring that Dr. Manion was wholly opposed to an amalgamation even when he acted as Minister of Railways under the Bennett regime. "We are not concerned about the railroads", he said, "what we have to do is to win the war and establish the Canadian soldier during the period of rehabilitation after peace has been restored.

"A nation at war needs a National Government", he added not an administration more interested in party politics than allied war effort.

Must Defeat Nazis

"Wishful and hopeful thinking will not subdue the Germans", he said, "nor are the Nazis likely to revolt until the Allies have defeated them on the field of battle.

"Victory will not come easy", he added, reminding his listeners that the German populace respected Hitler as a national hero in a class with Napoleon.

Explaining the seriousness of the present World War Mr. Gardiner read quotations from a recent speech delivered by the German leader to the Reich, when Hitler declared that England must be annihilated by German military might.

Empire Air Plan

Mr. Gardiner charged the Liberal leader with failure to endorse a cooperative war effort when the British Government proposed to introduce a gigantic Empire Air Training Scheme in 1937. He blamed Mr. King for "selling his country down the river" when he collaborated with the United States instead of recognizing members of the British Air Ministry who planned to unfold an Air Training scheme, which at that time he said would have absorbed every unemployed man in the Dominion of Canada. Mr. King admits that he knew war was inevitable when Chamberlain was at Munich, Mr. Gardiner said. "Why didn't he (Mr. King) prepare for the inevitable?" asked Mr. Gardiner. "Is it true that the Liberal leader had a greater desire to link Canada and the United States with military highways and international canals?"

Value of National Government

Mr. Gardiner told his listeners that a National Government would work hand in glove with the British Government for the duration of the war. Dr. Manion had proposed to send a special minister to Great Britain he said, with a purpose of keeping Canada in constant touch with the fast-moving events which accompany war. A great mistake was made when unemployment insurance was not established for post war days, he said, predicting a fall-off in employment after hostilities cease. The working man is not protected for the future he said and he cannot help but suffer hardships similar to those he endured in the depression years.

In closing his remarks the Mayor of Forest Hill Village promised his listeners that the Manion Government would cancel the radio licence fee terming the tax unnecessary and another method of making the poor man pay for entertainment that advertisers and sponsors should pay for. He recalled having read a report stating that the Canadian Broadcasting Commission showed a $300,000 surplus. "Listeners' money," Mr. Gardiner called it.

George H. Stokes Speaks

In a few brief remarks the candidate George H. Stokes, solicited the support of the audience and promised that he would endeavour to carry out National Government policy if he was returned as the member to represent South Hastings.

R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.L.A., attacked Mr. King for closing parliament and refusing to give the citizens of Canada an account of his government's stewardship. "How can we say we have a responsible government when there is not complete freedom of speech?" asked Mr. Arnott.

Ex-Mayor Reid Cites Case

George Reid, former mayor of Belleville, speaking on George Stokes' behalf, claimed that the Liberal government had humiliated Canadian mothers who had sons fighting overseas. He cited the case of a Belleville widow whose son is in Finland with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Her boy, the only means of support, enlisted with Picton unit early in September. Five months later she received her allowance from the government. Christmas came and this war-mother and her other children would have gone without necessities of life if a number of public-spirited persons hadn't come to their assistance. The allowance cheque finally arrived on January 29th. This is just one instance that described the King government methods and ways of conducting business, Mr. Reid said as he asked the Liberal leader to explain why he was in the United States during the last war while the National Conservative leader and hundreds of thousands of other Canadians were serving in France to save democracy and all that it means to Canadians.

"Canada needs a soldier at the head of the government if we are to aid the Motherland effectively," Mr. Reid added.

Frank Cushing also addressed the gathering and William H. Ireland, ex-M.L.A., was called upon to introduce the guest speaker. Wm. House, president of the Trenton association, acted as chairman.

County Court

Michael Lavalle, Bancroft, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail after pleading guilty to a charge of assaulting and resisting a police officer when the accused appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in today's county police court here.

Lavalle escaped from the custody of Provincial Constable Palmateer at Bancroft in 1938 and was not apprehended until recently, when he returned to his native haunts. Constable Palmateer was investigating the possession of spirits, found on Lavalle, when the latter resisted and escaped.

"You are lucky, the last man to appear in this court on a similar charge was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary," remarked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C. after Lavalle pleaded for leniency by intimating he was desirous of joining the army.

William Larue, 21 of this city, pleaded guilty to charges of obtaining an automobile and $50. by fraud. His Worship was about to sentence the accused, when Mr. Donnan interrupted and asked the court to stay sentence until Larue's record could be placed before the court.

Frank Maracle pleaded guilty to a charge of the illegal possession of liquor, but denied assaulting his wife when he appeared in court. Both cases were enlarged for one week when a point of law was raised between Crown Attorney Donnan and Robt. McCulloch, local barrister, who was defending Maracle. "Mrs. Maracle does not want to testify against her husband now," pointed out the defence counsel.

Several motorists pleaded guilty to charges of speeding and were assessed the conventional fine imposed under the H.T.A. In all cases written pleas of guilty were accepted by the court when accompanied by the cash fines.

FAIR AND COLD WEATHER FOR OVER HOLIDAY

Wednesday's Storm One of Heaviest of Winter—Four to Ten Inches of Snow Fell

MOST ROADS CLEAR

By the Canadian Press

Today is the second day of Spring and winter-weary Ontario either was digging out from under a heavy snowfall or shivering in below-zero weather.

In the southern section of the province clear, sunny weather was general in contrast with yesterday's blizzard that deposited the heaviest snowfall of winter in some sections. Snowplow crews toiled throughout the night and only a few communities remained snowbound this morning.

The weather was decidedly cold throughout Northern Ontario and at White River, one of the coldest spots in Canada during the winter, thermometers plummetted to 27 degrees below zero. The north, however, escaped the heavy snowfall.

Heaviest fall of snow yesterday came between Hamilton and Kingston with the storm passing eastwards to the Maritime Provinces. Observers in Southern Ontario said the outlook was for cold week end weather with clear skies. The snowfall yesterday ranged from four to 10 inches.

Theatregoers Unaware Fire Was in Progress Outside of Building

Engrossed in the excitement of watching screenland fire-fighters and police emergency squads as they displayed their daring and bravery in fighting a mythical fire on the silver screen, afternoon theatregoers in attendance at the Belle Theatre yesterday were quite unaware that at the same time a much more real, if less exciting drama, was being enacted outside the building.

Clouds of black smoke rolling from the electric theatre sign overhanging the sidewalk as the first indication that anything was amiss and when firemen arrived it was discovered that the whole interior of the sign canopy was in flames. Apparently caused by the action of snow and water resulting in a short circuit of the electric wiring, the blaze proved a stubborn one to overcome, but as the hose were brought into play the flames were subdued before they spread to the theatre proper.

Hasty repairs enabled the lights outside the entrance proper and under the sign canopy to be in operation again for the evening performance of the theatre, but the large electrical display was in darkness as the wiring was a complete wreck. Theatregoers only learned of the excitement they missed when they emerged from the theatre at the close of the afternoon's performance, as the management refrained from unnecessarily alarming the audience.

C.P.R. CULVERT IS RE-INFORCED

Preparing for the possibilities of a flood at the mouth of the Moira River following this year's heavy snows, a Canadian Pacific Railway auxiliary crew was seen operating immediately west of the C. P. R. bridge over the Moira River today. A small emergency culvert, beneat hthe tracks and west of the bridge, was being reinforced in preparation for eventualities in case warm rains result in a repetition of 1936, when the Moira River ran rampant causing floods and considerable property damage in Belleville.

CAPONE LEAVES BALTIMORE

Baltimore, March 21 (AP)—Dr. Joseph Moore, physician who has been treating Al Capone, ailing former Chicago gangland over-lord, said today Capone had left Baltimore.

"Alphonse Capone has left Baltimore," Dr. Moore said. "It is understood that he has returned to his home in Florida. He is still ill and will continue under medical care."

Canning Factory on Albion St. Purchased by Canada Packers

Plant Will Go Into Operation This Year for Preserving of Tomato Products

W. J. FORBES, MANAGER

Purchase of the old Belleville Canners canning factory on Albion Street formerly owned and operated by Associated Quality Canners and the Empire Food Corporation, by the Canada Packers Limited was officially announced today, by representatives of the purchasing firm.

The factory will go into operation this year for the preserving of tomato products, and while this is definite, plans for the preserving of other farm produce may go into effect in the near future, it was stated.

It is the policy of the Canada Packers Limited to identify itself with the towns in which its plants operate. As far as possible employment will be given to residents of this city when the plant goes into operation.

Identified with the factory will be one who is exceptionally well qualified to take over executive duties, and who has a wealth of canning factory operation experience behind him. He is Mr. W. J. Forbes, well known Prince Edward County canner, who was identified for several years with the Folkard Canning Company of Picton. Mr. Forbes' knowledge of canning conditions in this and surrounding districts will prove of inestimable value not only to the company and its employees, but to the producers themselves.

Mr. Forbes is a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wallbridge, prominent Huff's Island farmers.

Public Utilities Commission Reports Net Profit of $6,168 For Electric Division for 1939

Rate Reduction Which Went Into Effect in Oct. 1938 Lowers Profits Although Revenue Increased $1,233 —Power Costs Higher

LOSS IN GAS DEPT.

To the users:

I have much pleasure in presenting on behalf of your Commission the operating statements for the year 1939 ending December 31st., 1939, for the Electric, Water and Gas Utilities.

Electric Utility

The Electric department has had a successful year and although the rate reduction which went into effect in October, 1938, was operative for the whole year the revenue increased $1,233.50.

The operating expenses are down $2,172.99, with the exception of power costs which have increased from $128,500.38 to $143,380.57. The increase is due to two causes. First: The power taken has increased from an average load of 5169.9 H.P. in 1938 to an average load of 5514.7 H.P. in 1939. Second: The cost of power has gone up from $24.79 in 1938 to $25.98 in 1939. The increase cost is mainly due to an additional $1.00 per H.P. per year charge for the stabilization of rates fund The aforementioned fund was set up by the Ontario Commission for the purpose of levelling out the cost of power and Dr. Hogg advised that the Ontario Commission was of the opinion that as much as possible should be allocated to the fund at the present time.

The net profit is $6,168.60 as against $17,642.30 in 1938. The equity in the Eastern Ontario system's power plants and transmission lines has increased from $135-803.86 to $153,210.16. The plant is entirely paid for with the exception of $15,787.52 which is owing on the Belleville sub-station. The net assets not including the above mentioned equity have increased $14,-909.05.

During the year, the street lighting on Bridge Street West and Catherine Street was improved as well as additional lights being added in other parts of the city. The revenue increased from $9,607.71 to $10,340.78 and the rebate in 1939 was $2,746.65 as against $3,018.56 in 1938.

The number of consumers has increased by 65 during the year.

During the year many improvements have been made to the electric plant and each year the lines are being rehabilitated to provide for the increased load. A large number of new transformers have been installed and the size of wire increased. The interruptions to service during the year have been a minimum.

Gas Utility

The Gas Department has not experienced a successful year. A surplus of $1,671.74 of revenue over operating expenses has been made but when the interest and debenture debt of $13,506.37 is taken into account, the loss is $11,834.63.

In 1938, the sum of $3,800 was set aside for depreciation but this year it was felt nothing could be set aside.

The revenue dropped $5,148.86 over 1938 but the operating expenses were also down $1,207.35 so that comparative results with 1938 are a net reduction in operating surplus of $3,941.51.

The outstanding debenture debt as of December 31st., 1939, is $175,147.-24. It is being reduced each yem but will not be entirely paid off till April 1st., 1960.

The gas made in 1939 was 25,763,-300 cubic feet which is 2,400,000 cubic feet less than in 1938 althougn there were several large leaks experienced in the early part of 1939.

No expense has been incurred in the betterment of the plant other than what could not be postponed. The retorts are in bad condition which makes for inefficient operation and the time cannot be long postponed when they should be relined.

Water Utility

The operating statement of the Water Works Department shows a healthy condition. After meeting all expenses there was a net surplus of $21,209.49. The City Council was given a grant of $10,440.37. The depreciation account was increased by $6,445.31 and the remainder of $4,323.81 was credited to surplus account.

The revenue increased during the year $1,839.69 while the expenses were down $1,055.53.

The outstanding debentures amount to $117,600. The maturity date of the last issue is February, 1960.

There are 40 more consumers on meters than there were a year ago. All industrial users are on meter and the commercial users are gradually being put on meter.

The water pumped during the year was 781,713,000 gallons which is 351,000 gallons less than in 1938. The average daily consumption was 141 gallons per capita which is very high and indicates that a great many consumers have leaky plumbing or are deliberately allowing the water to waste.

The water purification plant has been kept in good physical condition and some changes made in the method of operation which we feel has improved the quality of the water. The algae condition was very bad during the year but due to the improved condition of the filters the running period was lengthened. It took 37,823,200 gallons to backwash the filters during the year. A 7' wire fence was erected around the plant property and suitable flood lights were installed for protective purposes. At the present time visitors are allowed at the plant only on an order from the office.

The distribution system has been improved during the year but no new mains were installed. Many services have been renewed and changed from iron to copper pipe. All services up to 1" are installed in copper pipe.

In closing, I would point out that the placing of the three utilities under a central authority has been of considerable benefit. The operating expenses have been reduced to a point much lower than could be reached if operated as separated utilities.

The Manager and staff have continued their loyal service in carrying out the policies of the Commission and we desire to express our appreciation for same.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

G. C. Baragar,
Chairman.

Commissioners:
Mr. G. C. Baragar,
Mr. M. P. Duff,
Mayor G. E. Thompson.

Crop Improvement Assoc. of P. E. to Hold Annual Seed Display

The Prince Edward County Crop Improvement Association is holding its first annual Seed Display and Sale in Picton, Saturday, March 23rd, in the Oddfellows Hall.

It is hoped by making this a display, more grain will be offered and the buyer will be given a chance to come in contact with the seller direct and see the quality of grain offered for sale.

All grain is to be either registered or commercial grade which insures good quality seed. It was felt by the Association that they could do much to encourage the use of good seed by holding this display.

An interesting programme is planned for the afternoon. Mr. N. J. Thomas, B.S.A., of the Department of Chemistry, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph is to speak on "Soils and Fertilizers" and Mr. C. Tenant of the Crops Branch on "Field Crops".

In the coming season the Association plans to conduct variety tests in five sections of the county using four varieties of oats. They also plan to seed down a five acre plot using various grass and clover mixtures for a hay and pasture test.

It is felt that through this Association many of these tests may be carried on and help to establish what variety is most suitable for the various districts.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Valley of the Giants"

"Valley of the Giants", produced by Warner Bros. in beautiful technicolor, with Wayne Morris and Claire Trevor heading a brilliant cast, by popular request, is again brought back to Belleville and is now currently playing at the McCarthy theatre.

Based upon the famous Peter B. Kyne novel of the same name, the picture tells a story typical of the valiant fight waged some thirty-odd years ago to prevent the utter despoliation of California's noted redwood forests by ruthlessly selfish lumber interests.

Others in the important cast include Frank McHugh, Alan Hale, Donald Crisp, Charles Bickford, Jack LaRue and El. Brendel, every scene is thrillingly marvelous in the beautiful technicolor process and it certainly will be long years before the screen presents a picture to equal the merit of "Valley of the Giants."

"Two Thoroughbreds"

Those who enjoy good, wholesome screen entertainment packed with plenty of dramatic suspense, comedy and a pleasing romance, will find to their liking R.K.O. Radio's refreshing story of youth, "Two Thoroughbreds" which is now playing in addition to "Valley of the Giants" at the McCarthy theatre.

"Two Thoroughbreds" is a heart-tugging story of two youngsters and a thoroughbred colt and introduces a new juvenile boy and girl to the screen, Jimmy Lydon and Joan Brodel, who will win your heart with their outstanding performances. Others in the major roles of the cast are film favorites and include Arthur Hohl, J. M. Kerrigan, Marjorie Main, Selmer Jackson and Spencer Charters, An amusing and clever Walt Disney cartoon in technicolor also on the program is certain to find much favor with Belleville and vicinity theatregoers, who will take advantage of enjoying this fine screen program at the McCarthy theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Broadway Melody of 1940"

When the two greatest dancers of the contemporary stage and screen get together in a single production, it's news. Such news is verified in "Broadway Melody of 1940," now at the Belle theatre, starring Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell.

Spectacular in all of its departments, these two stars are given a suitable send-off for their first co-starring feature. Nine dances, ranging in type from tap to ballet, six Cole Porter song hits, gigantic sets, a notable cast, Norman Taurog as director, all add up to the prediction that "Broadway Melody of 1940" is due to take its place as the year's most entertaining and eye-filling film.

The story strikes a novel note from the very beginning. Astaire and George Murphy, a dance team temporarily unemployed are working as professional hosts in a ballroom. Through a novel set of circumstances, Murphy is mistaken for Astaire and given a try-out as leading man for the dance darling of Broadway, portrayed by Eleanor Powell. When he wins the assignment things begin to happen, notably among them a badly swelled head which eventually leads to Murphy's downfall and Astaire's triumph.

The cast, in addition to the three dance stars, Astaire, Powell and Murphy, features Frank Morgan, Ian Hunter, Florence Rice and Lynn Carver. Morgan finds new vent for his comedy as the show's author who battles two shortcomings, a bad memory and blondes. Hunter plays the Broadway producer of Powell's musical shows. Florence Rice is the secretary to Morgan who has her hands full untangling his many affairs of the heart.

Rich in production value, with sets topping in size and spectacular qualities those of any previous production, "Broadway Melody of 1940" brings every conceivable type of dancing to the screen. The most pretentious number, which forms the finale, is Cole Porter's "Begin the Beguine." The set, which covers an entire sound stage introduces something new in the form of a sixty-foot mirror which swings to constantly change the background behind the dancers.

In addition to "Begin the Beguine," new Cole Porter tunes are introduced, including "Please Don't Monkey With Broadway," "Between You and Me," "I've Got My Eyes on You," "I Happen to be in Love" and "I Concentrate on You."

HOUSE RECESSES FOR EASTER WEEK

Outspoken Criticism of Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare Heard

London, March, 21—(CP)—Parliament recessed for the Easter holidays today amid reports that Prime Minister Chamberlain will reconstruct his cabinet during the interval before sitting are resumed April 2.

The House of Commons session ended with outspoken criticism of two war cabinet members, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer and Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Privy Seal, voiced by Geoffrey Mander of the Liberal Opposition.

"It is widely felt throughout the country that the chancellor of the exchequor and the Lord Privy Seal are heavy liabilities both at home and abroad," he said.

Speculation outside the House mentioned Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood and Supply Minister Leslie Burgin as ministers likely to be displaced by the Prime Minster in reshaping his cabinet for more vigorous prosecution of war tasks.

SIX MEMBERS OF BOMBER COMMAND ARE DECORATED

London, March 21—(CP)— Decorations were awarded today at a base in eastern England to six members of the bomber command for gallantry during operations over enemy territory last December.

W. J. Jordan, High Comissioner for New Zealand, presented the Distinguished Flying Medal to Corporal C. B. G. Knight, first mebmer of the New Zealand Air Force to be decorated in the war. Distinguished Flying medals were presented to five others by Air Chief Marshal Sir Edgar Ludlow-Hewitt, Commander-in-Chief of the bomber command.

Maundy Money Handed Out by King George

London, Mar. 21 (CP). — King George VI for the first time in his reign personally contributed Maundy Money today to 45 poor men and a like number of women at the ancient annual ceremony at Westminster Abbey. Queen Elizabeth accompanied him.

The sovereign usually is represented by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the only previous personal appearances in recent times were those of George V in 1932 and Edward VIII in 1936.

Church dignitaries accompanied the King to the church where he walked between two lines of recipients. To each he handed a tiny crimson and white leather bag containing 45 pence in specially minted silver, and two, three and fourpenny pieces. The number of recipients and number of pennies given equals the king's age. (He will be 45 next Dec. 14.)

WAR BRIEFS

Paris, March 21—(AP)—Relative quiet on the western front was reported today by military sources which said the only noteworthy action was yesterday's patrol encounter, in which the British killed five Germans.

Rainy weather hindered air forces of both sides, operations being limited to short flights over the lines.

The French communique this morning:

"Nothing to report."

Copenhagen, March 21 —(CP—Havas)—The Hindenburg Dam, linking the Island of Sylt to the German mainland, was badly damaged in the British raids over the German base Tuesday night and Wednesday, according to a dispatch today to the Nationaltidne from Toender, in Danish Slesvig.

The report said the four towers of the dam housing anti-aircraft batteries were gone after the raids.

London, March 21 —(CP) — "There is evidence of large purchases in the United States by Russia of war material, especially copper, and this is receiving the attention of His Majesty's Government," Ronald Cross, Minister of Economic Warfare, told the House of Commons today.

In response to a question, he said Soviet purchases of oil in the United States for the past 12 months were much above those of 1938 but not in excess of imports of some previous years.

London, Mar. 21 (CP). — Home Secretary Sir John Anderson reported today that 74,000 Germans and Austrians, mostly refugees from Nazi rule, had been registered by police in Great Britain and that 1,-959 enemy aliens had been interned. Close watch is being kept on distribution of Communist pamphlets, Sir John added, "and if there is any breach of law, suitable action will be taken."

Rome, Mar. 21 (AP).—The resignation of French Premier Daladier was described by the Bologna newspaper Resto Del Carlino today as a "battle won by Germany". "Daladier is an enemy of Italy, shortsighted and a provocateur," it said. "Daladier is one of those mainly responsible for the war and history will judge him severely."

London, Mar. 21 (CP).—Labor Minister Ernest Brown announced today in the House of Commons that men over 45 would be accepted for munitions making training if physically fit.

Chamberlain Given Audience

London, March 21—(CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain was received in audience by the King at Buckingham Palace today.

The Stirring of Spring

It is going to be a grand old Spring after all, in spite of the fact that Old Man Winter has had a heart like a landlord on rent day, and consistently refuses to give way to the heraldry of birds, bees and other things, including swallows, that go to make the vernal season one of the happiest in the calendar

Ice-locked rivers and lakes, snow-filled woods, and other Wintry evidence, although very much to the fore has dismally failed to keep down the signs that the season of the gamboling lambs, frolicking maidens and moon-eyed swains is not too far away.

Signs Everywhere

They are everywhere, the signs, not the swains. Today, farmers from Huff's Island reported a cacophony of crow-music emanating from tall gaunt trees. Sugarbushes of the district are beginning to resound to the cry of "Sap's runnin'". On Front Street yesterday afternoon a sweet young thing was seen disporting a blob of violets, one-half inch above her right eye. They call 'em chapeaux in France.

By the same token the maidens and swains are casting envious eyes at millinery and clothes shops. The new styles are out and are being displayed in all their fresh glory by the ladies. As for the old boy himself it's a toss-up between the Winter coal-bill and a new topcoat.

Florists' Shops Abloom

The florists' shop windows are beginning to bloom in a riot of color. The annual Spring turning of the young man's fancy will find a tangible outlet here. A lot of old loves are going to be disappointed —and so are some of the new ones, but for all that it will be but a short time before calf-eyed youngsters will be gazing at each other with something like adoration in their eyes until the next fancy comes along.

Meantime, in the house, mother is getting ready for the annual overhauling, and removal of Winter residue. Pop will divide his time between swinging golf-clubs, carpet beating and other things at the Winter 19th. hole, meantime keeping an eye on the new 1940 models.

Junior and Sis, between starry-eyed reminiscences of the latest heart-throb, will dust off tennis racquets and other summer sports equipment. Garden-minded members of the family will consult ornate seed catalogues, while others will dig out the fishing-tackle box and organize for the coming season.

All of which may be a trifle too soon but there is a strong undercurrent of Spring fever in the offing, and all that is necessary is a few days of warm sun and gentle zephyrs to bring the symptoms to a head.

ENEMY AIRCRAFT OVER SHETLANDS

In Fifteen Minutes "Raiders Passed" Signal Given by Watchers

London, March 21—(CP)— The Air Ministry announced that an enemy aircraft appeared over the Shetland Islands, north of Scotland, this afternoon.

A Ministry communique said:—

"Early this afternoon one enemy aircraft appeared over the Shetlands. An air raid warning was sounded and the 'raiders passed' signal was given about 15 minutes later."

Air activity off the south coast of England during the night led to reports today that German planes were approaching.

Watchers on land saw Royal Air Force fighter craft fly out to sea and patrols were active along the coast.

It was reported that a mystery plane, believed to be a German bomber, had been seen to drop white, orange, red and green flares off the southeast coast.

Picton Council Votes S. A. Campaign $1,500

Picton—(Special)—At the County Council session on Wednesday, the sum of $300 was voted for publicity purposes for the county. L. B. Calnan in an address pointed out that the county should receive a larger number of visitors due to the curtailed travelling to Europe and the fact that the exchange was an attraction to visitors from across the line. The sum of $1,500 was voted the Salvation Army Red Shield and Home Service Campaign. This sum is to be taken from the $15,000 which was set aside earlier for war purposes, part of which was given as the county's donation to the Red Cross. Due to the grant to the Salvation Army there will be no general canvass for funds for that purpose as planned.

Police are searching for a man who entered the home of Dr. A. H. Walton and removed a sum of money from Mrs. Walton's purse. The intruder was surprised by Dr. Walton at two o'clock in the morning rummaging around in his dental surgery. When asked what he was doing the man stated he had been sent there by a friend, pretending that he had gotten into the wrong house. Dr. Walton permitted him to leave but later discovered the money had been taken.

A large crowd attended the St. Patrick's dance in the Oddfellows' Hall Tuesday evening.

The Canadian Legion held a bingo for chickens and hams at their hall Wednesday night and a large crowd enjoyed the fun, a number getting prizes which will add to their Easter feast.

An interesting account of his trip to the Old Country was given by Mayor N. McKibbon at Fairmount church on Tuesday evening. A pot-luck supper was served. Mayor McKibbon was in Scotland when war broke out and narrowly missed booking passage on the ill-fated Athenia. He showed many scenes showing interesting places in Scotland and England. Sid Lockyer and a group provided musical numbers.

Trenton Youth Receives 'Wings' In English Camp

Trenton, Ont., March 21— Allan Vandewater, son of Mr. A. Vandewater of this town, and another native son who went to England prior to the war in answer to the urge of the Royal Air Force, proudly stood in line in a training camp in England the other day and had the coveted "wings" proud insignia of an R.A.F. pilot pinned on his breast by a high-ranking Air Force official.

Flying Officer Vandewater, is a bomber-pilot, and will leave in the near future for an active service squadron, somewhere in England or France. He went to England in June of last year where he joined the air service. He rose rapidly and accomplished a life's ambition when the "wings" of a pilot were finally awarded him.

CORRECTION IN GROCERY AD.

An incorrect price appeared in Wednesday's Eaton Groceteria advertisement when Benson's Tomato Juice was advertised as "2 25½ oz. tins for 25c." The correct price should have read "3 23½ oz. tins 25c."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 21 (CP)—Prices tightened generally on Toronto Exchange today in the early hours and by noon all indices were up with the industrials leading and showing an index gain of half a point. Fanny Farmer sold at a new high for the year at 28 and the foods generally were stronger, along with the utilities, banks and building stocks.

Dome, Lake Shore, Wright-Hargreaves and Sigma were strong spots in the gold list while gains of 3 to 5 cents were scattered through the group. Noranda advanced to 72 1-4 for a fractional gain and Nickel, Pend Oreille, Waite-Amulet and Steep Rock were other gainers.

WALL STREET

New York, March 21 — (AP)—While rising tendencies persisted in Aviation Stocks, many leaders took a rest in today's market. Advances, running to a point or so for favorites at the start, were reduced near the fourth hour as volume dwindled appreciably. There also was an assortment of moderate losers in evidence.

Bonds and commodities were a trifle uneven.

Shares up at one time or another—several eventually slipped—including Boering, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Sperry, United Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, Bethlehem Steel, Loft Electric Boat, Kennecott and Du Pont.

Lake Shore Mines, Distillers Seagram and Canadian Pacific on the Canadian list, dipped fractions. Dome Mines came back a bit. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, were easy.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Mar. 21 (CP).—Few cattle sales were made at steady prices on a light run on the Toronto livestock market up to mid-session today. No price was established for hogs. Veal calves were steady. No sales were reported on sheep. The holdover from Wednesday was 200 head of cattle.

It was announced the market would be open Monday.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch included: Cattle 15, calves 10, hogs 100, sheep and lambs 209.

Half a dozen medium to good weighty steers sold at $6.85-$7.25 from $6.15-$7.25 with the odd tops with a few choice at $7.50. Good butcher steers and heifers ranged at $7.50. Cows sold at $5-$5.25 for good butchers with common selling downward to $4. Canners and cutters sold downward to $3.25. A few good stockers sold at $6.25.

Half a dozen medium to good veal calves sold at $10-$11.

A small number of western lambs sold at $11.

Over $1,550 Raised In S. A. Drive for $3,500 for Red Shield

With slightly more than one week of campaigning behind them, local officials of the Salvation Army Red Shield War and Home Service Campaign report that up until March 20th., slightly more than $1,550 of their Belleville and District objective of $3,500 has been subscribed. Last minute figures on the progress of the campaign are not available however, as an up-to-date report of some of the canvassing teams has not been made, but Major Alderman is confident that if subscriptions to date were completely tabulated they would materially swell the above mentioned amount. The donations of persons not already contacted would be much appreciated if the donors would send their contributions directly to campaign offices, further states Mr. Alderman.

It has been suggested by campaign headquarters in Toronto and approved of by officials from outside points that the chances of the national campaign reaching its objective of $1,000,000 would be materially strengthened if employees of industrial concerns would donate one hour's wages per month; for the next eight months. This would inconvenience the individual worker but very little, it is pointed out, but taken collectively would contribute greatly towards reaching the national objective.

Many points have already attained their objective after only slightly more than a week of campaigning, with the city of Peterboro being well in the lead by over-subscribing their objective of $10,000 by more than $1,000 and Major Alderman expresses the hope that the citizens of Belleville will respond accordingly.

Produce Market Remains Quiet

Toronto, March 21—Easier tones were evidenced in all lines traded on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Activity continued at a minimum in butter.

With only a few odd lots of Ontario solids changing hands, prices again tilted lower on the butter market. A good out-of-town demand was reported, however. Prints to the retail trade maintained previous levels.

The egg market faltered as fresh receipts increased without a corresponding increase in demand. There was no important price change and Government-inspected lots of graded eggs remained at the 1-2 cent premium, Grade A-medium and pullets eased 1-2 cent per dozen in the graded section to move at 21c and 20c respectively.

Montreal Produce

STATEMENT GIVEN READ IN COURT

Indian Engineer Stated He Did Not Intend to Kill Sir Michael O'Dwyer

London, March 21 (CP)—A 37-year-old British Indian engineer, Udham Singh, alias Mahomed Singh Azad, was returned to Bow Street Court today for further examination on a charge of murdering Sir Michael O'Dwyer, retired Indian administrator.

Prosecutor Vincent Evans read a statement attributed to the prisoner, as follows:

"I shoot like I think, at the wall. I just shot to make a protest—not to kill. I do not mind what sentence—10, 15 or 20 years or to be hanged. I did my duty."

Udham Singh was arrested March 13 after four pistol shots were fired that night at a meeting of the East India Association where Sir Michael had just finished speaking. Sir Michael was former Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab when April 13, 1919, British troops fired on a mob at Amritsas, killing 400 persons.

Other disjointed statements attributed to Urham Singh said he belonged to no society.

Two men were wounded when O'Dwyer was killed—Sir Louis Dane and Lord Lamington, both former British administrators of Indian provinces.

After testimony by several eye witnesses of the shooting the hearing was adjourned until April 1.

ADMIRALTY DENIES CONVOY LOST

However, it was announced later that 30 men were feared lost from two Danish ships, the 2,109-ton Bothal and the 1,853-ton Viking, sunk off the Northeast coast of Scotland yesterday. The manner of their sinking was not disclosed. A lifeboat landed seven survivors early today.

German Raid Reprisal

D.N.B., German news agency, said nine ships sunk totalled 42,000 tons and two others of 11,000 tons were damaged badly. The agency acknowledged that one German plane had failed to return.

The German raid was in reprisal for the British bombardment of Sylt Island Tuesday night and Wednesday morning—a raid that was itself in reprisal for Saturday's bombing of the British naval base at Scapa Flow.

The Sylt raid, in which British officials said great damage was done to the German seaplane station, was a spring tonic for the spirits of the whole British nation. The fliers themselves expressed relief at being permitted to "cut loose" at last after their long series of pamphlet raids and reconnaissance tours over German soil.

Snowball Starts Rolling

The fiercer fighting of the springtime had been oft-predicted but long-delayed.

Sir Kingsley Wood, Air Secretary, detailed the Sylt exploit happily to the House of Commons yesterday, but did not reply when a Member advised him:—

"Bear in mind that the country sincerely hopes this will be no isolated instance."

"Nevertheless, reports persisted that Germany's submarine nests and shipyards in the land-locked Baltic Sea would be probable objects of attack.

"The snowball begins to roll," commented a newspaper columnist. "It will leave rather a bloody track."

The Baltic is sheltered from the North Sea by Denmark. Reports from Copenhagen said that 10 bombs were dropped on Danish soil during the British raid on Sylt and that the Danish Minister to London would protest.

"Scores of Germany's most valuable airplanes and bombers were destroyed," declared The Daily Herald on the Sylt raid.

Large Number Congregated

"The attack had been delayed so that it should take place when the maximum number of German planes was concentrated on the island. For some time the Allied command had known that the Nazi authorities were feverishly building hangars on Sylt — and storing hundreds of planes there.

"Today a number of those hangars are in ruins. Pilots returning told of wrecked barracks, blazing oil tanks, crippled railways."

The fliers also described a new German defence device—the "flaming onion"—an incendiary anti-aircraft projectile which bursts into fiery fragments in mid-air, like a rocket.

"They look pretty but they are not very effective," they said.

The Germans described the Sylt damage as negligible—destruction of a vacant house and injury of 3 persons. On the political front, parliament is to take an Easter recess tonight. During that interval, many persons believe Prime Minister Chamberlain will reshape his war cabinet in response to widespread demands for a more vigorous policy — similar to the demand which brought a change in the French cabinet.

Sir Kingsley Wood, Leslie Burgin and Lord Hankey, Minister without portfolio, have been mentioned among those who may lose their portfolios.

German Communique

Berlin, March 21—(AP)— The German High Command's communique today was devoted largely to yesterday's raid against a British convoy off Scapa Flow. The communique follows:—

"On the western front, between the Moselle River and the Palatinate Forest, local artillery and reconnaissance activity.

"German fighting planes late yesterday afternoon successfully attacked off Scapa Flow a British convoy heavily protected by cruisers, destroyers and airplanes. Another armed merchant ship was attacked in the English Channel.

"The convoy was dispersed. Nine navy vessels and merchant ships with a total tonnage of roughly 42,000 tons were sunk.

(The Admiralty said three neutral ships were damaged.)

"In addition, two merchant ships with a total tonnage roughly of 11,000 tons were badly hit. One enemy plane was shot down in an air fight. One of our own planes is missing.

"Yesterday forenoon British scouting planes were spotted near the East and North Frisian Islands and repulsed by the German defence.

"The losses of the British air force during its attempted attacks on Sylt Island during the night of March 20 after final investigations rose to three planes."

(The Air Ministry said one British plane was lost.)

U. S. AMBASSADOR PRAISED ON STAND

"If our playboy minister to Canada wants to fight for the British Empire I respectfully suggest that he join the ranks of such distinguished American expatriates as Lady Astor and Kermit Roosevelt, so that he may "carry on" for the Empire.

"We should have the courage to tell Cromwell and his lawfully-wedded fortune, Doris Duke, to get the hell out of this republic."

Under Sweeney's resolution, the House Foreign Affairs Committee would be directed to recommend the recall of Cromwell, if reports of the speech were found to be true. Senator Champ Clark, Missouri Democrat, had previously said that Cromwell should be recalled because of his "outrageous" speech.

Times Not Excited.

New York, Mar. 21 (CP).—The influential New York Times today found itself at a loss to understand why certain members of the United States Congress are "so excited and angry about the Toronto incident."

The newspaper agreed editorially with the critics of James H. R. Chomwell, United States Minister to Canada, that his address in Toronto Tuesday, in which he said all neutral nations are vitally interested in the outcome of the war, was "indiscreet", but it added:

"Mr. Cromwell did not meddle in any way in the affairs of Canada. He did not attempt to commit the United States to any policy. He did not advocate the entrance of this country into the war. The essence of his remarks was that he 'believed the Allies are fighting for the perpetuation of liberty and freedom.'

Most Americans Agree.

"A great majority of the American people agree with him and recognise a difference, highly important from our point of view, between democracy and dictatorship, between defence of national frontiers and aggression running wild."

The New York Daily News demanded that the "puzzling" situation which it said has been created as a result of the minister's speech be "cleared up, swiftly."

The minister said in his speech he could not understand how any intelligent citizen of any neutral country could state with conviction that he had no interest in the outcome of the war and declared: "To me it is only too apparent that the life, the liberty, the livelihood and the very safety of this same neutral citizen may be dependent on the outcome of the present war."

C. M. McEwen Given Command of No. 2 Training Group

Will Have Charge of 17 Schools in Eastern Ont., Quebec and Maritimes

Group Captain, C. M. McEwen, M.C., D.F.C., former popular commanding officer of the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force arrived in Montreal this week where he has taken over command of No. 2 Training Group R.C.A.F. He will have charge of 17 training schools in Eastern Ontario, Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, which have been set up, or are to be set up, under the Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Two of these schools have already been established in Montreal while many others will be established in the course of time throughout the commanders extensive territory.

Starting his military career in the ranks Group Captain McEwen quickly transferred to the Royal Flying Corps overseas and for distinguished service was awarded the Military Cross and the Distinguished Flying Cross. After the war he joined the R.C.A.F.

Girl is Attacked Entering Her Home

Attacked as she was about to enter her Front Street apartment home, Miss Clara Soderberg, 147 Front Street, was struck in the face by an unknown assailant last night After being struck, Miss Soderberg shouted for assistance and her assailant disappeared under the cover of darkness.

The entrance to an apartment occupied by the Soderberg family is at the rear of 147 Front Street. Miss Soderberg walked to the rear of the building and was about to ascend the stairs leading to the family residence upstairs, when a man stepped out from behind the shadows and struck her in the face with his fist. Her cries brought help from her family, but the man had disappeared.

P.C. Ellis investigated and was given a meagre description of the girl's assailant.

YOUTH TRAINING PROGRAM GIVEN BY DEP'T HEAD

F. H. Avery of Department of Labor, Speaker at 'Open Night' at Collegiate

ESSENTIAL TRADES

"Patriotism in its true sense is self-sacrifice. If our young men are willing to shelter us by going to the front, then we, at home must sacrifice something to provide for those youngsters who are serving on the home front," F. H. Avery, Toronto Department of Labor told the "Open House" audience at the Collegiate Institute last night.

In a highly educational address, Mr. Avery outlined the origin, activities and aims of the Dominion-Provincial Youth Training program, and its function in Canada during war time.

With thousands of unemployed young men in the country, yet with a definite shortage of skilled labor apparent the Youth Training plan was originated in 1937, he said. The Federal Government appropriated large sums of money to the provinces on the condition, that the provinces provide dollar for dollar. Most of the provinces spent the entire appropriation, but Ontario spent an amount justified by the opportunities for employment. Men were trained in Ontario and placed in employment, as jobs were found to be available.

Procedure Reversed

The next year the procedure was reversed, Mr. Avery explained. Employers were asked to give young men and women a letter stating they would be employed if trained properly. As a result over 96 percent of the youth trained in this period was given employment. Many phases of industry, mining, lumbering, farming and household science are included in the courses, he said.

If the war lasts seven or eight years as some have predicted, Mr. Avery said, the man-power of the country will be absorbed for military service. Younger men and older men must be trained to fill their positions so that industry can make its contribution to the war effort.

Thousands of young men are being trained at present through the program, he said illustrating his point with a description of the Air Training School at Galt. "Two hundred young men will graduate from that school this month and will eventually find their way as instructors in other places and plants.

Urging young men and women to learn the "dignity of mechanics" because $60 a week is better than a white collar job at $20, Mr. Avery pointed out the importance of this phase of employment. "Trade and Commerce are the backbone of the nation," he said, "especially in wartime." But only will it succeed when industry is willing to cooperate 100 percent with an enterprise that is non-political, has merit, and is endorsed by municipal, private and business organizations throughout the country.

Survey Being Made

A survey is being made of thirty-three educational centres in Ontario which have technical schools and competent instructors, and which in the months of June, July and August would like to donate without cost, the use of facilities and equipment for technical training. If the school instructors could not be engaged, advice of the Boards would be sought as to where competent instructors could be secured. The Department would pay cost of material and instruction. Placement officers would canvass industry to take graduates of the courses.

The scheme of training has been revised, Mr. Avery said, in that no instruction is being given in non-essential trades, only those essential to winning the war.

The picture of the "tragedy of the older man" unemployed because of age, is now changed, the speaker said. "We have come to the cross-roads, and must advocate refresher courses that will bring back the cunning to older yet skilled fingers. Industry today needs the background of experiences that age can give. Then again these men cannot be called for active service, and employers will have a permanent foundation of skilled help."

Reduce Expenditures

The outcome will be, that industry and employers will benefit and unemployed youths and men will again become self-respecting self-reliant citizens. Relief expenditures will be reduced and the morale of the nation raised to former levels.

He urged all to get behind the scheme, for no matter how prosperous Ontario and the Dominion is, if co-operation is given to the program, it will be a better country to live in and incidentally be able to make a better contribution to Empire needs.

OBITUARY

MRS. OLIVER DINGMAN

Madoc—The funeral of the late Mrs. O. Dingman was held on Wednesday afternoon at the family residence. The service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. A. Poulter of Trinity United Church who chose his text from II Timothy 4th chapter 7 and 8 verses. During the service Mrs. Hulin sang "The Old Rugged Cross." Interment took place in the family plot Lakeview cemetery.

The pall bearers were: Messrs. F. Dafoe, R. Bristol, W. McBain, G. West, S. Ashley and R. McCoy.

Relatives attending from a distance were: Mrs. Walter Dingman, Mr. and Mrs. Broughan and children of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

MISS ABIGAIL FRANK

Miss Abigail Frank passed away at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, 10 Geddes Street, on Wednesday evening, March 20th. after a lengthy illness.

The late Miss Frank was born in Madoc, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Frank. For the past thirty-five years she resided in Belleville and was well esteemed. In religion she was a member of Bethel Hall.

Surviving her are two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, Belleville, and Mrs. Caroline Best, Saskatchewan; two brothers, Mr. Michael Frank, Madoc, and Mr. Arthur Frank, Eldorado.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

anti-aircraft shell-fire.

It was the most sustained raid of the war—the sort of thing that citizens of poorly-defended Valencia Barcelona or Bilbao suffered in the Spanish civil war when two totalitarian nations, Germany and Italy, carried out bombing experiments—except of course that the British squadrons didn't strafe civilians.

One thing the raid did not show was how the bombers would fare in combat with numerous fast pursuit and attack planes. The attackers said they saw but one pursuit plane and that the tail-end gunner of one bomber drove it off with a burst of fire. Defenders must choose their weapons—must send up chaser aircraft or use anti-aircraft guns. They cannot do both for fear of knocking down their own machines.

Bombers Used In Relays.

The R.A.F. apparently used about forty bombers and worked in continuous relays, hitting and ducking away. Only one machine was missing when it was all over.

Raids in this war so far have indicated something else—that those who claim bombers unaccompanied by fighter escorts are helpless in the face of counter-attack have been wrong.

German raids on England and Scotland have shown that given the right weather, good visibility and broken clouds, a bomber can frequently release its load and escape into the clouds. There it can be navigated blind, but pursuers cannot catch it because they cannot see it.

Fighter-Bomber Defence.

Few German planes have been downed on land in the United Kingdom, but few have been engaged. Usually their pilots have preferred to run out to sea before a counter-attack reached actual conflict.

The war so far has indicated that with determined crews and right weather a lot of bombers can penetrate defences and a lot reach home again. So far also it has appeared a fighter-plane defence is more effective than fire from the ground.

Exactly how devastating the Hornum raid was has not been shown yet. Publication of photographs taken yesterday after the raid would show it.

CHAPTER X

By Friday, though the disappearance of the blueprints still remained a mystery, the excitement over the occurrence had abated. A cable to Fowler in South America had brought a reply that he had started work on a new set and felt sure he could get these to New York in time for submission.

That evening, Sara set out with Curt in his luxurious, maroon-colored roadster, to drive to Yellow Gables for her week-end visit. It was a lovely, early-summer evening, the air soft and balmy, the blue sky patterned with fleecy clouds.

Sara slid down in the deep-cushioned seat of the roadster, leaned her head back and relaxed. She was on her way! Ahead lay two days of bliss.

She was sorry when Curt spoiled her reverie by bringing up the subject of the blueprints.

"It's too bad it had to happen at just this time," he said. "Dad hasn't been any too well, and he has been worrying, too, about my brother Palmer, who has got himself into a mess. He already had enough troubles without having this blueprint matter come up."

"But it's going to be all right, isn't it?" said Sara.

"Yes. If Fowler keeps his word and gets a duplicate set to use in a hurry, we're no worse off except for a lot of needless expense. But it's troublesome just the same. I won't feel easy until the new blueprints are actually in our hands." He paused, then added, "I simply can't understand what could have happened to the originals! We both remember my putting them in the safe, and I just don't see how they could have got out of it!"

Sara was silent a moment, thinking of Gwendolyn Pickett's unpleasant insinuations.

"Curt . . . I'm afraid Miss Pickett suspects me. You remember how she talked in your father's office the other day and, ever since then, she has been treating me very coolly. I'm so afraid she may influence your father—make him suspicious of me."

"Nonsense! You heard him hush her up the other day. Dad would not think, for a minute, that you would do such a thing!"

"He might — if Miss Pickett harped on it enough. After all, it would be a very plausible explanation. Except for you and your father and Miss Pickett, I'm the only person who has access to that safe—and I used to work for Poulton, Inc!"

"Don't be silly!" Curt said impatiently. "Stop worrying your pretty little head! I'm taking you off on a holiday—and I want you to enjoy it!"

Sara smiled. She needed no coaxing to enjoy it. She meant to cherish every minute of it. She wouldn't even think of her mother's parting words this morning—

"I hope you have a good time dear, but keep your head on your shoulders. It's very nice for you to have this visit with the Carringtons, but it's only a week-end, you know—just a pleasant week-end. Remember that you and Curtis Carrington are really worlds apart."

Sara didn't like to recall this warning. Deep down inside her, she knew what her feeling for Curt was growing to be, and she wanted only to hope and pray that he might reciprocate it.

Yellow Gables fully came up to her expectations. Overlooking the ocean, it was fronted with a velvet sweep of lawn. Spacious, many-winged, Corinthian - pillared, it spoke of comfortable, generous, unhurried living. Tall elms, like slender vases, flanked the veranda. A deep curve of shrubbery outlined the drive.

"How utterly lovely Curt!" Sara exclaimed, as the car rolled to a stop.

"Just tell Dad that," said Curt. "He planned every inch of it, and is prouder of it than of all his tunnels and bridges and aqueducts put together!"

Then, Sara was meeting his family, one by one. How many there were of them! They greeted her with a strange mixture of cordiality and casualness. Apparently, one more person, even a stranger, made little difference in the large household.

Dinner was gay, voluble, noisy. Sara, helped out by Curt's murmured asides, tried to straighten out the various relationships. There was his married sister Jennifer and her husband, Stanley, with their flock of well-mannered, sun-browned small boys. There was a younger brother, Dick and the pretty girl to whom he was engaged. There was a pair of lively, six-year-old twins, children of an older brother, Palmer, who was not there. There was a sister of Mr. Carrington's—Aunt Jess. Finally, of course, there were Mr. Carrington and Curt's lovely, gracious mother.

There was much chatter about a coming golf tournament, a discussion of whether it would rain for Jennifer's charity lawn party on Monday, much talk about horses and dogs. It was all very entertaining to Sara. If, at odd moments, she felt a bit "outside," she tried to conquer the feeling.

Afterwards, Curt took her out to see the horses and dogs. Then, arm in arm, they wandered on into a hedged enclosure surrounding a patterned, formal garden.

"I don't see how you ever tear yourself away from such a marvel of a place!" Sara said. "How can you bear to spend a single hour in the office when you could be out here?"

Curt took her hand in his, and said softly, "The office, these days, holds ample compensations."

Sara's heart skipped a beat, but she tried to change the subject.

"I think—I think your family are grand, Curt. They're such fun! I—I do hope they like me."

"Of course they do. How could they help it? At this very moment my mother is undoubtedly remarking to my father, 'Curtis certainly has an eye for beautiful girls.' "

Sara laughed, and said lightly, "You sound as though you made a practice of presenting beautiful girls to them!"

"Never one so lovely as you, Sara. . . ."

Then, without warning, he gathered her in his arms and kissed her.

"Curt . . . I don't think you ought . . . ."

He released her. "Why not?"

"Because—well, because —"

Before Sara could finish, she saw some one coming swiftly toward them across the lawn. It was Jennifer and, as she reached them she seemed a trifle breathless, as though something had happened to ruffle her usual well-bred calm.

IS OVERJOYED AT RELIEF MOSBY'S TONIC GAVE HIM

Mr. W. S. Hunter was Victim of Stomach Distress — Couldn't Eat or Sleep Right —Bowels Badly Constipated—Felt Worn Out Before He Found This New, Scientific Compound.

People in all parts of Belleville, and this general vicinity are now taking—and praising! — this "New Mixture of Roots and Herbs and

MR. W. S. HUNTER

Other Splendid Medicinal Agents" known as MOSBY'S TONIC, which is now being introduced to the public daily in this city at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street, your Tamblyn dealer. And at the same time, many men and women—some of the Best Known Residents of Ontario and Section—are coming forward daily with Grateful Statements, publicly endorsing Mosby's Tonic in the newspapers. Druggists say they have never before seen any medicine receive so many voluntary endorsements. Among the many well-known people who praise Mosby's Tonic, none is more enthusiastic about this New Medicine than Mr. W. S. Hunter, of 140 Osler St., Toronto, Ont. Mr. Hunter is an Electrician by trade. What he has to say about Mosby's Tonic is Truly Worth Reading. His statement follows:

Stomach Gas Distressing Sharp Back Pains

"For a long time I was a vcitim of Upset Stomach," said Mr. Hunter. "Gas pains followed every meal I ate, and I want to tell you that these pains were certainly distressing. I had no appetite to speak of and always felt more tired in the mornings when I got up than when I went to bed. In fact I couldn't eat or sleep right at all, and felt tired and worn out ALL THE TIME. I had sharp pains in my back and my bowels were so badly constipated that I was always taking laxatives.

"Well, that's the condition I was in and I tried medicine after medicine, but never got any real relief. I read about Mosby's Tonic in the papers and decided I would give it a trial. And I am surely glad I did, for this medicine helped me almost at once. It cleared the gas from my stomach and now I CAN EAT. My meals digest properly and I can sleep fine from the moment I go to bed until I get up next morning. The pains are gone from my back and this medicine has regulated my bowels better than IN YEARS. I can't praise Mosby's Tonic enough after what it did for me and I gladly give you my statement and urge others, who suffer like I did, to get this medicine and take it."

It Helps to Clear Away the Poisonous Wastes

MOSBY'S TONIC helps to clear away poisonous wastes from the system in several ways at once—it helps cleanse bowels, assists Nature to eliminate impurities from kidneys, brings forth gas and bloat from stomach. Many people write us they soon feel different men and women as a result of this cleansing, and invigorating action of Mosby's Tonic. Another thing—due to the immense volume in which it sells, the price of Mosby's Tonic is reasonable. So don't hesitate. Get Mosby tonic TODAY!

MOSBY'S TONIC is sold here in Belleville at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street, your Tamblyn dealer.

MAURETANIA

Sailed Under Clear Skies

Rain, wind and hail swept the Mauretania's decks last night, when she signalled her departure by two sharp blasts of her whistle, but this morning the 81,235-ton Queen Mary sailed under a clear, cloudless sky.

A spring breeze whipped up whitecaps on the bay contrasting to the flashes of lightning and sharp gusts which attended the Mauretania's dramatic night sailing.

Both liners were drab in their camouflage gray, their windows blackened and all signs of identity blotted out.

In a simple dramatic sentence the Marine News ticker told of the Mauretania's departure on her dangerous mission thus:

"8:52 p.m. a British ship, no signals, passing quarantine, bound out."

Here Since Sept. 4.

The Queen Mary had been at her berth here since Sept. 4—the —day after war started. Workmen swarmed over her, blotting out her brilliant plumage with Admiralty Grey.

Where the two vessels were bound and for what puprose the admiralty planned to employ them remained mysteries, although persistent waterfront rumors had it they had been assigned to troopship duty between Australia and the Near East.

Another report was that one or both of the ships were bound for Halifax, with a possible stop at Boston on the way.

A series of strident blasts from the Queen Mary's whistle signalled her departure at 8:20 a.m., 12 hours and 20 minutes after the Mauretania moved out in New York's first Spring storm.

The Queen Mary, like the Mauretania, had been stripped of her rich furnishings and there were reports that cabin partitions had been removed to make "dormitory barracks."

Seamen to augment the skeleton crews arrived Monday on the Antonia and yesterday a large shipment of corned beef was taken aboard.

Staying behind at their New York piers were the giant Queen Elizabeth and Normandie, the world's first and second largest ships.

DALADIER ENTERS REYNAUD CABINET

The outgoing premier, Edouard Daladier, retains the portfolio of War and National Defence which he has held continuously for nearly four years. Lucien Lamourex succeeds Reynaud as Minister of Finance.

Other key ministers of the Daladier cabinet are retained, including Cesar Campinchi as Minister of the Navy, Georges Mandel as Minister of Colonies and Camille Chautemps as Vice-Premier.

Key Ministers Retained

Besides Daladier, Chautemps, Mandel and Campinchi, other holdovers from the Daladier cabinet are Dautry, Queuille, De Monzie, Rio, Champetier de Ribes and Ducos.

Politically, the main weight of the cabinet remains in the hands of the Radical Socialist Party which, together with its senatorial counterpart, the Democratic left, is given nine posts in this provisional list.

The most important change in the composition of the new cabinet as compared with its predecessor is the entry of the Socialists, who were excluded from the Daladier ministry. The other parties represented include all the important moderate groups of the centre and right-centre of the chamber. The cabinet does not include members of Louis Marin's Republican Federation, the extreme right of the chamber.

The Daladier cabinet resigned yesterday following abstention of more than 300 deputies from a confidence vote on the government's conduct of the war. It had been in power for nearly two years.

'Interceptor' Plane Now Made in U. S. Climbs Mile Per Minute

St. Louis, March 21—(AP)— A "deadly" defensive weapon against bombers—an "interceptor" plane which can climb at a rate of more than a mile a minute—is being produced for an undisclosed foreign government at the St. Louis plan of Curtiss-Wright Corporation.

Test flights of the first plane off the production line yesterday showed it was "the fastest climbing type in the United States as well as the fastest climbing plane in the world, to our knowledge," said C. W. France, General Manager of the factory. The plane has a speed well over 300 miles an hour.

"This type of plane is much more effective than anti-aircraft batteries in combatting high-flying enemy bombers because of its mobility and the rapidity with which it may be directed against an attack," France said. "By use of radio communication with other air forces, or the ground, the 'interceptor' becomes an even more deadly weapon of defence."

The plane, with wing span of 35 feet, has a 1,000 - horsepower Wright "Cyclone" engine, turning a three-bladed steel propeller. A single-seater, it is designed to carry four machine guns synchronized to fire through the propeller.

Curtiss-Wright officials declined to give the number of planes in the foreign order.

Raid Carried Out By Small Number Of Bombing Planes

London, March 20—(CP)—Britain's history-making air raid on the German fortified island of Sylt last night and today was said to have been carried out by a comparatively small number of bombers flying in relays over the distraught Nazi defenders.

Thirty of the latest types of Wellington and Whitley bombers were believed to have engaged in the raids the British Press Association reported. There was no official word of the numbers.

A distinctive feature of the attack was that the bombers droned over one or two at a time, "flying at medium altitude," reliable sources said, in a continual stream.

They declared there was only one defending German pursuit plane, "which was beaten off by the rear gunner of the first bomber it attacked."

Hornum, the base attacked, was said to have been well protected with anti-aircraft guns, larger than Britain's 3.7-inch cannon which have an effective range of 25,000 feet, which presumably dictated the one-and-two-at-a-time assault tactics.

The Stars Say

For Friday, March 22

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

OUTSTANDING progress and unusual adventure of a thrilling or even sensational nature may be expected on this day, according to the strong Uranian complexion of the astral influences. There are likely to be sudden, surprising and dramatic events of far-reaching or radical effect on the life and its destiny, probably operating with whirlwind precipitancy. It is possible that the personal, emotional or romantic relationships of life may feel the most throbbing responses to this swift and surprising visitation.

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for a year of thrilling experiences, both in their private and business life. There may be adventure, dramatic and romantic affairs of sudden and surprising force, which may prove revolutionary, devastating and breath-taking. In creative lines there may be much urge to original and extraordinary, perhaps modernistic, expression.

A child born on this day may be talented and creative in unusual or novel lines, with much originality, independence and keen intellectuality.

For Saturday, March 23

A PARTICULARLY lively and exciting day, with many things moving under high pressure, is read from the interesting chain of planetary configurations. While there will be a fine display of initiative, courage and strenuous attack especially in the direction of putting over major propositions or new and highly-constructive programs, in some instances the employment of subtle acumen, strategy or diplomacy might prove quite as effective as sledge hammer blows. A similar condition pervades the private life, where social activities, emotional urge and romance are under high stimuli.

Those whose birthday it is are under strenuous, creative and highly emotional urges during the year, with many things, business and personal, moving swiftly and under high tension. Much is to be gained in launching new projects of major importance, and while pressure, aggressiveness, audacity and ingenuity count for much, in some critical spots sagacity, compromise or policy may prove more lucrative.

A child born on this day may have much ingenuity andl skill, with highly-constructive and practical abilities, bold and resolute.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were walking to school and Shorty Judge said, Hay Benny, did you find out if it would be all right if us fellows gave you a surprise party on your birthday?

Well I'm not sure, because naturelly I'm not suppose to know anything about a surprise party, so I couldn't exactly ask, I said. But I kind of hinted about surprise parties in generel and what would happen if a gang of guys rang our doorbell on my birthday carrying packages and things, and my father claimed the only good place to give a fellow a surprise party is in some other fellow's house, because then he'll never guess what's going on till it's too late, So I don't think he'd be in favor of leaving you in if you tried it at my house. So why dont you have it at one of your houses? You dont have to tell me wich one, so I'll be surprised all right, I said.

Well good night I'd have it at my house, only our radio is out of order and it might not be fixed in time, and even if it is it's always getting out of order again, that's a trouble with our radio, and you have to have music for a party, Puds Simkins said, and Glasses Magee said, We might have it at my house, what day does it come on, Benny?

Sattiday, I said, and Glasses said, Aw heck that's the only day I cant have it, because my father always comes home with a headache every Sattiday because it's the last day of the week and he feels the effects of the whole week's troubles.

And the other fellows gave more bum excuses why they couldn't have it in their houses, the result being they decided to appoint a communitty to see pop and ask him without me being suppose to know anything about it, the committy being Puds and Glasses and Shorty Judge.

GANDHI URGES ALL TO 'TRUST ME'

All-India Nationalist Congress Not Ready for Civil Disobedience Campaign

Ramgarh, India, March 20 — (AP)—Mohondas K. Gandhi closed the 53rd All-India Nationalist Congress today with a plea to sympathizers of the Independece Movement to unite behind his leadership and to prepare for speedup in the freedom campaign.

"Trust me," he appealed.

Gandhi has insisted that civil disobedience to British authorities be delayed until Independence organizations have been disciplined to refrain from violence.

A drenching rain reduced an audience of an expected 100,000 to less than 10,000.

Gandhi said bluntly that the Congress was not yet ready for a civil disobedience campaign, as he virtually repeated his speech of Monday when the Congress rejected Dominion status for India —"or any other status within the Imperial structure."

MOUNT ETNA ACTIVE

Messina, Italy, Mar. 19 (CP-Havas) —Volcanic sand fell in the streets of Taormina and Messina today as Mount Etna showed considerable activity. Muffled rumblings were heard for about ten minutes before a geyser of sand was ejected from the crater and damaged the cupola of the seismological observatory on the volcano's slopes.

Romance in Hardware

By ALICE DUANE

When Peggy Prince was 15 she began selling kitchen utensils at Warner and Prince's after supper on Saturday nights. Peggy's father was half owner of the store, which did more business than any three other hardware stores in the county put together. Peggy had asked to work there to start with for the sake of earning a little extra spending money. At the time Harold Warner, just through high school, had just joined his father in the business.

Peggy had not tried to hide her admiration for the tall, fine-looking son of her father's partner. One evening after closing hours Mr. Prince had suggested driving Mr. Warner home in his car, and Harold had taken the hint and had asked permission to drive Peggy home in his father's car. So the custom had begun—for four years now Harold had driven Peggy home—and, incidentally, Peggy and Harold had become engaged.

Now Peggy was 20 and Harold was 23 and they were driving home after a Saturday evening that had been especially prosperous to the business which they would some day inherit.

"Of course, you like hardware," Peggy taunted Harold. "It's your whole life—hardware."

"I don't see why you jump at conclusions," said Harold. Then, after a pause, "As a matter of fact, I loath it—I loath hardware."

"You'd say anything to avoid an argument," said Peggy. "You haven't any idea of the way I feel about it. Sometimes I could just cut loose and run away. Lead my own life—instead of the life that has been cut out for me—"

Peggy paused and looked at Harold, but Harold, to her surprise, had not turned to look at her.

"I'd like to cut loose myself," he said at length. "I don't particularly hanker to lead a life that has been cut out for me either."

Peggy took a long breath, stretched out her arms, and then felt at a loss to know precisely what to say. "There are ever so many things I might do," she said. "I'd go somewhere where I'd have an opportunity. I'd want to be free; really to live, to think. Have you any brilliant idea for your own future—if you gave up hardware?"

"I have," said Harold simply.

"Well, if that's the way you feel, we might as well call our engagement off."

Peggy was decidedly annoyed, and this moment of her release from Harold didn't give her the sense of profound relief that she had anticipated.

"It's O.K. with me," said Harold, "if that's the way you feel about it."

And so within a few days Peggy and Harold told their fathers of their broken engagement, and started forth to seek their fortunes apart from hardware.

Three months later Mr. Prince appeared at the usual time on Saturday night and with him came Peggy, looking a little thinner—a little less buoyant than usual. Mr. Warner, who was measuring chicken wire at the time, looked up in surprise.

"Peggy back for good," said Mr. Prince, gleefully. "Says she'll come back to sell kitchen things Saturdays, the same as usual, if we want her."

As soon as Mr. Warner was at liberty he went to Peggy and, laying a rough hand gently on her shoulder, said: "I'm glad you're back, my girl—only perhaps you'd rather leave early. Harold's coming back on the eight-thirty from the East. He's coming right here to the store. He didn't make out quite so well as he expected. Went up thinking he could beat those wolves of Wall street at their own game. Funny you two never ran into each other—just by chance."

"New York's too big for that," said Peggy demurely. "Besides, Wall street is miles from Fifty-eight street."

Mr. Warner was laughing to himself. "So you'll stay and meet him here?" he asked. "Well, maybe you can get together again—you two. Though I hope you won't do it just to please your father and me."

Harold had come in the store by the back way, had hung up his hat on the accustomed peg before anyone knew he had entered the store.

"Need a hand to help with the chicken wire?" he called out to Mr. Prince, by way of attracting attention to his presence.

Mr. Prince turned red, rubbed his eyes, shook hands and stammered his welcome, with something like tears in his beaming eyes. Then he thought of Peggy, looked about the store to see whether she had seen Harold, and felt much embarrassed. Peggy stepped lightly to his side. "Harold's back," said her father in a whisper. "Maybe you'd better go home."

"Hello, Harold," Peggy said, lightly. Their eyes met and they seemed to exchange an understanding message. "No, I didn't tell them," she said aloud. "I lost my nerve, after all. I thought maybe father'd notice that my trunk tag said Mrs. Harold Warner, but he didn't. We'll tell your father and mine together after we close store." And Peggy went off gleefully to a customer who wanted to buy a new saucepan.

Power Speaks in Quebec

Postmaster General Power spoke in Quebec, assuring electors of his native province that a recent tour of western Canada had convinced him that Quebec had the admiration and support of its fellow-Canadians in contrast to the mistrust and discord of 1914.

The Liberal Government has succeeded through "prudent methods and above all, exclusively by voluntary enlistment to enroll the same number of soldiers as was raised in 1914 with all the noises of bands and a series of parades," Mr. Power said.

"Those who wish to go and those who are fit to go, will go to the war," Mr. Power said, adding that the King Government, "assures the Canadian public that in this war, no one will be enlisted for the pleasure of the thing."

At Kingston Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, charged that an "unwritten agreement" exists for manufacture of 25-pounder guns in Canada for the British war office and challenged Defence Minister Rogers to outline the terms before voting takes place next Tuesday.

No Accounting Made

"Since parliament has been dissolved and since there has been no accounting to parliament, there should be an accounting to the public, and I challenge Mr. Rogers to disclose to the Canadian people the nature of the representations made by officials of the Department of National Defence to the British War Office in regard to the production of 25-pounder guns in this country," he said.

"No contract has been announced but I do hope that Mr. Rogers will not add to his other misstatements by denying that a very definite understanding now exists about a very profitable contract which he has been unwilling to disclose to the Canadian public."

No Longer a Problem

Mr. Rogers was quoted as saying "The problem of equipping our soldiers is no longer a problem."

"If that is so, what arrangements have been made for rifles, heavy machine guns, infantry motors, anti-tank rifles, signal pistols, field, medium and heavy artillery weapons, anti-aircraft guns, tanks, armored cars and armored scout carriers, sound ranging and directional devices for anti-aircraft control?"

At Gananoque Defence Minister Rogers said that any government called upon to adapt itself to wartime problems would encounter difficulties.

"Has any peace-loving country ever built up a war-time organization while peace yet remained?" he asked.

Tweed Hockey Team Wins Two Games

Tweed, March 21 (Special) Tweed Intermediates and Madoc played a home-and-home series on Friday night in Madoc and on Monday night in the local Arena to settle the question of the respective merits of the two teams. Both games were featured by large scores with Tweed winning both engagements. In the opener the score was 10 to 7, while in the second encounter it was 11 to 7.

In the game here on Monday night Wagar netted the puck three times, with Elsbury and Arber each getting two markers. Single goals were scored by Courneyea, Woodcock, Tummon and Long.

Tweed Couple Will Celebrate Diamond Anniversary

Tweed, March 21 (Special)—Mr. and Mrs. William H. Craig will celebrate their Diamond Wedding Anniversary at their home on Colborne Street on Saturday, March 30th, when they will hold a reception between the hours of three to five in the afternoon, and seven-thirty to nine in the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Craig were married on March 31st. 1880.

Special joint services are being held in the Protestant churches in Tweed during this week with good crowds in attendance. On Monday evening in the Salvation Army hall, Rev. H. L. Morrison, B.A., pastor of Tweed United Church gave the address. On Tuesday the service was held in the Presbyterian Church with Rev. A. E. Pepper, rector of St. James' Anglican Church presiding. Capt. Bonar of the Salvation Army gave the address.

Once again Tweed and Sulphide have established for themselves an enviable record for generosity on this occasion in connection with the Salvation Army War Service Campaign. Some months ago an appeal was made for contributions to Red Cross. The contributions in cash and pledges from Tweed and Sulphide were nearly $2300 with Tweed contributing approximately $1650.

In this new campaign an objective of $1000 was set for the entire district which includes in addition to Tweed and Sulphide, Madoc, Marmora, Stirling and Bancroft as well as all the rural areas. To date Tweed and Sulphide alone have raised nearly $900, giving a total of more than $3200 raised for War Work from a population of about 1650, or an average of $2.00 for every man, woman and child. No complete report has been received from the other areas to be canvassed but should they have the success that has attended the efforts of the local canvassers the original objective of $1000 should be more than doubled.

Miami Woman Hopes to Become Mother of Quints

Miami, Fla., March 21—(AP)—Enriched by an agreement that provides funds and medical care, Mrs. Katherine Callahan, who hopes to become a mother of quintuplets, rested today in a hospital suite far more luxurious than her one-room $2.50 a week apartment.

But she was not a willing patient. Her physician, Dr. Arthur W. Wood, who earlier confirmed that X-ray photographs apparently showed five distinct heads of unborn babies, had to persuade the mother that a period of rest was necessary.

"I'm not sick," she said, and demanded to be permitted to join her husband, Emory, 30-year-old furniture factory woodworker who earns $15 weekly.

Under Contract to Paper

Today the Miami Herald, whose owner, John S. Knight, placed the Callahans under contract for exclusive publication rights of photographs and news, planned to lease a new home for them where nursing and medical attention would be constantly available.

The Herald's agreement provided the prospective mother with an undisclosed sum of money, the services of Dr. Wood and specialists if the physician desires to call them, and all hospital expenses, including nurses, as well as income from news and pictures.

Normally, the babies would be born May 20. Medical men pointed out, however, that multiple births usually are premature. The mother, a small, brown-haired, blue-eyed woman, has gained 20 pounds in recent months. She weighs 128 now but her condition was declared to be excellent by Dr. Wood.

The husband's father, Thomas C. Callahan, of Thomasville, Ga., was a twin, but no other multiple births have been recorded in the family.

TRAFFIC LIGHT AT AIRPORT STATION

Installed for the protection of Air Force Employees, the traffic signal lights at the R.C.A.F. crossing over Highway No. 2 east of Trenton, is in perfect working order today, Motorcycle Patrolman J. Caldwell reported. Motorists must obey these traf. lights in the same manner they would at a city intersection. The new traffic lights at the Airport are so arranged that through traffic on Highway No. 2 is assured unless members of the R.C.A.F. are desirous of crossing the highway in a unit or with motorized units. A nine second caution light will be operated against highway travel before the red stop light appears, Constable Caldwell explained.

Germany Trying to Make Denmark Divert Her Dairy Products to German Markets — Denmark Has Lost Four Per Cent. of Merchant Fleet

SUBS CONGREGATE

German Commander Tells Norwegian Fishing Captain, "German Subs Will Soon be as Common as Fishing Boats" — British Sub Sinks German Merchant Ship

London, Mar. 23 (CP).—New German submarine onslaughts in vital shipping lanes brought increased British efforts today to persuade neutral vessels to join convoys and thus keep on the job of furnishing the food that means as much as munitions in Britain's war effort.

Typical of British reaction to the announcement that seven neutral ships have been sunk by submarines in two days was a News Chronicle editorial that "neutrals know where safety lies . . . (in British convoys) . . . but they are slow to apply their knowledge."

The fact six of the latest victims were Danish was seen by some circles as an indication Germany is trying to make Denmark divert her dairy products to German markets. Danish butter, bacon and eggs help supply the breakfast table of British soldier and civilian alike.

SHIPS SUNK DURING WEEK

(By The Canadian Press)

Denmark was the chief victim of German sea raiders in the week ending March 22. The small Scandinavian agricultural country, a big exporter of bacon and dairy products to the British market, lost six ships of a total tonnage of 11,441 tons within 48 hours.

Britain lost but two vessels of a total of 1,806 tons, but announced that three further ships, because they are long overdue, must be considered lost. This brought the nation's losses announced during the week to a total of 8,834 tons.

Germany lost a ship of 4,947 tons which was torpedoed by a British submarine off Denmark. It was the first time a German vessel had been sunk by a British submarine since the war began.

The week's losses, as compiled by The Canadian Press:

Nationality	No. of Ships	Tonnage
Danish	6	11,441
British	5	8,834
Greek	2	7,641
German	1	4,947
Italian	1	4,853

Why The Weather?

y the weather r

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Rain is heavy! The process of raining or snowing transfers an immense amount of weight of water from the atmosphere to the earth's surface. It was calculated that over an area of only 10,000 square miles in India seven billion tons of water fell in one shower, or an average of 10 inches. Rain is falling somewhere all the time, and at the average rate of about sixteen million tons every second. This rainfall is, of course, very unevenly distributed. It is very small in the polar regions and over deserts at any time, and very large in parts of the tropics. This immense transfer of water from clouds to earth is offset by the more gentle process of evaporation.

MISSIONARIES NOT ATTACKED

No Mention Made in Cable Received From China by Missionary Board

Toronto, March 23 —(CP)—No mention of an alleged attack on two Canadian missionaries and a British Vice-Consul was made in a cable received today by the Foreign Mission Board of the United Church of Canada from Rev. G. K. King, of New Brunswick, now in Peiping, China.

The cable said that Mr. King in company with Dr. Rev. R. Gordon Struthers and D. J. B. Robey, British Vice-Consul in Peiping, went to Changtah, Honan Province, last Tuesday to investigate robbery from and fires in church institutions there. The cable said that a mob of Chinese staged anti-British demonstrations but made no mention of any violence.

News reports from Peiping claimed that the missionaries and the vice-consul were having dinner with a Japanese official when a Chinese mob broke down a hotel partition and beat Mr. Robey and Mr. King with bamboo poles. Japanese police later dispersed the crowd. The reports said the British embassy had protested to the Japanese embassy.

Dr. Struthers is chairman of the United Church Mission Council for the Honan Mission and returned to China last fall to negotiate in the matter of placement of missionaries who had been driven from Honan. A brother, Ernest, also a missionary, is in another part of China.

Mr. King, a native of New Brunswick, is secretary-treasurer of the mission council.

ABERHART GOV'T EDGES INTO LEAD IN ALBERTA VOTE

Only 27 Seats Out of 57 Decided With Social Credit Holding Seventeen

SOLON DEFEATED

Provincial Treasurer Loses but Five Other Cabinet Ministers Already Elected

Edmonton, March 23—(CP)—The Social Credit Government supporters of Premier William Aberhart edged into the lead in the Alberta election today as the complicated counting of ballots progressed under the Province's single vote system for rural ridings and proportional representation for the cities.

Only 27 seats out of 57 were decided early today, showing 17 Social Credit candidates elected and 10 independents, the latter a coalition of Conservatives, Liberals and Unity candidates. In 30 al constituencies the results are still in doubt and will be for some time yet, as the ballot boxes move slowly over snow-packed roads towards the returning officers.

In those constituencies that are still in doubt the Social Crediters have a lead in 19 seats, Independents in 10 and Labor in one.

"CANNON GUNS" ON R.A.F. PLANES

These Guns Match Ones Mounted by German Aircraft

London, March 23—(AP)—Planes of the Royal Air Force have been equipped with "cannon guns" to match the ordnance mounted by German aircraft, Captain Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air, told the House of Commons Thursday.

Captain Balfour said that Tuesday's air raid on the German base at Sylt "proves that the lion has teeth as well as wings." He went on to say:

"German planes had no advantage over ours by possessing cannon guns. Not only are our cannon guns in the full swing of production, but our fighters equipped with them have already contributed to the destruction of some enemy machines."

MOTHER BEATS 2 SONS TO DEATH

Selka, Ala., March 23 (AP) — Her two young sons beaten to death, Mrs. Cecil Friday was under hospital treatment today by authorities who quoted her as saying she killed them because "they were to be taken from me" and then swallowed poison.

Police Chief H. L. Dickerson quoted Dr. S. O. Moseley as saying the 39-year-old mother, apparently mentally ill, told him she fatally beat her sons—Richard, 10, and Eugene, 14—and took two poison tablets yesterday.

PREMIER TELEKY ARRIVES IN ROME

Hungarian Leader Will Hold Conferences With Il Duce and Count Ciano

Rome, Mar. 23 (AP).—Hungarian Premier Count Pal Teleky arrived in Rome today for conferences with Premier Mussolini and Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano.

Political observers said Teleky's visit might play an important part in the plans of the Rome-Berlin axis during the next few weeks.

The authoritative Fascist editor Virginio Gayda said in Il Giornale d'Italia last night that Italian policy is still directed at preserving peace in the Balkans.

Speaking of Premier Teleki's coming conversations here with Premier Mussolini and Count Ciano, Gayda said Italy's Balkan attitude had not changed since Teleky and Ciano met at Venice last January.

"Nonetheless," he said, "the Rome conversations will represent a new step in the development of a policy of collaboration between the two friendly states.

"Italo-German friendship is directed against nobody; on the contrary, it tends only to establish a broad collaboration in the Danubian and southeastern Europe zone. Italian policy continues to have as its purpose the encouragement of increasingly cordial relations between the states in that zone, and to preserve peace there."

SECOND WARTIME ELECTION IS NOW NEARING FINISH

Political Leaders Prepare Final Appeals for Support of the People

6,600,000 CAN VOTE

Ottawa, March 23 (CP)—Canada's second wartime Dominion election campaign neared its finish today as political workers prepared final appeals for support of the people who go to the polls Tuesday.

Good Friday brought a tapering off in activity but tonight and Monday will see mass meetings in every large centre as the seven-week camaign draws to an end.

Prime Minister King makes another appeal here tonight and Monday night he will hold his traditional election-eve mass meeting in the capital.

Conservative Leader Manion speaks in Fort William tonight to those he is asking to send him to Parliament as they did in every Federal election from 1917 to 1930. He will return to Ottawa Tuesday morning to cast his own vote.

Of the 672 candidates nominated for 245 seats in the Commons only the Liberals and Conservatives have sufficient nominees for a majority.

Liberals Nominate 240

Liberals nominated 240 while four Liberal-Progressives received the endorsation of the administration. No government candidate was placed in Comox-Alberni on Vancouver Island.

Conservatives nominated 213 but they submerged the old party tag and ran as candidates supporting the National Government proposed by Dr. Manion the day after parliament was dissolved.

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation has 96 in the field and would not have a majority if every candidate was elected.

Social Credit, with 15 seats in the last house, also submerged the party tag for Federal purposes and adopted the New Democracy of Hon. W. D. Herridge. They have 28 candidates.

The remaining 91 candidates include many from the old parties now running as Independents, followers of groups such as United Reform, Unity, National Unity, Anti-Conscription, Labor and Communist.

6,600,000 Can Vote

Nearly 6,600,000 civilians are on the voters' list and it is estimated probably 75 per cent. will vote. In the 1935 election, 4,452,675 ballots were cast.

Parliament has a statutory life of five years, and six months thereafter is allowed if necessary, to complete an election.

The Liberal administration could have carried on until early next years. But with both Liberals and Conservatives combining in the Ontario Legislature to criticize the government's war effort and similar criticism coming from Dr.

Rich Youths Born With Two Strikes On Them in the Working World

New Orleans, March 23—(AP)—Rich youths are born with two strikes on them in the working world, says a psychologist who found that poor boys stick to a job better.

Dr. Lawrence Whisler suggested before the Southern Psychological Association that it may be about time to begin slightly ignoring the younger generation.

Pampered children, said Dr. Whisler, who tested freshmen at Louisville University, seem to "lack a mission in life" with tendencies to avoid work and "just dream" of fame and fortune.

He suggested that perhaps "the current emphasis on care and protection of children should be balanced with an emphasis on the art of science of ignoring children."

A boy's ability to finish a job he started, Dr. Whisler found, would be aided greatly if he had more than three brothers or sisters, lived in a crowded apartment and if:—

His father not only did not own the family home but possessed only an old automobile or none at all, made less than 1,500 a year, didn't take the family on vacations, had no servants and wasn't any better off financially since the boy was born.

The psychologist declared that "where there are many children each receives less attention from his parents and is more on his own."

WAR BRIEFS

Copenhagen, March 23—(AP)—The Danish Government today instructed its Ministers in both Berlin and London to ask for an opportunity to discuss how to diminish the consequences to Denmark of the present sea warfare.

Denmark lost six merchant ships on Thursday and Friday alone.

Helsinki, March 23 —(AP) — Field Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, leader of the Finnish armies in the recent war with Russia, was decorated yesterday with the highest military honor of the nation—the diamond-studded Liberty Cross. He is the first ever to receive this decoration.

Hong Kong, March 23—(AP) — A firing squad today executed seven ring leaders of a mutiny at the Shumchun Chinese military prison last night. Guards killed three and wounded many others when 200 prisoners attempted a jail break after hearing the Japanese had returned to the Chinese area near the Hong Kong border which they left after a brief occupation last fall.

The men originally were imprisoned for conniving with the Japanese.

FRANCE ADDS NEW PURSUIT PLANE TO AIR FORCE

Extremely Easy to Manoeuvre and is Speedy and Powerfully Armed

PATROLS ACTIVE

Paris, March 23—(CP—Havas)—Reports of increased air force activity due to improved weather coincided today with an announcement that France is putting a new type of pursuit plane into service.

Designed for quick mass production, the new plane is extremely easy to manoeuvre and is speedy and powerfully armed. It replaces the "Morane 406", which scored numerous successes in the past six months.

Although the usual pursuit planes have gone up during the past 24 hours to protect reconnaissance flights, no air combat was reported. Observation and photographing flights were numerous on both sides.

French planes carried out distance reconnaissance flights in addition to some immediately behind the Westwall. The Germans flew over the Alsace and sent reconnaissance planes over Northern France.

On land, the front between the Rhine and the Moselle Rivers remained virtually unchanged. Patrol activity was about normal in all sectors, with no particular incidents except in the Blies region, where French advance posts repulsed German patrols which had come too near.

"Activity of patrols east of the Saar" River was reported in this morning's communique from the French high command.

BELLEVILLE MAN HURT AT STRATFORD

Stratford, Ont., March 23 —(CP)—Joseph Hagerman of Belleville suffered three fractured ribs last night when his car collided in a snowstorm with another automobile driven by John O'Hanlon, Chatham. O'Hanlon was cut about the face. Both men were treated at the scene of the accident, on the highway at nearby Conroy.

TWENTY-TWO KILLED

Mexico City, Mar. 23 (AP).—Press dispatches from Vera Cruz today reported 22 persons killed in a cemetery shooting affray following a labor dispute at a sugar mill. They said eleven mourners at a funeral were killed by machine-gun fire in a cemetery near the village of Cuatolapan, Vera Cruz State, and that the survivors killed eleven attackers.

"PATCHWORK JOB"

Chief Criticism Comes From Rightists That Government Leans to Left

Paris, March 23—(CP-Havas)—France's new inner "war cabinet" met today with the French land and naval commanders-in-chief beginning its task of fighting the "total war" to final victory.

General Gamelin, Allied commander-in-chief, and Admiral Jean Darlan, French naval commanders, sat in at the first meeting of the nine-man war committee.

Cabinet members attending were Premier Paul Reynaud, who presided, Vice-Premier Camille Chautemps, War Minister, Edouard Daladier, Navy Minister, Cesar Campinchi, Air Minister Laurent Eynac, Blockade Minister Georges Monnet, Finance Minister, Lucien Lamoureux, Colonial Minister, Georges Mandel and Armament Minister Raoul Dautry.

At first the war committee was planned to consist of eight men, but it was learned today that Blockade Minister Monnet, who is one of the three Socialists in the cabinet, also will attend the thrice-weekly consultations.

RUSSIANS OCCUPY IMPORTANT TOWN

Sortavala on North Shore of Lake Ladoga Granted Russia by Finland

Moscow, March 23—(AP)—Russian dispatches today told of the occupation of Sortavala, important town on the north shore of Lake Ladoga, in the progressive assimilation of territory granted Soviet Russia by Finland.

The army newspaper Red Star said: "New troops are entering the town with tanks and trucks," and reported Kakisalmi also had been taken over.

At the same time interest was focussed on the economic consequences of the peace with Finland. The newspaper Gudob said the peace "anticipates conclusion of a trade agreement which will place a firm foundation for developed economic relations between the two countries.

The Soviet Union may export food to Finland, it said, while Finland may export timber, newsprint and light machinery. Trade also will be increased with Sweden, the newspaper added.

The mission which brought Finland's ratification of the Peace Treaty was reported unofficially to be remaining in Moscow presumably discussing trade agreement problems and other issues. Head of the mission is Dr. Juho Paasikivi.

ROBBERS ESCAPE

Windsor, Ont., March 23—(CP)—Expert jewelry thieves last night ransacked the store of Grayson Credit Jewelers, on Ottawa street, and escaped with approximately $2,000 worth of merchandise.

Action Results From Expansion of United States Navy

Foreign Minister States Situation Between Countries Had Reached Deadlock but Negotiations Were Continuing

"NOTHING TO FEAR"

Situation Caused by Japan's Conquest and Control in China Against Features of Which U.S. Has Registered Disapproval

Tokyo, Mar. 23 (AP). — Premier Mitsumasa Yonai and Navy Minister Zengo Yoshida assured parliament today that the Japanese navy "is ready to meet any situation" resulting from the current expansion of the United States navy.

Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita declared he did not believe the situation between the two powers had reached a deadlock and said negotiations on pending issues were continuing although he was unable to disclose their nature.

"The government has tried but has not succeeded in bringing the American government and people to full recognition of the new situation," the foreign minister said.

He was understood to refer to the situation created by Japan's program of conquest and control in China, against features of which the United States has registered disapproval.

A member's question on the American naval program evoked this reply from Admiral Yonai: "The navy is ready to meet any situation. There is nothing to fear from the standpoint of national defence."

He agreed with an interpellator that it would be "dangerous" for Japan to depend heavily on any one country for war materials and said economic arrangements were being made with this in mind.

Japan hitherto has bought most of her imported cotton, oil, metals and other materials from the United States. Since the United States terminated the Trade Treaty with Japan Jan. 26 the Japanese have made efforts to decrease their dependence on American sources.

FORMER OFFICER HELD AT LINDSAY

Charged With False Pretences and Remanded Till Next Friday

Lindsay, Ont., March 23—(CP)—George M. Barr, 30, of London, who told police he was formerly an officer in the Ordinance Corps at London, being discharged in February, was arrested here Thursday on a charge of false pretences and was remanded until next Friday, when he appeared today before Magistrate E. A. Gee. Accused appeared in the court room in part of his officer's uniform; the tunic and cap being held by police.

New U. S. Aircraft Engine Produces A Horsepower Per Pound in Weight

New York, March 23—(AP)—Development of the world's most efficient aircraft engine, which produces a horsepower for approximately every pound of its weight, was announced today by the Wright Aeronautical Corp., of Paterson, N.J., one of the United States' pioneer airplane motor manufacturers.

Just licensed by the United States government, the engine is rated at 1,200 horsepower for take-off.

The significance of the announcement lies in the fact that engineers the world over have been striving for years to fashion motors of extremely light weight for both commercial and military use.

Each time a bombing plane leaves on a mission in Europe, its pilots must estimate its flying time in terms of weight, gasoline consumption, distance to the objective and bomb load.

Arthur Nutt of the Wright organization, said the rating of the new engine is 100 horsepower more than is developed by any other United States-manufactured air cooled engine of nine-cylinder construction. The efficiency of the engine was disclosed by the fact that Europe has no air-cooled motor of equal horsepower, and no other American-made aircraft engine can compare with it for horsepower-per-pound.

The new engine, with cylinders finished to an accuracy of two-millionths of an inch, has been installed in a number of military planes. The first commercial application will be in a fleet of 21-passenger transports now being built for a mid-western airline.

COLD WEATHER ACROSS CANADA FOR EASTER DAY

Fur Coats and Overshoes Indicated as Proper Easter Garb

Those annual parades of Easter finery will be held tomorrow in decidedly cold weather throughout Canada. In most sections fur coats and overshoes were indicated as proper Easter garb — at least for warmth.

From coast to coast today, Christmas-like weather prevailed. Temperatures ranged from a 35-below at White River, Ont., to around 40 above on the Pacific Coast. Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and Northern Ontario all reported subzero or near zero temperatures.

In Ontario and Quebec, hundreds of ski enthusiasts prepared for a week-end of the sport. Generally throughout Southern Ontario highways were open after a week of plentiful snowfalls and high winds but many country roads remained blocked. Hundreds of Good Friday travellers, throughout Ontario, were either snowbound or forced to turn back as wind-driven snow filled the roads.

Ontario temperatures ranged from 15 below to 15 above and some districts reported the worst Good Friday snowstorm in history. Ten inches of snow fell in parts of Eastern Ontario. A bright sun shone and continued cold weather was forecast for the week-end.

Many Accidents Reported

Many accidents throughout the Dominion, including at least one fatal one, were blamed on blizzards. At Hamilton, Mrs. Mary J. Dawdy, 80, of that city, died in hospital today of injuries suffered yesterday when an automobile in which she was riding collided with another during a snowstorm.

Quebec reported prospects were that Laurentian skiing would enjoy one of its best week-ends of the season. Extra trains were required to carry the sports enthusiasts to the mountains.

MOTOR CAR BREAKS HYDRO POLE AT BASE

After ploughing through a snow drift and skidding on the icy surface of highway No. 2 near the Point Anne lane yesterday, a motor car driven by James M. Aikenhead, Dixie, Ont., crashed into a ditch and struck a hydro pole, snapping the pole off at the base. Neither Mr. Aikenhead nor any of the passengers sustained injuries, although the vehicle was badly wrecked during the impact. Mr Aikenhead and his family were enroute to Montreal for the holiday week end.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated and later revealed that the Easter holiday traffic was exceedingly light on Good Friday, while the highways were choked with drifting snow following yesterday morning's blinding blizzard. Nicer weather has been predicted for the week end, however.

CHIMNEY FIRE ONLY RUN FOR BRIGADE

A chimney and stove-pipe fire at 254 Coleman Street, yesterday afternoon caused the firemen their only run over the holiday, but the trouble was quickly overcome with no damage resulting, according to fire officials this morning.

Elzevir Twp. Farmer Found Dead at Barn

John Carroll, 74, Succumbs to Heart Attack

Tweed, Ont. (Special)—Believed at first to have succumbed as the result of a kick by a horse, the body of John Carroll, seventy-four-year-old resident of Elzevir Township was found lying near his barn on Friday by a member of his family.

Subsequent medical investigation however, by Coroner Dr. M. G. Dales of this village, revealed that the dead man had been the victim of a heart attack. No signs of injury or other marks were found on the body. Coroner Dales decided no inquest would be held following his investigation in which he was assisted by Chief of Police Clare Hayes.

The deceased leaves a widow and several children.

Driver Pinned Between Building And Motor Car

While cranking his automobile, as the vehicle was in gear, George Seames, Sr., 61 Foster Ave., sustained a fractured leg and suffered severe internal injuries as the vehicle leaped forward and crashed into the south store front of Haines Shoe Store, Front St., yesterday afternoon, pinning Mr. Seames between the car bumper and the store front. It took the efforts of several passersby to extricate the injured man. The entire store front of the Haines Shoe House was damaged, both front and side windows being completely shattered.

Mr. Seames had parked his automobile on the west side of the street while making a nearby purchase. Upon his return Mr. Seames turned on the ighition of his car and stepped between the front bumper and the radiator in order to crank the engine, owing to a run-down battery. Unaware the car was in gear, Mr. Seames commenced the operations of cranking when suddenly the engine started and darted ahead, giving the owner no chance to release himself. As the motor car leaped over the curb and sidewalk crashing into the store front, Mr. Seames was pinned between the vehicle and store, where he sustained his injuries. Fortunately Dr. G. E. Kennedy was passing at the time and administered first aid before the injured man was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital by ambulance.

The traffic congestion following the accident was so heavy that it took the united efforts of Sergeant Arthur Harman and P. C. Taylor to relieve the situation.

Ki-Y Loop Winners Presented With Crests

Winding up the 1939-40 hockey season in an appropriate manner, the players of the first and second teams in both the Midget and Bantam Ki-Y hockey league were tendered an informal banquet with presentation of prizes at the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday evening, March 21st.

First place winners in each section were awarded individual crests and hockey sticks were presented to the second place winners. The manager of each team acknowledged the presentation with a short speech and the boys topped off the evening with liberal servings of ice cream, cake and sandwiches.

The Supermen won top honors in the Midget section for boys 14 years and under, and the following boys were presented with crests: Manager Fred Keegan, Walt Wardhaugh, Bill McIntyre, Ken Campbell, Tom Belnap, Douglas Coleman, Raymond Hannah, Douglas Turner.

The Thunderbolts copped second honors in the Midget class with the following boys being given hockey sticks: Manager, Allan Green, Bruce Bishop, Gordon Lummiss, Howard Truesdale, Billy Greatrix, Stan Wiggins, Tom Woodley, Ted McCormick, Douglas Mason, Don Pomeroy, Ron Doolittle.

In the Bantam league for boys 11 years and under, the "Our Gang" pucksters finished on the top rung with crests being awarded to the following players: Ronald Raymer, Gordon Watkin, John McCreary, Bill Hurst, Bob Strachan, Ted Thrasher, Ken Woodley, Bruce Diamond, Bill Rawson and Bill McCormick.

St. Mikes, second place winners, were awarded hockey sticks: Bernard Meagher, John Whalen, Ted Boyle, Larry Meagher, Joe Galbraith, John Briand, Douglas Bone, Harry O'Brien, Boyd Upper.

COLD WEATHER WILL LIKELY MAR EASTER PARADE

Probs Indicate There Will be Cold Winds and Sunny Skies

MUCH DISAPPOINTMENT

Put back those smart little blobs of flowers and veils you call hats in the boxes, gals, and drape those snappy new Spring ensembles and gaily colored coats back on the hangers, for there "just ain't" going to be an Easter parade tomorrow, if the weather man has anything to do with it.

For, according to him, the thermometer will be hovering around the zero mark and while Old Sol will try valiantly to shine it is extremely doubtful if his efforts will be of sufficient power to remove the frosty smile from the smart fellow who handles the weather reins. And to top it all, there is a strong possibility that a young blizzard will sweep in from the northwest during the later hours of the afternoon that will put a pretty tough unwelcome snow icing on top of the Easter Sunday weather cake

Sweet young things gazing with longing looks at the new Easter duds in the privacy of their boudoirs before tripping down to the office this morning, glanced with something akin to horror and disgust at windows heavily coated with frost.

Outside the mercury played about the three below zero mark and downstairs Pop played with the coal shovel between cusswords.

"Talk about sap runnin'" snorted one disgruntled householder, "the only saps that are runnin' are guys like me, runnin' up and down stairs, and between times down to the coal dealer. Spring may not be so far behind, but if it don't get a move on, when it does come it will have summer and fall draped about its shoulders."

Proprietors of millinery and ladies-wear shops likewise gnashed their figurative teeth as weather, more reminiscent of January, than late March ushered in the day when the gals who have put off their Easter shopping until the last minute, parade through shops and stores making last minute selections.

Gents' furnishing shops dragged out stocks of Winter overcoats, heavy underwear and mittens and winter whatnots in disgust, while a wag gaily saluted a Front Street pal with "Merry Christmas."

Winter Duds Needed

As far as the Easter parade is concerned, no doubt some of the girls will take a chance and appear in all their finery and furbelows in spite of what the weather-bloke says, but in the main, heavy socks and skates will take the place of open-work shoes, skisuits will replace jacquettes, and in some places snowshoes may be worn instead of pumps.

However, Pop will have the laugh on the family, at least the first one. The ole breadwinner will drag out his red flannels, light his pipe, stoke the furnace and conduct his Easter parade through the newspapers and magazines, unless Ma drags him out in the country to a chicken dinner with the rural relatives.

Which may sound a bit disheartening to the youth and beauty of the district, but they may take some consolation in the fact that it can't be too long before the crocuses are blooming, the bees are buzzing, and the robins in morning song; and after all those new duds will not lose any of their glamour through a further sojourn in the privacy of boudoirs and clothes closets.

Snow Filled-Roads Cut Market Attendance

Snow-choked roads and sub-zero temperatures combined today in a successful effort to establish a record for the smallest pre-Easter city market seen here in years. Midweek storms that effectively filled the sideroads and concession lines of surrounding districts from which the majority of the vendors come, prevented produce from making its appearance on the market. A March sun failed to temper cold winds that swept around the market building and the result was a noticeable decline in Saturday morning shoppers.

Prices, however, showed little or no change from the quotations of a week ago with the exception of eggs which noted a slight increase in price, due, no doubt, to the expected demand at this season.

Extra quality Grade "A" selects were offered at 27c and 28c the dozen, a three-cent rise over prices of last week. Ordinary Grade 'A' eggs sold at 25c the dozen, with mediums offered at 23c. Butter prices were steady at 30c for one pound rolls and 55c for two-pound rolls.

The chicken offering was the lightest seen in weeks of ordinary markets and possibly a record for pre-holiday markets. Broilers were priced between 90c and $1.10 the pair and were quickly disposed of as stocks of other kinds of chicken failed to materialize.

A few June and July birds brought from $1.10 to $1.15 each, while what few fowl were offered went quickly at from 75c.

Vegetable stocks in common with other produce were commensurately scarce, but prices remained unchanged. Potatoes were offered at $1. the bag for 75 pounds, with turnips, beets and carrots moving slowly at 80c the bushel.

Northern Spy apples and other Winter varieties sold at from $1.25 the hamper lot. A few mudcats and pike were offered at 15c and 10c the pound respectively.

POLICE COURT

The pre-Easter city police court, held today before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., saw a large number of inebriates appear before the court, the result of doubtless having celebrated the holiday festive season by imbibing too freely. Six inebriates paraded before the bench and pleaded guilty to drunkenness. In every instance the accused were unable to meet the assessed costs and will spend the Easter season in the common jail.

James McGarry, transient, appeared on a charge of vagrancy. "He had been drinking and was annoying Front St. storekeepers when arrested," revealed Chief Kidd.

"I'm like hundreds of others who can't get employment," pleaded McGarry, who was remanded until Tuesday.

Suspended Sentence

Mrs. May French, Marmora, pleaded guilty to three charges of shoplifting and was given a six months' suspended sentence after Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K. C., spoke on the accused woman's behalf. All goods taken were recovered and returned to the respective owners.

Henry Sharkey, Sulphide, was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, in Tweed police court held on Thursday. Sharkey was arrested last week by Constable Wm. Beatty, of the R.C.M.P. and charged with being found in the possession of a still, suitable for the manufacture of illicit liquor. Following the conviction the still and copper worm were confiscated and destroyed.

Two air rifles were confiscated by city police yesterday after boys had discharged the guns within the city limits resulting in a window in a private home being broken.

Cory Holds Meeting At Point Anne

Point Anne, Mar. 23 (Special).—A meeting was held in the Parish Hall on Thursday evening in the interests of Mr. Harry Cory. Mr. Tommy Mason acted as chairman. Mr. Walter Turner, Mr. Mason and Mr. McGaughy all spoke in the interests of Mr. Cory and all were unanimous in their opinion that the King government would be returned and Mr. Cory would be the representative for South Hastings. The candidate then spoke and said he had no excuses to offer for his appearance on the platform and would represent all the people regardless of party or creed if he is elected on March 26. He also proclaimed himself as the working man's friend. He agreed with the former speakers in the prediction of his election on March 26 to represent South Hastings.

HEARING AID SYSTEM TO BE DEDICATED SUNDAY

At Bridge Street United Church on Easter Day the installation of the most modern vacuum tube-type hearing aid system, supplied by the Acousticon Dictograph Co. of Canada Ltd., will be dedicated in grateful and affectionate memory of the late Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Smith.

The dedication will take place at the morning service. The system will help those members of the congregation who are hard of hearing.

Foxboro

Foxboro — Mr. and Mrs. Erle Denyes and Garnet of Plainfield were Sunday guests at Mr. J. G. Sills'.

Mrs. Harold Stewart and Carol and Miss Bernice Dainard of Belleville spent the week with their parents in Hastings.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed.--Montgomery have arrived into their new home, formerly owned by the late Mrs. Embury.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Grey and son of Belleville were Saturday guests at Mr. Harry Scott's.

Miss Maude Burke of Belleville was a week end guest of Miss Marion Daniels.

The Misses Annabel and Helen Hammann of the North West were Monday dinner hour guests at Mr. J. G. Sills.

Some members of W. A. under group G met at the home of Miss E. Gowsell on Tuesday afternoon.

Rev. Walter Link of Saskatchewan was a tea hour guest recently at the home of his aunt, Mrs. J. G. Sills.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Hodgen and Betty spent Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Gibson Hodgen at the General Hospital, Belleville.

Dr. P. V. and Mrs. Helliwell and family motored to Toronto on Sunday and attended Metropolitan Church in the evening.

Large congregations were present on the Foxboro charge of the United Church on Sunday, March 17, to greet the Rev. Herbert W. Piercy of Niagara Falls, dramatist but who prefers to describe himself as an interpreter of literature.

On Sunday morning at Marsh Hill he gave a dramatic Bible lesson entitled "The Two Debtors" and preached D. L. Moody's famous sermon on the text "What think ye of Christ?"

In the afternoon at Halloway he presented in a most impressive way, Christ's appearance to Thomas, the unbelieving disciple, after the resurrection and as a sermon gave "The Lost Word" by Van Dyke. Many of those who heard him during the day came again in the evening to Foxboro. This congregation will never forget Mr. Piercy's rendering of "Elijah and the Prophets of Baal". His sermon was entitled "Father", a modern parable based on the Parable of the Prodigal Son and given first by a famous French pastor during the World War. This sermon was heard by a Canadian soldier in Paris who took it down in short-hand, later translated it and brought it back to Canada and presented it to Mr. Piercy with the intention that it be preached wherever possible.

On Monday night Mr. Piercy gave a dramatic recital to a large audience composed almost entirely of people who had heard him on Sunday. His main theme was "Keeping Up With Lizzie," based on the story with this title by Irving Bacheller. It is a wonderful and worthy interpretation of village and rural life in North America as it was perhaps thirty years ago but also modern enough to commend and enhance rural life today. It is replete with wholesome philosophy and hilarious fun and human interest. Besides this Mrs. C. C. and Miss Helen Davis gave a piano duet, Mr. Jim Ketcheson a saxophone solo and a sextette of girls gave two vocal numbers. As a special tribute to these Mr. Piercy gave "When Rubenstein Played the Piano." Wherever this artist appears this number should be 'by special request'.

Mr. Piercy is a powerful interpreter of Bible stories and equally so of English literature and the Board of Stewards of Foxboro Charge is to be congratulated on making it possible for so many to be entertained in this worthy way.

Rev. H. W. Piercy of Niagara Falls was entertained at the Parsonage by Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Cook over the week end.

Rev. W. J. Scott M. A., B. D., S. T. M., of the United Church, Stirling, preached at Foxboro United Church, Tuesday, March 19 in a series of Passion Week Services.

Rev. J. F. Lane of Frankford was special speaker in Passion Week Services in Foxboro United Church on Wednesday night.

Everyone was pleased to have Mr. S. C. Gay at S. S. on Sunday after being absent owing to illness.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg — Several ladies of the local Women's Missionary Society were in Belleville on Wednesday and Thursday of last week attending the annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Belleville Presbyterial which was held at Holloway Street United Church. Mrs. Harold Morton, the local president, was the delegate.

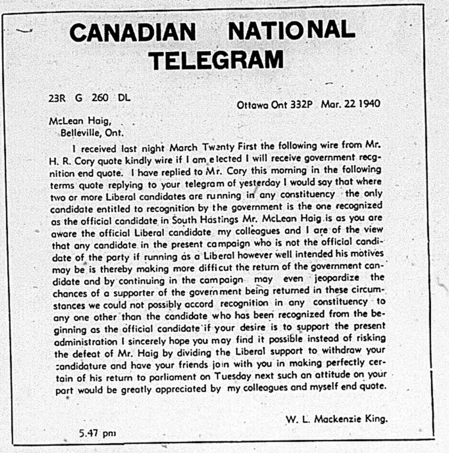
Mr. George Carter of Weyburne, Sask., and Mr. Charles Carter of Wellington were guests on Thursday of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carter and also called on Mr. and Mrs. Clare Carter.

Mr. Jack Mitchell left for his home at Grenville, Sask., last week after spending the winter months in the village with Mr. A. A. Richardson, who has recently opened a grist mill and flour and feed shop. Mrs. Douglas Richardson accompanied Mr. Mitchell, after spending a few days with his father, Mr. A. A. Richardson.

Mr. Ernest Coulter's house, which is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John C. Morton caught fire on Wednesday evening, when sparks from the burning chimney caught in the roof. Neighbors were called and the fire soon was under rontrol.

The village awakened on Friday to find trees, roofs and fences laden with snow. The farmers, who have hay and wood to haul are taking advantage of the late sleighing.

United Effort To Elect The Government Candidate McLean Haig



CANADIAN NATIONAL TELEGRAM

Ottawa Ont 332P Mar. 22 1940

McLean Haig,
Belleville, Ont.

I received last night March Twenty First the following wire from Mr. H. R. Cory quote kindly wire if I am elected I will receive government recgnition end quote. I have replied to Mr. Cory this morning in the following terms quote replying to your telegram of yesterday I would say that where two or more Liberal candidates are running in any constituency the only candidate entitled to recognition by the government is the one recognized as the official candidate in South Hastings Mr. McLean Haig is as you are aware the official Liberal candidate my colleagues and I are of the view that any candidate in the present campaign who is not the official candidate of the party if running as a Liberal however well intended his motives may be is thereby making more difficut the return of the government candidate and by continuing in the campaign may even jeopardize the chances of a supporter of the government being returned in these circumstances we could not possibly accord recognition in any constituency to any one other than the candidate who has been recognized from the beginning as the official candidate if your desire is to support the present administration I sincerely hope you may find it possible instead of risking the defeat of Mr. Haig by dividing the Liberal support to withdraw your candidature and have your friends join with you in making perfectly certain of his return to parliament on Tuesday next such an attitude on your part would be greatly appreciated by my colleagues and myself end quote.

EASTERTIDE IN HUMAN HEART AND IN NATURE

Once again Easter comes with its message of an eternity of life. It is the herald of spring in human hearts. As nature gives signs of coming spring and the new growth in the seasons ahead, so Easter is the hope and the fulfilment of the aspirations of man.

Easter in the Christian calendar follows immediately after the gloom and tragedy of Good Friday. Easter is joy and happiness of the most exalted type.

Easter for the individual Christian provides the answer to the problems of human life, it stresses the continuity of life here and the life beyond. It enriches life on earth because it reveals human life as the foundation which is necessary for that flowering of life in the great Eastertide beyond. Life viewed as a sequence of events here would seem a baffling enigma without an answer. that Easter gives.

This season throws into the highest light the importance of a noble earthly life as exemplified in the life of Christ.

Easter time is associated with the coming of spring. Man grows tired of the season of winter and yearns for spring. He associates the riches of life with the riches of the reviving life in nature. The land that has been locked in the frost and covered with ice and snow, the trees that give no sign of life except the sure signs of expanding buds, await the unlocking chains of winter under the growing strength of the sun. The coming of spring promises growth, color, sound, and scent. Winter has its pleasures and enjoyments but also its burdens. It lacks all of the associations of the growing season. It is bleak and bare, it is scentless and silent except for the roar of wind and the incessant pit-pat of hail or driven snow, but Easter season gives the promise of the expansive days of spring.

The coming season suggests expansiveness of the human spirit and soul beyond life's bars. As growth in nature with all its manifestations follows the coming of spring, so the full development of life is found to extend beyond the merely natural phenomena of life.

Yet as the winter is a preparation for the spring, when nature rests from her labors, and when snow protects the seeds, so human life on earth has its preparation. It demands that every man, woman and child do his or her best because life here which is the prelude to the life elysian is not only individual but a corporate life which is profoundly influenced by the attitude of the individual to society in regard to the real values in life.

With spring and Easter the human heart rejoices, it feels the spirit of expansiveness, it expresses itself in flowers, in a season of rejoicing in festal services in churches. All life feels the new urge.

NAZI IDEALS 'THOSE OF ATTILA THE HUN'

The Right Honorable Oliver Stanley the other day delivered a blow at German Nazi ideals, when he called them "the ideals of Attila the Hun."

Attila left his name to the world as that of one of the most cruel of conquerors. He and his brother Bleda ruled over a great part of Northern Asia and Europe and threatened the Eastern Empire. After the murder of his brother Attila overran Thrace, Macedon and Illyria, and then turned his attention to the West. His army met the allied armies of the Roman Emperor and of the Visigothic king, Theodoric and he was defeated in the bloody battle of Chalons. In 452 he entered Italy but was prevented from attacking Rome by the Pope of that time. Attila died two years later as he was leading a campaign against Italy.

The name of Attila has lingered but the name of his people has been ever since his day associated with severity and cruelty.

The name was applied to the Germans in the last war and has often been used in the present war against the Nazi Germans. It is a very striking epithet and carries all the implication that the words "cruelty" and "ruthlessness" bear.

When Mr. Stanley says that Britain and France are fighting the ideals of Attila the Hun, he expresses the idea of the ruthlessness of the Nazis towards modern civilization and of their absolute disregard of the principles of international law and the rights of small nations. Attila trampled upon races as the Nazis have done but like Attila and the Huns, the Nazis have run up against the concerted ideals of civilization, two great nations of democracy allied for the purpose of saving modern civilization from the ruthless hand of the Nazi government. As Attila met defeat at Chalons and as his empire founded on force and conquest disappeared rapidly after his death, so the Nazis will meet their defeat in a great modern battle of Chalons which will free civilization of the blighting influence of Nazism.

The people of present-day Hungary are in no way associated by descent or otherwise with Attila's hordes of Huns, for the Hungarians are nearly all of Maygar race.

But the epithet applied to the Germans in the Great War of 1914-1918 sticks to the Nazis.

NAZIS' FANATICAL HATRED PROOF OF SENSE OF FRUSTRATION

Fanatical hatred such as is shown by Adolf Hitler and his Nazis against Great Britain is a proof of their realization that Great Britain is a united and a determined foe that stands in the way of their capture of the spoils of a world they would destroy for Nazi gain. Fanaticism and hatred, temper and spleen indicate the sense of frustration that the Fuehrer and his men must feel at the solidarity of the British Empire.

The Nazis are maddened as Britain and her great Ally, the French people, stand as the united force which forever bars the insane Nazi program of world enslavement. Hitler has tried in vain to drive a wedge between the great Allies. France knows Hitler's ambitious plans. She has placed the greatest army the western world has seen into the defences along her border and her fleet and all her resources stand with Britain's in every point to end Hitlerism and ideals of domination by Nazis.

A WHITE EASTER

A white Easter this year is the consequence of the early date and the snowstorms which on Tuesday and Wednesday laid a fairly heavy blanket of winter's covering over the land, lawn and highway.

Quite often as Christmas approaches there is doubt until the last few days as to whether that season is to be a white or a green observance, but there is no doubt in regard to Easter 1940.

Churchill Shows How It's Spoken

London—(CP)—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, is giving Britain's common man courage to talk "plain English". The common man is tired of those tongue-twisting names of towns and generals in Germany and France, Finland and China in the current wars.

The First Lord has set his own style. Without a tremor, Churchill refers to Hitler and the "Nazies." The ordinary man has been struggling with "Nahtsees" and wondering whether he has said it right. Churchill also has shown he can say "Graf Spee" as it is spelt instead of the German "Grahf Shpay." And he gets away with "Bewnes Airs" and "Monty Video."

British broadcasting Corporation announcers saw the trend of opinions in complaints about their correct but unintelligible pronunciation of names in the Spanish war. They compromised, and foreign names they say now are meant to be intelligible to the British public while not departing too much from the native pronunciation.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The Royal Navy has been known for years as the "silent service" but the most silent branch of this silent service is the submarine division. Unlike the Germans the British talk little of their submarines although they have lots of them. It is only when a British submarine performs some exploit that the public becomes aware of their existence.

Yesterday the Admiralty brought the undersea travellers and fighters of the Royal Navy to notice by announcing the torpedoing of a German steamship in the Kattegat, entrance to the Baltic Sea.

In conformity with the requirements of international law and the standing instructions of the Royal Navy the Heddernheim was duly warned and all members of the crew were assured of rescue before the fatal torpedo was fired. This procedure contrasts sharply with the German method of torpedoing British and neutral ships alike without notice and without regard for the lives of passengers and crew.

Nothing was revealed of the Heddernheim's cargo but it is known that German freighters carrying home Swedish iron ore from northern Norwegian ports pass into the Baltic.

If the Heddernheim was one of these ships the incident may indicate the blockade is being drawn tighter in order to shut off this traffic. It is also known that a few vessels from trans-Atlantic ports slip through the blockade, cross the North Sea and get into the Kattegat. Sumbarine action at the entrance to the narrow strait might be a means of picking up the few which get through the lines further out.

Quebec Women First in Empire To Enjoy Vote

By R. K. TAYLOR

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, March 23—(CP)—Women of Quebec await the next development in the vexed question of whether or not they should get the vote in provincial elections.

Like women of other provinces they already have the vote in Dominion Elections on the same basis as men.

Though Quebec women now have no vote in provincial contests it is a fact of history that women of this province were the first in the British Empire to vote in general elections. That was between 1809 and 1834. In the latter year the Assembly of Lower Canada put a stop to woman suffrage, passing an Act limiting the voting privilege to men.

Following Confederation in 1867, Alberta women were the first of their sex in Canada to vote. This was in the provincial election of June 7, 1917. Then other Canadian provinces, one after another — except Quebec—granted the ballot to women in provincial elections. The franchise was first extended to women generally in Dominion campaigns in the general election of 1921.

For the last 20 years Quebec women who wanted to exercise the franchise in provincial elections have fought for it in a campaign that has ranged from muddy Quebec fair grounds to fashionable drawing rooms and from the Quebec Legislature to Buckingham Palace.

They believed it within reach when it was announced in the Speech from the Throne at the opening of the present session of the legislature that a bill would be introduced to that effect.

Church Opposition

However, on March 2, Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve listed in an official communique four reasons why he is "not in favor" of woman suffrage.

The communique said His Eminence believed he was expressing in the document "the common feeling of the bishops of the province."

The reasons given were:

1. Because it goes against unity and hierarchy of families.
2. Because its exercise exposes the woman to all the passions and adventures of electoralism.
3. Because, in fact, it appears to us that the very great majority of the women of the province do not desire it.
4. Because social reforms, economic reforms, hygienic reforms, etc., which are advanced to commend the right of woman suffrage, can be obtained just as well through the influence of women's organizations on the edge of politics.

Speculation on the effect of this statement was instant. In the legislature, on March 5, Opposition Leader Duplessis asked what the government would do with respect to the forecast legislation.

Premier Godbout replied:

"I do not know exactly when the bill will be submitted to the House or in what form it will appear, but I can tell my honorable friend that in the present case, as in other legislation, we will not exploit elevated sentiments in this province for the benefit of petty politics, and, strange as it may seem to him, there are still some people, who, once they have given their word, keep it."

If the bill is introduced and passes the Assembly, where many rural members have been traditionally opposed to such a measure, it will still have to pass the Legislative Council of Quebec's bicameral legislature.

Even before the Cardinal's statement, there was some feminine opposition to the projected legislation. Farm women's societies have announced they don't want the vote and even "abhor" the idea.

The statement by the spiritual leader of Quebec's Roman Catholics added a new factor in the drama of the years that has produced already comedy and near-tragedy, sorrow and joy.

Here are scenes from the panorama of events.

Historic Precedent

The year is 1809 and the place is the province of Lower Canada. Men are flocking to the polls for the election of members to the Lower Assembly. Women appear and signify their intention of voting.

Amazed returning officers hurriedly scan the Constitutional Act of 1791 under which the vote was granted to persons owning a specified amount of property. Nothing in the act bans voting by women providing they own this property.

A fine-looking woman, trim and erect, appears before the returning officer and shows her property qualifications. The returning officer asks how she will vote.

"I will vote for Louis-Joseph Papineau, not because he is my son but because he is an honest and loyal subject," she replies.

Suffrage Campaign

It's opening day of a fair in a Quebec city in 1926. Rain is falling and mud puddles are growing deeper around a group of women at the fair grounds entrance. An official has refused them permission to distribute woman suffrage literature.

So at the gates they stand. Passing vehicles splash more mud on their water-soaked clothes. But they continue distributing literature, wearing their muddy clothes like shining armor. Along the path to women's votes this is just the water hazard.

Montrealers watch pamphlets fall from an airplane flying in a bright blue sky on a day in 1930. Intrigued by the novelty of the delivery method, hundreds read a message from the femininists. High overhead there is a grandmother acting as aerial delivery boy. She is Mrs. John Scott, veteran leader of Quebec feminists.

Champion Badly Hurt

Quebec members are having a field day in the legislature in 1922. A member, Henri Miles of Montreal, is making the first of 14 appeals to the House for the woman's vote. He has braved a barrage of jeers throughout his speech.

The horseplay increases as he nears an end. An anti-feminist member pulls the chair from behind him as he seats himself. Laughter roars out, but is hushed quickly. For Mr. Miles in the fall has suffered severe injuries. Weeks pass before he is able to quit his bed. For five years no champion of women's rights could be found to introduce a similar bill.

Quebec with the rest of the British Empire is paying tribute as a great King and his Queen celebrate their jubilee in 1936. Quebec women, in another effort to publicise their voteless plight, follow the historic path of petitioning their King, George V.

The petitions are to bear congratulations to their Majesties and appeal for help in getting the vote.

The petitions pour in at the Montreal headquarters. More than 10,000 women attach their names. Feminists believe their campaign in the press, in the legislature, at the fairs, in the factories and on the farms have won a huge body of supporters.

Official channels refuse to convey the petition overseas and return it. So a Montreal who is Britain-bound is given the extra task of carrying the petition. By taxi she arrives at Buckingham Palace and she delivers the petition to household officials.

And so they continued their campaign, in the mud, in the legislature, in the press and over the air, in factories, farms and fashionable drawing rooms.

Spokesmen for many of the great-grandchildren of Quebec women who lost the right to vote in provincial elections in 1834 are hopeful that when the next provincial election is held they will have it back.

Easter Morn

'Tis Easter! Hark! The winds repeat
  The precious story as of old,
The sun glows with effulgence sweet
  And flings aloft its flags of gold.

And now the Easter bells ring out,
  They tell the story far and near—
That night is fled of death and doubt,
  The grave no longer holds a fear.

'Tis Easter! And the lily sweet
  Displays its chalice pure and white,
And bows in homage, calm, complete,
  To greet the Lord of life and light.

And every little blade of grass
  And budding branches, gaunt and grey,
Proclaim the death of winter past,
  And endless life, this Easter day.

And while the dawn is glowing red,
  We catch the Easter message clear—
"Why seek the living 'mong the dead?
  Your Lord is risen, He is not here."

French Request Rationing With Limited Prices

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD

Canadian Press Correspondent

Paris—(CP)—Britain has its ration cards; Germany has had them for a very long time now in ever-growing variety and number. It may be said on newspaper authority that the cards are printed in France for certain foods at least—but so far they have not been distributed.

France is a country of bread and wine, almost self-sufficient in most foods and there was no immediate necessity for ration cards. The government says nothing about imposing them; but a paradoxical situation has arisen—the population is beginning to ask for them. They've forgotten their little joke about the Nazi sandwich being a couple of bread cards with a meat card between them.

The reason is a definite rise in the cost of living since the beginning of the war. The newspapers are calling attention to this and have suggested that the use of ration cards might mean a more equal distribution of food; keep prices from rising immoderately and prevent "stocking" should there be the temptation.

Price Increases

Says l'Oeuvre, "Butter has risen from 12 to 18 francs a pound; oil from eight to 13 francs (litre); beefsteak almost doubled, leeks from 50 centimes to one franc each (doubled); Milk has risen to two francs 30 centimes, about 20 per cent and bread about 16 per cent.

"Are there any objections still to be opposed to the ration card? Is there a fear of a bad effect on the morale of the population? On the contrary, the population is asking for it. Hundreds and hundreds of our readers write demanding the immediate institution of ration cards for food and coal."

Says the Intransigeant: "It must be recognized after having tasted a normal regime of free alimentation, the public has begun to think of a rationing regime and demand cards in spite of the annoyance of the system. Why? For two reasons of first importance. To prevent price rising and to assure a more equitable distribution.

"Prices have risen on bread, milk, wine, butter and meat. In addition, oil, coffee and coal have for diverse causes become difficult to procure urgently or at a fixed time. Nothing is lacking in France we know, but the distribution is not operating to the satisfaction of all.

"Will ration cards eliminate this price rise and inequality?" asks Roger Ducos. "The public believes and the economists affirm that they will. Every system which will stop price rising, especially on necessities is worth trying."

World's Oldest 'Watch'

A Saxon pocket sundial, with some claim to be the oldest existing "watch," has been found two feet below the soil of the Cloister Garden at Canterbury Cathedral, where it must have lain undisturbed for many centuries. It is of gold and silver and when discovered was scarcely tarnished. Such attention as it needed has been given it by Mr. T. T. Kendrick at the British Museum.

The dial consists of a silver tablet with a gold cap and chain and its gnomon is also of gold, surmounted by a delicately chased animal's head with jewelled eyes. The gnomon is detachable, and when not in use fits into a hole at the base of the tablet. To tell the time the dial, with it gnomon in position, must be allowed to hang facing the sun. Two inscriptions appear on the edges of the tablet, one reading "Pax possessori" and the other "Salus Factori."

According to Dr. A. H. Smith, of University College, London, the dial can only be described as "more or less accurate," perfect acuracy being very difficult to attain in a dial of such small size.—Manchester Guardian.

Terror in Prague Recalled by Nurse

"The Gestapo has a sinister method of approaching people. They bang on the door, and, when it is opened, they just beckon in silence and the unfortunate person who is wanted has to go." These words were part of a letter from Miss E. E. Wilson, now of Birmingham, England, to her sister, Mrs. E. R. Adair, of Montreal and published in Montreal Gazette.

Miss Wilson, who is at present assisting the Sector Matron of the Queen Elizabeth Hospital in Birmingham, was sent to Prague by the Y.W.C.A. in November, 1938, and remained there until August of last year. So she is able to give an eye-witness account of the terrors which fell upon Czechoslovakia after the secession of Sudetenland.

She was the English leader of the first camp to be run near Prague for child refugees. Seventy-three small boys and girls, from four to 16 years old, arrived one afternoon at the camp and during preliminary sorting-out, were grouped along the staircase which led from the vast hall of the old castle which served as the camp.

Writes Miss Wilson: "They were the most tragic little people I have ever seen. They had forgotten how to laugh—it seemed as though they had forgotten how to speak. They just stood in silence, not daring to glance round at each other or at their new surroundings. They were so unchildlike that I was in tears myself the first evening.

"It was about a fortnight before I was really happy. That was on the day when the first child was naughty and I knew that they were real children again."

Candies Prove "Hit"

Miss Wilson tells how after a week or so she was known to her little charges as "Bon-Bon Sweetie Mummie" because of her apparently unfailing supplies of candies which were bought with money sent from a sympathizer in Birmingham. When, after a few months, she left the camp to help the Society of Friends with their work for adult refugees, the children sang, "God Save the King" in English as a farewell greeting.

Miss Wilson points out that the children belonged to Sudeten refugees who had been forced to flee from their homes after Munich, and, as the parents gradually became repatriated in the Czechoslovakian villages, their boys and girls were sent back to them.

On the day Hitler entered Czechoslovakia, Miss Wilson was wakened early in the morning by the roar of planes overhead which heralded his arrival. Fearful of what had happened she dressed and went out, meeting a friend who, crying quietly, said: "He walked in at six o'clock this morning."

Writes Miss Wilson: "She was one of the most self-controlled and most wonderful women I have ever met. I dare not mention her name for she is still in Prague." Miss Wilson added that on that day she saw two Jews, a man and a woman, throw themselves from an upper window.

She told how she hurried in terror to the office. There she was left in charge because actually she knew very little about individual refugees and, as they were expecting the Gestapo to come along and ask questions, she could truthfully admit that she knew nothing. But she was never left alone, lest she herself should be taken off without anyone's knowledge.

She continues: "A Czech boy was left with me, and we had to destroy by burning, every record in the office and every name. We had just finished this when I noticed certain books, any one of which might have sent us to concentration camps. We didn't know what to do. Our small fire would have taken hours to burn them beyond recognition. My companion was terrified, and so was I, but as we couldn't speak each other's languages, we were not of much comfort to one another."

Books Were Burned

Quickly the books were done up in brown paper—untidy so that they should not look like books, for anyone seen to be carrying papers was being arrested—and the pair set off for the office of a mutual friend about a quarter of an hour's walk away. Miss Wilson then walked into the office, handed the parcel to the Czech porter, who knew her, and, almost as she whispered the words, "Burn this," she saw it thrown into the furnace.

Her absence from the office had been short, but it had been long enough for a crowd of men and women of all ages, to assemble outside. "There seemed to be hundreds of frantic women begging me to take their children and nothing would move them," she writes.

Predict Resignation Of James Cromwell

Washington, March 23—(AP)—A senator who is in close touch with foreign affairs predicted yesterday the resignation of James H. R. Cromwell, United States Minister to Canada, who was reprimanded by Secretary of State Cordell Hull for making a pro-Allies address in Toronto.

This senator, who asked that his name be withheld, said that Cromwell, soon after resigning, probably would announce his candidacy for the Democratic senatorial nomination in New Jersey.

Reverberations from Cromwell's speech continued to be heard at the capitol.

Senator R. M. LaFollette, (Prog. Wisconsin), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he thought Hull's telegram cautioning Cromwell against making further utterances of diplomatic importance without consulting the state department, ought to have a restraining effect on other American diplomats who might be inclined to speak out of turn at times.

PURSE SNATCHER FAILS

Toronto, March 23 — (CP) — Grayce Childs, formerly one of Toronto's greatest girl softball pitchers, is just a little put out today because she didn't get a chance to "poke" a purse-snatcher who attempted to grab her purse as she walked along a street with another girl.

Miss Childs said the would-be thief ran off after a short struggle in which she refused to let go of the bag. She said there were but a "few cents" in the purse.

AUSTRIAN GIVEN CITIZENSHIP

London, March 21 — (CP) — Richard Tauber, well-known Austrian tenor, swore allegiance to King George today and was admitted to British citizenship. Tauber, who is 48, married Diana Napier, British film actress, in 1936.

CHAPTER XI

"Curt!" said Jennifer. "Stephanie has just blown in, bag and baggage! She's closeted with Mother and Dad, and I think you ought to be there!"

She turned to Sara with a quick, friendly apology. "Sorry to interrupt you but—well, something has come up unexpectedly ......Do you play bridge? Stan and Aunt Jess and I are looking for a fourth."

"I'd love to play," said Sara.

"Fine!" Jennifer slipped an arm through hers.

As they strolled back to the house, with Curt hurrying ahead, Sara wondered who this "Stephanie" was who had apparently upset things by suddenly appearing. And why did Curt have to see her?

However, she put the question out of her mind after she sat down to the card table. Her bridge had been learned mostly in noisy bouts with Vicky and Bill and Toby, where bad plays were mercilessly hooted and wrangling post-mortems were a sequel to every hand. She settled herself now to do the best she could on the basis of this haphazard but vigorous training.

It was two hours before Curt finally reappeared. He stationed himself behind Sara's chair and watched as she struggled to make five spades with no help at all from Jennifer's dummy hand. At last, triumphantly, she took her final needed trick on the last play. That gave her and Jennifer the rubber.

Then, Curt said firmly, "This girl has had enough cards for the evening!"

And presently, Sara was out on the terrace with him, watching the moon spill a molten path across the ocean. The night air was cool, heady with a salt tang from the sea mingled with the fragrance from a near-by lilac hedge.

"I feel as if I had been cheated!" Curt said ruefully, as he led her to a cushioned swing. "Most of the evening stolen from me. I was planning to run you over to Sachem Hills for dancing. Would you like to go now? It's not too late."

Sara, however, was content to stay where she was. "It's too perfect here," she said. "This moon—this view!"

"Good—then, we'll stay here."

Curt leaned his head back against the swing, and was silent for a while, gazing up at the stars.

Then, he said thoughtfully, "It's a funny world, Sara. Some of us have plenty of its goods, and yet are not only miserable ourselves, but make every one around us miserable, too."

Sara wondered if it had been the mysterious "Stephanie's" arrival which had brought him to this reflection. She was now intensely curious to know the identity of this girl or woman who had taken up two hours of his time and left him in a somber mood. What was her connection with Curt? Was she—was she some one out of his past? Possibly even an —an ex-wife who had suddenly come to stir up trouble? Sara had never heard of Curt's having been married, but that didn't prove he hadn't been. . . .

She turned and saw that he was looking at her intently.

"Sara, darling . . . What a picture you make in the moonlight!" He slipped an arm about her. "Why have you taken so long to come into my life? But now that you have, I'm not going to let you go out of it!"

A fierceness that almost frightened her shone in his eyes. He clasped her to him, buried his face in her hair.

But she went rigid in his embrace. She suddenly didn't want his love-making until she had satisfied herself about Stephanie.

"Curt!" she begged. "Please! I want to ask you something . . ." She struggled out of his arms.

He drew away, looking hurt. "Well? What do you want to ask?"

"Curt . . . who is Stephanie?"

"Stephanie? So that's what's bothering you!" He gave a little relieved laugh. "She's my brother Palmer's wife — has just returned from abroad and is on the warpath." He added wryly, "Palmer's marriage is not a very pleasant subject for us Carringtons right now!"

"Oh," said Sara thinly. "Forgive me, Curt — I didn't mean to seem curious. I had no business asking. I just — that is — " She broke off in confusion.

Curt gave her an amused look. "You thought you'd dug up a skeleton in my past, didn't you? It's a skeleton, all right, but not mine, thank heaven! And you might as well know about it. If Stephanie has her way — and I can't say I blame her much, either — the whole world will soon know about it down to the last detail!"

For a moment, he gazed out at the moonlit waves, then went on, with a trace of bitterness in his voice.

"My brother Palmer has been a problem all his life. He was a frail kid and, and as a result, was completely spoiled. When he grew up, he started going wild. Oh, he's very likeable — too darn' likeable! He can hoodwink anybody into anything! He persuaded Stephanie into a runaway marriage when she was only eighteen — told her she alone could reform him. Ever since, he has made life utterly miserable for her.

"Well . . . now, finally, she wants a divorce. But Mother and Dad are trying to talk her out of it, against it. He's very old-fashioned Dad, in particular, is dead set about marriage — thinks a divorce in the family would be a disgrace, especially with the publicity it would be bound to get. That's the story." Curt again slipped his arm about Sara. "So you see, darling, Stephanie isn't a ghost from my past, after all!"

Sara was silent. She was thinking that, though Stephanie had been explained, there was still another ghost to lay. What about Juliette Carter? Dared she ask him about her? She screwed up her courage. Now that she was asking questions, she might as well go the whole way.

"Curt," she said hesitantly, "please — will you tell me something else? Perhaps I — I shouldn't ask you but, since you've invited me here and everything, I think I ought to know. There — there have been rumors in the papers that you — well, that you are engaged to Juliette Carter . . ."

"My! What an inquisitive little thing you are tonight!" he said, with a laugh. "You mustn't believe all the things that gossiping busybodies say. How can you sit there on a glorious night like this, my darling, and cross-examine the man who so humbly adores you?"

His arm tightened about her, and he brushed her cheek with his lips . . .

Not until later, did Sara realize that he had evaded making a simple, straightforward answer about Juliette. He hadn't given her a definite "No."

GOD SAVE THE KING

SECOND WARTIME

Dissolution came suddenly and dramatically on January 25, four hours after the late Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, formally opened the regular session.

That action automatically shut off from government opponents the privilege of demanding and receiving retailed reports of the administration's actions. Mr. King was charged throughout the campaign with having "scuttled" parliament and with deliberately preventing disclosure of desired information.

Government Criticized.

The prime minister's reply to this was that the interests of Canada and of the Dominion's war effort would not be served by a lengthy pre-election session with its political arguments.

An immediate election, he argued further, would enable the first Canadian overseas division to vote in England before it goes to the front, and enable the second division to vote in Canada.

Dr. Manion at once announced his party would endorse National Government but Liberals and C.C.F. leaders declared they would have nothing to do with such a government.

Criticism of the government's war effort on ground of inefficiency and half-heartedness featured the Conservatives' campaign argument and they promised a government composed of "the best brains" regard-

The Liberal administration based its appeal largely on its record and its pledge to prosecute Canada's share of the war with all vigor and resources. It criticized Dr. Manion for failing to name a single candidate as a prospective member of his proposed National Government.

C.C.F. Opposed To War.

The C.C.F. party, opposed to war and war-like preparations except for defence of Canada, accepted the inevitable when Great Britain was followed into war by the Dominion last September. In the campaign, the party promised to guard against profiteering and to work for post-war insurance for soldiers and their dependents. It maintained its stand for nationalization of war industries.

Mr. Herridge's new democracy would have Canada conscript all resources in its war effort and the Social Credit adherents of the new movement repeated their argument that by issue of debt free money the war and other expenditures of the public treasury could be financed without adding to the national debt.

Liberals came into power in 1935 with 180 members in the House of Commons, the greatest majority ever given a political party in Canada since Confederation. The Conservatives had only 40 seats.

Dissolution found the House with 176 Liberals, 39 Conservatives, 15 Social Crediters, 7 C.C.F., two independents, one United Farmers of Ontario-Labor, one United Reform, and four vacancies.

Picton Carpenter Charged With Assault

Edward Weidmark, 28-year-old Picton carpenter, appeared in Belleville police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. today, charged with assault. Weidmark was not asked to plead, his case being remanded until Tuesday next. The accused was latter admitted to bail and returned home after being held in the city police station all night.

Weidmark was charged with assaulting Mrs. Thomas Blaind, Catherine St., on the night of Feb. 24th last and was arrested in the lobby of the Belle Theatre last night after Mrs. Blaind had informed police she was certain Weidmark was the man, who was in her home and grappled with her last month. Weidmark was not asked to comment.

Mr. and Mrs. Blaind were leaving the Belle Theatre about 10.00 p.m. last night, when Mrs. Blaind saw a man standing in the theatre lobby. Immediately she turned to her husband and assured him the man seen in the lobby was the same person Mrs. Blaind had found in her home, when she entered late on the night of Feb. 24th.

Police were notified with Constables Evans and Thomson later taking Weidmark into custody. Later at the police station the accused man was questioned by Chief Kidd and Sergeant Arthur Booth, but no statements were given out by the police following the interview. Weidmark was detained at the police station to appear in court today. His parents provided bail following today's police court proceedings.

MANY SIDEROADS FILLED WITH SNOW

Many Sections in Prince Edward and Hastings Isolated by Storm of Early Friday

Political party stalwarts viewed with more or less alarm the possibility of a small rural vote today as the weather man took an unexpected hand in election potentialties.

Sideroads and byways of the surrounding districts are almost entirely blocked with huge drifts of snow, the aftermath of Thursday's storm.

Sidney Roads, especially near the rubber plant are filled and snowplows are trying to force their way through. A farmer market vendor and his horses were "stuck" in a large drift early today and were extricated only after hours of work.

Huff's Island residents reported an almost complete blockage of roads leading from main highways while other reports state that the same condition exists in the sideroads and concession lines to the north of the city.

Roads in the northern part of Prince Edward County are also filled with snow. Wilfred Marvin, Wellington market vendor was forced to retrace his tracks after venturing four miles along the Belleville-Wellington Town Line.

Highways, however, are reported to be clear as are the main arteries of the northern part of the county. Snowplows in all parts of the district are battling the drifts in an effort to relieve the situation for the holiday.

Roads Impassable for Several Hours

Stirling, (Special)J—More snow and heavy winds placed the roads in the Stirling district in the worst condition of the year on Friday. The Campbellford road just north of the village was buried beneath four foot drifts and the Peterboro-Trenton bus was delayed four hours at this point. From all parts of the district came calls for help from motorists who braved the storm on side roads only to be caught fast by the storm.

Personals

Mr. Gerald Sprentall of Queen's University, Kingston, is spending the Easter vacation period with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sprentall.

Mr. Lorne Anderson of Roseneath is spending the Easter holidays at his home in Stirling.

The following is a reply to a telegram received last evening, purporting to have been sent by Mr. King:

March 23—1.30 a.m.

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King,
Prime Minister,
Ottawa.

I sent you no telegram at anytime nor have I asked recognition.

It is quite evident that the true facts of the situation in South Hastings have not been placed before you, as I feel your judgment is too fair to request me to withdraw and get behind a man who is a paid-up member in the Conservative Association in Belleville, who is not the choice of the people and who was foisted on to the electors by an illegal packed convention. What has he ever done for Liberals or Liberalism in South Hastings as against my 16 years active service in the party's interest. If Haig and his machine are really interested in holding South Hastings in the Liberal column let them withdraw from the fight and I will guarantee to win the riding, otherwise I have pledged my word to the great mass of electors and workers to fight this battle against Dictatorship and Machine Rule and intend to keep that pledge. You say you have faith in the people. So have I and will trust the electors of South Hastings.

"H. R. CORY."

Mr. Boyd Beckel of Peterboro Normal School is spending the Easter holidays with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. James E. Beckel.

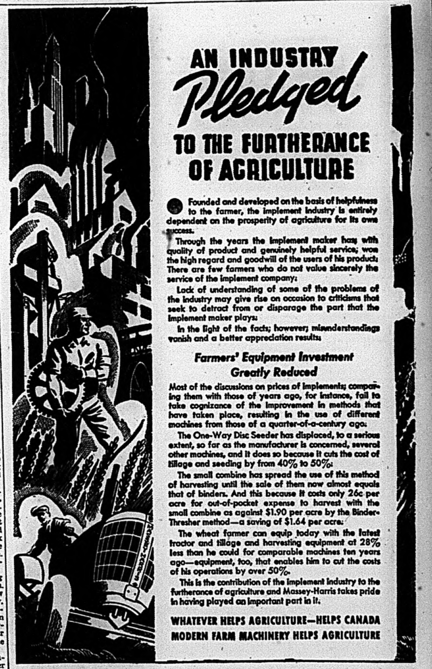
At a recent organization meeting of the Stirling Lawn Bowling Association the following officers were appointed for the season of 1940—President, H. R. Tompkins, Vice President, H. L. Fair; Secretary, W. J. Whitty, Treasurer, C. F. Linn; Games Committee, Dr. E. A. Carleton, T. W. Solmes, R. A. Patterson; Grounds Committee, C. F. Linn, J. E. O'Donnell, E. G. Bailey, E. Fox; Club Activity Committee—S. L. Lucas, R. A. Patterson, F. R. Mallory and J. S. Morton; Delegates to District Meeting, S. L. Lucas, T. W. Solmes and Dr. E. A. Carleton.

BUCK SHEEP CHARGES WOOLER RESIDENT

Charged by a buck sheep working near the barn at her home in J. Stacey, suffered what is believed to be a fractured leg. She was admitted to hospital where she will undergo X-ray to ascertain the actual extent of her injuries. Dr. G. H. Stoble is in charge.

Mr. Stacey, who accompanied his wife to the hospital stated that the animal was in the habit of charging at people and on occasions it had charged him, he had always driven it off. Mrs. Stacey however, was caught unawares and was unable ot avoid the swiftly-charging animal.

Moscow, March 23—(AP)— Tass, official Soviet news agency, asserted today in a dispatch from New York that in the United States "resistance of the masses to British propaganda has increased." The dispatch criticized "widespread British propaganda" in the United States.



AN INDUSTRY Pledged TO THE FURTHERANCE OF AGRICULTURE

Founded and developed on the basis of helpfulness to the farmer, the implement industry is entirely dependent on the prosperity of agriculture for its own success.

Through the years the implement maker has with quality of product and genuinely helpful service, won the high regard and goodwill of the users of his product. There are few farmers who do not value sincerely the service of the implement company.

Lack of understanding of some of the problems of the industry may give rise on occasion to criticisms that seek to detract from or disparage the part that the implement maker plays.

In the light of the facts, however, misunderstandings vanish and a better appreciation results.

Farmers' Equipment Investment Greatly Reduced

Most of the discussions on prices of implements, comparing them with those of years ago, for instance, fail to take cognizance of the improvement in methods that have taken place, resulting in the use of different machines from those of a quarter-of-a-century ago.

The One-Way Disc Seeder has displaced, to a serious extent, so far as the manufacturer is concerned, several other machines, and it does so because it cuts the cost of tillage and seeding by from 40% to 50%.

The small combine has spread the use of this method of harvesting until the sale of them now almost equals that of binders. And this because it costs only 26c per acre for out-of-pocket expense to harvest with the small combine as against $1.90 per acre by the Binder-Thresher method—a saving of $1.64 per acre.

The wheat farmer can equip today with the latest tractor and tillage and harvesting equipment at 28% less than he could for comparable machines ten years ago—equipment, too, that enables him to cut the costs of his operations by over 50%.

This is the contribution of the implement industry to the furtherance of agriculture and Massey-Harris takes pride in having played an important part in it.

SALEM Y.P.U.

The Salem Y.P.U. met on Wednesday evening, March 13th., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Long.

The president, Mr. Donald Leslie, opened the meeting with a poem. A hymn was sung, after which Rev. Stirling led in prayer. The Scripture lesson was read by Mr. Fred Wannamaker. Miss Betty Wannamaker read the minutes, which were adopted. It was decided that subject to the elders' approval, the Salem Y.P.U. would purchase a piano for the church.

Mr. Charles Long then took charge of the citizenship program which was opened with a hymn. Mrs. O. Hagerman gave a reading in keeping with Easter. Mr. Douglas Wannamaker favored with an accordion solo. A poem was read by Mrs. J. Sills. Mrs. Bruce Sherman and Mr. Donald Leslie sang "God's Way is the Best Way." The topic "Parent and Child," was taken by Mr. Charlie Long. A reading "His Example" was given by Helen Hicks. The Wannamaker family rendered a lovely song. Miss Bernice Robinson gave a reading "The Test."

The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

CARMEL Y.P.U.

The regular meeting of the Carmel Y.P.U. was held on Wednesday evening, March 13th.

The meeting opened with Mrs. Carl Thompson in charge. The Worship Service opened with a Call to Worship by Mrs. Thompson. Hymn 361 was sung. Mr. Jack McCabe read the Scripture lesson. Miss Hazel Hicks read a poem, "When Christ Looked Down." Mrs. Thompson gave a story. Miss Irene Haynes read a poem. The meeting closed with a hymn followed by prayer by Mrs. Thompson. Mr. Carl Haynes took up the offering.

WALLBRIDGE Y.P.U.

The meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clare on Monday evening last. Business was conducted by Jack Ketcheson. Following the business was the Devotional part of the meeting by Mrs. Wallbridge. Scripture was read by Katherine Moore. The topic was read and discussed by Mrs. Wallbridge. The title "Children of the Evening." The roll call was read by the secretary followed by the minutes of the last meeting. Mizpah Benediction was repeated in unison and popcorn and games were enjoyed by all.

Traits That Make an Admirable Mother

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

THE MOTHER who wrote the following letter has my admiration and I wrote her so:

"Dear Dr. Myers: I have two children, four and six. What I would like to know is, am I suppressing them? A friend who doesn't believe in disciplining children says my children will want to get away from me when they have grown older.

"My one object is to see that they are healthy . . . .The older one was trained from infancy to go to bed at six, but now, since going to school, she is in bed at 7.30 every night. She does not object to going to bed. She knows that her meals are served on time and must eat what is served or go hungry (she never goes hungry). We never punish her for telling the truth no matter what the damage, but explain to her why it is wrong. She is only punished after she has been told of some wrong act she must not repeat.

Their Only Duties

"The children have all the freedom they want during the day. The only duties they have are these: Clothes must be hung up when indoors; hands must be washed before meals; teeth cleaned every day and they must go to bed at the same time in the evening. . . .

"I feel that my children are not afraid of me, but they have learned that I mean what I say. We do not make any promises we do not intend to keep.

"They are encouraged to ask anything and my husband and I do our best to explain so it is clear . . .

"I hope that when these children reach the age of 12 or so and want to go out, they will go with their eyes open, not wondering what boys are like or what some girls do. The older child plays with boys as well as girls and brings one or a dozen children in to play it is her home and for her friends.

"About five years ago I realized that I was doing everything for my older child but to breathe for her and decided it was not good for her. So I got a reliable friend to stay with her in the evening while she slept, and I started night school. My husband joined me, and although we are taking different courses, we enjoy it very much. Even with the two children, I still manage to attend four evenings a week. I think it does me a world of good as I get away from them. Being with them all day is grand, but once they are in bed for the night I can assure you I feel better mentally as I become interested in my school work and it is an agreeable change".

There are hundreds and hundreds of fathers and mothers in the United States who could gain similar pleasure and profit from attending night school. I know some families in which the father and mother do their own homework while their older children do theirs. What an inspiration it must be to the high school youth to have parents going to school and laboring over books and school assignments in the evenings. Why not?

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Puzzled Girl Feels Kiss Should Not Be Taken Seriously

If you're one of those girls who thinks standards are old-fashioned and everything goes, you had better skip this little homily, for you may detect in its common sense a whiff of a sermon. And as a layman, I'm opposed to preaching, though I'm not above pointing out cause and effect at times.

A girl who, like one of my correspondents, says she just kisses men to humor them and doesn't care one way or the other, is apt to take on the dog-eared, thumb-marked appearance of a book on the ten-cent counter outside the second-hand bookstore.

The average man is as willin' as Barkis to take all the kisses that a girl with this point of view offers. But the average young man still has enough of his grandfather and his great-grandfather in his make-up not to propose to the young lady that they make their kisses permanent. At least, that's their idea when they marry.

Of course, I'm familiar with the biographies of certain sirens who kissed all and sundry, married into royalty, started wars and generally produced cosmic shakeups. But that's not the fate of Katy and Mayme, grubbing along on a minimum wage and expecting to marry and be "happy ever after".

Katie and Mayme must employ a different technique from that of the world-renowned sirens who have made history. And even then, to judge from Lola Montez' Memoirs, and a more contemporaneous siren, whose name we will not quote, "it's just as well to be Scotch with the kisses". But my correspondent's letter speaks for itself.

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I'm 21 and have dated many boys since I was 16, but haven't gone 'steady' with any of them. All boys like to pet. As for me, it doesn't matter either way, and if I do let them kiss, it's just to humor them, as it doesn't seem important enough to me to refuse

"When I was younger I thought a kiss was important, and if a girl let a boy kiss her, I thought they loved each other.

"But now everyone kisses everyone else, and it doesn't seem to matter. Monday I kiss John, Tuesday I kiss Henry, and so on.

"Do you think I'm right to feel as I do that a kiss is just a kiss and never should be taken seriously or objected to? Sometimes it's upsetting to see how flippant people have become, but now I'm flippant myself. What is your opinion of the reverence one should hold toward kissing in this modern generation?

"Christine".

Christine has never gone "steady" with anyone. Perhaps her liberality with kisses may explain that and other things, such as flippancy.

Imitating Tresses

By HELEN FOLLETT

DOROTHY LAMOUR . . .is one who needs no wig for her coiffure.

HOW WOULD you like to wear a white wig of spun glass? The glass industry is making them. Perfect imitation of the silky wool that grows upon the human head, it is claimed. Every shade can be produced; you can have undulations and pan curls, all the details of the fashionable coiffure. Well, we'll wait and see.

Wigs are as old as history. They were worn by the ancient Egyptians; in the British museum is a peruke supposed to have been made about 1000 B.C., maybe before that. And it is still in curl! Think of that, you girls who go straw-like and stringy a few days after the metal pinchers pull your scalp off at the roots.

Movie stars wear wigs that can't be detected from a homegrown hair-do. Marvelously made they are, too. If you have seen Bette Davis as Elizabeth you must have observed the interesting pile of factory wool she had aboard her brain roof. Elizabeth, who died in 1603, might have been bald for all that anybody knew; she was always togged up with fashionable wiggery. So was her rival, Mary, Queen of Scots.

It was in the time of Louis XIV that the wig attained full glory. Louis put on a fresh one for chapel, for hunting, for resting, for receiving visits of the ambassadors, for wining and dining. He had a roomful of them, the old silly.

The selection of the shoe should not be a casual matter, because the peculiarities and variations of the human foot are many. A long foot can have short toes, a short foot long ones. Heels may be narrow or wide, arches high or low. Because of all this, the correct last must be found. It must provide support supply wiggling room for the toes, be neither too large nor too small, and conform to the shape of the human trotter.

Ill-fitting shoes can cause backache, spinal troubles, a tense nervous system. Yassum; and they can also cook up grouches and dig wrinkles in the phiz.

You'll find the jacket frock everywhere. A smart frock in black silk crepe in a lower print of a pinkish-cocoa brown has a hiplength fitted jacket, in the same tone in light weight wool.

Leisure-hour clothes are extremely chic. A new housecoat is of black and white checked taffeta, the basque bodice closing with crystal buttons. Novelty shirring finishes the round hipline pockets of the full skirt.

Yarn is knit through the mode. A general wear frock is of natural color zephyr with bright green suede belt and gilt buttons. It's worn with a long sweater coat of bright green ribbed chenille wool.

The picture is incomplete without a soft, tailored suit this Spring. A model of navy blue double twill bound with blue satin has a cutaway hiplength jacket. The skirt is pleated all around.

Finger-Bowl Service is Easy and Pleasant

"I have always liked finger-bowls, and I still insist on using them, even if fashion says they are 'out'. I used them the other evening and one of my friends said, in a very nice way, that she had never seen them used as I used them, after the dessert had been taken away, and the table cleared. I brought them in on a dessert plate with a doily under each bowl, and placed one at each place.

"My friend said that they should have been brought in on the dessert plate; that the guest should set the finger-bowl aside, and that the dessert then should have been served on the plate.

"I would like to have you set me straight about the correctness of using finger-bowls; how they should be placed, and, also, if they are correct to use for luncheon as well as for dinner?"

Hostess

In the first place, every hostess will agree with this hostess when she says she wants to use her finger-bowls. There are certain items of table-service which every hostess thinks of as representing her dream of a perfect table-setting. Finger-bowls are one of these items for it is their useful and artistic destiny to be the epilogue of the dinner that the hostess has planned with such care. Now that we can buy such simple and beautiful white-glass finger-bowls at minimum cost, this dream of good service can easily come true.

There are several popular confusions that I would like to dispel. Fashion says most definitely that finger bowls are 'in'. They are taken as a matter of course, even after informal and casual luncheons and dinners.

In formal service, the finger-bowl is brought in after the dessert, either on a small plate that matches the bowl, or on any other small plate. This is what our hostess did, and so her service inclined toward the formal.

With informal service, however, which is the usual service, the finger-bowl is correctly brought in on the dessert plate. On the dessert plate also, at the right of the finger-bowl, is the dessert spoon, and at the left of the bowl is the dessert fork. It is correct, but not necessary to put a lace doily between the finger-bowl and the plate. The guest removes the spoon to the right of the plate, the fork to the left of the plate, and takes the finger-bowl and places it to the left and above the dessert plate. This leaves the dessert plate ready for the service of dessert.

Finger-bowls are not a formal detail. They may be as inexpensive as we wish, so long as they are simple. They are really an aid to the hostess, rather than an inconvenience, because the informal service I have described can be assembled before dinner and placed on the buffet, ready for the dessert service.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

A Good Movie

As I have said before, of all the modern things that upset children, harrying their emotions and affecting their nerves, I think perhaps motion pictures are the worst. They can have a worse effect than radio because they are more real and life-like and can grip the children more completely.

Why parents make a habit of taking very young children to any kind of movies, I can't understand. Sometimes, I suppose, it is because there is no one to take care of the child in their absence. The parents may want to see a particular movie very much, and choose to take the child rather than miss it. Yet this pernicious habit of taking small, highly impressionable children to the movies indiscriminately, is responsible for many mental upsets that now occur in childhood and adolescence. Any movie that a child sees before it is 12 years old should be chosen with the greatest care. It should be one that a child can understand without having his emotions subject to great disturbances.

I don't want the foregoing to cause me to be mistaken for a foe of the movies. I'm not. A few days ago I saw a motion picture that gave me a great thrill. I was in Chicago on some business and I was invited to see "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet", and I really was impressed. I hope the public takes to it as I did, for it deserves to be well patronized.

It is in a class with another excellent movie, "The Story of Louis Pasteur". It's the equally dramatic story of Dr. Ehrlich and Dr. Koch, two medical scientists whose discoveries have saved thousands and thousands of lives.

The setting of the picture is in Germany—not the Nazi, totalitarian Germany, but the Germany of 50 years ago when scientific truth seeking was encouraged.

Dr. Ehrlich, of course was the man to discover 606, the cure for syphilis. It got the name because his 606th attempt to perfect a specific was successful.

There is an old fashioned idea, fortunately on the wane, that any person who contracts syphilis, has brought it on themselves by evil living. Nothing of the sort is true. Anyone might contract the disease quite innocently. I'm glad the movie makes a point of this. It can do a great educational work.

Ehrlich isn't the only scientist who is given credit in the picture. Two of his associates are given some prominence and rightly. They, I think, have benefited humankind fully as much if not more than Ehrlich. They are Koch, the bacteriologist who was one to isolate the bacilli of tuberculosis; and Behring, discoverer of the serum cure for diphtheria.

Just ask any doctor out in the country what those two latter discoveries meant to them. Not often did I run across syphilis in my practise, but I have seen dozens die of diphtheria and tuberculosis in a year where today, as a result of these discoveries by these men, we scarcely have one.

I was just thinking the other day how long it is since I've seen a case of diphtheria. Yet when I began practise, it was one of our commonest epidemics. I've seen seven and eight from one family choke to death from this disease. I think of "consumption", too, how common and how baffling it was twenty-five years ago, and how well it is now under control due to the discoveries of Koch and others.

I approve of pictures like this one. They are as full of drama and thrills as any picture needs to be, and they help persons understand some of the triumphs of man in which we can all take pride.

War Aims and Peace Plans Theme of Lecture

Mr. Lionel Gelber, Rhodes scholar, author and graduate of Toronto University, addressed the Belleville Lecture and Study Club on "War Aims and Peace Plans" at their concluding lecture.

Mr. Gelber prefaced his remarks with a reference to the significant place which Canada holds in world affairs today, and stressed the necessity of selecting representatives at the coming election, with due regard to their ability to solve not only our own serious present and post-war problems, but also those concerned with international affairs and peace.

War Aims

To Mr. Gelber the aims of this war were for both power and ideals. The triumph of Britain and France mean the triumph of democracy, parliamentary institutions and the preservation of the spiritual and intellectual values for which democracy stands.

Mr. Gelber defended the historical "Balance of Power" policy of Great Britain and saw in its continuance our chief hope for a peaceful future. The present war, he viewed as another application of that policy. To Britain's powerful position, he attributed much of the social progress of the world and the improvement in world order. He therefore frankly believes in the continuance of power in British hands.

However, he admitted that this position was open to attack. Neutrals say that we are smug in the identification of our interests with the welfare of the world and that our policy is really preservation of the status quo. Strict neutrals say "a plague on both your houses," when they find it impossible to apportion the blame. Others remark on the belatedness of the resistance to aggression and still others point to the undemocratic areas within our Empire's boundaries. Mr. Gelber maintained that under British and French supremacy there was more hope of improvement and changes than under any alternative. For that reason, he viewed this conflict for power as of greater significance than any since the fall of the Roman Empire.

Peace Plans

What of peace plans? Mr. Gelber warned against any rosy dreams and saw greatest hope for peace in a revivified League of Nations whose dictums would be enforced by the force of British and French arms. The proposal of a Federated States of Europe he considered neither practicable or realistic in the face of bitter post-war nationalism. To its success, the greatest obstacle would be Germany, judged by her historical conduct.

How shall Germany be treated? The democratic forces within her borders must be encouraged. To make peace with Hitler or with the generals, who inherit the Prussian tradition, would be equally fatal. The bogey of Bolshevism, as a reason for peace with the generals, the speaker discounted. French security must be guaranteed by any peace, and the probability of the division of Germany into its historic divisions was suggested as a possible means.

Mr. Gelber also dismissed the idea of an Atlantic union as outlined in "Union Now," by Clarence Street. This he considered the dream of a journalist, who though an American failed to take into consideration traditional isolationism of America and parts of Canada.

There is no magic formula for peace. Let the League of Nations be strengthened and make the necessary alterations to make it function, then look for the next step forward. To this end there must have two things—the best brains in governments and French and British co-operation in peace as well as in war.

Many questions were asked at the conclusion of the lecture which were graciously answered by the speaker. Mr. MacLaurin, the president, commended on the encouraging growth of the club and bespoke continued support from the members for next season.

THEY KNOW!

ENGINEERS have GOOD REASONS for choosing the FORD V-8! Among them:

V·8 ENGINE !
"Most engineers acknowledge the V-type engine as an engineering masterpiece! It's the type that holds records in boats, airplanes and motor cars. Naturally, I choose the Ford V-8 for its combination of smooth performance and economy."
—F. J. TACEY, Construction Engineer, Vancouver, B.C.

ECONOMY !
"I drive a Ford car for four very simple reasons, namely: low-price, performance, appearance and above all—low-cost maintenance. As an Engineer, I know what I want in transportation, and the Ford has it."
—E. AVERY, Structural Engineer, Calgary, Alberta.

DEPENDABILITY !
"When I bought my Ford V-8, the salesman talked 'trouble-free performance'. Well, it's true! The way my car stands hard, steady driving month in, month out, with the least amount of attention, talks a book for its dependability!"
—A. D. McKINNEY, Mechanical Engineer, Toronto, Ontario.

VALUE !
"It takes an engineer to fully appreciate the tremendous value offered in Ford cars. I don't understand how the Ford people manage to build so much quality into a low-priced car—but it's a great feat of engineering. Of course, I drive a Ford V-8 myself."
—E. B. MARTIN, City Engineer, Moncton, N.B.

Universal Vote is Symbol Of Democratic Freedom Won After Long Centuries

Secret Ballot Comes to Us as Result of Our Forefathers' Struggles and Sacrifices

HISTORY OF LIBERTY

All Canadians Possessing Franchise Should Show Opportunity to Decide on Candidate and Party by Casting Ballot on Tuesday, March 26th

People talk a lot about democracy and most of the time do little about it. Until the European dictators beat down what little there was of it in their own countries and then turned to smash that of their neighbors, we all took democracy for granted. We were inclined to look on our democratic institutions as something we inherited like the power of speech or red hair.

These free institutions were inherited, sure enough, but they did not come down to us as a gift of nature. They were handed down to us by forefathers who fought and sometimes died to win them. They are the heritage from reformers who suffered to break the rule of tyrants, who strove for government by parliament and by the people, who battled for the right of every man and every woman to put his and her vote in the ballot box.

Only gradually over the centuries since Magna Charta was signed did the British people win the right to a universal vote.

Only by slow degrees was the franchise extended to every free man. Only in our own time was the vote given to women after a bitter struggle on their part.

Chance to Vote on Tuesday

It is well to remember all this in these days, for on Tuesday next we Canadians will have a chance to exercise this fundamental democratic right to vote freely by means of a secret ballot for the candidate or party we prefer.

We talk about democracy, and on Tuesday we will have this chance to show whether we value this basic duty of every democrat. For democracy has its duties as well as its rights. And if we are going to keep its freedoms alive, we must perform our duties in order to maintain and enjoy our rights.

Voting on election day has maybe meant little to any of us in the past. We had a right to vote or not to vote as we pleased. If we did not vote, nobody cared; it was a matter between us and our own conscience; if we did not turn up at the polls no Cheka thugs came to force us there with gun or whip.

Only too often, free men and women that we are, we have not bothered to walk a block or stroll around the corner to mark an X for this or that candidate, this party or that—we have not bothered to play our part in helping to choose the best possible government.

Sovereign Heritage

But on Tuesday our ballots will have a meaning such as they never had before. We will not only be voting for candidates, a party, a government, but we will, in a new fresh sense, be exercising our sovereign heritage as citizens of a free society.

Every vote we cast on Tuesday in this important war election will proclaim to the world, to the totalitarian states, to the dictators who would take away our rights, that we are the heirs of men and women who fought to win freedom, a free parliament, free speech, a free press and a free vote. It will be a sign and symbol that we cherish and exercise our democracy.

In past Canadian elections many people have not bothered to cast a vote. All over the Dominion, varying in different districts, a mere 60 to 80 per cent have thought it worth their while to go to the polls in a national election.

Let us march proudly and in vast numbers to the polls on Tuesday—as gaily, if we like, as if we were going to the movies.

Let us show that we indeed value the right to vote. Let us prove to Hitler and Stalin, to Nazis and Communists alike, that a free people—not just a driven people—can and do go to the polls.

Look across at Germany and Russia, think of what has happened in such totalitarian states under a dictatorship, and then let us show them that, while we have the power to elect a government, what has happened there won't happen here.

Freedom Dies If We Neglect It

Remember, if we neglect freedom, freedom dies—or we let those elements arise that will kill freedom.

Hitler, Stalin and their ilk arose where democracy was weak. In Germany, in Russia, elsewhere, they destroyed such parliaments as their countries had. They outlawed all parties but their own party. They allowed no candidates but their own. They stifled all speech, all criticism; they killed all opposition. They made the press a mere instrument of their own propaganda. They took away the people's right to a free and secret vote.

Yes, they have elections in Germany and Russia. But what elections! They are a travesty on the kind of election Canada will stage next Tuesday.

In their elections there is no choice. Every vote cast is checked by storm troopers or spies. In Germany and Russia everyone must vote, and vote one way, for one party and one man. Small wonder that their forced elections roll up totals of nearly 100 per cent. He is a brave man who does not go to the polls in a totalitarian state or who even dares to void his ballot.

For these reasons, because our ballots are precious, we should all on Tuesday next,—snow, rain or shine,—turn out to vote. Our votes will identify us with the war and its causes. They will, if overwhelming, constitute a vast mandate to the government selected.

So, on Tuesday, vote as you like—but vote.

PICTON

WELLINGTON C. S. HOLDS "AT HOME"

Splendid Program Provided With Exhibits Superior to Other Years

Picton, March 23 —(Special)— Despite unfavorable weather, a splendid crowd attended the "At Home" at Wellington Consolidated School. An excellent program followed the inspection of various rooms with their fine exhibits and also a program in the gymnasium.

Principal H. W. Brown acted as chairman for the program. The orchestra, under Jack Stinson, music instructor, provided numbers. Inspector A. Brown spoke briefly. The junior choir sang three Scandinavian folk songs, "The Crow," "The Happy Plowman" and "Han Skal Leve." The junior high school girls gave a pretty dance. The Welsh songs "All Through the night," and "Men of Harlech," were given by the senior choir. An instrumental trio was followed by a vocal trio who sang "Now Thank We All Our God."

Of special interest was the singing of "Our Canada From Sea to Sea," words by Gena Branscomb Tenny, Picton's famed musical daughter, (with descant by Fenwick). They also sang "Dear Canada, Dear Land O'Mine." A coon dance by the senior girls represented a cockney taking his girl for a walk. The National Anthem concluded this well presented program. The choirs were directed by Mr. Stinson.

Features of attraction in the rooms were: home made movies and play in Grade 1; a P. T. demonstration by the boys in the gymnasium; dances and exercises in the gymn by the girls; a marionette show and a movie on science in Grade 8; music appreciation lesson and short play in Grade 2; in grades 3 and 4, murals, blackboard decorations and displays were featured, in Grade 6, the pupils showed how some topic of study could be made more interesting. Banking was demonstrated and operation of a store shown.

The Reycraft Juveniles, a group of young people, were entertained Wednesday night at the home of Miss Jean Barber. A miscellaneous program was enjoyed.

Hockey Team Entertained

The Picton juvenile hockey team, which won the county title this season, was entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Farley at their home, Paul Street.

Tribute to George Morden, who has done much to promote juvenile hockey, was paid by Mr. Farley and it was regretted he was unable to attend owing to illness. Jimmie Clapp, on behalf of himself and Mr. Morden, spoke and George Hart, stellar goalie, read a financial report which showed a balance of $12.02 in the bank. Cards were played and lunch served. The boys expressed appreciation to Mr. and Mrs. Farley for the enjoyable evening.

Assessment Lowered

The equalized assessment of Prince Edward County was lowered twenty per cent. by County Council here this week. This is from $15,000,000 to $12,000,000. This action was taken in order to secure advantage of higher grants for schools. It was disclosed that the county lost $2,414.47 in school grants last year because of the high assessment. In other municipalities the equalized and actual assessments are usually almost the same and Prince Edwards is now much closer. Actual assessment is 11,835,100. This will mean a higher tax rate but the same amount of money will be raised.

Services Held

Services were held on Good Friday in the United, Anglican and Roman Catholic churches with good attendances.

Mr. Dan Goodwin of Maynooth was in town on Thursday.

Miss Lillian Kates is visiting Miss Roslyn Rosen in Buffalo.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, March 23—(Special)— Harry R. Cory, former mayor of Trenton now contesting the riding of South Hastings as a King Liberal addressed a gathering of 300 townspeople in the C.P.R. clubhouse on Wednesday night. Mr. Cory will complete his speech-making campaign in the town of Trenton on Easter Monday night when he will deliver a last minute address in the Capitol Theatre. Trenton is regarded as Mr. Cory's stronghold and he is expecting to poll a large relief vote from this community. Mr. Cory is opposing McLean Haig of Belleville, official representative of the King Government.

Irish Pat Gallagher Celebrated Birthday St. Patrick's Day

Patrick Gallagher, Sr., of Trenton is more Irish than most Irishmen. He observes his birthday on St. Patrick's Day, March 17. Mr. Gallagher is well over 80 years old and has spent the greater part of his life in Trenton. He remembers when the town of Trenton was incorporated. "I came up from Belleville that day," he said "and took part in the gigantic celebration." Mr. Gallagher lives on Dundas St. at the eastern end of the town.

Airport Traffic Signals Installed

Erected to slow down highway traffic passing the Trenton Air Station, modern traffic signals have been installed at the Airport intersection at the main entrance to the air base. The "off and on" lights were installed as a last resort when autoists continued to break the rules of the road while driving in the vicinity of the training depot. When the speed limit was altered motorists were permitted to travel fifty miles an hour on that part of the King's highway. Later the rate of travel was lowered to thirty miles an hour in the airport zone but when this precaution failed to teach motorists a lesson the government finally decided to install warning signals. The majority of through travellers are finding it difficult to accustom themselves to new traffic lights.

Spring Not Here

Spring broke at Trenton yesterday but the weather reminded one of a day in January. The sun shone brightly from morning till night but the temperature hung around freezing in spite of Old Sol's effort to warm things up. A number of old timers predict a later Spring than usual claiming that the additional thickness of ice in the Bay of Quinte coupled with the deep covering of snow in the surrounding countryside will make it hard for the moderating climate to have a direct effect on the lower temperature until the sun climbs higher in the northern sky.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Hadley Return From Mexico

The Hadleys of Trenton arrived home earlier this week after completing a car and motorcycle trip which took them across three countries to the sunny terrain of Mexico. Mr. and Mrs. Keith Hadley left this place over a month ago, arriving in Mexico City, Mexico, a little better than a week later. While in Mexico the Hadleys were shown southern hospitality as it really exists down Mexico way. A lieutenant of the Mexico City Police Force acted as their guide for several days and directed them to the most historic places in the Mexican Capital. On one of their sight-seeing excursions the Hadleys visited a Roman Catholic Church, while a religious service was in progress. The Hadleys saw with their own eyes a devotional altar of pure gold which would have a market value of more than a million dollars. The Hadleys motored part of the trip and rode a motorcycle the remainder of the way. They covered approximately 10,000 miles.

MacFarland Ready to Start Brick Laying

In face of cold and discouraging weather conditions the MacFarland Construction Company has managed to register progress at the Crosse and Blackwell development on the southern outskirts of Trenton. Foundations have been laid down and walls have been completed to a point where brick-layers can start their work as soon as the weather moderates. At the same time MacFarland workers have all but finished the building of an officers' mess hall near the village of Consecon.

Preston vs. Trenton Saturday

On Saturday morning a Bantam hockey team representing Trenton will skate onto the ice at the Quinte Street Arena determined to overcome a three goal advantage Preston gained on them in the first game of the Ontario bantam finals at the west town rink last week-end. The locals are favoured to win their match here but will they win the championship is the question that hockey fans are asking? Mal Carswell who saw the initial encounter says that Trenton will take the Ontario laurels but not without a fight. According to reports from the west the Preston outfit is a smart bunch of lads who know how to stage goal-scoring rallies when points are needed for important victory. At Preston the Trenton squad lost in the last two periods when the enemy scored thrice in the opening frame, the forward stars. Lesperance and Fitzpatrick penetrated the Preston defence and counted twice for Trenton. Preston found it hard to tie the locals who outplayed the west town boys in that period. If Trenton defeats the visitors on Saturday this town can brag about an Ontario title. A win for the Bantams will give Trenton its first hockey championship in many years. The weight of the play will be shouldered by Scott, Fitzpatrick and Lesperance who accounted for Trenton's total in the opening final.

Police Blotter

Recovered in a local scrap iron pile, a marine engine, which had been stolen in Trenton, was recovered by Belleville police authorities yesterday.

Chief Wm. Bain, Trenton, reported the theft of a marine engine which had been stolen from a boathouse along the Trenton waterfront. Some time later Detective Fred Isard found the engine in a local scrap iron pile. Investigations are continuing as to how the machine arrived in Belleville.

Two minor motor accidents were reported to police yesterday, both resulting in fender damage to the vehicles involved.

Automobiles driven by George W. Gist and Harry Rollins, sustained fender damage following a collision on Victoria Avenue. The drivers are neighbours residing on Charles Street, and amicably settled the matter of damages. The other accident, reported by R. Baker of Belleville, resulted in less damage than the above crash.

No arrests being necessary in the city during the past 24 hours the cell block was left available for the accommodation of ten transients, who slumbered there without interruption last night.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

3 MOTOR CARS IN COLLISION

Two Women Seriously Injured Near Glen Falls, New York

Glen Falls, N.Y., March 23—(CP) Two women were injured seriously when three automobiles collided on a highway near here yesterday.

Mrs. Robert Pyzant Howard, 27, of Montreal, was brought to hospital here suffering from a possible fracture of the pelvis, lacerations and body and facial bruises. Mrs. Bessie C. Lloyd, 59, of Scarsdale, N.Y., occupant of another machine was the other woman injured.

Police said Mrs. Howard and her husband were en route to New York City for the Easter holidays. They said that as Howard applied the brakes of his car it skidded and crashed into the Lloyd machine. A truck piled into the wreck. Howard was not hurt.

70-Ton Plane Nearing Completion For U. S. Air Fleet

Washington, March 23—(AP) — The world's biggest plane, a bomber believed capable of flying across the Atlantic and back without stopping, is expected to take its place this summer in the United States Army's air armada.

It is a 70-ton, $1,000,000 warplane which dwarfs the newest 42-ton Trans-Pacific clipper and is half again as large as the German-built DO'X, which carried 112 passengers.

Two years under construction in the strictest secrecy, the new sky monster is now so near completion that the army revealed yesterday a few guarded facts about it. The first test flights are scheduled for this summer on the Pacific coast, where the ship is being finished.

The plane will have a wingspread of over 210 feet, four engines, a speed of "over 200 miles an hour" and a cruising range of more than 6,000 miles. It is expected to carry a useful load of 28 tons, including bombs and fuel.

Hints that a super-plane was being constructed leaked out recently when the FBI revealed that some of the blue-prints for it had been stolen last year. Agents recovered them, however.

Violence Condemned By Mahatma Gandhi

Bombay, Mar. 23 (CP-Reuters).— Violence was condemned by Mohandas K. Gandhi today in an article on the assassination in London of Sir Michael O'Dwyer, former Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab.

"I should like," he wrote in his weekly newspaper Harijan, "every Indian to share with me shame at the act, and joy that the lives of three distinguished Englishmen were saved.

"If we are to fight fairly and squarely we must, as far as is humanly possible, make every Englishman feel he is as safe in our midst as in his own home.

"It fills me with shame and sorrow that for some time at least every Indian face in London will be suspect."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Mickey Rooney"

"Love is a Headache" the next attraction at the Capitol starring Mickey Rooney, Gladys George and Franchot Tone is dedicated to laughter, its chuckle-producing situations assisted by one of the screen's finest comedy crews, "Love is a Headache" opens next at the Capitol theatre.

Co-starring Gladys George, in her first screen comedy role, and Franchot Tone, the picture concerns the dilemma of an actress who finds herself saddled with two orphaned children as the result of her press agent's machinations.

The press agent, Ted Healy, by his "adoption" stunt brings Miss George into sharp conflict with Tone and Ralph Morgan both of whom are in love with her.

Tone enacts a newspaper columnist. When police urged on by Morgan, hint that they are about to arrest her for kidnapping the two children, Miss George flees to a small New York town. There Tone joins her and they hold a conference as to what to do with the children.

The innkeeper, who is also a justice of the peace, overhears their plotting. Believing from what he overhears, that it is Tone's duty, he forces them to marry at the point of a shotgun.

The cast is supplemented by the comedy antics of Mickey Rooney, Frank Jenks, Virginia Weidler, Jessie Ralph, Fay Holden, Barnett Parker and Julius Tannen.

Forged Passport"

The added attraction depicts refugees and spies seeking haven in democracy, planning wars for dictators. The featured players are Paul Kelly, June Lang, Billy Gilbert and Lyle Talbot.

There will be a preview performance after Sunday midnight for this attraction and daily matinees all Easter week.

AT THE McCARTHY

Mae West and W. C. Fields, two of the most celebrated figures in the entertainment world, come to the McCarthy Theatre next in their new starring picture, Universal's "My Little Chickadee".

Heralded as one of the outstanding screen combinations of all time, the curvaceous actress and the flaming-nosed funster blend their colorful personalities in a rip-snorting comedy of frontier days. The story is said to be alive with rootin'-tootin' action played against a background of romance, skullduggery and music.

Mae is seen as a glamorous big-city belle who stirs up a mess of trouble when the boys of the wild and woolly frontier start to vie for her affections. Among "the boys" is Fields, as a medicine man and card sharp, who is completely captivated by Mae and strives throughout the film to claim her for his very own.

Well Known Cast.

One of the strongest supporting casts of the year was assembled for the production. A partial list of players includes such favorites as Joseph Calleia, Dick Foran, Donald Meek, Gene Austin with Candy and Coco, Anne Nagel, Margaret Hamilton and Ruth Donnelly.

In the film Miss West sings "Willie of the Valley", a new number written especially for her.

The story and screenplay of "My Little Chickadee" were concocted to assure generous portions of Westion witticisms and Fieldsian fooleries.

Experienced Director.

Edward Cline, who has piloted some of Hollywood's most successful laugh hits, and who was once a member of the famous Keystone Cops of Mack Sennett days, directed the film. Lester Cowan was the producer and Joseph Valentine, noted for his camera work on all of Deanna Durbin's films, did the photography.

AT THE BELLE

"SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON"

With the opening of "Swiss Family Robinson", at the Belle Theatre Monday, film patrons can congratulate themselves on seeing the widely loved classic brought to the screen in well-nigh perfect fashion.

Gene Towne's and Graham Baker's production of the world-famous story for RKO Radio is a triumph and a delight. In every detail, from the forebodings of the idealistic London merchant who sees his sons growing up in a futile and pleasure-mad society and who determines to make men of them at all costs, to the gripping rescue sequence on the tropic island when each member of the family has to make the decision as to the future, the whole film rings true.

As all readers of the Johann David Wyss book will recall, most of the action deals with the adventures of the Robinson family when they are cast away on a South Sea island en route to Australia, where the father of the family had intended to begin a new life.

The spine-tingling scenes of the shipwreck on a barrier reef, the precarious rafting ashore of the family and assorted live stock after the storm subsides, the building of their permanent home on the island in the hollowed-out heart of a giant tamarind tree, the menace of the terrific electrical storm that devastates the island and destroys their half-built boat, the narrow escapes from death of the various members of the family, and finally the dramatic emotional conflict that arises when a rescue vessel is sighted—these and many other thrilling moments make "Swiss Family Robinson" an absorbing and heartwarming screen spectacle.

The cast is extraordinarily well chosen, Thomas Mitchell and Edna Best as the clashing parents, and Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt and Baby Bobby Quillan as the boys, all turning in superlative performances. Edward Ludwig's deft direction keeps the story moving steadily toward its climax, while the amazing settings and entertainment values crammed into the film by Producers Towne and Baker, who collaborated with Walter Ferris on the screen play, make it a real event of the cinematic year. Don't miss this delightful offering.

As timely as Tomorrow's headlines in the film, "The West Wall", to be presented on the same program.

Narrated by famed military strategist, Major George Fielding Eliot, author of the best-seller, "The Ramparts We Watch", it offers a thorough, interesting, comprehensive picture of the geographical theatre of World War II, and the ways in which the belligerent and neutral nations have fortified their borders from the North Sea to the Mediterranean. The potential battle front stretches across Europe for six hundred miles, but the two hundred mile "western front" provides most of the footage for the film. Here France blocks the shortest road to Paris with the Maginot Line, and Germany protects her rich industrial regions with the Siegfried Line or "West Wall." Actual scenes of the fortresses, anti-tank defenses and gun emplacements, give the spectator a vivid and compelling picture of the battle front of today's war.

Impartial, accurate and dramatic, "West Wall" is one of the most important film events of the year.

"The Riveter", a funny color cartoon, and the Belle British Newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

Broadway Melody of 1940

Entertainment plus is at the Bele Theatre today only, matinee and evening. The picture is "Broadway Melody of 1940", and a mere recital of what it has is more of a sincere recommendation for it than all the descriptive phrases in the English language.

First, it teams Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell, world's greatest dancers in the masculine and feminine field. It has the personable George Murphy dancing with them. It includes comedy from Frank Morgan, and what comedy. It has beauty in Florence Rice and Lynne Carver. It has the likeable Ian Hunter. It includes a bevy of clever dancing girls.

Now what more can be said? These aren't all of the delights the picture has but they are enough to show that anyone who misses "Broadway Melody of 1940" misses the entertainment high point of the year.

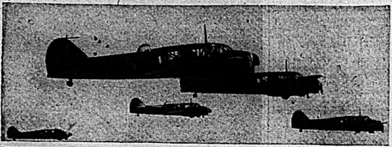
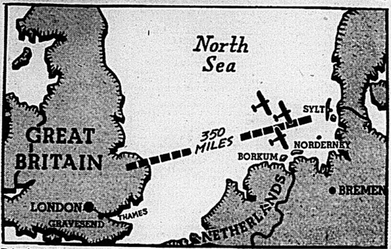
BRITISH BOMBERS DESTROY SYLT AIR BASE





Returning to the scene of their seven-hour bombing attack on the German air base at Sylt Island, Royal Air Force bombers continued their attack with bombs and aerial cameras. Pilots reported to the air ministry that tremendous damage had been done during the continuous night bombing raids and that little of the operational part of the air base was left. Roaring out of the night sky, the British bombers blasted hangars, workshops and slipways in the longest air raid of the war. Following quickly on the heels of the German aerial attack on Scapa Flow, the British bombers carried out their destructive work in successive, almost continuous waves. Moonlight and scattered clouds enabled the British planes to dive on their objective, unleash their bombs and dart to cover before the Germans could recover from their surprise. Bombers, such as the ones that took part in the raid, are shown TOP, while a group of R.A.F. pilots are shown, CENTRE studying a map of their objectives before taking to the air.

TRAINS CRASH AT 70 MILES PER HOUR NEAR MEDICINE HAT

Only three people received minor injuries when a train travelling at an estimated speed of 70 miles per hour crashed head-on into a heavy pusher engine near Medicine Hat. The pusher engine was thrown 200 feet back along the track and track was uptorn for hundreds of yards. The engineer and fireman of the pusher engine jumped from their cab just before the two engines met and both landed clear of the wreckage. The mail car, on the passenger train, LEFT, was burned with all its contents.

HELD IN MURDER SYNDICATE

FOLLOWING IN FATHERS' FOOTSTEPS

A detachment of the Welsh Guards is shown undergoing attack exercises behind the lines in France. They are working through the ruins of a building that was riddled with shellfire in the 1914-1918 war. These Tommies are sons of the men who passed this way 25 years ago.

A CRITICAL EYE IS CAST

Not the slightest detail escapes the critical gaze of Cadet Andrew James Paviour, 4½, as he inspects men chosen from the ranks to be trained as officers "somewhere in England." They are undergoing a training course with the officer cadet training unit of the eastern command. Master Paviour, in his second month as unit mascot, is the son of Lieutenant Quarter-Master A. J. Paviour, who has been in the service for 41 years. And what's more, Master Paviour is paid for his "service" with the army. He receives all of seven cents a day, if you figure it out in Canadian money.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, March 23—(CP)—Trading vigor was lacking on the Toronto Stock Market in the final session of the week in the quiet action prices held fairly close to Thursday's closing level. The market took a holiday yesterday (Good Friday) and will remain closed Monday, resuming business on Tuesday, March 26. Only about 125,000 shares changed hands in today's two-hour session.

Papers were about the strongest Industrial group. Abitibi Pfd. firmed about 5-8 and Great Lakes voting pfd. gained 3-8. Steels, Utilities and Senior Oils held practically unchanged and the foods were lower.

Canada Malting advanced a point to a new high for the year at 39 and Walkers Common firmed 1-4 to 42. Lang and Company Pfd. gained a point and Simpsons Pfd. dropped a point.

The Gold group spotted a few gains. Teck Hughes added 5 cents anud prices advanced a cent or two for Siscoe, Hard Rock, McKenzie, Sheep Creek, Upper Canada, Powell Rouyn and Kirkland Lake. Malartic Goldfields advanced to a new high at 1.26 and closed around 1.22 for a gain of 2 cents.

WALL STREET

New York, March 23—(AP)—Buyers again turned to Air Transport Stocks and Specialties in today's market and left most leaders to shift for themselves in narrow territory. Mild bursts of activity sent the day's volume to around 400,000 shares.

Support was accorded such stocks as Du Pont, Dow Chemical, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Chrysler, Western Union, Spicer Mfg., Bendix and American Telephone.

Almost at a standstill were some Steels, Rails, Utilities, Rubbers, Oils and Coppers, with small declines recorder for several pivotal issues in these categories.

Canadian issues were easy. International Nickel, Dome Mines, Distillers Corporation Seagrams and Lake Shore dipped fractions. Canada 4s, in the Bond Market, were steady.

Reduced Iron for Pigs Will Prevent Anemia

The prolonged winter weather makes it increasingly important that young pigs should receive reduced iron to prevent anemia. Before the pigs are a week old they should receive their first dose, which should consist of enough reduced iron that could be placed on a small Canadian five cent piece. Repeat the dose twice each week until the pigs begin to feed from a trough. It may seem unnecessary to be dosing healthy pigs but an ounce of prevention is certainly worth a pound of cure in raising little pigs.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of March 21 are as follows:

S. A. CAMPAIGN IS NOW OVER THE HALF-WAY MARK

Major Alderman States Response so Far Has Been Good but Much More Needed

"Over the half-way mark," state Salvation Army Campaign officials today as they reported that $1,775 had been contributed to the coffers of the fund. The response has been fine, Major Alderman said, but there is still a long road to go.

"We have faith in the people of Belleville that they once again will come to the fore with donations in the same generous spirit as they have before," he added.

Has Noble History of Service

None of the Christian denominations have a more noble or inspiring history than the Salvation Army. It is just seventy-five years since the young Methodist minister, William Booth and his wife Catherine started the East End Mission in London, England.

A little later the name was changed to the Christian Mission. In a declaration of its principles, the sentence appeared, "The Christian Mission is a Salvation Army." The name and the organization "clicked." It became an army with military titles, military discipline and a most militant program.

From the beginning the Social Work of the Army has gone hand-in-hand with its Religious work,—or to speak more correctly, its social work has been part of its religious work.

"The Army" has become world-wide in its operations. While standing steadily to its fundamental principles it has shown a wonderful elasticity and adaptability in dealing with people of various races and of different orders of civilization.

The Great War came as a challenge to the Salvation Army and they met it nobly. They had members and friends in all the embattled nations.

The Army preaches a "Free Salvation." It is told how during the war its ministration of bodily comforts was free to those who could not pay, their sole qualification being their need. The Salvation Army doughnuts gained international fame, and the darning of socks for the soldiers and other little home-like attentions were a wonderful help in keeping up both the "morale" and the moral strength of men going through a terrible ordeal.

Churches to Feature Special Easter Music

The thunderous symphony of organs and the melodic harmonies of sweet-voiced choirs in the glorious anthems of the festival will usher in Easter in city churches tomorrow.

In every church in the city special Easter music will be featured while special speakers and ministers of the various denominations will bring forth the glad message from pulpits that "Christ is Arisen."

The beauties of the East lily and other glorious flora emblematic of the season of the year will add their lustre and beauty to the many services.

By far the most impressive Easter season in years, it is expected that Belleville church-goers will turn out in numbers hitherto unexcelled to observe the sacred occasion.

Tweed

Tweed, Mar. 23 (Special).—There was a very heavy police court docket in Tweed Police Court on Thursday when several persons appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd charged with various offences. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., prosecuted on behalf of the Crown.

Clifford Woods of Actinolite pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking, entering and theft. He was sentenced to not less than six months and not more than nine months in the Ontario Reformatory. Clayton Woods who was similarly charged also pleaded guilty and was given two years suspended sentence. Lloyd Woodcock of Actinolite pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving stolen goods and received a sentence of one month in the county jail. Provincial Constable Arthur Dymond worked in conjunction with Chief J. C. Hayes in the above three cases.

Henry Bovard, Henry Duquette and Sandford Masters charged with disorderly conduct were sentenced to a fine of five dollar sand costs or ten days. The first paid the fine. The others went to jail. Arthur Kleinsteuber, Sulphide, charged with keeping a common gaming house, paid a fine of ten dollars and costs, thirty dollars and twenty-five cents in all.

G. H. Mitchell, Trenton, was found guilty of fraud arising out of issuing a worthless cheque. He was given one year's suspended sentence, and given three months in which to make restitution and pay the court costs.

Arthur King, alias Arthur Kane, of no known address, charged with vagrancy admitted a long criminal record of 22 convictions. He also admitted to being a drug addict. He was given one month in the county jail.

John Dafoe, Tweed, summoned to appear when charged with a breach of the Adolescent School Act failed to put in an appearance when his name was called. A bench warrant was issued for his arrest. His son, Henry Dafoe, was remanded in the care of the Children's Aid Society pending the arrest and appearance of his father in court.

ABERHART GOV'T EDGES INTO LEAD

Election of eight members was announced yesterday on top of 19 announced on election night, Thursday.

Treasurer Meets Defeat

Hon. Lucien Maynard, Minister of Municipal Affairs re-elected in Beaver River, became the fifth Cabinet Minister re-elected. Provincial Treasurer Solon Low met defeat. The two other Ministers, Hon. W. A. Fallow, Minister of Public Works, and Hon. D. B. Mullen, Minister of Agriculture, were leading the field in Vermilion and Camrose respectively.

Second counts, and possibly more, will be needed to determine the results in the remaining 30 ridings. The first second-count rural victory went to the Social Crediters last night when G. E. Taylor, last government candidate to enter the campaign, defeated two opponents in Drumheller.

Earlier yesterday four Social Crediters and three Independents were announced winners of seats in the closest election in Alberta's history. In addition to Maynard and Taylor the Social Cred.. victory column yesterday included Fred Anderson in Calgary's five-member constituency, William Tomyn in Willingdon and Roy S. Lee in Tabor.

Three Independents In

The three independents whose election was announced yesterday were Mayor Andrew Davison of Calgary, J. J. Bowlen, Liberal member of the last assembly, and J. C. Mahaffy, a barrister, all in Calgary.

Scrutineers worked all night in Edmonton's five-member constituency but after seven counts had not announced the election of any one apart from Hon. E. C. Manning, Provincial Secretary, whose return had been conceded on Thursday night.

J. Percy Page, the coach of the famous Edmonton Grads basketball team, headed the seventh recount in Edmonton but was still 1,172 votes short of the announced qualifying quota, 7,291 votes. He was more than 1,500 in front of his nearest opponents, including D. M. Duggan, former Alberta Conservative leader, running on the "Citizen's Slate" in the Independent movement.

Alberta's voting system—unique in Canada—requires candidates in the 47 single-member seats to obtain a majority of all votes cast before they are elected. In the five-member constituencies of Calgary and Edmonton a fixed quota of the total vote must be obtained.

Only Guarded Comments

With the second counts in rural ridings not starting until all ballot boxes are in the hands of the returning officers, the completion of the result will perhaps take days. Political leaders made only guarded comments on the outcome.

Provincial Secretary Manning said last night that he believed the result proves the government has received a mandate to continue its policies and reform program.

Premier Aberhart preferred not to make any statement until the result is more decisive and a similar attitude was taken by C. A. Ronning, leader of the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, although the C.C.F. had failed to elect a candidate or place any in a leading position.

Mayor Davison of Calgary, one of the leaders in the Independent movement, confined his comment to his own personal victory. He was elected on the first count along with Premier Aberhart.

NEW GERMAN SUB ONSLAUGHT

In 1938, British imports of Danish foods included 128,000 tons of butter and 86,776,000 dozen eggs, about one fourth and one third, respectively, of total British consumption.

The latest Danish sinkings raised that country's losses to 28 ships totalling 59,309 tons, about four per cent of her merchant fleet.

Stormier Days Ahead.

Suggesting the probability of stormier days ahead were reports of a large concentration of German submarines just outside Norwegian waters and the statement of a German commander to a Norwegian fishing captain that submarines soon would be "as common as fishing boats".

British warships today discovered rafts from the Danish steamship Charkow, reported sunk, probably by torpedo, yesterday. The body of a seaman was on one raft, but there was no other trace of the fifteen reported missing.

On the British credit side was the sinking of the German steamship Heddernheim near the entrance to the Baltic Sea, reported yesterday as the first such action by a British submarine.

Some quarters regarded the location as a tip that Britain is starting a campaign to block Scandinavian ore shipments to Germany in a spot at which the allied blockade has been leaking.

Express Skepticism.

British newspapers expressed skepticism over the extent of a tour which three United States newspapermen were allowed to take on the Island of Sylt following the Royal Air Force raid on that German base Tuesday night. The reporters had said they saw no evidence of extensive damage.

"Nazis bluff U.S. reporters," ran the Telegraph headline, and others printed extracts from the Americans' stories. The Mail said Germany was "using her favorite method of giving the world one per cent truth in the hope they would swallow 99 per cent falsehood."

The Air Ministry insisted R.A.F. fliers had confirmed success of the operation Sylt "by observation", although saying that weather conditions and German ground defences made it impossible to obtain good photographs of the damage.

The Daily Express suggested that since "the Germans do not appear satisfied" with the results of the raid on Sylt and Hornum "give them another raid." It declared:

"The Germans say that Sylt and Hornum were almost undamaged by the R.A.F. raid. American journalists in Germany say they went to Sylt by train across the Hindenburg dam and found most of the British bombs had landed in sand-hill.

"Italian journalists say the Americans did not go to Sylt by train at all but borrowed Goering's airplane to make the trip and turned back when they were half-way to their destination.

"Sir Kingsley Wood (Air Secretary) ought to accept the Nazi story. The Germans do not appear satisfied with the results of our last raid. So give them another raid, Sir Kingsley!

"Send another lot and have another shot. If at first you don't succeed, try, try again!"

PREMIER REYNAUD CLINGS TO POWER

Talks with Gamelin

Before the meeting of the War Committee Daladier had a long talk with General Gamelin.

The new government started its work with the Paris Press, Conservative and left-wing alike, applauding the decision to retain office despite its slim majority in the vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday.

Five deputies listed among those who abstained in the vote announced today they are favorable to the government and one announced himself against. These changes applied on the basis of yesterday's vote give the government a majority now of 11, or 273 for, 157 against the 105 still listed as abstainers.

Meeting Lasts Two and a Half Hours

The meeting of the War Committee at the Premier's office lasted two and a half hours. Immediately after it was announced a "higher committee of information and propaganda is to be established, attached to the new information ministry headed by Ludovic-Oscar Frossard.

Chief of the Committee will be Jean Giraudoux, who has been head of the Information Service since last July. Creation of an information ministry was one of the main demands of critics of the Daladier Government and Reynaud met this demand when he formed his ministry.

After a crisis that saw former Premier Daladier fall Wednesday, Reynaud succeeded him Thursday and barely survived his first test in parliament yesterday, the new government began to gain strength.

Most of the Press rallied behind him with praise for sticking to his post against strong opposition rather than plunge the country into the confusion of another crisis and criticised the hostile deputies for playing politics in time of war.

Reynaud's statement to the chamber yesterday plotted a course closely paralleling that of Daladier's—vigorous prosecution of the war, but "sparing in lives," and a relentless effort to "crush" the Communist party, which he called "an organization of treason."

After hearing his message with little evidence of enthusiasm, 268 deputies voted approval for the former Finance Minister's coalition government, 156 voted against it and 111 others refused to vote and had to be considered hostile.

"Patchwork Job."

Chief criticisms from rightist deputies were that the cabinet was a "patchwork job" and that inclusion of Socialist members might make the government lean too dangerously to the left.

"France expected a war cabinet and instead it got a smart patchwork job," Deputy Galimand said.

The presence of the Socialists, he said, might embarrass the government "in the necessary repression of Communist propaganda."

Deputy Albert Paulin, Socialist, shouted back: "How would you expect to achieve national unity if you exclude from national action the strongest party in the country?"

(The Socialist Party under Leon Blum, constitutes the largest bloc in the Chamber, although it has not an absolute majority).

Reynaud will have a breathing spell until April 2 since parliament will be in recess until that date.

Cabinet Decides to Hold On

The cabinet's decision to risk its future on the narrow balance was arrived at during a special session held immediately after the vote. It was foreshadowed in the Chamber by Reynaud's assertion that "we will hold fast, with teeth clenched, because we are animated by the will to fight and the certainty of victory.

L'Ordre, Conservative newspaper said editorially: "We express the hope that events will support the young and active intelligence of Paul Reynaud. Power fell to him at an anxious moment of the war. His adversaries should have taken that into account. His task will be heavy but that of Clemenceau was no less so when he took power in 1917".

Premier Congratulated

In the same newspaper, the noted commentator Pertinax congratulated the Premier for his decision to stay in office. "If Reynaud and his colleagues had been so weak as to resign last night, the opinion would have prevailed that France was ripe for a 'white peace', for acceptance of Hitler's conquest", Pertinax wrote.

L'Oeuvre, organ of the Radical Socialist party, expressed a similar opinion. "Paul Reynaud faced the question whether he should remain or go", the paper said. "He decided to remain and was right in so doing since he had an absolute majority and, as far as he could do so, he had to avoid a new crisis.

"He even had a large majority if the abstentions are not counted as hostile votes—and one is perfectly right in not counting them as hostile since the abstainers gave their obstentions a sense of "indications" but of indications so varied that they alone know what they mean".

Stable Combination.

London, Mar. 23 (CP).—The News Chronicle said today that the new French cabinet of Paul Reynaud, although not formed on a national basis, "probably represents as stable a combination as any France can find today."

"One of the most satisfactory aspects of the new government would seem to be the youth — politically speaking — of a number of its members," the News Chronicle said. "In Reynaud's government France has a ministry which is shown by its personnel and by its declared policy to be ready to fight the war vigorously to a finish."

The Times predicted Reynaud would give France "the same inspiring leadership over the whole field of the war" as he provided in the economic field as finance minister.

"His judgment has been amply proved by the way in which all his pleasant warnings of the past few years, neglected at the time, were afterwards justified by events, and perhaps even more by the success with which he retrieved the apparently desperate financial and economic position after he took over the ministry of finance," it added.

Trusts Country.

"He trusted the country to respond to his call for work and sacrifice, and by this trust he restored the nation's own confidence in its powers of recuperation. As Prime Minister he should be able to give the same inspiring leadership over the whole field of the war."

The Daily Telegraph said the outstanding factor in the French situation is the "fierce, fixed and unanimous" determination of the entire French nation to prosecute the war to the utmost.

"What France requires from her governments is that every field of activity, in the three fighting services, in politics, in diplomacy, in economics and in finance, make the fullest possible time, to grasp and keep the initiative and to forestall the enemy.

"If Reynaud is not predestined for that tremendous role, then it will be some other. So long as the spirit of France's indomitable will prevails, victory is certain."

FRASER AND HAIG SPEAK AT RALLY HELD IN TRENTON

Wm. A. Fraser Ex-M.P., Appeals to Harry Cory to Withdraw From Contest in Favor of Haig

URGES UNITY

McLean Haig Shows Letter From Rt. Hon. Mr. King to Effect He is Recognized as Official Liberal Candidate

Trenton, Ont., March 23 (Special)—Dynamic William (Billy) A. Fraser, ex-sitting member for Northumberland riding, and veteran of many a political campaign, couched his lance in the joust of the Liberal party's election tournament in South Hastings here Thursday night, when he issued a dramatic appeal to Harry R. Cory, Liberal, running as third party in the fight "to come back into the fold and present a united front to defeat the head of Toryism that is rearing itself in the riding."

The appeal came as a prelude to a fiery speech in which the speaker unleashed a slashing attack on Col. George A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, and Jamieson Bone, National Government candidate who is opposing Mr. Fraser in Northumberland.

Heckling of a mild sort interrupted various speakers but no signs of a demonstration were visible, the most of the "out-front" remarks drawing laughter, and well-delivered returns from the speakers.

Senator Salter Hayden, and Mr. McLean Haig, the candidate also addressed the meeting, with the latter effectively "squelching" a heckler when he stated that "at least I have the will-power and am man enough to admit I am wrong. I was wrong three years ago when I spoke on the railway situation." (cheers)

W. A. Fraser Advises Cory

Mr. Fraser, in his opening remarks stated that it was with deep personal regret that he found Liberalism in the riding of South Hastings divided at such a time. "I say with all sincerity and as a friend, with no malice or bad feelings, that I regret to find that a fellow-townsman has acted under ill-advice in an attempt to split the Liberal party here."

"I want to say to Harry (Mr. Cory) to get up in the morning, take a cold bath, wipe the mist from his eyes, bring in his followers and present a united front to defeat the head of Toryism in the riding. I say this sincerely as a friend."

"I further regret," Mr. Fraser continued, "that Harry is not standing at my right on this platform tonight helping us carry the Liberal banner to victory. This is the place where he should be, not on the highways splitting the Liberal party. I express the deepest sympathy for him, in that the ill-advice under which he is acting can result in suffering for one man, for that is the only way it can end."

TAKE TWO HAIG .. ..5.. 6

Urges Support For Haig.

"But in view of the fact that Mr. Cory has determined to carry his determination through, I can do nothing else by ask my Liberal and Conservative friends to gather in the support of Mr. Haig," continued Mr. Fraser. "A deplorable condition exists, which, as I said before, can end in suffering for one man, because Mr. Cory has not been recognized by the Liberal party, nor will he be recognized after the outcome of the election, for he is only adding support to the opposition."

He declared he was appealing to Mr. Cory to come back into the fold to help defeat Dr. Manion and Col. Drew.

For the election, he added, was but a crusade against those who would like to expel from the Dominion's structure, a free parliament made up of different political parties.

In his attack on Col. Drew, Mr. Fraser criticised the Ontario Conservative leader's tactics in the present election campaign and during the last provincial election.

Mr. Fraser said that the result of the embargo on American publications instituted by the Bennett government meant a decrease in export of one-third of newsprint paper to the United States.

Record of Liberal Government.

Defending his own record and that of the King administration, Mr. Fraser stated that considerable time had been spent in locating what is now the largest air-base on the North American continent.

"I am proud to say that in 1929 the Liberal party appropriated 29 millions of dollars to start the Trenton airbase. The then Minister of National Defence put this appropriation through the House of Commons, and by so doing started Canada's preparations for war."

This effort, he charged, was cut off in 1932 when the vote of funds was cut. Elementary aviation was eliminated and the base turned into a relief camp.

Canada's Air Establishment.

In 1935, Mr. Fraser stated, the air establishment was extended and efforts speeded up and expanded.

Mr. Fraser attacked Col. Drew's opposition to the manner in which Mr. Mackenzie King's government was conducting the war and with regard to co-operation with Great Britain.

The speaker pointed out that Canada possesses the most efficient trans-Canada service which is co-operating with Great Britain in building up aviation.

Mr. Fraser stated that Canadians are producing along the lines of the program initiated in 1937, the highest type of planes being built. "We have now the highest types of planes in operation in Canada", a fact which he said answers Col. Drew and Dr. Manion who are attacking the King government.

Mr. Fraser called the contract for guns, a contract that has been "the best contribution for the protection of Canada, let by that gallant French-Canadian, LaFleche."

If any town in Canada has ever been favored by a government, it is Trenton. Trenton has been the recipient of many favors at the hands of the Liberal government. Ask the merchants. Then ask the Tories what they have done and listen to the rebound.

"I want to drive home the viciousness of the Tory attacks in this election, in a district which in the past has suffered under the autocratic system. Never again will a Tory machine rear its head in South Hastings."

"Get Cory behind Liberalism and make a united effort to elect Mr. Haig," he said.

"Vote Cory," shouted a voice from the audience.

Urges Support of Official Candidate.

Paying no attention the Northumberland candidate reiterated his statement, "We all must get behind the official candidate and elect him on March 26," he said.

"You want to get behind Cory yourself. Vote Cory, the people's choice," yelled the voice.

"Let that voice from the wilderness go back to Mr. Cory and plead with him to get behind the party, instead of (the voice) shooting jabs at me," retorted Mr. Fraser.

"Mr. Haig is the official candidate for the riding and as such should carry the banner of Liberalism," he continued.

"Mackenzie King recognized Cory tonight on the radio," a woman's voice shrilled from the back seats. (Laughter.)

"I know you fellows, I have dealt with you before," shouted Mr. Fraser. A rumble of conversation came from the back benches and finally a man's voice shouted: "King will recognize Cory on March 26th."

Mr. Haig Produces Letter.

In a brief address Mr. McLean Haig, the candidate, stated that he did not intend to deal in personalities, but with the issues involved. "In a crisis like the present," he said, "any man aspiring to political office, who deals in personalities, is betraying the trust of the people whose support he is requesting.

"My opponent says that if he is elected he will be the official candidate" . . . "King says so", shouted a voice.

Mr. Haig produced a letter and held it aloft, explaining it was a letter received from the office of the Prime Minister, and that it was open for inspection at any time by anyone.

The situation regarding his official candidature had been grossly misrepresented, he said, declaring that he was not in favor of railway amalgamation.

"You said so, a few years ago", a voice yelled.

Explaining that he had been in close touch with the railway situation for a number of years, Mr. Haig effectively put the quietus on heckling when he stated. "I am man enough and big enough to admit the fact when I am wrong. I was wrong four years ago." (Prolonged cheering.)

The rest of his remarks were confined to the war effort of the King administration, especially in the Air Force and Naval branches of the service. He closed with an appeal for the support of his listeners.

Senator Says Government Experienced

Senator Salter Hayden K.C., followed W. A. Fraser with a review of the achievements of the King Government in the years after 1935. Senator Hayden promised he would make a speech without abusing anybody. He pictured the King Government as an experienced body of men efficiently equipped to carry out Canada's war effort for the next four years. He asked his listeners to vote for a candidate who had served them in the past, a candidate they knew something about, not a member of the opposition whom they knew nothing about. He praised King Government war preparation telling his audience that the War Supply Board was so responsible that the British and French Governments had asked permission to deal with it directly as absolute evidence of its ability. The King Government, he said, comprised the brains and business ability of Canada. Senator Hayden talked about the War Price and Trade Board, Wool and Fuel administration. Canada is assured of an adequate supply of sugar throughout the duration of the war and until six months afterwards, he told his listeners.

The fuel administrator at Ottawa is another dollar-a-year man, Senator Hayden said perhaps the most outstanding man in Canada to handle the job. The Fuel administrator is a Conservative, the speaker stated but he has been retained regardless of politics for "we know that Canada's best brains are needed in winning the war.

Praising the Liberal Government's war effort Senator Hayden suggested that Dr. Manion and Col. Drew take a trip to a section of Canada where they would see complete co-ordination of all of the Dominion's forces. Senator Hayden touched on the country's economic front declaring that Canada's war effort can only be as good as its economic condition which he said was in excellent shape.

Dr. Manion he said has proposed to bonus the oil and coal producers in the West, raise trade tariffs in the Maritimes and Quebec and cancel radio licenses in Ontario. "Dr. Manion may give these back but you can bet your bottom dollar that he has planned to get revenue out of you in some other way. We have to face the music", he said, "the people will have to pay added taxes for the duration of the war." In closing Senator Hayden said that it was ridiculous to say that Mr. King had scuttled Parliament. Mr. King dissolved Parliament he explained, to find out if the people were behind him before he legislated stricter prosecution of the war. Mr. King only wanted to know if the public approved of the government's war effort.

Story of Passion Told in Song

The story of the Passion, as related by St. Luke, was sung by the Christ Church male choir last night in Bach's St. Luke's Passion play in Church Church under the direction of Choir-leader George N. Maybee. The church was filled to hear this unique and outstanding musical event which tells in words and music of world's greatest sacrifice.

The part of the The Saviour was sung by J. G. Wilshire, while the Evangelist was portrayed by A. W. Simpson and Pilot by Harry Redfern. The two malefactor thieves brought A. B. Saunders and Arthur Brooker into these roles. The entire Christ Church choir provided a splendid musical background for the soloists and the presentation was heralded as one of the best Easter Passion presentations heard in Belleville.

Americans Prolong Series By Defeating Detroit 5-4 In 2nd Game at New York

Amerks Down Two Goals With Four Minutes Left to Play, Put on Rally

USE TWELVE MEN

Rangers and Boston Meet in Hub City on Sunday Night in Third Game

By the Canadian Press

Expressions of confidence came from both camps today as New York Rangers and Boston Bruins prepared to continue their Stanley Cup playoff argument on Boston ice in the third game of their best-of-seven series.

"We looked better in losing than the Bruins did in winning," declared Manager Lester Patrick of Thursday's 4-2 loss to the National Hockey League champions. Despite the loss, Patrick stuck to his original assertion that the Rangers would take the series in six games.

Cagey Art Ross, head of the Boston outfit, was just as high on the chances of his club. Ross feels, however, that the round will go the limit as it did last year when the Bruins won out and then continued to be crowned Stanley Cup winners.

Betting men in Boston were inclined to call it a toss-up for the third game tomorrow night, with the Bruins 7-5 favorites to win the series. The price was quoted despite the fact that Bruins may be minus Mel Hill, wingman on the Roy Conacher, Bill Cowley, Hill line, for the rest of the series because of an injury suffered in the second game.

Hill Sprains Ankle

Hill suffered a badly twisted ankle when he tangled with big Murray (Muzz) Patrick. Physicians have said that he definitely will be out of the third game .

Patrick, meanwhile, blamed the loss of the second game on "poor officiating." Thirteen penalties were handed out in the hectic first period, most of them to the New Yorkers who stopped the Bruins 4-0 in the first game last Tuesday night in New York.

At the same time as Bruins and Rangers tangle in their third game, New York Americans and Detroit Red Wings will clash in the deciding contest of their best-of-three round for the right to meet Toronto Maple Leafs in the playoffs semi-final.

Americans prolonged the series with a spectacular 5-4 victory last night at home over the Wings, scoring three goals in the last four minutes of the game. The third game will be played Sunday in Detroit. The Maple Leafs, winners over Chicago Black Hawks in two straight games in another round, have been marking time waiting for the Americans-Detroit series to end. The Leafs defeated Chicago 3-2 at home and then wound up the series with a 2-1 victory at Chicago Thursday.

Three Regulars Out

Art Chapman smashed home Charley Conacher's rebound with 21 seconds to play to give Americans their victory last night.

The Americans, with three regulars out of action and some of the others playing on nerve alone, staged a terrific three-goal rally in the last four minutes to wipe out a 4-2 lead the Wings had set up with a three-goal splurge of their own earlier in the period. It finished that way, in a blaze of goals, after two periods of dull, scrambling hockey.

Altogether seven goals were fired in the last 20 minutes. They had played a scoreless first period and a 1-1 tie through the second with Mud Bruneteau and Charley Conacher the scorers. Hooley Smith gave the Americans the lead for the first time soon after the last period opened. Then what everybody had been expecting happened.

The 12 tired Americans wilted and Bruneteau, Joe Fisher and Connie Brown shot pucks by Earl Robertson within a few minutes of each other.

Planted in Defence Area

There were four minutes left to play and still the Wings had the two-goal edge. Suddenly the Detroit house fell in on all sides. The Americans planted themselves in the Detroit defence area.

Johnny Sorrell fired a hot shot that Thompson caught and juggled in the air. Up came Tommy Anderson's stick and the score was 4-3. Then 63 seconds later, Anderson passed into the left side of the Wings' defence. Smith picked up the pass, cut across the goalmouth and fired under Thompson. The score was tied.

Harvey Jackson took it up from there a couple of minutes later. He passed to Conacher in centre ice. Conacher bullied his way down left wing, swept around the net and laid the puck on Chapman's stick five feet in front of the goal.

KILBY MacDONALD WINS CALDER CUP FOR BEST ROOKIE

Wally Stanowski of Leafs Only Player Close in Vote With Ranger Star

BORN IN OTTAWA

Joined Ranger Farm System After Playing Junior and Some Senior Hockey

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, March 23 (CP)—Apple of Lester Patrick's hockey-wise eye, Kilby MacDonald today was declared the National Hockey League's most outstanding rookie of 1939-40 and winner of the Frank Calder trophy.

The 24-year-old forward, who fitted immediately into New York Rangers' scientific attacking methods, was named in the annual poll taken by The Canadian Press among 28 hockey writers in N.H.L. cities. The only other player to poll a sizable vote was Wally Stanowski, Toronto's hurtling defenceman.

It was the first time the award had gone to any youngster after a climb from the Ranger farm system. The C.P. rookie poll has been taken since 1933 and the trophy awarded by hte league president, Frank Calder, has been presented since 1937.

But it was a notable success for the careful development plan Manager Patrick had set up for his ivory, with a junior amateur team at Edmonton, another amateur club in the Eastern United States League and a minor professional holding in the International-American League.

19 Voted MacDonald

Nineteen writers made MacDonald their first choice among freshmen and three others placed him three and second by 10.

Young Kilby's career doesn't pattern the Patrick plan exactly. Unlike most Ranger discoveries, he doesn't come from Western Canada but from Ottawa—where he was born and played his first hockey.

From Ottawa Montagnards juniors he went to Lake Placid, N.Y. in 1933-34 and from there to Kirkland Lake, Ont., in 1934-35 and Noranda, Que., in 1935-36. On both the northern teams he played on a forward line with his brother, Albert.

MacDonald wa[illegible] into the Patrick plan in 1936-37 with New York Rovers and aws with the Philadelphia Int-Am team in 1937-38 and 1938-39. Last fall at the Winnipeg training camp he was selected with Alf Pike to fill the breach caused by departure of Cecil Dillon, George Allen and Bill Carse.

MacDonald follows an illustrious line of rookie award winners: Carl Voss, in 1933 Russ Blinco, 1934; Dave Sweeney) Schriner, 1935; Mike Karakas, 1936; Sylvanus Apps, 1937; Cully Dahlstrom, 1938; and Frank Brimsek, 1939.

HARRY ROLLINS ON EXECUTIVE OF THE O.A.S.A.

Association Defeats Motion to Increase Pitching Distance and Length of Base Paths

TO HELP SOLDIERS

1941 Convention Will be Held in St. Catharines After Vote Taken

A resolution was adopted at the O.A.S.A. annual convention giving the executive "full power to take any action they deem necessary in promoting and providing softball for soldiers in Ontario."

Secretary Verne McIllwraith of Guelph in his report said "affiliated associations should afford co-operation to military units in their own districts; organization ability should be proffered in organizing leagues among the troops, if possible, or invitations extended for them to enter teams in the district association."

Charles Lewis, president of the Toronto softball league, told the meeting the sports service league anticipated providing equipment to 150 military teams.

Sponsored by Toronto delegates for the second successive year, a resolution to increase the pitching distance from 38 to 40 feet and the distance between bases from 50 to 55 feet was defeated.

Fail to Convince

They failed to convince the majority of the visiting members that adoption of the resolution would open up the game and improve it tremendously. They claimed by increasing the two distances there would be less strikeouts and more base hits.

S. H. Armstrong of Toronto was elected honorary president by acclamation and H. S. Briggs honorary vice-president. H. K. Champion of Simcoe was re-elected president by acclamation and Harry Sniderman of Toronto was named first vice-president with Dave Leecther of Peterborough as second vice-president.

Secretary McIlwraith and treasurer W. L. Alquire of St. Catharines were returned by acclamation. Members voted to the executive were: H. Rollins of Belleville, A. Jeffeeress of Hamilton, H. D. Ovenden of Wainfleet, J. R. Brush of Sarnia, E. Simpson of Kingston and J. H. Glenny of Toronto.

The 1941 convention will be held in St. Catharinese.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By the Canadian Press

Clearwater, Fla., March 23 —(AP)—Rookie outfielder Pat Mullin of the Tigers has a pet dream. He dreams of hitting a ball over the scoreboard in centrefield in Briggs Stadium at Detroit. This would mean a carry of 500 feet or more.

"You'd be surprised to know how many balls I've hit over that board in the last two years," said Pat dreamily.

Sarasota, Fla.—A trade between Boston Bees and New York Giants is going through the rumor mill as a result of a long huddle yesterday by Casey Stengel and Bill Terry, the respective managers. The Bees want an outfielder, leading to speculation that Jo-Jo Moore might join the Boston clubs.

Havana, Cuba.—It was reported here that Johnny Vander Meer, who pitched his way to fame with two no-hit, no-run games, will soon be on his way back to the minors if Manager Bill McKecknie of Cincinnati Reds can obtain waivers for him.

Vander Meer, unfortunately, was accredited with the loss as the Cuban All-Stars pinned the Cincinnati club's ears back 11-7 Thursday.

(Fort Myers, Fla.—Rapid Robert Feller is in form and Cleveland Indians are happy in spite of their third straight exhibition setback yesterday. Feller blanked Rochester Redbirds in his four-inning mound stint, fanning eight, walking one and allowing two hits.

4th Thurlow

4th. Thurlow — The members of Bethany W. M. S. held a dinner and quilting on Wednesday, 20th, at the home of Mrs. George Denike.

Mrs. Ernest Wilson has returned home from Hamilton where she spent the week end with her son, Charlie, who underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis in a Hamilton hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cole and Mr. and Mrs. Grant Cole and children were recent visitors of Mr.. and Mrs. Perry Badgley, Deseronto.

Friends of Mrs. J. McMath are sorry to learn that she has been ill at the home of her sister, Mrs. W. Sparrow.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Yateman entertained Rev. Armstrong and Lyle, also Mr. Swain and Mrs. Parrow, 3rd line, to dinner on Sunday.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Chambers on the arrival of a son.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Martin and Duane attended "Open Night" at Belleville Collegiate on Wednesday evening of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Sheffield and Carl attended the funeral this week of their grandfather, Mr. Rodney Embury of Carmel.

Mr. Kenneth Bradshaw of Belleville was a week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Bradshaw.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Yateman were tea hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Martin on Sunday evening last.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Miller called Saturday evening on the former's sister, Mrs. Robt. McMechan of Melrose, who is still confined to her bed as a result of her serious accident four months ago.

Mr. Thos. Leslie took dinner on Thursday of last week at the Miller home.

Mrs. Frank Walker, 3rd line, spent Tuesday of this week with Mrs. G. Denike.

JOHN PAYCHECK NOT CONSIDERED MATCH FOR LOUIS

Experts Think He Will Have Hard Time Surviving Three or Four Rounds

HAS FAIR RIGHT

Paycheck Knows How to Move Around but Takes Long Time to Warm Up

(By Sid Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer) Pompton Lakes, N.J., March 23.—(AP)—Take an automobile for instance, Benny Leonard pointed out.

The former lightweight King was expounding on Johnny Paychek a favorite subject these Spring afternoons.

"An engine has to be in high gear to run best, doesn't it?" asked Benny. "Well, the same goes for Paychek. It takes him a couple of rounds to get warmed up and going good. So, if he gets by those first two heats next Friday night, he's going to give Joe Louis trouble. You can write that right on your cuff from your old pal, Benny Leonard".

Surprisingly, a lot of the boys around Paychek's training camp, up here on the thawing-out shores of Pompton Lake, thought maybe Benny had something there. The writers and other "experts" had driven out from New York, expecting to come back more convinced than ever that the Des Moines heavyweight could barely escape gettting killed in his date with the Brown Bomber in Madison Square Gardens next week.

No Chance Against Louis

And after watching him go five rounds with a trio of fellows dressed up as sparring partners, it looked like the violin-playing fighting man had about as much chance of toppling the ring's boss man as he had of taking off under his own power on a trip to the stratosphere.

He just doesn't have the stuff to turn that trick. However, there are three things you discover about his ring ability in watching him work, despite the woefulness of what passes as his sparmates. First, he does know how to move around in the accredited ring style. Secondly, he can punch pretty good with a short right hand to the head, and thirdly, he digs a left hook into the body with some authority. With this equipment, he's a good run-of-the-mine heavyweight, capable of giving any of 'em a busy evening. But the boy who beats Joe is going to have a little extra "oomph".

Wallbridge Beaten By Glen Miller 13-3

In an exhibition hockey game played at the Hume Arena last night the Glen Miller "paper-makers" soundly trounced the Wallbridge "Townhallers" 13 to 3. Although the losers scored first, the Glen Miller sextette led 4-2 and 8-2 by periods.

The game was marred with a serious accident in the last period when "Lum" Carson, Wallbridge goalie, sustained a broken nose and nasty gash on the face when hit by a flying puck. The losers finished the piece without the services of a regular goalie, Jim Semark doing remarkable service in the Wallbridge nets without the conventional goal-keeper's equipment.

Goyer scored two goals for Wallbridge, Ronsky getting the third. Johnson notched four and Davis, Beale and Anderson two each for Glen Miller. Inglis and Beale also scored for the winners. On Monday night the City Industrial finals will be played at the Hume Arena between the Point Anne "cementmen" and the Alemite "lubricants" to ring down the curtain on local hockey activities for the current season.

Cliff Howie, of Belleville, and Bennie Bowen, former Belleville and Trenton goalkeeper, handled the game as referees.

Sydney Millionaires Confident of Win

Ottawa, March 23—(CP)—Coach Bill Gill of Sydney Millionaires figures he has a sure thing in the Allan Cup hockey playdown against Hull Volants but he hedges about the result of tonight's third game in the best-of-five series.

"It may be asking the boys a little too much to win the series in straight games, but we are confident we'll win the playoff without too much trouble," Gill said. Millionaires won the first two games at home 6-0 and 6-2.

The teams arrived on the same train last night from the Cape Breton Island City and were scheduled to hold a light skating drill today.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

There have been rumours circulating around the Oshawa hockey circles pertaining to the question of the Motor City returning to the senior O.H.A. race in quest of the Allan Cup next season. Other papers carried sports stories regarding the question, but "Brother George" Campbell of the Oshawa Times, refrained from comments until after witnessing the Toronto Goodyear-Kirkland Lake "Blue-Devils" game in Toronto Wednesday. After seeing "Jo Jo" Graboski in action with the Blue-Devils, Scribe Campbell convicted himself in the following comment:

"Jo-Jo" Graboski was the hero of the night. We would venture that 90 per cent of the crowd was cheering for the Devils, the Tiremen being very unpopular even with Toronto fans. About 200 Oshawa fans were on hand cheering for their own "Jo-Jo" and the popularity of the one-eyed sensation, who can still carry a puck better than any player that has ever worn an Oshawa uniform, was obvious. The crowd gave him tremendous ovations. The same "Jo-Jo" with his color and crowd appeal can pack the fans into any rink (especially here in Oshawa) to more than make-up for his high rate of expenses. He would certainly look good with Oshawa's senior team next winter.

Old Father Time shows no favorites. For instance a 12-year career in the N.H.L. ended just three years ago last night when Lionel (Big Train) Conacher hung up his skates in Detroit after helping the Montreal Maroons win a 5-1 victory over the Red Wings. During his sports career Conacher's endeavours were always colorful. He is now Chairman of the O.A.C. and a member of parliament. Then in other sports, it was just one year ago yesterday that Lou Gehrig missed his first ball game with the New York Yankees since he joined the club in 1925. Gehrig sat on the bench and watched the Yanks win an exhibition game. Last May Gehrig withdrew permanently from baseball, crippled by a form of paralysis. Moving to another sphere, it was just 16 years ago tonight the Canadiens beat Calgary Tigers 6-1 to continue and win the Stanley Cup. The "Flying Frenchmen" have only won the Stanley Cup twice since then, however, in 1930 and 1931. And closer home it was exactly three years ago Good Friday night that the Belleville Redmen played the Thorold "Mountaineers" here and later brought to Belleville its first intermediate O.H.A. championship.

Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty, right - winger for the Toronto Goodyears, was the leading scorer in the 1939-40 senior O.H.A. campaign just past. "Peanuts" amassed 89 scoring points during the regular schedule and throughout the play-offs. Incidentally O'Flaherty has been on an O.H.A. championship team for the past six seasons—a record which will doubtless stand for some time. He was two years with junior champion clubs and four years with senior titlists, the past three being with the "Goodies."

The folly of exhibition sport games where nothing is at stake, was seen at the Hume Arena last night when "Lum" Carson, goalie for Wallbridge, sustained a fractured nose and badly lacerated face when struck with a flying puck. Carson bled badly and sustained perhaps permanent scars as the result of an accident which proves exhibition games are not worth while. Glen Miller soundly trounced Wallbridge 13 to 3.

There was never any doubt as to Josh Maracle's "Cementmen" getting into the finals of the City Industrial puck loop, but now the Ox Point sextette have to meet the Alemite in the finals the issue should be interesting. However, on Thursday night the "Cementmen" proved their superiority throughout the loop by chalking up their third consecutive win, when they soundly trounced the Belleville Sargent 10 to 3. Following, however, the Alemite squad qualified for the final play-off by taking the fast skating Corbins into camp by a 5-2 count and now the picture finds the Alemite versus the "Cementmen" in a saw-off on Monday night at 7.30 p.m. with free skating to the playing public after the game. There was action aplenty in the final league games Thursday as fisticuffs entered into the picture. However, Referee Dick Beare carried through in a noble manner and the tussles ended well under his control, but there is still that ancient Alemite-Cement rivalry to be seen in the final hockey game of the current season on Monday.

Sport Spice — Winning the hard way, the Toronto Maple Leafs eliminated the Chicago Black Hawks in two straight to earn the right to meet the winner of the American-Detroit series....In the latter series the Americans rallied to score three goals in the last four minutes and tie their series with the Red Wings when they won 5-4 last night .... By the time the Bruins and Rangers get through banging each other around, they'll both be pretty soft for the final series....Harry Knott and Harry Rollins returned from the annual O.A.S.A. convention where they failed to place Belleville in the Intermediate "B" class, as the parent body contends Belleville's teams are amply strong enough to cope with larger centres ... The Peterboro intermediates finished on the top rung of the O.H.A. round robin series and now meet Kitchener in the finals.

Sports Roundup

New York, March 23—(AP) — Why don't some of the smart guys down south dig up the reason why Larry MacPhail suddenly shifted from the swank hotel where the Dodgers are stopping to the Bellaire Bath Club?......Was it to dodge Dolf Camilli or because somebody else is wearing smoked glasses?......Bill McGowan and Red Ormsby, the umpires, conducted a school at Palatka, Fla., and Jackson, Miss., this spring...... They had 60 pupils and 39 already have been signed for jobs in minor leagues.

Pinky George, who built up Johnny Paychek and Lee Savold to where both are in the ante room to title shots, is known among fight men as a smart guy ......and no wonder, for Pinky used to be in the United States Army intelligence service.

Just when everyone thought George Selkirk of Huntsville, Ont. had the left field berth with the Yankees cinched, along comes Joe McCarthy with the announcement that George will have to beat out Tommy Henrich, who is going great guns.

The National Baseball League should make some sort of award to Irv Kupcinet, a baseball writer on the Chicago Times, for keeping it together.

'Thank You, My Friend'

By MARTHA K. DAVIS

"I'm terribly sorry, Tom, but we are having the rector and his wife for dinner."

I doubtless looked my disappointment.

Stranded for a few hours in a western city, I had happily bumped into an old college chum, Jerry Bosworth, whom I hadn't seen in years.

Of course nothing would do but I must go to his home for dinner. "Judy will be mighty glad to see you," he said heartily, and remembering pretty Judith Bosworth, I experienced a pleasurable anticipation at the thought of meeting her again.

"It will have to be 'eat and run,'" I said. "My train leaves at eight-forty and I simply have to make it."

I found Judith charming as ever and the thought of a few hours' visit with these old friends was decidedly gratifying.

Now—here was my hostess announcing the impending arrival of a boresome rector and his probably equally boresome wife.

"It's a perfect shame it happens this way," deplored Judith, "but you will enjoy meeting Nancy Rathburn, Tom. She isn't the ordinary 'rector's wife' at all. She is the most fascinating, interesting, delightful woman! Everyone adores her. How she ever happened to marry George Rathburn—! Really, I do not believe she could stand him if it weren't for her little periods of escape. Every spring she spends a couple of months abroad. She comes back more beautiful than ever, fairly aglow with enthusiasm, and plunges heart and soul into parish work. The things that woman accomplishes! Why—last winter—" but Judith's dissertation was interrupted by the arrival of her guests.

The Reverend George Rathburn was all that my hostess had implied. Pompous—conceited—arrogant! But for all his bluster, he quickly faded into insignificance.

Beautiful, quiet, poised Nancy Rathburn! The way she moved—her voice—no, the secret lay in that expression in her eyes. What were those fathomless, dreamy eyes seeing? Surely not her pragmatical little husband, or anyone or anything in Judith's cozy apartment.

I was glad to be placed beside her at the table, but the smallness of the party forbade any intimate conversation.

It was during the salad course that I noticed the ring on the third finger of her right hand. A flower cluster of diamonds embedded in black onyx, surrounded by a wreath of dull gold.

I was a fool for speaking.

"Your ring, Mrs. Rathburn—may I look at it? It reminds me of a ring a comrade of mine in the war—"

Nancy Rathburn's white hand clenched.

"Ah—show him your ring, my dear," broke in the rector. "Perhaps he can tell you something about it. You see, Mr. Neeland, my wife picked up that ring at some pawnshop over in London. It has some kind of insignia woven in the wreath. Guess some of the nobility got hard up, but they'd have a difficult time trying to buy it back." He guffawed loudly. "Mrs. Rathburn thinks more of that ring than all the rest of her jewelry put together. Sort of talisman, you know. Show it to him, Nancy."

I took in mine the hand she slowly extended. The fingers were like ice.

And as I looked down, I saw again a trench—a khaki-clad man, whimsical, gay, untouched by fear—heedless—cynical. "What does it matter, old man? Nothing can happen to me. It's all happened. You know—one of those arranged affairs. She doesn't give a damn whether or not I'm hit by a bloomin' shell. But there is a girl, Tommy lad! Oh, well—she's tied as tight as I."

There was a small piece chipped from the onyx.

I remembered about that. "By Jove—if I hadn't put up my hand, Tommy! Trust the 'House of Garland' to jolly well protect its sons of war!"

And then—convalescing in a hospital. Young Lord Garland—Dicky Garland calling frantically for—"Nannie! Nannie!"

Later—a firm hand-clasp. This ring cutting into my flesh. "Good-by, Tommy, old man! Jolly luck! Take good care of yourself."

I looked up. Nancy Rathburn's eyes were enormous and her under lip was caught tight between her teeth. She was holding her breath.

I said, "No, the ring this reminded me of was—quite different. In fact, on close inspection, this is not like it at all."

I had to leave directly after dinner. Nancy Rathburn stood beside her conventionally, I caught a faint little whisper—"Thank you, my friend."

Little Benny's Note Book

The committy of fellows was suppose to call on pop after supper and ask him if it would be all right for them to give me a surprise party on my birthday an [illegible] finished my supper the first and went and hid in the [illegible] closit so I could hear what happened, and I sat on the floor waiting and after a while I heard pop come in and sit down and rattle the paper, and nothing elts didn't happen for a fierse log time and I began to get itchy and still in there, and finely the doorbell rang and I heard Nora say, It's 3 boys to see you, Mr. Potts.

Only three? Have them come in, pop said, and I heard the committy walking in, being Puds Simkins and Glasses Magee and Shorty Judge, pop saying, Well, gentlemen, this is an unexpected honor, is there anything I can do for you and do you remember what it is?

Us fellows are thinking of giving Menny a surprise party on his birthday, Puds said, and Glasses said, Here in this house, and Shorty said, If you wouldn't mind.

Well, I hope I wouldn't stand in the way of my only son's enjoyment of his only annual birthday, pop said.

Me thinking, G, hurrah. Wich jus, then something fierse happened, being a cramp in my leg from sitting an it so long, and it shot out all by itself and nocked over some umberellas, and pop said, Hello, did you boys hear anything?

No sir how do you mean, what was it like? Puds and Glases and Shorty said Me having told them I was going to be in the closit, and I quick pushed the door open and came out, saying, G I must of gone in there and went to sleep, G, hello fellows, what's you doing here?

We came to see how your father was feeling, Puds said, and Glasses said, We heard he had a head ake, and Shorty said, We heard he had a cold.

And they hurry up went out and pop got behind his paper so sudden I couldn't see if he looked sispicious or not.

LIBERAL GOV'T IS CRITICIZED ON WAR EFFORT

Ex-Mayor George A. Reid Charges Allowance for Dependent Mother of Soldier Who Enlisted in September Was Not Received Until Jan. 29—G. Elmer Johnston of Brockville Speaks — Candidate George H. Stokes Addresses Rally at City Hall

Sharp and biting criticism of Canada's war effort, both on the military and economic fronts, was levelled at Mr. Mackenzie King and the Liberal government by G. Elmer Johnston of Brockville, Conservative organizer for Eastern Ontario, and other speakers, including Mr. George A. Reid, ex-mayor of Belleville, R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.L.A. for West Hastings and the National Conservative candidate for Hastings South, Mr. George H. Stokes, as supporters of the candidate, rallied at the city hall on Thursday evening for their final mass public meeting before going to the polls on Tuesday next.

Mr. George Reid, as the first speaker of the evening, charged that Mr. Mackenzie King had dissolved parliament after a session of only three hours' duration and evaded answering some sityx-nine questions, which would have been laid on the table had Parliament continued. "Under the circumstances, Mackenzie King thought it best to dissolve Parliament and not let the people know what was going on," stated Mr. Reid.

Predicts Change

"The Liberals are saying that it is a bad time to change horses when the wagon is in the middle of the stream, but if they didn't want to change horses why did they call an election?" asked Mr. Reid. "Canada traded horses in the last war, France traded horses just the other day, and we, in Canada, will again trade horses," continued Mr. Reid as he predicted a victory for the National Conservative party in the forthcoming election.

In referring to the National Unity platform which is one of the planks in the Liberal election campaign, Mr. Reid said that there has never been such a thing as unity under the Mackenzie King administration and referred to an alleged statement by the Prime Minister that "not one of his cabinet would be allowed to join Dr. Manion if the National Government was elected." "Is that unity?" asked Mr. Reid.

"It has been stated on the public platform by Mr. McLean Haig, the Liberal candidate, that all trouble with dependents' allowances has been settled," said Mr. Reid, and he went on to tell of the experience of a Belleville lady who had, he said, only a short time ago received her first allowance cheque since her son enlisted in September. "The husband of this lady is an ex-service man, a tuberculosis patient who cannot get a pension. The oldest son enlisted with the H. & P. E. Regiment last September and immediately assigned $20 of his monthly pay to his mother who was dependent upon him as the breadwinner. It was the 29th day of January before the first allowance cheque was received by this woman," said Mr. Reid. "Wasn't this a nice Christmas present?" he asked.

"The issue of this election was 'whom do you want to conduct Canada's war policy?', concluded Mr. Reid. "Do you want to trust Dr. Manion who fought for his country during the last war, or do you want Mackenzie King who went to the United States?" He (Mr. Reid) was willing to forget politics and religion during this time of stress to follow Dr. Manion and the British Empire.

Praise Young People's Support.

In a brief talk, Mr. George Stokes, National Conservative candidate, stressed his appreciation of the marvellous support afforded him by the young people of the riding in the election campaign. "This is not a tribute to the candidate," said Mr. Stokes, "but a tribute to Dr. Manion and his Department of Youth movement. The young people realize that now for the first time they are being offered actual representation in parliament and are backing Dr. Manion and the National government.

Mr. Stokes claimed that the Mackenzie King government was afraid of the soldier vote, a fact which was proven by the stumbling block which was put, he charged, in front of the soldiers to prevent them from intelligently exercising their franchise. "Under the circumstances now existent it was almost impossible for the soldier to know for which party he was voting," said Mr. Stokes. Many of our soldiers are under twenty-one years of age but they cannot vote until they have attained this age. Surely," concluded Mr. Stokes, "if any man is willing to fight for his country, he is entitled to the right of citizenship."

The guest speaker of the evening, Mr. G. Elmer Johnston, reviewed the many instances happening on European soil which led up to the present war, saying that Canadians had not realized the seriousness of the situation. So far, he said, here in Canada it had been a comfortable war, with no blackouts, no air-raid precautions, no ration cards and not even vigorous recruiting. "The only manifestation of war in Canada," he said, "is a slightly increased industrial activity with a corresponding lessening of unemployment, and in the midst of this war we are having an election, an election which is not understood by the people as is proven by the questions asked the enumerators: 'Why an election at this time?'"

Mr. Johnston claimed that according to Mackenzie King it was a vote of censure passed by the Ontario Legislature which was responsible for holding the election at this time but there was nothing in Mr. Drew's report, he said, which would warrant the country going to the polls. "It merely inferred that Ontario wasn't satisfied that the war effort of the Mackenzie King government had been as aggressive as possible and was doing something to give it backbone."

Foresees Manion Victory.

A vigorous prosecution of the war would be expected of the government elected next Tuesday, continued Mr. Johnston, and he likewise expressed the hope that upon this government would also fall the task of assisting to conduct peace negotiations. "A lot has been said about changing horses in the middle of the stream," he said, "but we are not in the middle of the stream yet, and there is nothing wrong with the horse. All we are going to do next Tuesday is change riders," he said, as he predicted a change to one who would "ride the horse to victory".

"The paramount issue of this election is Mackenzie King", continued Mr. Johnston. "True, we'll have to admit that Mr. King has made some contributions to Canada, but Mackenzie King is not a wartime leader." Mr. Reid said "he does not possess the qualifications of Dr. Manion to lead the country while at war," and followed with the prediction that if the Liberal government was returned to power it would only be a short time before Mr. King was replaced by someone else at the head of the party.

Mr. Johnston claimed that the King Government had been very "consistent" in its reluctance of spending money for defence purposes, referring his audience back to the elections of 1911 when he said Mr. King vigorously opposed a proposal to provide funds for the purchase of two dreadnoughts. He was still "consistent" in 1935 when he criticized the Bennett administration because of its spending money for national defence, he said.

Referring to Canada's alleged state of unpreparedness at the outset of the war, Mr. Johnston again scored Mackenzie King on silence when Australia immediately pledged her loyalty to the British Empire. "The state of Canada's unpreparedness can be realized when it is known that out of an appropriation of $188,000,000 for defence purposes, only $98,000,000 had been spent," he said.

Refers to Dissolution

Mr. Johnston accused Mackenzie King of dictatorial methods when he dissolved parliament after a session of only three hours' duration, thereby denying the right of the electors to have the war issues argued out in the House of Commons. "He locked the doors, drew the blinds and locked up the records", said Mr. Johnston as he contrasted the procedure of the Canadian Parliament with that of England which had been sitting regularly since the outbreak of the war.

Mr. Johnston claimed that the refusal of Mackenzie King to adopt the British Empire Training Scheme as proposed by Britain in 1937-38 had resulted in Canada losing a great many contracts to American interests and this with the unfavourable trade agreements made by Mr. King with the United States was mainly responsible for the 18 per cent discount on Canadian currency at the present time.

"The abolition of radio licences and all other nuisance fees was promised by Dr. Manion," stated Mr. Johnston, who termed the radio and press censorship as being "silly." The banning of the 'March of Time" film by Mr. Hepburn was another instance of foolish, censorship, he said.

How Boards Are Constituted

An inferred charge of political patronage was made by Mr. Johnston when he said that out of the 85 appointees to positions on the various war boards set up by the Government, there had been 79 Liberals and only six Conservatives all chosen from the industrial ranks. "Maybe it so happens that there were only six Conservatives with brains enough to sit on those boards," said Mr. Johnston, "but if industrial men are so in demand it might be to Mr. King's advantage to have a few business men in his cabinet instead of the 14 lawyers, six school teachers and one engineer who were in the Liberal cabinet during the last session of Parliament."

Dr. Manion's program includes the abolishment of petty politics for the duration of the war, concluded Mr. Johnston, as he appealed to the audience to roll up a majority for the National Government candidate of South Hastings.

R. D. Arnott asked the audience to remember the patronage criticism which took place at the nominations in 1935 when the Bennett government was scored for their treatment of relief men at the Trenton Airport. "Those men were being fed and clothed and were given twenty cents per day", stated Mr. Arnott, "but the Liberals promised them forty cents per hour. The boys took the Liberals at their word and what happened? When the Liberals got in power it wasn't long before the men at the Airport were told to "get out" and were put out on the road." ("This is a free country isn't it?") asked a voice from the audience. "Not since Mackenzie King closed parliament and denied the right of speech", shot back Mr. Arnott.

Mr. Arnott said that Mackenzie King had closed Parliament when it should have been kept open every day and refused to give out official information of what he has done since the war broke out. "Dr. Manion offers a truly national government," concluded Mr. Arnott, and that was the reason he (Mr. Arnott) was supporting him.

The speakers were all introduced by Mr. Arthur Burke who acted as chairman for the evening, while Mr. J. Bankier delighted the audience with a solo with Mr. Huddleston playing the accompaniment.

Madoc

Madoc — The Women's Institute of Madoc held their regular monthly meeting on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. (Dr.) Beatty. Mrs. J. H. Davies, 1st vice president, took charge of the meeting and opened with the Institute Ode and the Creed in unison. The roll call "Exchange of Seasonable Recipes" showed 27 members and 9 visitors present. The Society would like all members to acquaint themselves with the roll call previous to each meeting as its response gives many helpful hints. An appeal for a Central War Fund was given consideration and the request of 5 cents per member was contributed to this fund.

Mrs. Wm. Miller continued the Meat Cookery project by a very splendid talk on choosing and cooking meats also Government grading. The Institute reported 44 pairs of socks sent to community boys overseas.

Miss Lorraine Vowles sang very sweetly "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star." Ways and means of raising money for war purposes were under discussion and by a standing vote the Society decided to hold a Travelling Bridge. Committees were formed, namely: Lunch, Mesdames McLean, Kernahan, Tayler, Parks, Spry and McCoy: Invitation, Mesdames Irwin, Reid, Hill A. Smith, Burris.

Irish songs were sung by a few members and much enjoyed by those present. Miss Schell addressed the meeting on "Progress of Home Economics" and this discourse was most interesting from the first band of pioneer women to organize until the present day system. A vote of appreciation was extended to Miss Schell for her splendid paper.

The vice president expressed her regret at the absence of the president, Mrs. Tanner, due to illness.

The National Anthem closed a very interesting meeting after which tea was served by the hostesses.

Mr. J. Chappelle met with a painful accident while on his way to Tweed on Tuesday afternoon. When he went to pass a team of horses and a sleigh near Chapman's Corners, he met head on with a car coming south. Both cars were considerably damaged and also the occupants. Mr. Chappelle alone in his car received many cuts and bruises.

The March meeting of the Thomasburg United Church Women's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday afternoon, March 12th, in the Sunday School rooms.

The president, Mrs. Harold Morton conducted the opening service. There were eleven members and two visitors present. The roll call was answered with a Scripture verse on "Faith".

The Treasurer, Mrs. J. R. Bateman gave a pleasing report for February. The Worship service was conducted by the president, Mrs. J. R. Bateman gave the Scripture lesson.

Mrs. Wilbur Sherry gave a reading entitled "An Indian's St. Paul" A hymn of peace was sung. Rev. H. B. Herrington gave an interesting talk on Indian Church custom, and Mrs. W. H. Elliott gave the Study Book chapter on India. "A Call to Prayer" was read by Mrs. L. Fox. The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. H. B. Herrington.

For Sunday, March 24

SUNDAY'S horoscope fosters the affairs of church and state, education, philanthropy and social pleasures rather than workaday avocations. These may be pursued with enterprise and ambition, superiors collaborating. In private affairs social or sentimental correspondence should give happiness.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of steady advancement in the direction of well-aimed ambitions and with progress toward the goal of heart's desire. Superiors and influential persons are approachable and much may be gained by gracious correspondence. Shun impetuosity and extravagance.

A child born on this day may be fairly well-endowed for a successful and happy life. It may be gracious, friendly, refined and magnanimous, probably excessively generous or extravagant. It may have literary or artistic talents of note.

For Monday, March 25

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a rather perplexing one, with certain factors for success and satisfaction and others conflicting and difficult. There may be obstacles, delays and disappointments, with some ruthless activities directed at breaking the static situations. There also may be some subtlety and connivance, but progress may be made.

Those whose birthday it is may look for some fair progress despite frustrations and perplexities. Subtle and peculiar situations may arise, calling for precaution and wise management. New plans and objectives may benefit.

A child born on this day may have many talents and creative abilities, expressed in the realm of art, literary or some other unusual cultural field.

KRUSCHEN SHIPMENT LOST AT SEA!
50,000 Giant Packages were en route to Canada

Kruschen users who have learned the utter joy of that "million dollar Kruschen feeling" are advised to get their packages of Giant Kruschen at once to avoid disappointment. Recently 50,000 bottles, Canada-bound, were sent to the bottom of the Atlantic and the supply is thus strictly limited.

To avoid just such a catastrophe, other Giant Package shipments were sent on different ships, were successfully landed and have been distributed thinly across the Dominion. There is no saying when further supplies of Giant Packages will be made available. So do act now if you suffer the pains of rheumatism, lumbago, frequent headaches or from blotchy skin—get your Giant Package, which includes the regular 75c bottle plus a free trial size bottle. Your money back if not satisfied after using free trial size bottle. Simply return regular bottle unopened. At all drug counters.

British Submarines Sink Two German Freighters and 5,000-Ton Ostprussen Grounded After Trying to Dodge Subs for Three Days

London, March 25 (CP)—Britain's warships scoured Germany's North Sea shipping lanes today in an effort to strangle her trade with Scandinavia while suspicion mounted that the Reich might be trying to engineer a grab of Rumania's oil.

Pushing her sea blockade further from home shores, Britain counted three blows against Germany's merchant marine in the mine-infested waters of the eastern North Sea.

Two German cargo carriers became the war's first merchantman victims of British submarines during the Easter holidays. They were the coal-laden freighter Edmund Hugo Stinnes, 2,189 tons, sent to the bottom yesterday by shell-fire near where a torpedo earlier had sunk the 4,497-ton ore carrier Heddernheim.

The British also credited naval action for the grounding of the 5,000-ton German freighter Ostpreussen, which ran ashore on Jutland with a cargo of coke after zigzagging for three days to escape British searchers off the west coast of Denmark.

HEAD-HUNTING ALARMS

Manila, Mar. 25 (AP).—Constabulary officials, alarmed by numerous head-hunting expeditions by tribesmen in the wild mountain country 100 miles from Manila, have called a general meeting of tribesmen Friday.

Official records list 19 head-hunting killings in Neuva Ecija and Neuva Vizcaya Provinces since 1937.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, March 25—(CP)— The weather has been fair and decidedly cold from Ontario westward to Saskatchewan and cold with light snow in Alberta.

Lake Superior — Moderate to fresh northwest winds; fair today and Tuesday with stationary or a little higher temperature.

Western Provinces—Cloudy today and Tuesday with light snowfalls or flurries in some parts; not much change in temperature.

St. Elmo's fire! It must be a weird sensation for the cowboys of the plains to see discharges of electricity from each others' heads, and bluish flames emanating from the ears of their mounts. This phenomenon is often seen under stormy conditions, and is simply a discharge of electricity from earth to air. It appears strongest at exposed points such as ships' masts. It is believed also that St. Elmo's fire, as this phenomenon is called, explains the "Andes lights" when mariners far out at sea see the mountains glow or even shoot out flames.

SOCIAL CREDITERS HAVE ELECTED TWENTY MEMBERS

Alberta's Vote - Counting System Delays Complete Result of Thursday's Election

14 INDEPENDENTS

Edmonton, March 25 —(CP)— Snow-blocked roads and the intricacies of Alberta's vote-counting system today still delayed the result of last Thursday's election.

Last night the election of two Social Credit candidates and one Independent was announced, giving the government of Premier William Aberhart a lead with 20 members elected to the Independents' 14. In addition, Social Credit candidates were leading in 17 seats, the Independents in five and a Labor in one.

Canada's most complicated voting system—single transferable vote in the 47 single-member ridings and proportional representation in the five-member constituencies of Edmonton and Calgary—combined with the weather to delay results.

PRESIDENT IMPROVED

Washington, March 25 —(AP) — President Roosevelt, after a restful week-end, was said by his physician today to be "very much improved" but still taking precautions against the cold that has been troubling him for a fortnight.

The physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, declined to permit him to go to the White House executive offices.

NORWAY PROTESTS VIOLATION OF NEUTRAL WATERS

British Navy, However, Hovers on Fringe of Scandinavian Waters to Pounce on German Shipping

SHIPPING HARRIED

Crew of German Vessel Grounded Says British Submarine Between Ship and Shore

Copenhagen, March 25—(AP) — British warcraft in imposing force hovered on the fringe of Scandinavian territorial waters today, apparently under orders to stalk or pounce upon every German merchant ship en route to or from the blockaded Reich.

With three German ships knocked out in the past four days of intensified British pressure on Germany's outermost Scandinavian lifeline-one sunk by torpedo, one by shelling and the third aground —Norway and Denmark again felt the sharp squeeze of unceasing war at sea.

The Norwegian Admiralty announced last night that a protest against what is called violation of Norwegian waters by British warships had been delivered in London. An Oslo communique claimed two encroachments and said a third incident was under inquiry.

The latest success of the British blockaders was the sinking of the 2,189-ton freighter Edmund Hugo Stinnes, after the pounding of a submarine's gun. The ship was en route from Hamburg to Copenhagen, with a cargo of coal.

The Stinnes sank Sunday afternoon a few miles west of Skagen, northermost Denmark, at the Kattegat entrance of the Baltic—not far from where the 4,947-ton ore carrier Heddernheim sank last Thursday night as the war's first reported merchant ship victim of a British submarine torpedoed.

Aground With Load of Coke

Another victim of the cat-and-mouse watch the British Admiralty has posted along the western shores of Denmark and Norway was the 5,000-ton Ostpreussen, run aground yesterday with a cargo of coke after three days of harried cruising off the western Danish coast to dodge British warships.

The Ostpreussen, bound for Sweden, had been ordered to double back to Esbjerg, Denmark, to lie there out of reach of British submarines. Hugging the rugged shore to escape detection, she struck a rock and, with nine feet

FATHER SAVES SON IN FALL

Cobourg, Ont., March 25—(CP)— Frank Rouse did a nice job in catching last night and saved his son, Ray, from a nasty fall during a fire. Ray Rouse was on the roof of a two storey house fighting a fire, and his father, Frank was on the ground. The youth slipped on the icy roof and slid over the edge. His father saw the mishap and caught him as he came down. Although both fell, neither was injured.

Capt. Braves Shark-Infested Waters To Secure Barnacles Off Boat to Eat

New York, Mar. 25 (AP).—Still a bit "stiff in the joints" and bearing salt water scars from a 2,600-mile Pacific Ocean adventure in an outrigger canoe only 17 inches wide, the "South Seas Skipper" is planning still another perilous voyage.

The skipper is Captain U. A. Woodbury II, scion of a distinguished Vermont family. For most of the last 25 years—since he was 20—he has done things which he admits lead his friends to think he's crazy.

He and two companions sailed from South Point, Hawaii, to American Samoa, 2,600 miles, in a 100-year-old outrigger he bought in the Hawaiian Islands.

The craft, a one-master, was 29 feet long and about as wide as an eight-column newspaper page.

Rain fell on each of the 34 days of the trip and the last 20 days were foodless (except for two fish and the barnacles off the boat's hull).

Captain Woodbury said it did not take the adventurers long to cultivate a taste for barnacles which they got by braving the shark-infested waters and scraping them off the boat while swimming. "They tasted real good," he said.

The skipper says he has regained 30 of the 40 pounds he lost in the adventure almost a year ago, but the salt water has made most of his body hairless and left numerous sores.

Already the captain—grandson of the late Governor U. A. Woodbury of Vermont—is laying plans for the coming voyage, to start in July.

"My boat is being built now on the Kona coast of Hawaii," he says, "and by comparison the one we used last year will seem like the Queen Elizabeth. It will be an 18-foot outrigger only 12 inches wide.

"I'm going to sail her from Los Angeles to Honolulu—2,207 miles—and probably will do it alone but I may take one man with me. However, those 20 hungry days will not be repeated. I'm going to have my yacht trail me with plenty of food."

Report Germany Afraid War Involving Rumania Would Assist the Allies

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain today appeared to be extending its blockade of Germany into waters bordering the Scandinavian states, while the Reich's diplomatic struggle to ensure its oil supplies from Rumania and escape a fight there continued.

Off the northernmost tip of Denmark yesterday an unidentified British submarine shelled and sank the German freighter Edmund Hugo Stinnes. The point where the vessel sank is close to the Kattegate entrance to the Baltic Sea. The Stinnes was the third German ship lost in that vicinity since last Thursday.

Extension of the blockade eastward appeared to leave the German merchant fleet only the Baltic in which to trade with any degree of safety and speculation arose whether the Royal Navy might try to extend its operations even there.

Difficulties to Overcome

Observers pointed out it would be difficult for British warships to get through the narrow Kattegat without striking mines or trespassing in Danish or Norwegian territorial waters. They added, however, that advantages of such a move would be great, as by that means the navy could cut off Germany's iron and steel trade with Sweden as well as its imports from Norway.

In Rome Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, and Foreign Minister Paul Teleki of Hungary, opened conversations which were thought to concern Hungary's attitude towards Rumania.

Discussed at Parley

Many believed Adolf Hitler asked Benito Mussolini at their meeting in the Brenner Pass last week to use his good offices in an effort to curb Hungary's territorial ambitions in Rumania.

Hungary, deprived of Transylvania in the peace settlements of the first Great War, wants it back, a desire believed to have sent shivers down German foreign office backs.

Strengthening of Rumanian defences, maintenance of a huge Rumanian army and insistence of King Carol that his subjects stand ready to defend their homeland are believed virtually to preclude any peaceful frontier revision between Rumania and Hungary.

Any other settlement would be disastrous to Germany which depends almost eclusively on Rumania for oil imports and is anxious to ensure that they are not swallowed up in a new war in eastern Europe.

Able to Flank Reich

Further, the Germans are reported frightened that a war involving Rumania would give the Allies a chance of going to her assistance and flanking the Reich.

Germany only recently recovered from a similar fright when it appeared likely the Allies would go to help Finland in her war against Russia. To escape a flanking at that time Germany helped engineer a Russo-Finnish peace, partly by threatening Scandinavian states they would be attacked if they allowed Allied troops to pass through their territories en route to Finland.

A flanking through Rumania would be more serious still, as there Germany could be faced by roughly some 500,000 Allied troops now in the Near East, a Rumanian army of 1,800,000 men and a thoroughly pro-ally Turkey which has been rearming under British and French tutelage.

EAMON DE VALERA GIVEN REBUFF

I.R.A. Tells President They Are Ready for Armed Intervention on Both Sides of Border

Dublin, March 25 —(AP)— A sharp rebuff to Prime Minister Eamon de Valera's urging that Irish unity come peaceably was seen today in Belfast reports that the Irish Republican Army there was ready "for armed intervention on both sides of the border."

The Prime Minister, who advocates the inclusion of Northern Ireland (Ulster)) into Ireland (Eire) by Legislative action, broadcast his anti-violence message yesterday, 24th anniversary of the Easter rebellion.

30 KILLED WHEN SHIPS SUNK

London, March 25 (CP-Havas)—Six survivors of the Danish ships Viking and Bothal reported on arrival at an east Scottish port today that 30 men were killed when the two ships were torpedoed by German submarines in the North Sea last Thursday.

The Danish seamen said the U-boats gave them no time to launch lifeboats. Some clung to floating wreckage 48 hours before being picked up.

POSTED AS MISSING

St. John's, Nfld., March 25 (CP-Cable)—Mrs. Edgar Templeman of St. John's was informed today that her son, Philip, who joined the Royal Air Force two years ago was posted as missing after an air action yesterday. He is the island's first casualty.

Templeman's father now is in Greece as Newfoundland representative.

FRENCH ADVANCE GUARD SURPRISES GERMAN PATROL

Germans Fall Back From Severe Attack Leaving Number of Men in French Hands

AERIAL ACTIVITY

Opposing Air Forces Exchange Propaganda Barrages With All Machines Returning

Paris, March 25—(AP)—French advance guards east of the Moselle River were reported today to have scattered a large German patrol and to have taken prisoners.

The French surprised Nazi troops during a scouting operation Sunday and opened fire, military advices said. The Germans fell back from a severe attack, leaving an unspecified number of their men in French hands, they declared.

Aerial forces on both sides made numerous reconnoitring flights and several German patrols seeking to take French outposts west of the Saar were said to have been repulsed.

Premier Paul Reynaud's office announced he would make an address to the nation by radio tomorrow at 8 p.m. (2 p.m., EST).

Opposing front line forces exchanged propaganda barrages yesterday. German warplanes dropped leaflets on French positions and the French answered with a word barrage of their own and with scattered firing.

Reynaud received Raffaele Guariglia, Italian Ambassador to France. Sources close to the foreign office said the meeting was "significant" because France's new Premier-Foreign Minister never before had talked privately with the Italian envoy. There was no statement of what they discussed.

MAGNETIC STORM DISRUPTS RADIO, ATLANTIC CABLES

Communications Interrupted for Several Hours by Violent Disturbance of Magnetic Storm

New York, March 25 —(AP)— The earth recovered today from the communication-wrecking effects of a magnetic storm, possibly the greatest in modern history.

A tornado-like solar disturbance, scientists said, whipped up huge spots on the sun from which a stream of electrical particles emanated, riddling the earth's atmosphere and virtually isolating North America from the rest of the world for several hours yesterday.

The phenomenon affected land telegraph and telephone undersea cables; the wireless telephone from New York to London, Paris and Rome; short-wave relays and even long-wave radio to a lesser extent.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company said it was the worst case of wire disruption its engineers could recall. Currents as high as 500 volts were set up by the disturbance, causing insulation to burn in some instances.

Deliberate Murder And Suicide Says Coroner Lawson

Victims Found in Single Bed With Gas Jets All on and Cracks Under Doors Stuffed With Cloth

FATHER UNEMPLOYED

An Infant Was With Mother Who Works as a Domestic in North Toronto Home

Toronto, March 25 —(CP)— Asphyxiated by illuminating gas, the bodies of Malcolm MacDougal and his three children were found today in a single bed at the home in which they boarded. The children were Malcolm, Jr., 10; Donald, seven, and Christina, five.

Police said gas jets in the room had been turned on and that cracks under the door had been stuffed with cloth. The father was unemployed and had a pension as a veteran of the first great war.

"This man deliberately murdered his three children," Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner, said. "Death was due to murder and suicide. There will be neither inquest nor autopsy."

A fourth child, an infant, was with the mother who works as a domestic in a North Toronto home.

EASTERN CANADA SHIVERS THROUGH EASTER HOLIDAY

Parade of Spring Finery Staged Only in Few Favored Spots in Western Provinces

ROADS BLOCKED

By the Canadian Press

Eastern Canada shivered through the coldest and stormiest Easter in years yesterday and parades of Spring finery were staged only in a few favored centres in the western provinces.

So severe were storms in Ontario and Quebec that authorities reported blocked rural roads and huge snowdrifts probably would hinder balloting in the general election tomorrow. The blizzard also covered the Maritimes, with political rallies in Nova Scotia suffering because of deep snow during the week-end.

On the Pacific coast, the earliest Easter in years saw bright colors predominating the parades under a warm, summer-like sun. Famed Stanley Park was crowded with throngs of people and it was warm enough for tennis and golf.

Snow fell for the eighth consecutive day in Edmonton, bringing the total fall for the week up to 14 inches. Bright sunshine and a temperature of 19 degrees—com-

Baton Rouge, La., March 25 (AP) —Gas leaking into the city water mains caused two severe explosions here today. Fire Chief R. A. Bogan said the gas may have come from oil drilling operations.

'Canadian National Dog' Developed By Young Trapper From Far North

Toronto, Mar. 25 (CP). — John Lehmond, young trapper of Prince Albert, Sask., has developed after fourteen years of hard work and patience what he terms a "Canadian National Dog".

Lehmond, a visitor at the spring show of the Toronto Kennel Club, told today in an interview of the evolution of the "Canuck" dog from five pure-bred forebears. The Canuck is 26 inches high, weighs 65 pounds, and has a medium coat of white, black or tan. It is an all-round dog — hard-working, rugged, reliable, gentle and spirited, he said.

"The Canuck has the warm fur of a Samoyed, the bone structure of a Great Dane, the size and spirit of a Boxer, the speed and depth of heart of a Russian Wolfhound, and the gentleness and reliability of a Shepherd Dog," the trapper added.

"Canada hasn't got a dog it can call really its own. Huskies are not pedigreed and are not purebred. And there is some doubt that the Labrador Retriever is really Canadian."

Lehmond said that fourteen years ago, while running a trap-line, he believed a dog should be produced to answer all requirements of Canadian conditions. One that could work hard in harness and stand severe weather.

He began experimenting with various breeds. All money he made trapping went into his work and finally, a year ago, a dog was evolved "to my satisfaction".

"It cannot be called a mongrel because its characteristics are lasting and the result of careful breeding. It is a beautiful animal and has a bearing all its own."

RETURN OF GOV'T URGED BY KING IN BROADCAST

Greatest Evidence of Unity of the Nation in War Effort Would Thus be Shown He Says

CRITICAL OF PLAN

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, March 25 —(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King said in a political speech here that the return of the present government in tomorrow's Dominion election "will mean that once the heat of the campaign has passed, our citizens will be able to forget party differences and join with the war administrations in the winning of the war."

"The return of the present administration will, without question, be held as the greatest evidence of unity of the nation in its war effort," he said in a 30-minute broadcast Saturday night over an Ontario network.

"Such a result would do much to sustain the morale and to uplift the spirits of those at whose side Canada fights for victory, freedom and an enduring peace."

He was critical of Conservative Leader Manion's plan for National Government and declared "all that Dr. Manion is trying to do is to elect a party government by the device of calling it a National Government."

CENTENARIAN CUTS CIGAR RATIONS

Utica, N. Y., March 25—(AP) — Dr. Edwin W. McQuivey, 100 years old today, still eats anything he wants and takes a drink when he feels like it. But he has cut his cigar ration from 50 a week to one after every meal. A pipe is his constant companion between cigars.

Dr. McQuivey recalls shaking hands with Abraham Lincoln when the latter stopped in Utica on the way to his Presidential inauguration.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

NO REPORT YET ON MUSKRAT SEASON

No report has been received from the Department of Game and Fisheries to indicate when the muskrat season will open this year.

Weather conditions have been decidedly unfavorable and as the season is usually set by order-in-council, after reports have been received from local game overseers, it appears as if the season will not open for two weeks yet.

REFRESHER COURSE FOR CHEESEMAKERS

The third annual Refresher Course for cheesemakers of the district sponsored by the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association, will be held in the factory of Edward Eounslow, Newburgh, on April 1st and 2nd, Chief Grader J. L. Irwin announced today.

Outstanding dairymen and government experts including C. E. Lackner, Director of Dairying, H. B. Sandwith, J. L. Singleton, Assistant Director of Marketing Services; Fred Hart, Inspector Weights and Measures, Dr. E. G. Hood, Director of Dairy Research, Frank Herns, Chief Cheese Instructor, Western Ontario, L. A. Zufelt and others will give addresses.

Cheese grading demonstrations will be given by J. L. Irwin and T. J. Hicks. A banquet will be held on the evening of April 2nd at which Mr. W. J. Newman, Toronto, will be the guest speaker. The course is open to patrons of cheese factories as well as the makers, Mr. Irwin stated today.

HANDS AND ARMS BADLY BURNED

Thirteen-year-old Jackie Howes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Howes, 186 James Street, suffered severe injuries from scalds as the result of falling into a tub of boiling water at his home on Saturday. The lad was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. E. G. Kennedy attended. Today, however, hospital authorities reported the lad was progressing satisfactorily. It is believed young Howes stumbled and fell into the tub of boiling water, his hands and arms sustaining the more severe scalds.

District Roads Around Belleville Completely Blocked

Motorized traffic was completely paralyzed throughout the Bay of Quinte district, all side roads adjacent to Belleville being blocked by the week-end snows that drifted before heavy gales, leaving the side roads impassible to motor vehicular travel. Despite the serious condition of paralyzed traffic, only three minor accidents were reported in the district and no serious personal injuries sustained, Provincial Police revealed today.

Strangely enough two of the district motor accidents occurred early Saturday evening. However, rural motorists, who found their way into the city for their Easter shopping, found it impossible to return home Saturday evening, as innumerable side roads in all directions were clogged with drifting snows, through which it was impossible to drive snow ploughs. Even the main trunk highways experienced heavy snow drifts, which were responsible for at least two minor collisions.

On Easter morning a west-bound automobile, driven by Mrs. Gladys Jeffery of Scotland, Ont., was in a sideswiping collision with an east-bound motor car driven by Harry Ruvell, Kingston. As the vehicles met they were negotiating a heavy snow drift south of Marysville, Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine reported.

Automobiles driven in the opposite direction north of Corbyville by Ambrose Whalen, Tweed, and Vincent Shannon, Plainfield, skidded on an icy portion of the highway after passing through a snow drift to collide as they sideswiped. Damage to fenders and the bodies of the vehicles amounted to well over $100, Provincial Constable W. E. Smith reported. Provincial Constable D. Adair investigated another minor accident near Marysville on Saturday evening, the result of heavy snows. No charges were preferred in any of the cases.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine stated to The Ontario Intelligencer today that the Easter week-end traffic tie-up was the worst of its kind to be experienced this winter. "Between here and Rednersville on Saturday night seven or eight cars were abandoned after getting stuck in heavy snow drifts. The owners were forced to walk home and leave their vehicles," reported Constable Ervine.

PARTY STALWARTS MARSHAL FORCES FOR FINAL DRIVE

Light Rural Vote Looms as Reports of Snow-Filled Roads Trickle Into Headquarters

CANDIDATES BUSY

Camps of the various political factions were hives of activity to day as party stalwarts marshalled their forces for the final drive to win public support.

All candidates were in their respective headquarters making last minute arrangements for public meetings tonight besides clearing up necessary detail in the race for the political wire.

Possibility of a light rural vote loomed strongly today as reports of snow-filled byways and concession roads in the riding trickled in. Strong winds over the week-end, it is stated, again filled roads that were plowed out on Saturday. County plows went into swift action early today throughout the district, while political factions cast anxious eyes at the weather reports.

The three candidates will hold meetings tonight when last minute details will be perfected. Geo. H. Stokes, National Government candidate will hold forth in his committee rooms where speakers will address the gathering. McLean Haig will also be "at home" to his supporters in the Liberal Committee rooms while Harry R. Cory, Liberal, will address a meeting in the city hall auditorium.

Interest heightened on Front St. today as the election deadline drew near. Possibilities were discussed in many places where men gather, with supporters of all three candidates expressing confidence in the outcome.

The polls will open at eight o'clock tomorrow morning and close at six p.m.

CALF IS BORN WITH THREE LEGS

Animal Still Living Has Two Normal Hind Legs But Only One Leg in Front

Eldorado, March 25—(Special)—A freak calf with only three legs has found its way to the farm of Mr. Hugh Empey. It is now over a week old and gets along quite nicely. The hind legs are normal but has only one in front. By all reports it bids fair to take its place in the herd along with the other newcomers.

HIGH WINDS FILL COUNTRY ROADS WITH DEEP DRIFTS

Traffic in Many Areas Impossible — Snowplows at Work Continuously

MAIN HIGHWAYS OPEN

A typical March blizzard, blowing almost continually since early Friday morning and whipping loose snow into mountainous drifts along the highways kept many a would-be visitor at home over the week-end as motor traffic was brought almost to a complete standstill in many sections. Early Saturday morning many country residents experienced untold difficulties as they battled the drifts in an effort to reach the city to attend the Easter market, with many farmers becoming snow-bound as their motors refused to proceed any further.

All highways throughout the immediate district were reported open however, but in many cases, only heavy traffic kept the roads passable as drifts filled in until only one track was open. All concession roads were completely blocked by Saturday and many farmers, who had reached town earlier in the morning were forced to reach home by more travelled routes.

Snowplows working continuously since the blow started, have kept the main highways open, while today many of the concession roads are again passable as mechanical and horse-drawn plows slowly but surely triumph over the drifts.

Trenton Resident Saved From Drowning

Trenton, Mar. 25 (Special). — Walking into the open water of the Trent River at the foot of Bay street here, Stanley Cole, 37 years and Bay street resident, was rescued from drowning by Captain Hewitt of the Trenton Salvation Army over the week-end.

Apparently Cole did not realize the river was open at this point where the Bay street refuse sewer flows into the river, causing open water at this point. Captain Hewitt heard the cries of Cole and summoning assistance of passersby managed to pull him to safety.

With the exception of a cold ducking in the icy waters of the Trent River, Cole did not complain of any serious results suffered from his experience.

OBITUARY

JAMES ELLIOTT
(Formerly of Foxboro)

James Elliott, formerly of Foxboro, Ont., passed away at the residence of his niece, Mrs. E. R. Walt, in the 4th. concession of Ameliasburg Township, Prince Edward County, on Sunday, March 24th., after an illness of two weeks' duration.

The late Mr. Elliott had reached an advanced age, being in his 91st. year. He was born in the Tweed district and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Elliott. For twenty years he resided in Foxboro and for the past sixteen months he made his home with his niece, Mrs. E. R. Walt in Ameliasburg Township. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Foxboro, and fraternally he was a member of the Loyal Orange Lodge at Foxboro. In the community he was highly esteemed.

Surviving him are four nephews, Messrs. C. F. Elliott, Tweed; F. B. Elliott, Napanee; W. H. Elliott, Thomasburg and T. M. Elliott, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; one niece, Mrs. E. R. Walt, Ameliasburg Township. His wife, who was Lyle Emsley, died some years ago.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE MISS ABIGAIL FRANK

Saturday afternoon, March 23, the funeral of Miss Abigail Frank took place from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith, 10 Geddes street. The service in the home and at the graveside in Fox Cemetery at Eldorado was conducted by Bro. William Forsyth of the Bethel Hall, Campbellford.

The bearers were all nephews of the late Miss Frank and were as follows: Messrs. Bruce Smith, Morley Smith, Kenneth Smith, Clayton Smith, Stanley Frank and Allen Frank.

DAVID PEACOCK
(Sidney Township)

David Peacock passed away early this Monday morning, March 26th., at the residence of his brother, Mr. Robert Peacock, in the 5th. concession of Sidney Township. He had been in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. Peacock, who was in his 72nd. year, was born in Tudor Township, Hastings County, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Peacock. The greater part of his life was passed in Wollaston Township and he was engaged in farming. For the past twelve years he made his home in Sidney Township. He was a bachelor. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church at Foxboro and was highly esteemed.

Surviving him is one brother, Mr. Robert Peacock, 5th. concession of Sidney Township. A sister, Mrs. Thomas Watt, passed away about two weeks ago.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

SERGT. W. LEWIS, (Airport).

After being a patient in the Belleville General Hospital since March 5th, Sergt. W. Lewis of the Trenton Airport, died in the hospital late on Saturday evening, March 23rd. He was 42 years of age.

LATE WESLEY SAGER
(Ameliasburg Township)

The funeral of Wesley Sager took place Sunday afternoon, March 24th., from his residence in the 1st concession of Ameliasburg Township, Prince Edward County. The service in the home and at the graveside in Albury Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. W. H. Boomhauer, of Rednersville United Church.

The bearers were Messrs Charles Babcock, Clifford Peck, Clarence Russell, D. Dempsey, G. Dempsey and H. Weese.

ADOPTS RESOLUTION

Nottingham, England, March 25—(CP)—The Independent Labor Party, in annual conference here, adopted a wartime program today expressing opposition to all emergency powers which restrict workers' organizations and freedom of speech and press. The program also opposed a political truce with the Chamberlain Government or an industrial truce with employers.

The Independent Labor Party holds three seats in the House of Commons.

Capacity Congregations Attend Easter Services

Mighty organs pealed forth the majesty of glorious Easter anthems yesterday; a resonant background to the voices of choirs, as Belleville laid aside its daily cares and paid tribute to the glorious festival of Easter in crowds that thronged the churches to capacity.

From early morning until evening people wended their way to the various edifices of worship. Traditional Easter lilies and other colorful floral effects added an impressive seasonal effect to the various places of worship while the music of Easter contributed to the solemnity of the occasion.

Bridge Street United Church attracted a capacity morning congregation when the service was of a musical nature. Anthems sung by the choir featured the service which was culminated by the mighty "Hallelujah Chorus" under the direction of Miss Leona Riggs. Dr. Bert Howard addressed the Sunday School in the afternoon.

Sunrise Service at Holloway St.

A sunrise service attended by a large congregation ushered in Easter morning for members of Holloway Street United Church. Appropriate music and floral decorations were in evidence. Rev. Mr. Newman addressed the congregation at both services.

Tabernacle Church.

An Easter cantata under the leadership of Mrs. Morley Duff highlighted the services at the Tabernacle United Church with the minister, Rev. D. T. McClintock addressing the congregation on "The difference Easter has made" during the morning service.

St. Andrew's.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was also the scene of large morning and evening congregations for the Easter services. Seasonal music and floral tributes provided a seasonal setting for two inspiring sermons by the Rev. W. J. Walker.

Baptist Church.

Large congregations attended the Easter services at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. The Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead preached at both morning and evening services. During the morning service the ordinance of baptism was administered to six persons. Most appropriate at the Easter season was this solemn and beautiful ceremony, symbolizing as it does the burying of the old life in the token of Jesus' death and the resurrection with Him to a new life of Christian service.

Easter music was rendered very effectively by the choir under the direction of Mr. John W. Deacon. Solos were sung by Mr. Deacon and Mr. Arthur Wynne. The church was beautifully decorated with Easter lilies.

The Sunday School met in open session with Mr. Arthur Wynne in charge of the program. Easter songs and recitations were given by the Primary and Beginners classes and a play, the Easter Story, was presented by the Service Group of the Senior B.Y.P.U.

St. Michael's Church.

Large crowds attended Solemn High Mass at St. Michael's Church yesterday morning where Easter music and flower-banked altars provided a traditional seasonal setting. Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, V.G. celebrated Mass assisted by the Rev. Fr. Gallery and Fr. J. J. Collins. Solemn Benediction was said in the evening with the Rev. Fr. Gallery delivering the sermon.

St. Thomas

Easter Day, the Queen of festivals, was observed at the Church of St. Thomas with beautifully conducted services and with large congregations present. The Vicar, the Rev. Rural Dean, A. Beauchamp Payne, was the celebrant at three celebrations of the Holy Communion, 7 a.m., 8 a.m., and 11 a.m., the latter service was fully choral and the music of the communion office was beautifully rendered by the large choir under the direction of Mr. Ernest Wheatley, Mus. Bac., A.R.C.O.

The altar was beautifully adorned with lights and Easter lilies, the latter being the gifts of parishioners in memory of departed members of their families.

The vicar delivered an inspiring Easter message at the 11 o'clock service and at Festal Evensong at 7 p.m. In the afternoon a children's service was held in the church which was addressed by the vicar and there was a large attendance of pupils from the Sunday School with their teachers and friends.

Christ Church

Despite winter weather large congregations attended all Easter services at Christ Church yesterday. Over 500 communicants celebrated the greatest day in the church year, Rev. G. G. Wright administering the Holy Communion twice at Christ Church and once at St. George's parish yesterday morning. Rev. Wright delivered the Easter message of the Resurrection and was assisted in the morning, during the celebration of the Holy Sacrament, by Canon Austin Smith of Trenton.

The Christ Church male choir rendered traditional Easter music and was directed by Choirmaster Geo. N. Maybee at all services. "This Joyful Eastertide," a Dutch carol and the anthem, "The Strife is O'er," were presented by the choir during last night's service.

Plea to Withdraw Ignored by Liberal

Mackenzie King Asks Harry Cory to Stop South Hastings Campaign

Belleville, March 25—Harry Cory, self-styled "King Liberal" has been asked by Premier King to withdraw from the federal election campaign in South Hastings and support McLean Haig, official Liberal candidate. Cory was beaten by 40 votes at the nominating convention when Haig was chosen.

In a telegram to Mr. Cory, Mr. King said: "I would say that where two or more Liberal candidates are running in any constituency, the only candidate entitled to recognition by the government is the one recognized as the official candidate. In South Hastings, Mr. McLean Haig is, as you are aware, the official Liberal candidate. My colleagues and I are of the view that any candidate in the present campaign who is not the official candidate of the party, if running as a Liberal, however well intended his motives may be, is thereby making more difficult the return of the government candidate by continuing in the campaign. He may even jeopardize the chances of a supporter of the government being returned. In these circumstances, we could not possibly accord recognition in any constituency to anyone other than the candidate who has been recognized from the beginning as the official candidate. If your desire is to support the present administration, I sincerely hope you may find it possible, instead of risking the defeat of Mr. Haig by dividing the Liberal support, to withdraw your candidature and have your friends join with you in making perfectly certain of his return to Parliament on Tuesday next. Such an attitude on your part would be greatly appreciated by my colleagues and myself."

Mr. Cory said his position was unchanged; that he would continue to campaign as an unofficial candidate. (Toronto Star.)

HOUSE DESTROYED AT CHATTERTON

Fire From Unknown Origin Destroys Home of Mrs. Ida Hudson

Fire originating from an undertermined cause completely destroyed the home and contents belonging to Mrs. Ida Hudson, at Chatterton today. Mrs. Hudson, who was visiting with a friend for the weekend was unaware of the blaze until the flames swept through the house.

Only a small quantity of furniture was in the house at the time.

Mrs. Hudson was at her home for a short time last night, and left to spend the night with neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Demille. The house suddenly burst into flames about ten o'clock today and all efforts to save the structure and its contents were unavailing.

Transients Suffer From Frost-Bites

The exceptionally unseasonable weather was clearly indicated over the Easter week end when two transients appeared at the police station, seeking shelter, both of whom were suffering from badly frost-bitten ears.

On Saturday night Elain Latour, 27, of Montreal, sought shelter from the bitter cold and when admitted by Sergeant Arthur Booth, it was disclosed that his left ear was badly frozen. Last night Sergeant Arthur Harman experienced the same situation when John Merritt, 33, of Brockville, appeared seeking shelter from the cold, raw winds. Merritt's right ear was frost-bitten.

Both men were given medical treatment, Latour being taken to the Belleville General Hospital as his left ear had swollen to an alarming size after being frozen. It is believed that both transients had been riding upon freight trains and were exposed to the strong, cold winds, which resulted in frozen ears.

Rural Districts Isolated at Tweed

Tweed, March 25 (Special) — Rural districts are completely isolated as far as motor cars are concerned following the snow storm of early Friday morning, accompanied by a high wind which packed the roads full. The sub-zero weather froze the snow solid and only with considerable difficulty are horses and sleighs able to get through.

A political meeting at Stoco postponed from Wednesday night to Saturday night on account of heavy travelling was cancelled entirely owing to road conditions.

The vote in the rural area about Tweed will probably be light unless almost superhuman efforts are made to open the roads to the polls.

Mr. D. Barnett of the Royal Bank staff of Kitchener, visited his parents during the holiday week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Borden Rollins and young son Douglas of Montreal were the guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Rollins.

Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Boyd and son of Belleville, were Easter guests of the latter's father, Mr. R. T. Graham.

Mr. Bill McGee was a holiday visitor at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. McGee.

Mr. Charles R. Porritt, a veteran of the Great War has been accepted in the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery at Kingston. He served through the greater part of the World War, returning home in 1919 uninjured. For many years he had charge of the delivery of Canadian National and Canadian Pacific express in Tweed where his familiar figure and cheery voice have become almost a symbol. For a number of years he has been secretary-treasurer of Tweed Consolidated School Board, and a member of the Board of Stewards of Tweed United Church, at the time of his enlistment.

Special Easter services were conducted in Tweed churches on Sunday. Easter messages appropriate to the season with the joyous Easter music featured the day and were enjoyed by the large congregations. At the United Church Rev. H. L. Morrison spoke on the subject "The Unnamed Guard" and "Pilate, the Disillusioned." The choir contributed its usual fine Easter music consisting of anthems.

Captain Bonar conducted the service at the Salvation Army citadel, assisted by Lieut. McLaren.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, Mar. 25 (Special) — There was no customary Easter parade at Trenton yesterday. The occasion was better suited for a New Year's Day celebration. The town's board walk was not illuminated by the annual fashion parade for those who ventured downtown invaribly wore heavy winter clothing. The latest in ladies hats were seen at morning church services, however despite the lack of new ensembles et cetera. A sure sign of spring was noted however, when a small boy was seen roller skating down one of the side streets. The sun shone' brightly for the most part of the day, out the temperature hovered around zero and a bleak wind didn't help conditions either. Winter returned in all its bleakness at nghtfall.

Trenton Boxer Loses at London

Dutchman Arlie Bauder the Trenton punch artist who made a name for himself in local punch circles took an English trimming at the hands of a Britisher at the Metropolitan Police Games at London, England, recently. A letter to Mrs. Bauder says, that Arlie was awarded a cup for turning in a fine performance against his conqueror. According to the letter the trophy is being brought back to Canada by Arlie's friend who was discharged from the service recently. Bauder is a Corporal attached to the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Aldershot, England.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bishop of Stirling were in Trenton visiting friends over the week-end. Mr. and Mrs. Bishop recently returned home from a vacation in sunny California and a trailer tour through a number of the States in the Union.

Miss Marjorie Norsworthy of Toronto spent the week end holidays with her parents Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Norsworthy of Queen Street. Miss Norsworthy is attending Toronto University this term.

Mr. Farley Hendricks is spending the Easter holidays with his parents Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hendricks, York Road. Mr. Hendricks is a student at Knox College, Toronto this year.

Miss Laura Funnell of Trenton returned to her studies at Rochester, New York, after spending a month here with her mother Mrs. J. Funnell. Miss Funnell is studying to be a fashion designer.

Mr. George Carver visited friends in Trenton on Saturday and returned to Belleville the same day.

Mrs. Arthur Norrington, daughter Betty and son Barry are spending the Easter holidays with Capt. Arthur Norrington's mother at Cherry Valley.

Mrs. Loomis Reeves and son Mac of Madoc were in town one day last week.

Private Aubrey Bruyea of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Aldershot, England, is expected to arrive home in Trenton in a few days.

Mr. Ross MacAuley of Trenton has received a letter from Private Ben P. Hubbs who is with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in the Motherland.

Correcting an earlier report Major Bruce Sutcliffe of Trenton represented the First Brigade at the Lord Mayor's Dinner held at London, England recently. Major Sutcliffe is O.C. of A Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Mr. and Mrs. John Callahan and daughter Barbara of Toronto enjoyed the Easter holidays at New York City. The Callahan family at Wooler in the summer months.

PESSIMISTIC OF PEACE

Stephen T. Early, President Roosevelt's secretary, is pictured during a White House press conference, where he read a statement prepared by the chief executive offering little encouragement to the current European peace rumors. Read Mr. Early, "On the basis of all authoritative reports received by this government and carefully read and analyzed by President Roosevelt, there seems to be no basis in fact for reports published in London. Rome, Berlin, Paris and other capitals that give an authoritative basis for peace."

Cold Weather Mars Showing of Finery On Easter Sunday

Old Man Winter completely spoiled Belleville's traditional Easter parade of finery on Sunday when cold blasts from the north made Winter attire more of the order of the day than the conventional Easter bonnets and such garments. Actually Belleville experienced the "white Easter" in many years, while the mercury fell below the zero mark on the early Easter morning thermometer. Church-goers shivered on the coldest Easter on record.

Curious motorists ventured to take in the sights, but there was no "Easter parade" in Belleville yesterday.

It is little consolation today, however, to announce that Easter wil lnot fall as early as March 24 again until the year 2391. Yesterday was only the second time since the Gregorian calendar was adopted, 358 years ago, that Easter has fallen as early as March 24.

However, the public can live in hopes of a bright warm Easter in 1941, when Easter Day will be nearly three weeks later, on April 13th.

AT THE BELLE

"SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON"

Sparkling with action and drama, Gene Towne's and Graham Baker's production for RKO Radio of Johann David Wyss' immortal human story, "Swiss Family Robinson", is now being presented by the Belle Theatre, with a cast headed by such convincing players as Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt and Baby Bobby Quillan. Few stories have captured the world's imagination as has this 130-year-old tale of adventure and peril on a South Seas Island, a tale that has been a best-seller for more than a century, and the film faithfully visualises its spirit and action.

The adventure takes place during the Napoleonic era when all Europe was harassed by war and uncertainty. Robinson, a wealthy Swiss watch maker in London, sees his four children growing up to become useless faddists and in desperation he sells everything he owns and sets out with his rebellious family to begin a new life in distant Australia.

In the South Seas a storm wrecks their vessel. Only the Robinsons survive. When the waves subside they build a raft, ferry themselves and some livestock, tools and clothing to a nearby island, a tropical paradise alive with gay colored birds and strange animals.

Their subsequent difficulties, terrific tropical storm that devastates the island and smashes their carefully-built tree house, and the daily excitement and thrills of their picturesque lives, all contrast vividly with the emotional drama of the story—of Robinson's determination to make men of his sons despite his wife's snobbish attitude. How he finally imbues them all with his ideals and wins their love and respect and co-operation, makes for the gripping appeal of the film.

Thomas Mitchell, one of the screen's foremost charcater actors, and Edna Best, noted British actress plays the elder Robinsons, with the four boys being portrayed by the other four featured players, Tim Holt is seen as the oldest of the children, Freddie Bartholomew as the second, Terry Kilburn as the third and little Bobby Quillan as the baby of the family.

The settings of the picture, especially the tropic island sequences, are rated among the most unique and intriguing ever shown on the screen, for they bring to life all the highlights of the familiar tale in brilliantly vivid fashion. And the "escapist" theme of the story, of a family seeking refuge from the anxiety and stress of a war-torn Europe, makes the offering particularly timely today.

West Wall.

As timely as tomorrow's headlines is the film "The West Wall" to be presented on the same prgoram.

Narrated by the famed military strategist, Major George Fielding Eliot, author of the best-seller, "The Ramparts We Watch", it offers a thorough, interesting, comprehensive picture of the geographical theatre of World War II, and the ways in which the belligerent and neutral nations have fortified their borders from the North Sea to the Mediterranean. The potential battle front stretches across Europe for six hundred miles, but the two hundred miles "western front" provides most of the footage for the film. Here France blocks the shortest road to Paris with the Maginot Line, and Germany protects her rich industrial regions with the Siegfried Line or "West Wall". Actual scenes of the fortresses, anti-tank defences and gun emplacements, give the spectator a vivid and compelling picture of the battle front of today's war.

Impartial, accurate and dramatic, "West Wall" is one of the most important film events of the year.

"The Riveteer", a funny color cartoon, and the Belle British Newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"My Little Chickadee"

Flower Belle Lee	Mae West
Cuthbert J. Twillie	W. C. Fields
Jeff Badger	Joseph Calleia
Wayne Carter	Dick Foran
Aunt Lou	Ruth Donnelly
Amos Budge	Donald Meek
Cousin Zeb	Fuzzy Knight
Musicians	Gene Austin and Candy and Coco

Starring together for the first time, Mae West and W. C. Fields are now at the McCarthy Theatre in the laugh-crammed classic "My Little Chickadee."

In a clever story set against the picturesque background of the 1880 period, the curvaceous Mae and the bulbous-nosed Fields cover themselves with new glory in roles custom-tailored to their colorful talents.

Mae portrays a wise-cracking Chicago cabaret singer who causes a tornado of excitement upon her arrival in the wild and wooly wide open spaces Fields is cast as a travelling medicine man and card-sharp who is fascinated by Mae and who struggles valiantly throughout the film to win her affections.

Song is Introduced

In the film Miss West sings "Willie of the Valley," written especially for her. She is accompanied by the well-known musical trio, Gene Austin and Candy and Coco. The remaining members of the fun cast all contribute outstanding performances. Do not miss "My Little Chickadee", the laugh hit of the Century. Latest Fox Movietone News Events, an all-star musical revue and a technicolor Merrie Melody cartoon, precede the feature presentation and and a pleasing variety to an all round grand program.

Mickey Rooney in "Love is a Headache," now showing at the Capitol with an added feature, "Forged Passport."

WAR BRIEFS

Berlin, March 25—(AP)— The German High Command's communique this morning said:—

"In the west the day passed quietly. The air force continued scouting over France. During border patrol on the west front, in the Sweibruecken region, a French reconnaissance plane was shot down by German pursuit craft."

London, March 25—(CP)—A new German aerial torpedo—decorated with a portrait of Prime Minister Chamberlain with his umbrella—was found today on a beach near Bridlington, Yorkshire.

Admiralty experts were called to examine it. The torpedo is about 12 feet long, with two propellers at the tail. It is believed to be as dangerous as a floating mine after its motive power is exhausted.

Birmingham, England, March 25—(CP)—A conference of the National Union of shop assistants, warehousemen and clerks voted 86 to 57 today in favor of ending the war and for qusting the Chamberlain Government. The resolution charged that it was an imperialist war for the defence of French and British colonies.

"We are told this is a war to end aggression," declared the author of the resolution, Miss M. Johns of London. "This comes from the British capitalist class which has held down India by force and violence and shot down strike pickets in the West Indies, which has oppressed, starved and exploited negro workers in Africa and is still carrying on aggression against Ireland."

Hong Kong, March 25—(AP)—Chinese reported successes today on war fronts as far separated as Southern China and inner Mongolia, in the far north. Near Wuyuan, in Western Suiyuan, they said Chinese troops had stopped a Japanese advance in the Mongolian Province and had seized a large quantity of Japanese war material.

Fighting was reported also near the Hunan-Hopeh Province border where the Chinese said they were resisting a three-pronged Japanese attack.

VOTE VOTE

Stokes for Service

To the Electors of Hastings South:

With this one issue in mind, I feel that I am better qualified to represent this constituency at Ottawa, than either of my opponents. I have spent most of my life on the farm and therefore, I understand your problems at first-hand. I have given long years of service in township and county affairs and I think I can say, without boastfulness, that I am better equipped to sit as your member than my less experienced friends and opponents.

Let me say in addressing you through this newspaper that I will if elected, serve you as I always have, to the best of my ability. When you approach me with your problems, I will deal with them regardless of your party affiliations. If you send me to Ottawa, I will see that South Hastings is given impartial representation in the House of Commons. That is the purpose of a National Government. I am convinced that Dr. Manion has the platform to meet the country's present needs. Therefore, your vote and support on Tuesday next will go a long way toward putting those policies into action.

Yours sincerely,

GEO. H. STOKES

FIRE FURNISHES MANHATTAN BLACKOUT

This fire in Kearney, New Jersey, gave Manhattan a sample of what a blackout is like. The spectacular fire of undetermined origin in the chemical building of the White Tar Company, sent great plumes of heavy dark smoke rolling across the river and bay. Emergency calls for help were sent to Jersey City and other nearby communities for equipment with which to battle to prevent spread of the flames.

OBSERVES 108th BIRTHDAY

Seneca Falls, N.Y., Mar. 25 (AP). —Mrs. Ann Sheridan observes her 108th birthday in bed today—under protest. Her physician said she had been confined several weeks "because of infirmities of old age". Mrs. Sheridan commented "I have always been a hard working woman, and it doesn't seem right to have people wanting on me all the time."

CHIPMUNKS DELAY EGG HUNT

French Lick, Ind., Mar. 25 (AP).— Chipmunks delayed the start of the French Lick Springs hotel's Easter egg hunt, stealing the eggs hidden for the kids, and attendants had to get more. Hours later the little animals were found chattering over bright-covered eggshells.

TANKER AGROUND

Halifax, March 25—(CP)— The 5,800-ton British tanker El Ciervo, which ran aground Saturday east of Halifax harbor, remained on the sandy bottom today. The tanker, which grounded while attempting to make port in a snow squall, was said to be in no immediate danger and the crew remained aboard.

WHO INVENTED THE MOUSETRAP?

You've often heard the old adage: "Let a man make a better mousetrap, and the world will make a beaten path to his door."

But have you ever happened upon that path, or even looked for it?

Why SHOULD you, when the people who today have things to sell beat a path to YOUR door to tell you about them?

Every newspaper that comes into your home brings you a new list of WHAT you can get, and WHERE. You can do your shopping in the advertising pages — instead of beating a path from store to store to find what you want.

Make it a habit to look over the advertisements, and you'll find many fine values you might have missed . . . many exciting and useful things you otherwise might never have known about!

CANADIANS TO EXERCISE FRANCHISE

Canada should go to the polls with the largest vote ever registered in history on Tuesday, March 26th. That is only fair to the parties who have been campaigning for the past few weeks, and it is only fair to the men who will be chosen as the members of the new House of Commons, but most of all it is only fair to the Dominion as a nation. There are over six and a half million persons who are entitled to vote. That means six and a half million persons whose duty should take them to the polls to make their choice of the government that will rule, and the candidates who will form the membership of the House.

Canadians have the heritage of a secret ballot and should use it, for here one man's or one woman's vote is as good as another's.. So guarded is the right of the Canadian voter. Here in Canada the individual is the basis of the state and every person should show his or her appreciation of this fact by going to the polls. A democracy like Canada would welcome a complete polling of every vote. The exercise of the vote should be felt by every citizen as a bounden duty.

It is regrettable that weather conditions may interfere with the vote in the country in those parts where there are heavy snowdrifts caused by the high winds of the past few days. This is the case on side roads and it is feared that many voters will not be able to get to the polls. That many will overcome the obstacle is readily seen by those who realize the determination and energy of the Canadian people. Ploughs have been kept busy and everything humanly possible is being done to make the ways passable, though in some cases there seems liklihood that some of the drifts may prove insurmountable.

EASTER FINERY MAKES APPEARANCE DESPITE WINTER

Easter millinery did not fail to make its appearance despite the winds of late winter which, coming out of the northwest, made the festal day cold. The strong sun was the one cheerful note in nature.

Everyone knows that winter is nearly gone and that it has a lease of life only for a short time. Everyone believes in spring and everyone is ready to welcome the vernal guest. So some new hats and apparel made their appearance.

Winter could not faze them nor frighten the wearers to stay within doors, hugging the winter fire.

Winter knows that spring is not far off. People are even more optimistic than the poet who said:—

"When winter comes, can spring be far behind?"

They know that winter has not only come but is nearing its close and that spring cannot be far behind.

So the folk who could not be daunted faced what looked like winter but was really the herald to the piping time of spring. So the collors came out at Easter though they might seem as strange as a flower growing out of the snow, yet they were symbols of the hopeful spirit of the wearers, who believe in spring and who will be justified in time.

Students and scholars out of college and school for Easter holidays might very well have thought they were in the midst of the Yuletide season for all the weather told them.

WHAT SYLT RAID MEANS

The first really intensive bombardment from the air during the war took place last week when British bombers dropped about one thousand bombs on the base of the Isle of Sylt. This is a strategic place and has been the source from which Nazi planes have gone out to waylay British shipping, to sow mines and to bombard such places as Scapa Flow and the Firth of Forth. There have been many British raids on Sylt but the last was the first evidence of a gigantic attack from the air.

One of the signs of British supremacy is that in such an attack which was certain to stir up heaviest anti-aircraft fire of which the Nazi were able, only one of the British planes failed to return to its base. This a tribute to British airmanship, to fighting technique and to the quality of the machines. The return attack the next morning proved the prowess of the British fliers in going right back to photograph the damage which had been done.

PEOPLE FEEL EASTER SPIRIT

The large congregations which attended Easter services in the churches all over the Dominion proved how deeply the lesson of the season has affected every individual and society. The trying times of the past few years and the duties and tasks of the present have made men and women thoughtful of the realities of life. In their earnestness and clearer vision they have seen the need of spiritual aid and find their heart's desire and satisfaction in religious truth.

The lesson of Easter is the triumph of the spirit over the material things and the problems of life. It points the lesson of high thinking and places the stress upon the imperishable value of the individual human soul. In a day when democracy has to fight for civilization and the best developments of history against the totalitarian doctrine of suppression of the individual, the worshipper feels comfort in the example of Christ whose life was proof of the supreme importance of the individual.

Easter brings an exalted message. It sets the seal on the true values and ideals of life of both individual and society. It shows man that the spirit is greater than death, and that the spirit is life and truth.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Observers of the European scene at close range seemed to agree over the weekend that some development bearing on the progress of the war can be expected in the Balkan area shortly.

Whether it will be some joint move involving Germany and Italy with or without Soviet Russia is one of the secrets locked in the minds of those who know why Hitler went to see Mussolini last week and what they said to one another.

Ever since that unheralded conference at the Brenner Pass, however, official quarters in Berlin have been talking of big things to come, including a deal between Italy and Russia. Italian official circles were and still are silent.

The rumor, if it was a rumor, that Premier Molotoff of the Soviet Union was about to visit Berlin and might meet Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, there originated in Berlin. Now it has been denied officially in Moscow.

All of which seems to indicate that Nazi Germany is the prime mover in whatever schemes are afoot and may be having a little difficulty in getting Italy and Russia to sit down around a map - covered conference table in Berlin to carve out new spheres of influence from which Germany's enemies would be excluded rigidly.

Germany's immediate interest in getting Italy and Russia into a bargain is to shut the Allies out of southeastern Europe and secure its supply lines into and through Rumania and other Balkan countries.

The activities of British submarines off the Danish coast in the last few days indicates the blockade of Germany on the west is being drawn tighter. So the question of keeping open the gates at the southeast becomes of even more pressing importance to the Reich than formerly.

War as Made By the Germans

The full story of the sufferings of the crew of the Greek cargo ship Eleni Stathatos (5,625 tons), which was sunk in the Atlantic by a German submarine, was told by survivors who have been landed at a fishing village in Eire.

During four days these seamen watched the spread of insanity and death among their comrades in an overcrowded rowboat, and threw them overboard one by one as they died. Three times they suffered the agony of watching a ship that meant rescue sail away without seeing their signals. There were 20 survivors who endured the four days' ordeal from the time their ship was torpedoed without warning Sunday morning until they were landed Thursday afternoon.

Able Seaman Michael Ryan, of Tullabracky Bruff, County Limerick, said after two explosions had wrecked the ship they took to the boats.

"I was in the port boat with five or six others, and there were 26 or 27 in the starboard boat. When we were 100 yards away we were horrified to hear shouts for help from the other boat. We pulled back quickly and discovered the boat swamped and all of the occupants in the water. Their boat had drifted under the propeller and was cut in two. We managed to get every one of them into our boat, which was then very much overcrowded. We started away and hoisted a little canvas sail. We had to keep continuously baling out water in order to avoid sinking.

"Our supply of provisions was only sufficient for 15 for a few days and there were 33 in our boat. That night and for the three following nights we tried to snuggle under a length of canvas for shelter. On Monday the rain began and the cold was driven into us by a fierce gale.

"Lack of food and drink, as well as exposure and mental anguish, were taking a heavy toll of us. On Tuesday night the first two died after going mad. The first deaths had a shocking effect on the rest of the crew. Next morning two or three more were dead. Two or three more died on Wednesday, and the last few died yesterday morning.

"We saw the light of a lighthouse and headed for it. Then a trawler came close by us. I signalled her with a police whistle, but the trawler put out its lights and rushed away. That was just at daybreak on Thursday morning. Then we saw another vessel and signalled, but that one took no notice either.

"We kept going on somehow and saw a village on a headland. A motor-boat came out and towed us to land."

The chief engineer, Dimitrios Pangos, said: "There was no reason for the sinking. It was a neutral ship, we had no cargo, and we were going to a neutral country. It was inhuman what they did. The Greek flag was painted on both sides of the ship, illuminated."

Six members of the crew of the Whitby steamer Kildale (3,887 tons) los their lives when the vessel was attacked by two German bombers in the North Sea. Fifteen survivors were landed at an east coast port late on Saturday night. The bombers swept the decks with machine-gun fire and also dropped bombs which caused the death of three of the engine-room staff. The vessel sent out distress signals stating that the crew were taking to the boats, and two lifeboats responded. The bombers then made off.

One of the survivors, J. Williams, of Hull, told a reporter: "It was nothing less than murder. We were attacked by two bombers for 45 minutes."

The Yewdale, a Glasgow collier of 823 tons, was about a mile from the coast when two enemy 'planes circled over her. Machine-gun fire smashed the windows of the wheelhouse and killed the skipper, William Richard Taylor, of Liverpool. Three other members of the crew who were wounded were brought ashore and taken to hospital. Three or four 'planes took part in the attack, machine-gunning and bombing the ship for nearly half an hour.

In the same area the Grimsby steam trawler, Rose of England, was attacked, but no one was injured, although reports state that she was peppered with machine-gun fire.

"There were four German airplanes attacking us, one after the other, and they must have dropped 30 bombs in all inflicting very little damage to the vessel," said a member of the Rose of England's crew.

The story of how an unarmed British ship, the Highwave (1,178 tons), was ruthlessly machine-gunned and bombed by a German 'plane was told by the second engineer who was landed at Flushing with the seventeen other members of the crew. They were taken there by the Dutch motor ship Rian.

"We were lying about 30 miles off the British coast," he said, "with engine trouble. We had neither guns nor wireless on board. During the afternoon a big German 'plane circled over, looked at us, and disappeared again. We were very thankful to see him go.

"But next day about two o'clock he came back—we recognized the 'plane as the one of the day before —and this time he attacked us. First he machine-gunned us ruthlessly from all sides. A hail of bullets whistled through the second mate's cabin, and two of our men fell wounded, one in the shoulder and the other in the leg. Then the enemy started bombing.

"He circled round, dropping bombs each time he came over us; first small incendiary bombs, and then high explosives. The bridge was carried clean away, the third hatch was stove completely in, and the forward mast went down like a ninepin.

"Ten bombs were dropped and the last, a big one, took the whole side of the ship away. We had precisely three minutes to leave the ship and take to the boats. We managed to get the wounded men off safely, but it is a miracle that none of us is dead."—Manchester Guardian.

Bored?

Bored? Fed up with the war, the black out, rationing and other restrictions? Well, everyone is bored sometimes, for war is a boring business. Since the days of the Roman and Grecian campaigns war has consisted of short periods of intense activity and long periods of boredom. For the civilian population on the Home Front it is mostly boredom. But let us look at this strangest of wars from a different angle. Let us try and see it through other people's eyes, the eyes of those who must watch, wait, and sometimes fight and die so that we may lie safe abed at nights.

When next you are bored, go along to the public library, turn up the files of the Times of December 20, and read the full account of the action of H.M.S. Exeter against the Graf Spee. Read the tale of this very gallant action, of the unnamed hero who, with both legs shot off, told his officer as he lay dying that he was "not doing too badly under rather adverse circumstances." Read too how another sailor died, the Commander of H.M.S. Mohawk, legs shattered, in agony but tied to a chair on the bridge of his damaged ship so that he could bring her safely into port. And should you still feel bored, turn up the tale of the last action of the armed merchant-cruiser H. M. S. Rawalpindi against the pocket battleship Deutschland. Such is "the price of Admiralty," and of our food and safety.

Think of Bill and Angus and Joe, trawler hands out of Peterhead, Buckie, Tyne, Humber or East Anglian ports, face and hands seared by the bitter North Sea cold, eyes red-rimmed with lack of sleep, watching, sweeping, day in, night out. They have no time to get bored, little enough time to eat or sleep. As long as there are mines in the fairway there is no rest for them. Think too of the countless thousands of men in the merchant marine, carrying to us our food and the sinews of war. "Tanker Sunk in Flames. Forty-four Missing." In the ports of Britain they know this kind of headline all too well. This is part of the price of freedom, paid in men's lives and the tears of women and little children.

Bored? Then give a thought too for the clear-eyed laughing young men who fly out each day and night to patrol the long line of the German coast, to photograph and keep ceaseless vigil over Germany itself and to meet the Nazi 'planes when they approach our shores. Some of them do not come back, others must know until war is over the worst boredom of all, the forced inactivity of a Nazi prison camp. Let us think of them, of their gallantry and courage, and not of our own little grievances and petty discomforts. And let us not forget the other half of our air defence, the men on the winches of the barrage ballrooms, the searchlight crews who probe the night sky with ever-moving fingers of silver light.

Let us remember the men who stand turn and turn about on the guns round our coasts and the great industrial plants, waiting in the bitter cold, living long hours in huts on wind-swept hillsides and heaths. They perhaps have some right to be bored; but they are the sentinels on the wall, the watchers on the keep of Britain, and upon their unceasing vigilance depends our safety, as it does upon the patrols who go out each night from the forward posts of the Maginot Line and the men all along the line in France who "stand to" in the cold of a Winter's dawn.

Meat Packers Look into the Mind of a Pig

The Institute of American Meat Packers studies the origin, preparation and distribution of roasts, cutlets, chops, sausages and other good things. Recently it has once again bent its attention to the pig, reading and co-ordinating the facts and theories educed and discussed by authorities on that useful member of the animal kingdom—the same authorities who have established it as a fact that by nature the pig is a cleanly fellow whose habits become subject to criticism only when shortsighted man so circumstances him that he can not exercise successfully his innate passion for neatness. The institute now has penetrated the mind of the pig.

It is declared by T. H. Zeller, senior animal husbandman, and N. R. Ellis, senior chemist, in the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, that there is apparently a distinct difference in the mental attitude of a pig fed by hand by its owner and that of one self-fed away from human society. According to the latest Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture:

> A self-fed pig seems to be more satisfied, seldom grunting or squealing, whereas the pig that is hand-fed is usually squealing for feed at various intervals between feedings.

The self-fed pig eats more daintily and oftener than the hand-fed pig, and is assumed to be a more efficient pork producer than the pig handicapped by hand feeding. His sense of self-sufficiency, his gratification derived from independence, his exercise of power establish a serenity of mind that promotes assimilation.

Man, proud Man, is not too arrogant to take lessons from the buzzy bee, the pertinacious ant, the sagacious elephant; he might find something worth considering in that interesting fellow creature of whose tail George Herbert said you can never make a good shaft.—New York Sun.

EASTERN CANADA

paratively mild after the recent cold spell—brought women out in Winnipeg in their light Spring outfits.

Latest Hats Shown

While drab winter colors were interspersed only here and there in Eastern Canada by bright toggery, the women folk were not to lose out all the way and the latest styles in hats were prominent everywhere.

The storms in the east tied up traffic in the country and Defence Minister Rogers had to travel by horse and sleigh to reach Kingston from a political meeting in Enterprise, Ont. Premier Adelard Godbout of Quebec was forced to cancel a Federal election speech because of snow-drifted highways.

The two-day blizzard that isolated towns and disrupted transportation services in Quebec was described there as the worst in 10 years. Trains were delayed as much as nine hours. Approximately 7,000 skiers were snowbound in 16 trains in the Laurentian Mountains.

A sun spot added to the difficulties, disrupting communication lines across the country. Telephone and telegraph circuits were tied up for four hours, with only messages to a few central cities being transmitted. The interruption was termed the "worst disturbance in 25 years" by Canadian Pacific Telegraph officials.

A RADIO BROADCAST

(A letter from Judge G. E. Deroche)

This is the 13th of March. I wonder how many readers of your paper heard Burns and Allen tonight, with Gracie giving her speech to be elected president of the United States. We had the great good fortune to secure tickets to see them in person. They gave that broadcast at 4.30, which is 7.30 at home. It was much more interesting than I had expected. In fact I don't think either Dr. or Mrs. Malott or ourselves would have gone had not Elinor desired it so much, but we thanked her afterwards for taking us.

The auditorium where they broadcast seats 900 people. It is filled every Wednesday afternoon. On the platform is the orchestra and all the cast. There are half a dozen microphones making it easy for so many speakers following each other so rapidly. As we entered each usher had a huge circular badge hanking around the neck, and on it, in large letters "Gracie for President". Hanging high up across the platform several slogans; red and blue letters on a white background, such as "Register here, Gracie Allen for President", "Give Gracie a Third Term, Now", "Down with Common Sense, Vote for Gracie Allen", "Nitwits No. 9 Vote for Gracie Allen".

Before the broadcast, Burns introduced a number of very amusing incidents to get everybody in good humour. In introducing Bubbles, for instance, he said we had to pay $2,000 freight to bring her from New York. She's a very stout woman.

Have you noticed how an unseen audience seems to laugh loud and clap long in listening to a broadcast? We understand it now. We were told to laugh so we could be heard and were given our cue each, time when to clap, and how to clap, to make it most effective.

And the broadcast itself was exceedingly funny, but you heard that at 7.30. Gracie looked just as sweet and cute as you would expect her to. The song "Vote for Gracie Allen for President" was a knock-out. Didn't you think so?

Another great afternoon, a week previously we had a full afternoon drive through Beverly Hills .... a very pretty city adjacent to Hollywood. Here are most of the movie stars' homes. We saw about seventy of them driving slowly and sometimes stopping and viewing the grounds carefully.

Have seen movie pictures, several Hollywood theatres. One of them in particular is very beautiful, Granmans' Chinese Theatre. Outside, inside — everywhere Chinese architecture and decoration. Pretty girl ushers with Chinese costumes.

In the cement of the spacious entrance, just outside the entrance proper, are the imprints of the hands and feet of seventy actors, each in its own block about three feet square. Done when the cement was soft, of course, and years apart. The block of cement is put in specially just where an imprint is desired. The house name also is written in at the same time. So many familiar names, Marie Dressler, Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, Eddie Cantor, Harold Lloyd, Gloria Swanson (who has a magnificent home and grounds, the first house built in Beverly Hills) Douglas Fairbanks etc. Joe E. Brown wrote beneath his footprints, "With all my soul". Just like him eh?

There seems to be no doubt left in the minds of the citizens here regarding the belief that if the bear sees his shadow on Feb. 2nd there will be another six weeks of winter. During the last few days we have witnessed the worst storms of the season. On Wednesday, nearly all the roads were blocked for a few hours and all of the meetings which were to have taken place on Wednesday and Thursday had to be postponed. However as the old saying "It can't last long now", all are hopeful of a change soon. The farmers are pleased with the heavy blankett of snow on fields.

Mr. and Mrs. Sandy McCurdy and family were Thursday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Don Fargey.

AS GIANT LUXURY LINER QUEEN MARY PREPARED TO RUN THE WAR GAUNTLET

With smoke streaming from her funnels and piles of provisions lying on the pier ready to be swung aboard, the giant British luxury liner Queen Mary, is shown here as she waited sailing orders to leave New York. The skeleton crew which was kept aboard the giant liner since her arrival in New York after the outbreak of war was augmented by new arrivals from England. The 35,000 ton Mauretania, also berthed in New York for several months, hurriedly took on supplies and slipped away from New York under the cover of darkness. Both ships may be pressed into service as troop ships.

It may be the cause of your troubles. Buck it up the right way, with Fruit-a-tives. Feel grand.
Your liver is the largest organ in your body and most important to your health. It pours out bile to digest food, gets rid of waste, stores energy, allows the proper nourishment to reach your blood. When your liver gets out of order food decomposes in your intestines. You become constipated, stomach and kidneys can't work properly. You feel "rotten"—headachy, backachy, dizzy, dragged out all the time.
Relieve yourself of these miseries, as thousands have—with Fruit-a-tives, for 35 years Canada's largest selling liver remedy. Fruit-a-tives stimulate your liver, bring prompt relief—make you feel like a new person. Get Fruit-a-tives at your druggist's today, 25c, 50c.

Posture's Solution

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN THE subject of posture comes up where women congregate, the young 'uns are always asking "How do you get it?" There is an answer to that question, simple enough for even the young fry to understand It has to do with what is called the vital centre.

Let a girl place her fingers between her breasts, move them downward to where the ribs part and go their own ways. That is the vital centre. Keep that portion of the svelte anatomy extended and the svelte anatomy extended and the body takes the correct pose. The abdomen tucks itself away against the back bones; the chest becomes expanded; shoulders stay where they should; the back straightens.

The simple habit of holding the tummy flat will strengten the muscles of the torso. One should look neat below the waistline; that flatness has an excellent effect upon the health because a flattened tummy helps the internal organs to function normally; holds them in place.

Correct posture does not mean rigidity. Far from it. There should be ease as well as beautiful lines. Ease does not mean slouchiness of carriage, but softness of outline. The body must express vitality, energy. To do that the backbone must be kept tall, with a nip-in at the waistline.

ANNE GWYNNE . . . whose correct posture expresses her vitality.

Though millions are spent on rouge every year, there are girls who sob and beller because they flush easily. Older individuals think a girl looks pretty cute when the flush spreads over the alabaster cheek. Not the flushers, however.

The rosy glow is a nervous reaction of the tiny capillaries close to the surface of the skin. The blush, like other beauty assets, begins in the mind. It is doubtful if any cosmetic will do a bit of good.

The trouble with flushing is that the redness doesn't always know where to stop. It may include the forehead and the ears as well as the cheeks, and then it isn't so good. But what can one do? Not a thing.

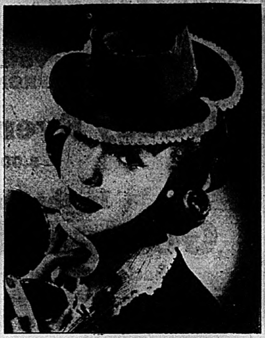
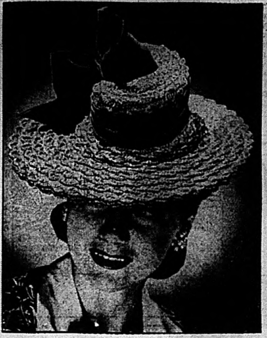
Topping Off Your Spring Wardrobe



American-designed for any woman: Lingerie-rimmed felt.



Paris original, rough str aw, sulphur-toned sailor.

By ALICE ALDEN

Hitting the high spots in spring's hats, promises made in December seem to be coming true. We can't any longer depend on an excuse for a hat—or in other words, a twist of this fabric or that with perhaps a gold spike stuck in a knot. Crowns are real, lines definite, heads fitted. Snoods are sliding out of the picture, giving way to drapery and bows or to that old favorite, the elastic cord. Just as many hats are tilted forward as backward, making many a pretense of covering one eye.

American designers' collections are superb, as usual, but several Paris milliners have tosed their ideas in with ours. Result: A hat for every mood and, what's more important, every purse.

The lingerie-trimmed black felt hat shown is an eye-catching as the sleek flapjack compact in hand, a new accessory in jewel tones which is thin enough to carry in your pocket.

The rough straw sailor, trimmed with French blue velvet ribbon, is as smart with a tweed suit as a printed frock. It's French and looks it.

Mr. Alf. Friesen, Toronto, spent Easter with his brother, Mr. Gordon Friesen.

Mrs. Jean Hartford and son Junior of Toronto are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Adams, Centenary.

Yellow daffodils and lace crosses made a piquant setting for a delightful tea held at the home of Mrs. Gordon Fraser, Geddes Street under the auspices of the King George Home and School Club last week. The hostess and Mrs. W. Arnott received the guests at the door. Later they were escorted to the tea-rooms by Mrs. Arthur Wells.

Mrs. L. A. Kells and Mrs. Charles Brown poured tea with Mrs. W. Johns and Mrs. R. Ashmore serving. Mrs. G. Dafoe replenished the tables.

An attractive home-cooking table was in charge of Mrs. C. Coleman and Mrs. W. Tebworth, while assisting were Mrs. J. Arnott, Mrs. A. Greenwood, Mrs. H. Quinsey and Mrs. Bean. Mrs. Little acted as treasurer.

Mrs. James Doyle of Albion St. is a patient in the hospital, Belleville.

Mrs. George Swoffer, Emily St., is in the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Thomas Hill, 11 Starling St. is improving.

Miss Jean MacDonald and Mr. Jack Cafley spent Saturday in Toronto attending the Cafley and Fargher wedding.

Following the evening service last night members of the Tabernacle United Church choir were entertained at a sing-song and social hour at the parsonage by Rev. D. T. McClintock and Mrs. McClintock.

WEDDINGS

HARRISON—BOLDRICK

Roslin—The marriage of Mary Mabel, daughter of Mrs. Boldrick and the late John Boldrick of Latta, to Harry Wesley Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harrison of Sheffield, England, took place in St. Paul's Anglican Church, Roslin, on Thursday evening, March 21st.

Rev. F. C. Beazer, the rector, officiated and Mrs. A. Bates played the wedding music.

The bride wore a very becoming costume of Queen's blue crepe romaine trimmed with Suez pink, with a corsage of Sweetheart roses. Her turban was of black straw, with veil. She was attended by her sister, Miss Helen Boldrick, who wore a gown of navy chiffon velvet with navy hat. Mr. Donald Hall of Latta acted as best man.

For travelling the bride chose a costume of Nasseau rose, with black hat and accessories.

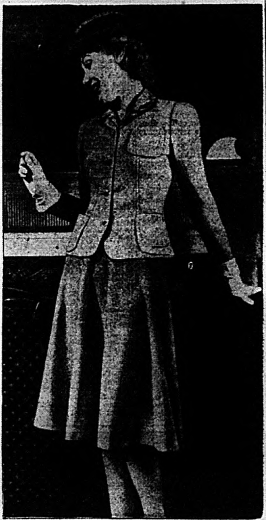
There was a large gathering of friends to witness the ceremony and to express their best wishes to the young couple.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Harrison left on a motor trip to northern points and on their return they will reside in Frankford where Mr. Harrison is employed as mechanic at the Bata Shoe Company's factory.

CHIMNEY BLAZES GIVE BRIGADE RUNS

Two minor chimney blazes, one at 73 Station St. and the other on Colbourne St., occuring almost simultaneously around nine o'clock Saturday evening were the only runs made by the fire department over the week-end. No damage resulted in either case, however, stated fire officials this morning.

Tailored Chic



By ALICE ALDEN

HERE'S English tailoring at an unbelievable price, the designer hailing from London. Shoulder seams are where they should be, the jacket fastens neatly but not tightly, and sleeves are slim without pulling. Look out for all of these points when purchasing the tailored, which likely as not must serve a couple of seasons. This suit is made of a lightweight wool crepe, comfortable for travel this summer as well as for wear now. The dusty blue skirt is matched in color in the printed blouse and topped by a corn yellow jacket. A dandelion or cornflower might be the boutonniere.

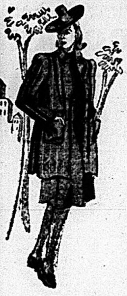
Today's Fashion



For Many Uses

By VERA WINSTON

HERE'S a spectator sports suit of many uses, since each item can do duty with other clothes. The three-quarter-length coat tops a black lisle sweater blouse and gored, gray flannel skirt with a trim, built-up waistline. The coat is of men's wear gray flannel with a white stripe. It has tailored patch pockets and simple, mannish collar. Four bone buttons close it in a straight line from the shoulders.

IVANHOE W. M. S.

The March meeting of the W. M. S. was held on Tuesday, March 19 at the home of Mrs. Arthur Hagerman. During the morning a quilt was quilted. At noon a sumptuous pot luck dinner was served. At 2.30 the president opened the meeting by singing hymn 108 followed by prayer by Rev. Delve. The members answered the roll call with a verse of scripture containing the word "pray." Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Mrs. Stanley Prest gave a report of the Presbyterial held in Belleville. Mrs. Benson also gave a short talk on Mrs. Thomas' speech that was given at the Presbyterial. Her speech was based on community friendship. Mrs. Donald Fleming, group leader, No. 3 then took charge of the meeting. A hymn was sung. Mrs. Fleming read a bit of poetry. An account of Philip as a home missionary was given by Mrs. Prest, Mrs. R. Reid, Mrs. Thomilson, Mrs. Hagerman and Mrs. C. Mitz. A hymn and the Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting. Proceeds of the meeting were collection 75c, fees $1.00, dinner $3.25, quilt $1.00.

HOLLOWAY ST. W. A.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Association was held on Thursday, March 21st in the church parlours. The meeting opened with the President, Mrs. Sweetman in the chair, by all singing a hymn followed by all repeating the Lord's prayer. Mrs. Clarke then gave "A Good Friday Message." Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Treasurer's report was given and various other committees reported followed by the following numbers: Solo, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," by Mrs. Redner; three Easter poems by Mrs. Newman, "The Gambler," by G. A. Studdart-Kennedy; "Wood of the Cross" and "Gethsemane." A duet, "Take Up Thy Cross" by Mrs. Cordes and Mrs. Hagerman. Reading, "South Sea Islands," by Mrs. Sweetman. The meeting closed by singing a hymn followed by the benediction.

Worthy Grand Officers Visit Minerva Chapter

Friday evening, March 22nd, Minerva Chapter, O.E.S. was honored with a visit from Mrs. Edythe Downer, Worthy Grand Matron of Ontario and Mr. John Barlow, of Ottawa, Worthy Grand Patron of Ontario. Despite the stormy evening a number of members from sister chapters were in attendance. Worthy Matron Mrs. Cooper and Worthy Patron Fred Wilson very graciously extended a warm welcome to all members and visitors. Mrs. Downer and Mr. Barlow complimented the officers for their work so efficiently carried out.

Musical Program

During the initiation ceremony, Miss Muriel Jobson sang very sweetly, "Open Mine Eyes." The guests of honor were each presented with gifts from the chapter as a momento of their visit. At the close of the meeting, a program in keeping with the season was gratefully enjoyed. Miss Anna Hogle, elocutionist, delighted with two numbers, while Mrs. H. Wellbanks sang very effectively "Hosanna". Mr. Arthur Wynne gave a fine rendering of "The Holy City" and "Open the Gates of the Temple." Two cornet duets, "I Hear You Calling" and "Alone" by Mr. Fred Jobson and Albert Wonnacott were greatly enjoyed. Miss Bernice Saunders sang most effectively "The Lonely Heart" from Verdi's opera and a delicious lunch was served at the close of the evening. The artists were accompanied by Mrs. C. O. Franklin.

The hostesses were Mrs. Clifford Clark, Mrs. Walter Brown, Mrs. Reg. Hinchey and Mrs. Albert Stirland. Previous to the meeting Mrs. Downer was entertained to dinner at the Queen's Hotel by the past matrons of the chapter.

Playboy's Secretary

by Louise Raybold

CHAPTER XII

The hours at Yellow Gables slid by smoothly and pleasantly. Sara didn't, after all, have many moments alone with Curt. They were constantly being drawn into group activities.

There were tennis matches; swimming parties, bridge games. Carsful of company dropped in casually, chatted, had cocktails, sped away. Yet in the midst of it all — through frequent exchanges of glances or an occasional clasp of hands—Sara had the sweet and secret knowledge that she and Curt were linked in their thoughts.

There occurred one embarrassing little incident late Saturday afternoon. Sara and Curt and several others were lounging on the veranda, engaged in a mild argument about something or other, when one of the maids appeared and stepped over to Sara.

"Telephone, Miss Sidney," she murmured.

Sara was surprised—then a bit apprehensive. Who would be telephoning her here unless— unless —Had something happened to her mother? She rose quickly to follow the maid.

"It's a Mr. Martin, miss," the girl informed her, as they reached the hall.

Toby! Then, surely something had happened! There could be no other reason for his calling her here . . .

She picked up the phone and spoke breathlessly. "Toby! What is it? What has happened? Is Mother—"

"Why, Sara!" he cut in. "You sound as though I'd scared you. Nothing's happened. Why should you think something's wrong, just because I phone you?"

"Oh," said Sara, relieved. "It was silly of me, I guess. But what do you want, Toby?"

"Just wanted to say hello," he answered casually. "Thought I'd remind you of my existence while you're dwelling in marble halls."

Sara was now annoyed. "Toby Martin! Have you done this just to be aggravating?"

"Not at all," he said impudently. "How are you getting along? Have they thrown you out yet for eating petits pois with a spoon instead of a fork or have you had to walk home from any rides with the honorable Curt? If you need me, let me know. Sonia and I are planning to do the hot spots tonight, but I'll come running if . . ."

He went on and on. Sara tried vainly to break in, then angrily started wording exactly what she would say to him when he finished. But Toby allowed her no innings. On the very last syllable of his, "Darling, I love you to death, even at long distance!' he hung up.

Sara, left with a mouthful of scathing words, had to swallow them for the time being.

She went back to the veranda. "An old family friend," she murmured lightly to Curt.

Then, realizing that it was not necessary to explain the call, she blushed furiously—and knew, as he looked at her, how he must be interpreting that blush.

While the conversation went on around her, she sat seething over Toby's call. She could kill him! Phoning like that just to annoy her! He probably thought, too, he could make her jealous. As if she cared whether or not he went out with Sonia! As if she cared a tiny bit where he went or with whom!

Gradually, however, her anger wore off and, as though in defiance of Toby, she threw herself more ardently than ever into the enjoyment of her visit. At a dinner party that evening, she was particularly gay and sparkling.

One of the pleasantest hours of the entire week-end came the following morning, when she went for a before-breakfast swim with Curt.

She had wakened to a fresh, shining, cloudless day which seemed created for the special purpose of banishing all cares. She had donned her white bathing suit, had slipped into a becoming beach coat, and had sped downstairs to find Curt awaiting her with an awed, "You're the loveliest thing in the world, darling!"

They drove to a near-by beach club, and swam from its pier out to a float. Sara swam well. Many week-ends and holidays at Vicky's cottage had given her an opportunity to develop her stroke. Curt thought he had never seen anything more superb than the lithe, slim figure pulling along so steadily beside him.

"You're quite an Eleanor Holm!" he said admiringly, as they pulled themselves, dripping, up onto the float.

"I can't remember when I could not swim," Sara said, then added deminiscently, "It stood me in good stead once!"

"Is that so? Tell me about it."

"My brother-in-law Bill has a catboat," Sara eplained. "It's rather a wreck, but we all have grand times in it. He and I and my little niece, Wendy, were out in it one Sunday afternoon, when we ran into rough weather and Wendy fell overboard. Bill had his hands full with the boat, so I went after her."

"Brave girl!" said Curt. He put his hand over hers. "But then, you'd always be brave, Sara. Under any circumstances, I can feel that."

"Well, I don't know—not under all circumstances!" She stood up and prepared to dive back into the water, "Race you to the dock!"

Half an hour later, when they returned to the house, she found a mammoth florist's box awaiting her in the front hall. For an instant, she thought Curt had sent her flowers, and felt a little thrill.

But then, he lifted a quizzical eyebrow, and said, "From the same old family friend?"

Her heart sank. Had Toby actually done such a deliberately tactless, irritating thing — dared to send these flowers to her at Curt's home?

With trembling hands, she lifted the lid of the box, parted the damp green tissue paper. Roses. Yellow Ophelia roses. Dozens of them. Her favorite flower. And on top, a card covered with Toby's sprawled, familiar handwriting.

"To remind you of one whom these remind of you."

Sara slipped the card into her coat pocket. "The same old family friend," she admitted.

Curt was plainly angry. He scowled a moment.

Then, he said brusquely. "See here — after this, when my girl wants yellow roses, I'll get them for her! Just tell your 'family friend' that!"

CHAPTER XIII

The week-end was over, and now on Sunday evening, Curt was driving Sara back to town.

She sat silent beside him. She had had a heavenly time, she kept telling herself, and yet . . . she felt let down. Something had marred the week-end's perfection.

She tried to lay the blame on Toby—on his telephone call and his roses. Especially the latter. The resentment and anger they had stirred in Curt had spoiled this last day.

Yet Sara knew, in her heart, that that was not the whole reason why the week-end had been less than perfect — nor even the main reason. There was something more disturbing than that. It was the realization that, despite Curt's love-making, despite his ardent avowals, despite his resentment of Toby, he hadn't even hinted at asking her to marry him — hadn't asked her that important question which, if affirmatively answered, would give him the right to resent Toby, or any other suitor.

She tried to reason with herself. It was too soon for him to speak. He would, in time. Surely he would . . .

Still, she was tormented by doubts and when, at her apartment house door, he refused her invitation to come up for a while, pleading an engagement, she wondered whether the engagement was with Juliette Carter.

Afterwards she was glad that he had not come up, for she wondered what he would have thought of the family group gathered in the hot, stuffy little living room of the apartment—so different from the cool orderliness of Yellow Gables.

Vicky and Bill and their two children were there with her mother. Bill had his coat off and sat sprawled in the old leather arm chair, with sleepy little Wendy curled in his lap. Jill, Jr., with a large piece of jam-spread bread in his hand, was playing on the floor. Vicky and Mrs. Sidney sat fanning themselves with folded bits of the Sunday paper, the other sections of which were strewn about them in confusion.

It was all homy and accustomed but, for the first time in her life, Sara viewed her family with critical eyes.

"Well!" said Vicky, "Our social butterfly has returned!"

"Hi, Sara!" said Bill. "Running out on us, are you? We missed our first mate yesterday".

"Why, Daddy," Wendy put in. "We didn't even go sailing! Don't you remember? You said there wasn't enough wind."

"Did you have a good time, dear?" asked Mrs. Sidney.

"Yes—lovely," Sara answered.

"Got a high-class beau now, eh?" Bill said teasingly. "Well, you better watch out you don't lose that other young man of yours, Sara Cinders. I saw him the other day, arm in arm with a ravishing dark-haired beauty, gazing at furniture in a shop window."

Sara resented his teasing. "The girl was probably Sonia Lester." she said indifferently. "A copywriter in Toby's company. They were probably out getting ideas for copy."

"Well, maybe." Bill's eyes twinkled. "But they didn't have to be arm in arm, did they?"

Sara changed the subject and was glad, a few minutes later, when Bill rose to say it was time to leave. Amidst much banter, he packed his family off.

Then, as Sara went into her room her mother followed her. "Tell me about your week-end, dear. You seem sort of subdued. Didn't you enjoy it as much as you expected?"

"Oh, yes, Mother—it was grand!" Then, Sara added irritably, "But I could kill Toby Martin!"

Mrs. Sidney's eyebrows went up. "Toby?"

"Yes! He did his best to spoil things for me! First he phoned me just to give me a long line of utter nonsense. And then, as though that weren't enough, he sent me a box of roses. Imagine! To Curt's home! I was never so embarrassed!"

Mrs. Sidney looked properly deprecating. "Well, I must say that wasn't very nice of Toby. But don't be too annoyed with him, dear. Jealousy does funny things to people—and I saw the other night, how jealous he was of Mr. Carrington. You must make allowances for him. You know as well as I do that, at heart, Toby is a fine young—"

"So is Curt a fine young man!" Sara cut in. "And a gentleman, too! He'd never do anything so crude as what Toby did!"

Mrs. Sidney was silent a moment.

Then, she asked hesitatingly, "did he—that is, did he say anything this week-end that might indicate he—" She stopped.

"You mean, did he propose to me?" Sara said bluntly. "No—he didn't. But why should he? Is it necessary for a man to propose to a girl just because he asks her to his home? I haven't noticed you worrying over whether Toby has proposed to me—and look at all the years he has been going with me!"

"That's different," her mother replied.

"Why is it different? Oh mother, I wish you'd stop taking this attitude about Curt! You'd think he was an arch villain or something, just because he has been nice to me. All I know is that he likes me, and I like him—that's enough for the present. Let the future take care of itself!"

Mrs. Sidney said no more, but she continued to be concerned. It was so evident that Sara thought herself in love with this Curt Carrington. But was he in love with her? Mrs. Sidney couldn't feel easy about her daughter's friendship with this young man who was so completely out of her class until he should give some sign whether he was really a serious suitor.

CHAPTER XIV

Juliette had not seen Curt since the night of the Littlefield dance —the night she had taken the blueprints from his office.

But she was not bothered by his failure to get in touch with her since. With those blueprints in her possession, she felt confident of eventually clinching her hold on him, so was content to let him go his own way in the meantime. Besides, she had been well occupied herself—had been out again with George Poulton, and then had gone out of town for the week-end.

On Monday morning, however, she accidentally received a piece of information that gave her a jolt. Her informant was Stephanie Carrington whom she chanced to meet at a beauty parlor.

"Steph!" she exclaimed. "When did you get back from Europe?"

"Friday," Stephanie replied. "And I'm a wreck! I've just spent the week-end battling with my in-laws."

The two young women chattered on for a while.

Then, Stephanie said, "by the way are you loossening your strings on Curt?"

"What do you mean?" Juliette asked sharply.

Stephanie gave a little laugh. "I just wondered. He had a girl from his office out at Yellow Gables—quite a pretty little thing. He seemed quite taken with her. You'd better keep a close watch on him, Julie!"

Juliette masked her feelings, and shrugged. "Oh, you mean Miss Sidney," she said lightly. "I know all about that—and it's nothing. She's his secretary, and I suppose the girl doesn't often get a chance to spend any time in the country. You know how Curt it—always befriending some one. He asked me out for the week-end, but I couldn't go, so he evidently took the opportunity to give Miss Sidney a little holiday."

She smiled sweetly, and disappeared into a booth.

Once there, however, her lips compressed into a tight line and, as the beauty operator set to work on her, her thoughts were in an angry whirl. So Curt had actually asked that girl to his home! Once again, jealousy of Sara burned hotly within her.

Surely, Curt couldn't be so ridiculous as to consider marrying the girl—a mere secretary! But suppose he were such a fool? Suppose—suppose he had already proposed to her—this very week-end?

Juliette went cold at the thought. She must, she decided, do something at once. She couldn't afford to bide her time, waiting for the loss of those blueprints to force Carrington and Broderick into a position where Curt would realize the desirability of marriage to her, and would come penitently back to her. She must see him, and start now to dangle her bait before him, before he took any rash steps . . .

Arriving home from the beauty parlor, she was on the point of phoning him to invite him to dinner, when, to her surprise, he called her to ask her to lunch with him. As she couldn't know that his invitation was merely to keep his father appeased, a measure of relief swept over her, and she accepted with alacrity.

An hour later she faced him across a table at Pedro's. She was longing to find out at once what effect the disappearance of the blueprints had had in the offices of Carrington and Broderick, but she didn't quite know how to go about it, so waited in the hope that he would bring the subject up.

However, to her chagrin, he talked of everything under the sun except business. Finally she was forced to turn the trend of the conversation herself.

As casually as she could, she asked, "and how, darling, are you getting on with that frightfully important business I interrupted the other evening?"

Curt frowned. "I'm not getting on with it! We're in a deuce of a fix over that, Juliette."

"How do you mean?" she asked, trying not to seem too eager.

"The very next morning, those blueprints disappeared."

"What!" gasped Juliette. "You mean the ones that are so important, that you have to have to submit with your bid for that contract?"

"Yes—they vanished completely, in the most mysterious fashion. We can't find a trace of them."

"But how awful! Do — do you think they were stolen?"

"I don't know what to make of it. I don't see how they could have been stolen, but I don't see, either, how they could have been mislaid. I'm sure I put them in my safe—and incidentally, you saw me close the safe—but the next morning, they weren't there."

"But what are you going to do?" asked Juliette. "If you don't find them, won't that mean you'll lose that contract?"

Well, no—it's not as bad as all that. We're having a duplicate set made. Dad cabled at once to our man in South America to draft another set as fast as possible and rush them up here by plane."

Juliette stiffened. "Will there be time? I thought you said there was a deadline for the submission of bids?"

"There is—a week from Wednesday. But we're sure they'll get here before then—unless something unforeseen happens. So everything's all right. It's an aggravating situation, but not fatal."

"Oh, then — that's fine!" said Juliette, forcing pretended relief into her voice.

But her heart had sunk like a plummet. So her theft of the blue prints had been in vain! Her scheme to make certain of Curt had failed.

She sat silent a moment, a wave of panic engulfing her. She visualized Curt slipping from her grasp . . . stolen from her by that designing little minx in his office.

Then, her chin set. She was not one to admit defeat easily. After all, her millions were not to be sneezed at, even if Curt's firm did pull out of its present difficulties. She would have to abandon subterfuge and resort to blunt tactics, but she was determined to employ every weapon at her disposal to get what she wanted.

CHAPTER XV

Juliette toyed with her fork, and said slowly, "Curt did you really mean what you said the other evening—I mean, about the firm needing that contract so badly?"

He hesitated, then nodded. "Yes, —maybe I shouldn't have told you. but I don't see any sense in disguising the situation. Naturally, though, I wouldn't want you to broadcast it."

"Of course not." Juliette frowned. "But I had no idea Carrington and Broderick was in such straits. Ever since you told me, I've been worrying about it."

Curt laughed. "Why should you worry? Besides, we'll pull through all right Dad's stewing a bit, but I'm not. I'm confident we'll get the contract—we've practically got it sewed up already—and when we do, everything will be jake."

"But suppose you don't get it? I don't see how you can feel so sure." Juliette paused. "Look, Curt — I've been doing some thinking as well as worrying. I've been thinking that I—I might help out by investing some of my money in the firm . . ."

He gave her a quick look. What was she up to?

"You don't understand Juliette. It's very nice of you to be concerned, but this isn't a matter of a few thousands. If we do get in a jam, it would take real money to save us."

"Well," she said, arching her brows, "I have real money. Who said anything about a few thousands? Of course, though, there would be—certain conditions.

Curt saw what she was leading up to—and he was amazed. Amazed by her boldness. The condition, of course, would be that he marry her. Through her suggestion was just what his father had in mind, Curt found it hard to believe that Juliette would deliberately bargain with him—that she would coolly and openly go to such lengths to manoeuvre him into marriage.

He said warily, with a little laugh, "I think you're spoofing me, Juliette, but if you really want to invest something in the business, why don't you have a talk with Dad?"

She gave him a sidelong glance. "I'd rather talk it over—with you. I'm not quite sure yet whether I want to do it. You see—well, I'll tell you a secret. George Poulton has asked me to marry him and, of course, in case I should accept him, I naturally couldn't put my money into Carrington and Broderick, could I? If it went anywhere it would have to go —into Poulton, Inc."

A moment of heavy silence followed. So now, thought Curt, she was threatening him! Threatening to pour her wealth into a rival firm if he didn't capitulate! Quick anger surged through him. He felt sure that the alleged proposal from George Poulton was a pure fabrication, manufactured for the purpose of intimidating him.

He said bluntly, "I get you, Juliette. This is a bribe, isn't it? You'll come to the aid of the firm provided I marry you?"

"How neatly you put it, Curt, dear." She smiled sweetly.

"And it doesn't matter to you whether I love you or not?" he asked harshly. "You're ready to buy me regardless of how I feel toward you?"

She winced. "Curt . . . please. Of course it matters to me. It's all that has mattered to me for a long time. Maybe you think I have no pride to be talking this way—but, darling, I can't bear to see you changing as you have lately. You didn't used to be so cold and indifferent—you know that. It's only since you've become infatuated with that little snip of a girl in your office that you've changed. But Curt, that's only a passing fancy—I'm sure of it. You'll soon tire of her and forget her. You and I are alike, Curt—we understand each other. When you get over this infatuation, you'll see that."

Curt was silent, afraid to say the things he wanted to say. He wanted to say that he loved Sara Sidney and hoped to marry her. He longed to break definitely and finally with Juliette—but calculating caution restrained him. It would be best to play along with her for a while. After all, there was a possibility the firm might not land that contract, and, in case it didn't . . . Well, he'd be a fool to spurn Juliette's millions just yet.

"Well?" he said softly. She could see that her words had had some effect on him. "What's it to be? Shall we—shall we call it an engagement, and send an announcement to the papers?"

"Not an announcement!" he said quickly.

"So it's no, is it?" Juliette's tone hardened. "All right, Curt—go on back to your stenographer, if she means more to you than I do!"

"Wait a second, Juliette—I didn't say that . I—it's just that I don't see why we should have to make an announcement right away. We can be engaged, can't we, without announcing it?"

Juliette laughed. "You're such an ardent lover. Curt, you positively take my breath away! But all right, darling—I'm in no hurry about the announcement, just so long as it's understood that we are engaged."

She was content to let it go at that. As a matter of fact, she had succeeded beyond her hopes. It was humiliating, of course, to have had to force him into an engagement but, anyway, she had pinned him down. And she felt confident that, once married to him, she could rekindle his former feeling for her. After all, it was true that, until recently, he had always been a most devoted swain.

Meanwhile Cut was being gnawed by guilt at thought of the double game he was playing. He hadn't meant actually to commit himself to Juliette, but here he was —engaged to her! Browbeaten into it! He could, of course, ease out of it later, but suppose Sara should somehow find out about it in the meantime? What would she think of him?

He little knew that Sara, at that very moment, had her eyes on him —was at a little table across the room, having lunch with Toby. He had been too deep in his conversation with Juliette to see her when she came in.

CHAPTER VI

Sara, on setting out for lunch, had found Toby awaiting her just outside the entrance to the office building.

Sight of him reminded her of the embarrassment he had caused her during her visit to Yellow Gables, and she greeted him coldly.

"Hello, Toby. What do you want?"

He assumed a penitent air. "Just thought you might do a hungry chap a favor by lunching with him."

"Do you think you deserve any favors after the way you've acted?" she shot at him. "Sending me flowers at the Carrington home! Not to mention your insane telephone call! Honestly, Toby Martin, I've never been so angry in my life! I ought never to speak to you again."

"But you are speaking to me," he pointed out, "so you can't be so very mad. Anyway, I apologize, I know I was a heel to do it, but I got the impulse, and just couldn't resist it. Please forgive me, and say you'll have lunch with me."

"Why don't you get the beautiful Sonia to lunch with you?" Sara demanded maliciously.

Toby reddened. "Because I'd rather have you," he said humbly. "Besides, I've something to tell you —something important."

"Oh, all right," she gave in.

Ever since they'd known each other, Toby had always told her everything of any importance that happened to him, and she was so used to acting as his confidante, that she couldn't have broken the habit now without a wrench. She found herself, as usual, eagerly curious to know what he had to tell her.

However, they were scarcely seated at a corner table at Pedro's when she caught sight of Curt and Juliette across the room, and became so intent on watching them that she gave only half an ear to Toby.

So Curt, after making love to her all week-end, was now out at lunch with Juliette . . . So his love-making, she thought miserably, had really meant nothing . . . She remembered how evasive he had been when she asked him about Juliette . . She saw now how absorbed he seemed in what the other girl was saying . . .

Then, Toby's excited voice broke in on her thoughts.

"So Greenwald is sending me!"

She stared at him vaguely, saw that he was beaming.

"Sending—sending you where?" she stammered.

His face straightened. "Sara, I don't believe you've heard a word I've said!"

She flushed guiltily. "I'm sorry, Toby. I—I was thinking about some work at the office. Where is Greenwald sending you?"

"To Honolulu!"

"Honolulu!" she gasped. "Why?"

"I've just been telling you,' he said, in an injured tone. "We're opening a branch office out there and the fellow who was to be in charge has unexpectedly landed another job, so Greenwald has picked me to take his place."

"But that's wonderful, Toby!" Sara exclaimed. She was genuinely pleased for his sake. "What a grand opportunity for you!"

"It sure is! I thought when I got my raise the other day, that no more breaks would come my way for some time. And now, this happens!"

He went on talking enthusiastically, but Sara's attention had again strayed. She saw that Curt and Juliette were leaving. She watched tensely, wondering whether he would see her, but he went out without glancing in her direction.

"Sara! You're not listening again!" Toby reproached. "I don't believe you're at all interested. You don't even ask when I'm going."

"Of course I'm interested—and I was listening. When do you leave, Toby?"

"Very soon. Almost any time. I'll go by train to San Francisco, where I'll catch a boat."

"I'll—I'll miss you Toby."

Sara meant it. Thought of his going to the other side of the world suddenly made her feel forlorn. She was so used to having him around that it would seem strange without him.

"Will you really, Sara?' he asked, resting his arms on the table and gazing at her wistfully.

"Of course I will."

"Not as much as I'll miss you." He picked up his fork and started tracing patterns on the table cloth. "Sara—you—you wouldn't change your mind, would you, about what I asked you the other day?"

"Now, Toby, please don't start that again."

He rushed on, however. "Think what a marvellous honeymoon it would be, Sara. Four sunny, carefree days on the Pacific. Then Honolulu and—"

"Toby—please! I've given you my answer. Why do you persist?"

He sighed. "Because I can't make myself believe you and I weren't intended for each other."

He lapsed into a moody silence, staring down at the table.

Then, he raised his eyes, and asked, "Sara . . . tell me this. Are you—are you and this fellow Carrington en-engaged?"

Sara would have given anything in the world to answer, "Yes," even though she knew how much this would hurt Toby—but, of course, she couldn't.

"No—we are not."

Toby's face brightened. "Then—then I'm not going to give up hope!"

"You might as well, Toby," she told him.

The rest of the meal was eaten with little conversation. Each was occupied with his own thoughts—and a tension had come between them.

Detroit Red Wings Qualify To Meet Toronto Leafs By Eliminating Americans

Mud Bruneteau Moves to Top of Scorers in Stanley Cup Series

SCORE IS 3-1

(By Jack Calder Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Modere (Mud) Bruneteau, who has known all the ups and downs of hockey, is potting important goals for Detroit Red Wings again in the heavy-money scrambling that marks the National League playoffs for the Stanley Cup.

The French-Canadian forward from St. Boniface, Man., who broke up the longest game in hockey history in 1936, fired his third goal of the current cup series last night to give the Red Wings a 3-1 victory over New York Americans at Detroit and success in the preliminary round. Bruneteau moved to the top of the series point-makers with four points and the Wings entered the semi-finals against Toronto.

Bruneteau Made Pass

Nine minutes after scoring the goal that put his club ahead 2-1 in the third period, Bruneteau passed to Ken Kilrea for the one that made certain the elimination of the gallant Americans, who fought through the last two games of the best-of-three round with only 12 players. Detroit had won the first contest 2-1 in overtime and the Americans the second 5-4 with a brilliant late spurt.

The Bruins, league champions, took a one-game lead in their best-of-seven semi-final round with New York Rangers through a 4-3 victory in the third test last night at Boston. The teams will continue tomorrow at New York.

Wings Open at Toronto

At Toronto tomorrow, Detroit opens its best-of-three semi-finals against the Maple Leafs, who eliminated Chicago in two straight games last week, and the winner will play Boston or the Rangers in the best-of-seven finals.

Bruneteau seemed to be on the way to a great career in 1936, when he fired a goal that gave the Red Wings a 1-0 victory over the old Maroons at Montreal after a record-breaking 176 minutes and 30 seconds of Stanley Cup play. Mud, in his first year as a professional, had come into the big league in mid-season after starting with Detroit Olympics.

But ever since that big 1936 shot, which started the Wings on the way to their first world title, Bruneteau has been dogged by ill luck. Injury has kept him out for most of two seasons—once it was a broken leg—and he spent part of 1938-39 in the minors.

Cecil Dillon sent Detroit ahead in last night's first period but Hooley Smith, one of the fightingest of the fighting Americans, tied the score before the first interval. The second session was scoreless.

Quick to Capitalize

Then Al Murray of the Americans was penalized with seven minutes of the third gone and Bruneteau was quick to capitalize. Sid Abel passed to Ebbie Goodfellow and the captain got the puck to Bruneteau, who whizzed in from the boards and drove his shot home off goalie Earl Robertson's pads. As the Americans pressed in an effort to tie the count, Bruneteau started Kilrea away and he out-skated Charlie Conacher to complete the scoring.

Eddie Wiseman, who joined Boston in mid-season in a trade with the Americans for Eddie Shore, was the hero of the Bruins' victory with two goals, though his second was flukey. He shot it at 7:49 in the third period and the puck bounced off goalie Dave Kerr's chest, then hopped over his head into the net.

Rangers Off-Color

That left the home team ahead 8-2 and the best the Rangers could accomplish in the remaining minutes was a single goal by Lynn Patrick, son of Manager Lester Patrick, with eight minutes to go. The Blueshirts never did unleash the "strategic masterpiece" that Coach Frank Boucher had promised.

Wiseman's first goal put the Bruins ahead in the opening period and they never were headed, though the Rangers tied matters temporarily in the second when Muzz Patrick, the manager's other son, scored a 50-foot shot. Bobby Bauer and Roy Conacher fired goals for the Bruins before the second period closed and Babe Pratt shot the Rangers' second as the third chapter began.

TRENTON SQUAD LOSES TO PRESTON BY 8-3 COUNT

Trenton Team Loses Round 14-6 in Ontario Final for Bantam Crown

VISITORS TOO HEAVY

La MORRE in Trenton Goal Plays Stellar Game Despite Big Score

Trenton, March 26—(Special)—Trenton Bantams know what it feels like to lose an Ontario title. On Saturday afternoon a heavier outfit from Preston won the Provincial championship by defeating the locals 8 to 3 in a game that was Preston's all the way. Preston took the goals-to-count round 14 to 6; they were victorious 6 to 3 in the first game a week before.

The Preston "giants" took the upper hand early in Saturday's pastime and were leading by a one point margin, when the initial session ended. Trenton scored one point in the first period, when forward star Lesperance beat the visitors' cage minder with a tricky wrist shot. The Preston crew took to the Quinte Arena ice-surface like a duck takes to water and forwards Sullivan and Simmers found Trenton's smaller ice area the perfect setting for a criss-cross passing combination. This pair of visiting up front men accounted for the majority of Preston's total, each taking turns on the receiving end of the other's pass, which usually clicked right in front of the home side's net.

LaMorre Steady

LaMorre played a beautiful game in the Trenton cage but he was no match for the wicked shots that Simmers and Sullivan threw at him. To make matters worse the tiny Trenton net custodian suffered a bang in the nose in the first part of the play and he was really suffering from shock, when the enemy loosed their second period bombardment. Simmers, Sullivan and Hunter poured four goals past the bewildered Trenton cageman in that fatal middle round when Scott managed to count one for the home town six. Preston relied on defensive tactics in the third frame and turned back everything the little fellows from town headed their way, including at least two drives that would have fooled any ordinary goal-tender.

Sullivan and Simmers took the limelight again in this canto but the prettiest scoring play of the day went to Frenchy Lesperance who stick-handled through the entire Preston outfit to net Trenton's third and final counter. Earlier in the round Preston ran in two scores in rapid succession. The match was decidedly clean, Preston was penalized but twice and Trenton only once.

The line-ups:

Preston: Goal, Homuth; defence, Hicks and Brighty; centre, Simmers; wings, Sullivan and Jacques; alternates, Kreig, Hunter, Schmalz, Schaller, Coons and Halls.

Trenton: Goal, LaMorre; defence, F. Robertson and R. Workman; centre, B. Lesperance; wings, Scott, Fitzpatrick; alternates, McQuade, Couture, Menzie, Barr, Smith.

Referees: D. Houde of Trenton and H. Fach of Preston.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 25—(AP)—If Joe McCarthy makes any changes in his New York Yankees squad this Spring, one of them probably will be the dropping of Oral Hildebrand, one of the club's best relief pitchers last season. The veteran was belted hard by St. Louis Cardinals yesterday and hasn't shown much pep or enthusiasm in any of his appearances.

Lakeland, Fla.—It's still uncertain when Charley Gehringer will be ready for active duty with Detroit Tigers. "I can throw, run and bend a little bit and nothing happens", he says, but his physician says he still must go easy. He has suffered pains in his back through the entire training season.

Orlando, Fla.—Washington Senators are banking heavily on experiments and developments have not been particularly encouraging thus far this spring. The shift of Cecil Travis to third, Buddy Lewis to the outfield and installation of Jim Pofahl at short has not yet proved the key to victory and observers see hitting weaknesses.

San Francisco — President Bill Benswanger of Pittsburgh Pirates, who raves about the California climate, was instrumental in getting Connie Mack to bring his Athletics west for spring training. Now Benswanger is scratching his head, for Connie has stolen a good part of the show and the box office patronage from the Bucs besides winning two of their four encounters.

New York, March 25—(AP)—The golf pros are shooting for purses totalling $200,000 this year...... attendance has picked up 20 per cent at every P.G.A.-sponsored meet so far......well, who's going to get Medwick?......Billy Petrolle, the old "Fargo Express" who roared through the light and welterweight ranks a la Henry Armstrong, some years back, has turned manager and is handling Nick Rudolovich, Duluth steel plant heavyweight.

RED NUDGES OUT A 300-FOOT "BUNT"

Red Rolfe, third baseman of the New York Yankees in a splendid action picture as he nudged out a 300-foot single during batting practice at the Yanks' camp in St. Petersburg. Arndt Jorgens is behind the plate. Red is just rounding into shape for the pennant campaign, having been a holdout until just recently.

BEARCATS ON WAY TO ANOTHER SENIOR TITLE

Reach Western Semi-Finals by Defeating Winnipeg Rifles in Two Games

PORTS MEET MILLERS

Trail Smoke Eaters Defeated in First Start of Playdown Trail

Winnipeg, March 25 —(CP) — Port Arthur Bear Cats, Canada's senior amateur hockey champions in 1939, are pounding down the play-off trail again, determined to take the Allan Cup back to the Lakehead city a fifth time.

Bear Cats reached the western semi-final when they beat Winnipeg Rifles, Manitoba champions, 4-0 at Port Arthur Saturday night to take the best-of-three series in two straight games. They won the first game Thursday 6-0.

Almost intact from last year when they beat Montreal Royals three games to one in the national final, Cats hope to emulate the great Port Arthur club that won the Allan Cup in two straight years in 1925-26. The Bear Cat coach, Gordon (Phat) Wilson, played defence on the original Allan Cup club and again in 1929 when Port Arthur won the trophy a third time.

Ports meet the Saskatchewan champions, Moose Jaw Millers, in the first game of a best-of-five semi-final at Port Arthur tomorrow. The second game will be played at Port Arthur Thursday and the third at Regina Saturday.

Smoke Eaters Beaten at Home

In the other western semi-final Calgary Stampeders invaded Trail Smoke Eaters' home ice to score a 3-0 victory over the 1938 Allan Cup winners who toured Europe last year and won the world title overseas.

Trail and the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association protested the victory on grounds the Stampeders, Alberta champions, used five "imports" who played on teams outside Alberta last season, while the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association transfer rule permits only four "imports." The best-of-five series is scheduled to be continued tomorrow night at Calgary.

Edmonton Athletic Club, 1939 western junior champions, opened the best-of-five western semi-final series with Regina Abbott-Generals by scoring a 6-4 win at Edmonton Saturday night. Regina penalties played a part in an early 5-1 lead for Edmonton. The series continues tonight.

Kenora Thistles came within a game of reaching the other western semi-final with Port Arthur. Thistles took a 2-0 lead in games in the best-of-five Manitoba junior final by beating Winnipeg Elmwood 2-1 here Saturday night. They can end the series tonight in the third game.

HULL VOLANTS PROTEST SYDNEY

Claim Two Players Ineligible to Play According to Residence Rule

Ottawa, March 25—(CP)— Hull Volants unpacked their hockey equipment today, confident a protest sent the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association would be upheld and their disastrous Allan Cup playdown series with Sydney Millionaires thrown out.

Eliminated in three straight games by the Maritime provincial champions, the Ottawa and district titleholders protested eligibility of Robert and Ralph Anderson, utility forwards of Sydney who helped the Maritimers to a 6-3 victory over Volants here Saturday. Sydney won previous games at home 6-0 and 6-2.

According to the protest by the Ottawa and District Amateur Hockey Association, Hull claims Robert Anderson played with North Sydney in the Cape Breton Colliery League and joined Millionaires March 18 although the residence deadline was Nov. 1.

It was claimed also that Sydney failed to present a C.A.H.A. card for Robert Anderson as required, and that Ralph Anderson also joined the club later than Nov. 1, allegedly under the new C.A.H.A. military clause which permits replacement for a player unable to play because of military connections.

Vice-President George Dudley of the C.A.H.A. said last night in Midland, Ont., that a vote of the executive would be taken as soon as he had collected the facts concerning the protest. A Sydney officials of the Cape Breton Island team denied the charges.

SKIERS STRANDED IN LAURENTIANS

7,000 Snowbound and Sixteen Trains Held Up Due to Drifting Snow

Ste. Jerome, Que., March 25 — (CP)—A weekend prank of the weatherman left some 7,000 weary skiers in the Laurentian Mountains Sunday, unable to return to Montreal because of storm disrupted train schedules. Sixteen trains were held up.

Laurentian villages thronged with men and women skiers while railway ploughs attempted to clear lines packed with snowdrifts after a gale had swept the mountains for more than 24 hours.

Stalled trains were reported at almost every station along the Laurentian rail route to Montreal.

Some of the skiers abandoned their trains to jam most of the villages' available hotel accommodations. Everywhere food was in great demand and the Laurentians' sandwich and coffee business enjoyed an unprecedented boom.

More than 1,500 skiers were estimated to have invaded St. Jerome, after leaving two trains which they had boarded earlier for Montreal. St. Jerome's three hotels reported within an hour after the invasion that they had practically run out of food.

One of the trains carried a young man who had suffered a fractured leg in a ski accident. He was cared for by a doctor on his train.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

Harry Rollins, Belleville's perennial softball executive, was returned to the executive of the O. A. S. A. at the annual provincial softball conclave in Toronto. Actually Harry led the polls for executive, there being 12 in the field and only six to be elected. Ernie Simpson, formerly of Belleville and now residing in Kingston, made the grade as the sixth member on the O.A.S.A. executive A motion introduced by the Belleville Softball Association, which requested cities under 15,000 be permitted to play Intermediate "B" softball, was defeated, so Belleville will have to remain in intermediate "A" "mushball" circles for another year at least, which is perhaps just as well. Kingston's motion to change the residence rule from Feb. 1st to May 1st was also defeated.

There were several changes in the softball playing rules, which the players should acquaint themselves with before the playing season opens. For instance it will be legal to use steel-spiked shoes in softball this season, but not over 3-8 of an inch in height. First baseman may use a leather glove or mitt, of any size or weight. Regarding the matter of "block balls," a batted or thrown ball that is touched or stopped, or handled by a person not engaged in the game, shall be called a "clock ball," however a wild pitch or passed ball shall not be considered a block ball. Only one base may be advanced following the declaration of a block ball, under the new softball rules.

The treasurer's report to the O. A.S.A. showed the association took in $3,062.33 in receipts while their 1939 operating expenses were $2,-451.03, leaving a bank balance on hand of $611.30 on Feb. 29th, 1940. Of course there is still to be deducted those conventional honorariums passed at the annual meeting. A total of 74 different associations and leagues were affiliated with the O.A.S.A. in 1939 from which 104 clubs moved out in the provincial softball playdowns. All classifications from juvenile to senior "A" softball were sponsored by the O.A.S.A. last season. It is also estimated that some 35,000 players came under the jurisdiction of the O.A.S.A. last season. At their annual meeting the O.A.S.A. stressed the importance of assisting Canada's war effort in every way possible. It was suggested to play games, the receipts of which would go to purchase softball equipment for Canada's soldier boys, thus assuring adequate recreation for the soldiers.

In his annual report, Secretary Verne McIlwraith of Guelph, pointed out that softball was a "war baby" game in the first instance and owed its origin to the Boer War when the game was instituted by military men, but indoors at that time. A first the game was played as an indoor sport for recreation and relaxation. It was from these garrison-played games that the present outdoor game of softball grew. Today, all over America, millions of boys and girls play softball. It was following the popularity of softball during the last war, that a set of rules and later the O.A.S.A. came into being.

Tonight sees the termination of hockey in Belleville, when the Alemite and Canada Cement City Industrial pucksters meet in a sudden death game for the S. R. Burrows Trophy. Skating will follow the game, all at the same price.

Do you remember when Detroit Red Wings broke a two-game deadlock with Montreal Canadiens to clinch their second successive National Hockey League championship three years ago tonight. Playing in Montreal, the Stanley Cup defenders defeated the Habitants 2-1 after 111 minutes of play.

The Trenton bantam hockey squad passed from the O.J.H.A. picture in the provincial bantam finals, losing 8 to 3 to Preston on Saturday, thereby dropping the round 14 to 6. However, the Trenton fans are mighty proud of their sub-teen year old hockey team and its sterling effort in getting into the provincial bantam finals and rightly so.

SPORT SPICE—The Allan Cup playoffs are progressing with rapidity. ... Last year's champion Port Arthur Bearcats are back on the trail, having eliminated Winnipeg over the week-end ....Sydney pushed Hull out in three straight, but the Volants are protesting Anderson of Sydney, claiming he is not eligible under residence rule ...The best the Goodyears could do with Lake Shore was a 1-1 overtime draw on Saturday and now the series moves up into the frozen north...Montreal Royals beat Verdun and that ends the Allan Cup picture east of Winnipeg...In the N.H.L. Boston now heads the Rangers two games to one, Jack Adams' Red Wings eliminated the Americans and now meet the Maple Leafs commencing Tuesday night in Toronto. .We're beginning to see baseball scores in the dailies, but apparently the weatherman has lost his spectacles and doesn't know that Spring is officially here—perhaps it's a secret.

Al McCoy is favored over Gus Dorazio in Philadelphia tonight and Jimmy Perrin, second ranking featherweight contender (N.B.A.) is the choice over Al Reid in New Orleans......Bill Rose of Kitchener, Ont., who developed most of the fine front line of Boston Bruins, is commuting between New York and Boston for the Stanley Cup series.......they say Mike Jacobs is considering still another Joe Louis title fight this year with either Lee Savold or Buddy Baer and we do mean Buddy.

Rome, March 25—(AP)— The visiting Premier of Hungary and Italy's Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, conferred today on Hungary's position in problems arising in Southeastern Europe as a result of the war. The Hungarian, Count Paul Teleki, is expected to talk with Premier Mussolini tomorrow.

The specific subjects taken up in his conference with Ciano were not disclosed, but they were believed to include particularly Hungarian relations with Rumania and possible rapprochement between Italy and Soviet Russia.

Thieves entered the premises of the Mott Lumber Company, Station St., over the week end and stole the sum of 16c, their efforts not being rewarded to any degree. The robbers forced their way through a door into the company office where they ransacked the cash drawer and later opened the office safe, which was not secured. No money had been left in the safe. The 16c was left in the cash drawer.

No Easter week end arrests were necessary in Belleville this year, while generally speaking activities in local police circles were merely routine. A total of 26 transients were given shelter from the cold and stormy blasts of the week end, 15 registering on Saturday night and eleven last night.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, March 26

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE LUNAR transits for this day forecast a very lively day, with much stirring at particularly high tempo and probably with some agitation or excitement. Concentrated effort may be brought [illegible] breaking up long static conditions in order to make way for important new ventures. This may cause sudden upsets and upheavals, with matters materializing quite unexpectedly. The state of health may also prove a disturbing factor.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a very lively year, with much stirring of a surprising and unpredictable nature. These may involve radical change in plans, objectives and possibly in environs, preliminary to the shattering of old congestions so that more definite progress of a constructive trend may be engineered. It may take drastic action, perseverance and fortitude to cope with deep-seated inertia or restrictions. Be careful with the health. Elders may prove difficult.

A child born on this day may have much intellectual vigor and versatility, being alert, brilliant and keen as well as studious, profound and original. It may also be temperamental, emotional and restive.

To the Electors of Hastings South

IT IS OUR WAR-TIME DUTY to use our franchise Weather conditions make it more imperative that we all determine to vote on Tuesday, March 26th., no matter how inconvenient it may be.

THE SOLE ISSUE of the campaign remains. You are to decide what government is to continue the conduct of our united war effort and to solve the post-war problems which will inevitably arise.

THERE ARE ONLY TWO ALTERNATIVES. The first is to re-elect the present administration of Mr. Mackenzie King. It is a government which has successfully brought our war effort to its present status, efficiently and economically, to the entire satisfaction of the majority of the Canadian people and the British and French governments. The other alternative is elect an untried group of inexperienced and unamed individuals. This I do not believe will be acceptable during the present crisis.

PETTY PERSONAL MATTERS have been injected into the local campaign in an effort to becloud the major issue. You have seen and heard all the candidates. I am prepared to stand upon my record of public service in this community. Your interests are identical with that of Canada.

I APPEAL TO YOU to vote for that candidate who will most ably represent you in Parliament. Your interests can be best served by anticipating the return of the Government and seeing to it that your representative is a supporter of that government. I would thank you for your support.

Believe me to be,
Yours faithfully,
McLEAN HAIG.

WAR THREATENS VERY SALVATION OF HUMAN SOCIETY

Pope Pius XII Delivers Easter Message to the World Fram Vatican City

FIRST EASTER MASS

Vatican City, March 25—(AP)— War threatens "the very salvation of human society," Pope Pius XII said in his Easter message to the world, and the only hope for universal peace with "truth, justice and charity" is in the reestablishment of Christian principles.

Celebrating his first Easter Mass as Pope in the ancient Basilica of St. Peter's yesterday, he expressed sorrow that "solemnly stipulated" treaties among nations had been broken and that the ravages of war had been extended to "citizens unarmed and even infirm, staggering old people and innocent children."

His expression of concern over disregard of international law and the fracture of treaties mentioned no nations by name, but Vatican circles said he had been aggrieved by the sufferings of the Poles and Finns under German and Russian invasions.

The Easter Homily, rendered in Latin, followed the St. Peter's Mass. Urging a "spiritual renewal in Christ", the Pope said "this work of reform is not called for alone for private welfare and individual life, but also for the very salvation of human society."

Must Reaffirm Principles

Unless there is a reaffirmation in the principles of Christ, he declared, "more frightful things are feared for the future," because "that which inventive genius, study and experience have produced, energies, well-being and riches, almost all is turned over either to making war or to increasing armaments."

Describing the low estate of international law, he said "You well know in what times we are living! Concord among peoples is miserably broken. Treaties solemnly stipulated sometimes are unilaterally changed or violated without previous definitive agreement.

"It happens that open cities, farming towns and villages are terrorized, burned and devastated by bombardment. Citizens unarmed and even infirm, staggering old people and innocent children are deprived of roof and often even killed.

"Only Christ, with His law and His Grace, can renew and restore private as well as public customs, re-establish a just relationship between right and duty, put a brake on immoderate desire for conquest, repress passions and temper and perfect a rigid and cool justice with the breath of charity."

ROGERS CRITICAL OF CONSERVATIVE GOV'T OF 1914

States Canadians Sent to England Before Barracks Erected and Spent Winter Lying in Mud and Rain of Salisbury Plain

ROSS RIFLE SCORED

Enterprise, Ont., March 25—(CP) Defence Minister Rogers declared in an election address here Saturday that Canadians have no alternative before them to the carefully prepared effort of the Mackenzie King Government when they go to the polls Tuesday.

Speaking at a rally on behalf of Angus McCallum, Liberal candidate in Frontenac-Addington, Mr. Rogers told a meeting in this town 40 miles north of Kingston that charges against the Liberal Government of patronage, profiteering and favoritism "prove to be without foundation when analyzed thoughtfully." He said that in discharging its duties the government tried to bring a united Canadian sentiment behind a vigorous National war effort.

Mr. Rogers asked that the record of the King Government be compared with that of 1914 when "speed in passing troops to England seemed to be the sole principle of mobilization."

Canadians were sent to England in 1914 before barracks were provided. "They spent the winter lying in the mud and rain of Salisbury Plain. The men were furnished with boots which were reduced to a sodden mass after a few parades. The Ross Rifle with which the men were armed proved worthless in active service conditions. The contrast between conditions now and those under the Conservative administration of 1914 require no further comment."

Mr. Rogers declared that Dr. Manion had failed to offer any constructive criticism of the war effort so far and had given only "a most surprisingly confused series of statements designed to raise doubt, distrust and suspicion in the minds of Canadian citizens.

Tweed

Measles Reported

A number of cases of measles have broken out in the village of Tweed and the surrounding district.

The play "Uncle William's Quandary" presented by the Dramatic Club of St Carthagh's R. C. Church attracted a capacity audience on Friday night. The play was staged in the Auditorium of the new Separate School which is rapidly nearing completion and will be one of the most modern schools in the province.

Mr. I. D. Corcoran acted as chairman and welcomed those who were in attendance. In the intermission Tweed Band played several selections and Bert Shanques sang several Irish songs. The school choir of the Separate School sang two choruses. The following was the cast of characters:—

Uncle William Winkler—Simon Meraw.

Aunt Jane—Mrs. Joseph LeSage.

Jane, a niece—Patricia Langevin.

Ting, a clerk—Bob Watson.

Sam, a bell hop—Jack Marlin.

Suzette, the maid — Patricia Quinn.

Bobbie Baxter—Bert Shanques.

Benjamin Moore—James Langevin.

Kitty, an actress—June Whalen.

The play was greatly enjoyed as every member of the cast was particularly well suited to the part which was being portrayed.

Miss Jean McCrea, a recent graduate of Shaw's, has entered the employ of the Frankford Advocate, published by Mr. S. LaFontaine.

A Red Cross social evening was held in the United Church vestry at Actinolite with a capacity crowd. Visitors from Tweed, Sulphide, and Thomasburg assisted with the programme. Addresses were given by Rev. Fr. Hyland, Madoc, Rev. H. L. Morrison, Tweed, Rev. Snelgrove, Queensboro.

Good Friday services were held in Tweed churches with crowds of worshippers in attendance. In the evening a Lantern Lecture was given in the Salvation Army Hall. A number of beautifully coloured slides of the Life of Christ were shown. A programme of musical numbers was given.

Miss Enid Connor, of Toronto, spent the Easter week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Connor.

Mr. Robert Sweetman, B. A., spent the holiday with his parents in Hamilton.

Miss H. Grindell, B.A., is at her home in Guelph for the Easter holidays.

Miss Florence Blaney and Miss Catharine McQuarrie of the Consolidated School Staff are visiting at their homes in Maxville and Maple.

Mr. "Tip" (Evan) Tummon of Fort Erie, Bank of Montreal Staff, is at his home for the Easter week end.

Mr. Herbert "Buck" Leal, Rhodes Scholar, of McMaster University, is at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Leal, for the Easter holidays.

Several inches of snow fell early on Friday morning adding to the record snowfall of nearly twenty-four inches, which had fallen during the past ten days. This snow came chiefly in two storms about a week apart, ten inches falling in the first storm which lasted twenty-four hours, and eight inches in less than five hours on Wednesday afternoon.

ma) Gandhi is laughing at the joke of Subhus Chandra Bose at the last all-India Nationalist congress, he would hardly be in the same mood at the present congress, probably the most momentous of its kind in India's modern history. Now Bose is calling Gandhi "weak-kneed in the way he abandoned the struggle for independence because Britain is at war." Bose, former congress president and leader of the anti-compromise bloc, asks India's complete independence from England.

Little Benny's Note Book

I saw pop getting off the bus and I walked home with him for company and supper, and I hung my cap on the hallrack only I didn't hang it all a ways on account of looking some other direction while I was doing it, and pop said, Turn around and look at your cap.

WichI did, saying, G, it must of fell off, and pop said, Putting a cap on a hook properly may seem to you only what the world calls a little thing, but if there were no little things there wouldn't be any big ones, and according to science you'd be surprised at what goes on even inside a molecule. It takes just as much time and effort to become a champeen doer of little things as it does to excell at big things. A man sant learn to stretch 6 octaves on a little thing like a mouth organ without devoting half his life to practice, any more than he could learn to calm the squeaks on a big thing like a base violin without neglecting his bowling and his Sunday papers, he said, and I said, Well G, pop, do you mean if I practiced enough I could learn to hang up my cap perfect every time from a distance of about 3 yards?

With you eyes shut, pop said, and I said, Well then jimminy, pop, I'm going to start to practice it, and when I get good I'll form a club called the Cap Throwers with about 6 other fellows and we'll meet right here every day before supper and I'll always be the champeen because I'll have such a good start on the rest of them.

It's quite true that a thing worth doing at all is worth doing well, pop said. But, life being comparatively short, it is always wise to pause and ask oneself if it is worth doing quite that well, he said.

Sounding like the end of the Cap Throwers.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, March 25 —(CP)— In dull early trading, calves made a gain of 50 cents on Montreal Livestock Markets today, while other grades barely held steady, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts: Cattle 409; calves 279; sheep 7; hogs 418.

The few cattle offered sold at prices ranging from $7.26-$7.85 for good steers with an odd choice steer at $8, medium $6.50-$7.25 and common $5-$6.25. Heifers ranged from $4-$7. Good heifers hade $6.50 up and medium from $5.25-$6.25. Good cows brought $5.50-$6, medium cows $4.50-$5.25 and common $4-$4.50. Canners and cutters sold at $3-$3.75.

Good veals made $10.50 and medium kinds around $10. Common to just fair calves in mixed lots sold at $8.50. Drinkers made $5-$7.

Last year's crop lambs were mostly bucks and brought $9. Sheep made $6.

Hogs were mostly $9.40 for bacons fed and watered. Selects drew $1 premium with regular cuts on off grades. Sows were slow at $6-$6.25. Hogs sold on rail grade brought $12.35-$12.40 hot weight.

Toronto, Mar. 25 (CP). — Cattle trade was slow on a light supply up to mid-session on the Toronto Livestock Market today. Prices were generally 25 cents higher. The veal calf market was steady. Lamb and sheep sections were steady and no price was established for hogs.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch here: Cattle 1,730, calves 470, hogs 1,020, sheep and lambs 960.

Weighty steers sold at $6.75-$7.60. Good butcher steers and heifers ranged from $7.20-$7.35 with common selling downward to $6. Butcher cows sold mostly at $4-$5.50. Fed calves sold at $7.50-$9.

Sheep sold at $3-$6.75 cwt.

Hogs closed previously at $9 off-truck for bacon and $12 dressed-weight.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, March 25 —(CP)— Bacon-hog markets reporting today showed no change in prices.

Liveweight: Chatham $8.75.

Dressedweight: Chatham $11.95, Hull $11.60, Stratford $11.40 plus transportation.

Produce Market Remains Quiet

Toronto, March 25—Recently enforced licensing regulations on food imports to the United Kingdom have obscured the export situation to the Canadian cheese exporters, and dealers here Saturday were not quoting cheese prices to the wholesale trade, pending clarification of the new ruling. It was reported that British buyers were not showing interest on the Canadian cheese market at the present time as they themselves are not yet clear on the regulations.

Last Thursday the wholesale market here was quoted at the nominal price of 18c per pound for current make, but boards held in Cornwall and Delta at the latter part of last week went to as low as 15 3-8c.

Other lines were quiet and easy on the Toronto open produce market Saturday.

Business slowed to a standstill on the butter market, and prices were quoted nominal in the lower range of 27 3-4c to 28c per pound for No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids.

Although fresh receipts were not heavy, an easier undertone developed on the egg market, with a falling off in demand. Only price change, however, was shown in grade A large in the graded section, which weakened to 22c to 22 1-2c.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, March 25—(CP) Produce market prices here Saturday as reported by the Dominion Department, of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 29-29 1-4c; first grade solids, jobbing price. 28 1-2-28 3-4c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large 23 1-2; A-medium 22 1-2; A-pullets 21; B 20 1-2-21; C 19-19 1-2. Receipts: 6,793 cases, compared with 6,583 a year ago.

WALL STREET

New York, March 25—(AP)—Buyers continued in the ranks of air transportation stocks today but most leaders were unable to attract followings. Prices were a bit spotty near the fourth hour.

Bonds were just about steady with definite trends lacking in virtually all departments. Commodities were a shade uneven.

Canadian issues were sluggish. Dome Mines and International Nickel were easy. Distillers Seagram was unchanged. Canada 4s in the Bond Market, held its own.

Among the smattering of new highs for the year or longer in the stock list were those of American Airlines, Pan-American Airways, National Aviation and Loft.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Care of the Chronic Patient

I was senior medical officer at a base hospital toward the close of the last war which placed all patients under my general care. The actual treatment was under consultants, ward medical officers and ward nurses. Many patients with us for weeks with chronic ailments applied to me for passes to leave hospital for a few days. I gave these passes readily as I felt that a few days away from the hospital and other patients would stimulate their desire to get back to duty or home. I often think that the physician, and also the family, of a patient with a chronic ailment become so used to the patient's complaints and presence in hospital or home that the patient loses any hope for any change in his condition and becomes very unhappy.

Dr. Orman C. Perkins in New York State Journal of Medicine says:

"The patient soon realizes the lack of interest on the part of the physician and travels from one to another until he loses confidence in physicians as a group. Since happiness is the real indication of success, any person who is unhappy is mentally ill. It is as much the duty of the physician to treat the this type of illness as it is to overcome an organic or real ailment, even though both exist in the same patient. The state of unhappiness aggravates the organic process that exists."

For many years physicians considered it unfair to the patient to make calls at his home or have him come to the office when there was little or nothing that could be done for the patient's ailment. What physicians failed to realize was that the patient needed mental help, needed somebody who knew about illness to listen as he told of his symptoms. To be able to see and talk to the physician meant more to his health than having to pay the physician's visits or office consultations.

This brings us back once more to the fact that as 50 to 75 per cent of patients' who consult a physician have no physical ailment, this large percentage of patients must be treated from the mental or emotional standpiont.

It is only natural that the family of the patient who is chronically ill should get a little "used" to him and his complaints, but like the physician, they can make him less unhappy by a little thought.

Be Your Own Umpire or Referee

A habit which affects many of us is the inability to make decisions quickly on small matters. To the large affairs of life— change of position, the necessity or dangers of an operation a choice of a prolonged vacation-time and attention must always be given; yet it is the making of little decisions that often causes mental and physical ill-health.

An editorial in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, speaks of the great many decisions an umpire in a baseball game has to make. His decisions must be prompt and accurate or he is dismissed. Despite some mistakes during games, the successful umpire or referee continues his work years after year, and with each year becomes more accurate and more prompt because he has had that many more decisions to make.

"The ability of these umpires and referees to se accurately and swiftly and to decide promptly is the result of long training which has crystallized into habit. Anyone who has the real desire to cultivate the habit of making quick and accurate decisions and the patience and persistence to keep up the training day after day and year after year can acquire them'.

When we apply this making of quick and accurate decisions to ourselves I have in mind the time and effort we waste about small matters. If we could add up all these moments of indecision and doubt and properly estimate what they do to us mentally and physicially, we would be greatly disappointed in ourselves. As far as wear and tear on the nerves is concerned, it would be better for us to make an occasional mistake in our judgment than to be hesitating for minutes or even hours about the correct thing to do in some small matter.

I believe all of us could take the following advice with real profit to ourselves:

"Begin, today, to practise making the innumerable little decisions of daily life as if you were umpiring a ball game, and stick to them as the umpire would, even if you have a sneaking idea you are wrong sometimes. The longer you continue to make decisions, the more accurate you will become."

MANION ISSUES FINAL APPEAL TO ELECTORS

Promises Improved Organization of the War Effort Under National Government

POINTS OUTLINED

Fort William, Ont., March 25 — (CP)—Conservative Leader Manion held forth today to the electors who will go to the polls tomorrow a promise of improved organization of the war effort under a National Government.

"A National Government can more effectively retrench, can more successfully organize the nation for voluntary service than can a group of party politicians pledged to serve their party first and the nation second," he said Saturday.

The occasion was Dr. Manion's final appeal for election of a National Government, made in a broadcast over a network of Ontario radio stations. He outlined the program he had set down for his proposed administration in speeches since the opening of the campaign at Brockville Feb. 8.

The Conservative Leader said he had offered at the start of the war to co-operate with Prime Minister Mackenzie King, urging the Prime Minister to "forget that I was a leader of a political party."

"If there was anything I could do for my country, I was ready to do it. If he was willing to take the initiative in forming a National Government, I was ready to follow him."

Politics in Picture is Claim

Yet politics had been left "still very much in the picture," so Dr. Manion had decided to set out on a campaign for National Government.

He submitted a war program inclusive of "full co-operation" with the Allies; mobilization of resources; encouragement of recruiting; elimination of profiteering, favoritism and waste; improvement in the treatment of enlisted men; and consideration of the censorship question by a parliamentary committee.

On domestic issues, he promised appointment of a Minister of Youth Welfare; utilization of the Purvis-Moore Commission's recommendations on unemployment; encouragement of tourist trade, foreign capital and foreign trade; appointment of voluntary committees to plan for the post-war period; and appointment of a labor leader as Minister of Labor.

He listed points of an agricultural program to include establishment of a live stock board, marketing boards and price spread control machinery; protection of the home market; expansion of the activities of the Canadian Farm Loan Board; and stimulation of agricultural research.

"Finally," Dr. Manion said, "we intend to abolish the existing $2.50 radio licence fee."

BRITAIN ATTEMPTS

Naval Trawler Sunk

On the debit side, the Admiralty acknowledged one casualty — the 210-ton naval trawler Loch Assater, which was sunk by a mine off the northern Scottish coast. The Air Ministry disclosed the loss of a British plane on a night reconnoitring mission over Germany.

Much British attention, however, centred on the Balkans as a possible coming "hot spot" of the war.

The press interpreted the expulsion from Rumania of Maurice Lovell, Bucharest correspondent of Reuters, British News Agency, as an incident in a Nazi intrigue to get hold of Rumania's oil.

The Daily Mail's Bucharest correspondent laid Lovell's expulsion to the work of "10,000 German agents who have begun a vast campaign to undermine and disintegrate the Rumanian 'on."

Energetic Diplomacy Demanded

Energetic diplomacy was demanded by the News Chronicle, which declared "it is of supreme importance to the Allies that Rumania should not be coerced into accepting the Nazi embrace."

"Large and increasing British-French forces are marshalled at the eastern end of the Mediterranean ready to act wherever they are needed," the Daily Telegraph commented.

"Rumania and Yugoslavia know well that their interests, like their sympathies, are on the side of the Allies."

Britain looks forward toward the arrival of a Rumanian trade mission a week from today as an opportunity to improve commercial relations between London and Bucharest. The delegation is to negotiate a new clearing agreement.

Norway's minister to London made complaints to Britain alleging infringement of Norwegian neutrality during recent days. There was no immediate British comment.

Norway Protests Actions

In Oall, the Norwegian admiralty said there had been at least two instances of trespassing by British warships and a possible third was being investigated.

But the Daily Mail observed that neutrals already have been "warned," particularly by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, "that they are not playing the game and the navy are only trying to stop the 'leaks' and make our blockade 100 per cent effective."

Answering Norway's previous protest in the Altmark case, when a British destroyer forced the German prison vessel aground on the Norwegian coast, Prime Minister Chamberlain accused Norway's government of "complete indifference as to the use which might be made of their territorial waters by the German fleet."

SOCIAL CREDITERS

Under the transferable vote, second choices of voters will be tabulated in 22 ridings. Results will not be known until late this week as all ballot boxes must be delivered to the constituency returning officers in each riding before the count starts. Delivery in some cases has been delayed by snow-drifted roads.

Straight Fight in Doubt

In addition to these second-count ridings, one straight fight remains in doubt—Peace River constituency where 45 of 49 polls have been heard from, giving E. J. Martin, Independent, a 164-vote lead over W. J. Lampley, Social Credit member of the last legislature.

Premier Aberhart and four of his cabinet were re-elected but second counts are needed in two of the ridings where ministers ran. The eighth member, Provincial Treasurer Solon Low, was defeated. Those still doubtful are the ridings of Hon. D. B. Mullen, Minister of Agriculture, who is leading C. A. Ronning, C. C. F. leader, by more than 900 votes; and of Hon. W. A. Fallow, Minister of Public Works, who has 390 more than S. C. Heckbert, Independent. The ridings are Camrose and Vermilion respectively.

Yesterday two Social Crediters, J. L. McPherson in Bruce and A. J. Hooke, re-elected in Rocky Mount House, increased the Social Crediters elected list to 20. The election of L. J. O'Brien in Grande Prairie brought the Independents' total to 14.

RETURN OF GOV'T URGED BY KING

If Dr. Manion and those supporting him ever had any real desire to form such a government "they would not have expended so much of their efforts on antagonizing and vilifying the very men with whom they would have to co-operate in the affairs of government."

Campaign methods of the Conservatives "seeking to destroy the character and reputations of their opponents" had removed every possibility of a National Government with Dr. Manion as leader, Mr. King continued.

Too Late to Change Tactics

"It is too late now for Dr. Manion and his supporters to change their tactics, either toward the Conservative party, which they have submerged, or toward the Liberal party, which they have sought to defame. Fortunately, however, it is not too late for you to express your condemnation of methods which threatened to destroy our public life."

Mr. King said he did not know where Dr. Manion would find his allies for any National Government because the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation had repudiated any such alliance and the new democracy had not committed itself.

"Perhaps the price of their support would be an experiment in Social Credit and monetary inflation. But what would such an experiment do to Canada's war effort? It might well, by destroying our credit, destroy the country altogether.

"In such a combination, who would be the ministers? Can you imagine an effective government stretching all the way from genuine Conservatism to the extremity of monetary theorists? The cabinet would cease to be a maker of policy and a director of administration. It would become a debating society."

The Prime Minister defended his decision to have parliament dissolved last January and said that criticism of the dissolution has from the beginning been voiced by those who were disappointed and frustrated by the unsuccessful attempt to prolong the life of parliament with the object of forming a Union Government.

Deplores Speaker's Remarks

Mr. King suggested words used by a speaker at Dr. Manion's Toronto meeting were "singularly akin to the language and methods of those very Nazis whose system is endangering freedom the world over."

The Prime Minister did not name the speaker but read from a report of the speech made by Lieut.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, at the Toronto meeting in which Col. Drew criticized Defence Minister Rogers.

The Prime Minister said the main objective of his government in prosecution of the war effort "has been and will continue to be the preservation and extension of freedom at home and abroad."

Dr. Manion had spoken of coalition or union governments formed by Sir John A. MacDonald and Sir Robert Borden, the Prime Minister said.

"Neither Sir John nor Sir Robert struck their party colors and then tried to make a Joseph's coat of the rags and tatters that remained.

"Neither of them "submerged' as Dr. Manion says he has done the party which made him the leader. They recognised that with the destruction of party identity the elements of coalition and union necessary to form a National government themselves disappeared.

Moreover Sir John did not seek to destroy the character of the men with whom he was to have an intimate and close association in government.

Sir Robert as Example

"When Sir Robert Borden invited Mr. Rowell (Hon. Newton Rowell) and other Liberals to join him in forming a union government he did not begin by saying of them, as Dr. Manion said of me at Halifax some days ago, that they were 'neither mentally nor temperamently qualified to head an administration.'

"Sir Robert would not have said, nor would he have permitted any of his supporters to say, without protest, what was said in Dr. Manion's presence of the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Rogers) at his public meeting in Toronto.

"These were the words used: 'That dyspeptic little son of Mars has been a standing joke in every military camp since he blossomed forth as our new war lord last September."

Referring to Mr. Rogers' service in the last war and the physical handicaps he suffered as a result, Mr. King described him as a man "who did not seek the defence portfolio but accepted its burdens as a national duty."

The words to which he objected were used, Mr. King said, "by a man who is not without ambition to occupy the position now held by the honorable, courageous and able public servant whose sterling qualities and patriotic services he so contemptuously dismisses.

SCORES FERGUSON FOR CLAIMING HATCHERY CREDIT

Geo. S. White, National Conservative Candidate, Speaks at Marmora

Marmora, March 26 (Special) — A meeting of the National Conservative party in support of the candidate Mr. Geo. S. White was held in the Town Hall on Saturday evening. Owing to the bad condition of the roads there was a small attendance, about sixty being present. Reeve W. R. Linn acted as chairman.

Mr. White the first speaker regretted that the condition of the roads had kept many of his supporters from attending. He criticized the letter circulated by Mr. Rork Ferguson, in which Mr. Ferguson took credit for getting the Fish Hatchery in Peterborough county. Mr. White stated that Percy Lancaster was responsible for getting the Fish Hatchery.

Mr. White referred to the radio beam at Hubble's Hill, near Stirling and stated that the geographical features of the district were responsible for the beam being placed in that locality and not due to Mr. Ferguson's efforts, he also criticized the mail service in North Hastings. Mr. White contended that a lawyer became familiar with the farmers' problems, and was often consulted by them in regard to their affairs. He also criticized Mr. Ferguson as never having made a speech in the House of Common. He cited France and other countries having a National Government, during wartime, and he felt that Canada also would be better under a National Government.

He also criticized Mr. King on alleged patronage in the air force and stated that two Liberal candidaes in South Hastings were arguing over the patronage of the Trenton Airport. Mr. White promised that the National Conservative Government would do everything possible for the soldiers and help them to find jobs when the war was over. He promised a youth ministry and investigation into all social legislations, as old age pensions, etc. He also stated that his party was opposed to conscription. He promised a livestock board would be set up and made reference to Dr. Manion's war record.

C. Frost, K.C.

Mr. C. Frost, K.C., who was called on, urged the unity of the parties in the interests of Canada.

He criticized the King administration and charged inactivity in the past few years, when all other countries were preparing for war. He urged his hearers to forget all religious and political strife and get together under a good leader and if they did so, Canada was sure of success.

As Mr. White was also called to address a meeting at Hastings, the meeting was brought to a close with God Save the King.

SKI ENTHUSIASTS FIGHT HOUSE FIRE

Welland, Ont., March 25—(CP)—Thirty ski enthusiasts of the Look Out Point Club at Fonthill turned to the role of ski firemen Sunday when the $5,000 farm home of William Hansler was destroyed by fire.

The Fonthill fire brigade could not reach the scene because of snow-blocked roads. When the ski party reached the scene the top storey was ablaze. The members saved most of the furniture before the roof collapsed.

TO SPEAK ON RADIO

Port Hope, Ont., March 25—(CP)—Pilot Officer Wilfred Lewis advised his parents Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lewis, Welcome, he will broadcast from England Monday evening March 25. The cable, said he would speak at seven o'clock. He is believed to be the Port Hope aviator who participated in the Royal Air Force raid on Sylt.

SPEAKER SCORES WAR EFFORT OF KING GOVERNMENT

J. M. Simpson, K.C., Napanee, and Other Speakers Urge National Government

RAPS EQUIPMENT

Tweed—(Special) — Criticism of the King administration, charging failure to prosecute the war effectively on behalf of Canada was voiced by Mr. J. M. Simpson, K.C., Napanee. Dr. H. E. Welsh, M.P.P., Roslin, Dr. J. W. Kinnear, Belleville, Dr. W. C. Morgan, Belleville and W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P., Tweed and J. F. Wilson, Reeve of Sidney, who appeared on the platform with Geo. Stokes, National Conservative candidate for South Hastings in the final meeting of the campaign held in his home town of Tweed on Saturday night.

In spite of the fact that all roads in the rural district about Tweed are completely blocked, the hall was practically filled when the meeting was called. to order by T. C. Graham, president of Tweed Conservative Association.

Interspersing the addresses were instrumental numbers given by Messrs. Frank Tummon and Alfred Hounslow, accompanied by Miss L. Richardson and Mr. Fred Porter and readings by Jack Scott.

Optimistic Over Results

The chairman commended those who had braved the elements to be present. "The campaign, as far as Tweed is concerned, has been a quiet one," said Mr. Graham, "but there seems little doubt that the people of the district will roll up a substantial majority for the National Government candidate, Geo. Stokes, on March 26th."

Dr. H. E. Welsh referred to the long years of service which the candidate had given to Tweed and Hungerford during which he had been a successful farmer and highly esteemed citizen, who had served on the Township Council for a great many years, deserving the active support of this part of the riding on election day. Politics should be forgotten and George Stokes, a native son, should be given a substantial majority. He stands beside Dr. R. J. Manion in his efforts to form a National Government which alone in this time of national crisis is able to insure Canada's whole cooperation on the side of Great Britain.

Britain is today fighting for the liberty of all nations and the survival of democracy.

"Who stands if Britain falls;
Who dies if Britain lives?"

Condemning what he called the indifference of the King government to Canada's state of defencelessness, although he (King) claimed that he knew two years ago that war was inevitable, Dr. Welsh said that this evidence of inefficiency rendered the present administration unfit to conduct Canada's war effort. One can forgive mistakes of men and governments if they are honest ones; but one cannot forgive a government which had no plan. An individual knowing of obligations to meet two years ahead, would plan for them. The King government should have pared down the expense of government and set aside unessential services until after the war at least. On the contrary it cost $6,000,000 more for the running expenses of government and much non-essential building construction was undertaken of which the famous Tweed post office was but one of twenty-one public buildings.

The unemployment situation in Canada is far more serious than in September, 1939. Today there are 625,000 on relief, which will cost $100,000,000 in 1940, of which the province of Ontario will pay half, as it does of all the expenditures of Ottawa for war debt, cost of government and cost of the war.

Many of those on relief have tried to get into the army but have been turned back as there is no place for them. They are broken in morale, the country had nothing for them in time of peace but such is the spirit of Canadian youth that they are willing to give their lives for their land.

Concluding, Dr. Welsh said that he would rather support Geo. Stokes if he were a Liberal because he believed him to be the best man in the South Hastings field.

Mr. Stokes Speaks

The candidate, Mr. Geo. Stokes, spoke but briefly, expressing his appreciation of the support he had received throughout the riding, especially referring to that given him by the younger generation who see something in Dr. Manion's programme that is worthy of their support.

"Canada's share in this war," said Fred Wilson, Reeve of Sidney, "is more than supplying guns and ammunition. The soldiers must be fed, and it is in this particular that the farmer has a work to do. The farmer feeding his pigs is doing as essential a bit of war work as anyone no matter what he might be doing. The prices of farm products and manufactured goods are not on a parity. In 1913, a farmer could buy a $130 binder for 130 bushels of wheat. Today it would require 500 bushels of wheat to buy a $275 binder. This is but an illustration of costs all along the line. The King government has done nothing to remedy this situation," he claimed.

"Bonuses and subsidies, as for cheese, are but temporary remedies and not cures for the ills of agriculture. The Empire Trade Agreement of 1925 arranged by the Bennett government was the correct thing. In 1935 Premier King did not take them off the statute books but he diluted them by favorable concessions to the United states.

"The government sales tax of 8 per cent on Hydro bills came in for criticism not for the tax itself but by reason of exemptions granted to places of business while refusing to exempt farmers' barns which are as much a place of business as any factory or shop.

Youth Ministry.

Mr. Wilson commended Dr. Manion, especially for his promise of a Youth Welfare Ministry to help Canadian youth. "They do not want to be coddled or spoonfed, but just given a chance.

"The paramount issue which confronts our country today," said Mr. J. M. Simpson, K.C., "is the winning of the war. All are agreed on that. But this cannot be achieved under the present administration. Five years ago we read on our bill boards "King or Chaos"; now we have both.

"Mr. King does not truly represent Liberal thought in Canada; he represents only partyism," Mr. Simpson charged. "When Prime Minister Chamberlain was pleading with Hitler for peace in Europe, Australia and New Zealand wired to him that they were with Chamberlain to the last dollar. What did Mackenzie King do? He maintained an ominous silence," Mr. Simpson stated.

Mr. Simpson went on to say that the Liberal government is not able to produce the necessary effort to the winning of the war; it should be placed in the hand of a National Government with the best brains available of all parties.

Mr. Simpson strongly condemned those who spread insidious propaganda regarding a man's religious persuasion. "I am an Orangeman and a Protestant and I am proud to support Dr. Manion, not for his religious persuasion, but for his manhood, his courage, his experience, his war record, and his National Government policy.

"Whom would you choose to lead this country in war, a man decorated for bravery on the field of battle or one who went to the United States for the Rockefeller Institute during the Great War?"

Judged on Accomplishments

"I do not challenge the sincerity of purpose of Mr. King and his colleagues but their efforts and accomplishments during six months of war have been a fizzle and a farce. It is on that score that they must be judged.

"They criticize Dr. Manion and his National Government, sneering because he cannot name a cabinet. In a democratic country no leader can name his cabinet before its members are elected.

"Mr. Simpson attacked any man who allows his vote to be influenced at this time by religious or party prejudice."

Dr. J. W. Kinnear of Belleville spoke briefly, characterizing Mackenzie King as evasive and uncertain while Dr. Manion impresses one immediately of his sincerity of purpose.

Supports Dr. Manion's Policy

"Having been associated with Dr. R. J. Manion in England during the Great War," said Dr. W. C. Morgan of Belleville, himself a veteran, "I have no hesitancy in supporting his policy as outlined. The King government has been negligent," he charged, "in turning down the British Commonwealth air scheme. We should have 10,000 of the finest airmen in the world ready to go over to Great Britain right away. Canadians are the best airmen in the world. Conditions here are perfect for training in long distance flying while in England weather conditions handicap the pilots in their training."

W. E. Tummon, Ex-M.P. Speaks

W. E. Tummon, ex-M.P., said that the government to be elected will have full control of Canada's war effort for the duration of the war. Before this war is over every man and woman is going to be called on to give his utmost. We must not vote for the man (King) who has spurned cooperation and whose war effort has "bogged down" but for one (Manion) who knows what war is from experience and who wants to secure national unity with national government."

BEGINS LONG SWIM

Bimini, Bahamas, March 25 (CP)—Paul Chotteau, French marathon swimmer, began a projected 71-mile swim across the Gulf Stream at 7:08 a.m. EST today.

Chotteau, 245 pounds and 42 years old, hoped to complete the swim in about 36 hours, which would take him ashore at Palm Beach, Fla., tomorrow evening.

He is accompanied by the schooner Sea Breeze and two dories.

THEY BOMBED GERMAN AIR BASE

"ATTACK NEAR THE WESTWALL"

Passed by the German censor, this photo purports to be an attack by a German patrol "outside the westwall." The German caption says that "the patrol commander leads the attack." He is the man who is flourishing the "potato-masher" grenade familiar to C.E.F. vets. The same C.E.F. vets can form their own conclusions about the authenticity of the "attack," particularly as one of the strange German customs appears to be that of going over the top with the rifle slung on the back.

THE MINSTREL BOY TO WAR IS GONE

Before England and Germany came to blows, the gentleman at the piano here was one of Britain's favorite radio entertainers. He was known as the "roving songster." He is still a songster, but he does his singing for the French children who hang around the billet where he is based as a member of Britain's Royal Air Force.

Centenary

Centenary—The lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. George Shortt was the scene of a very pleasant social evening on Thursday, March 21st, in aid of Red Cross work. Owing to the recent blizzard and as the result of the condition of the roads the number of persons present was only fair. Mrs. Aikens, president of the Red Cross unit, took charge in her usual capable manner.

During the course of the evening Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Herman and Miss Shirley who are moving to Deseronto, were asked to take chairs of honor. An appropriate address was read and a lovely floor lamp presented to Mr. and Mrs. Herman, while a bed lamp was presented to Miss Shirley. Both Mr. and Mrs. Herman and Shirley expressed their sincere appreciation for the lovely gifts and invited all to visit them in their new home in Deseronto. Lunch was served and a hearty vote of thanks extended to Mr. and Mrs. Shortt for opening their home for the occasion.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Everett Elliott on the birth of a new son.

Boys' Athletic Society

Climaxing attempts to bring the C.O.S.S.A. championship to Belleville which in the past years proved too much for previous teams, the 1940 senior team finally brought home to B.C.I.V.S. the highest award offered by Central Ontario Intervollegin Competative Basketball—the C.O.S.S.A. championship.

This victory was accomplished in the final C.O.S.S.A. play-offs in Toronto on March 16 when our team beat the final contender, Meaford, with a score of 35-27.

Further honours will be sought for by the victorious seniors when they compete against the four remaining Ontario section winners in Ottawa, April 5th and 6th. Greatest possible luck, fellas!

U. S. ARMY, NAVY WOULD ASSIST WITH PLANES

FORECAST 'BIG-FIVE' INNER CABINET IN BRITAIN

Favor Allowing Allies Access to All U. S. Planes

No Secret Military Devices Supplied With the Machines

MAY GET 600 AT ONCE

Plan Would be for Shipments to go Forward at Once, Says Navy Secretary

Washington, March 26 (AP)—The United States army and navy stood aside today to give Britain and France virtually unhindered access to the latest models of American warplanes. Officials emphasized that no secret military devices would be supplied with the planes.

The two services formally agreed yesterday on the new export policy, acting on the belief that United States national defence would best be served by the consequent expansion of the aircraft industry, and by the rigorous testing which American-developed ships will receive in Europe's aerial war.

Barring Congressional interference, officials said that the new policy forecast these immediate results:

1. Release to the Allies of some 600 planes now under construction for the army or navy.
2. Acceleration in the placing of an expected $1,000,000,000 in Franco-British aircraft orders.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Weather! Samuel Johnson said that "When two Englishmen meet their first talk is about the weather". Everyone knows what weather is, but it is hard to define briefly. In some countries, as in the Mediterranean region, there is no special word for it. In France and Italy it is the same word as for time. There is normal and abnormal weather, and the causes of either are very hard to determine. No one ever asks the cause of "the beautiful weather we've been having;" but many frequently asks the cause of abnormal weather. Both are the result of interactions of many conditions, and it is often that abnormal conditions are easier to explain than just the normal.

LITTLE ACTIVITY AT THE FRONT

French and German Communiques Report Aerial Patrol Work

Paris, March 26 (AP)— French sharpshooters killed three German troopers who hoisted an anti-British poster in a small boat near the German shore of the Rhine, French military sources reported today.

The incident, described as occurring yesterday, was said to have touched off an exchange of machine-gun fire from both sides of the river, along which propaganda from loudspeakers has been heard more than rifle fire.

The French military also reported that one of their advance posts south of the Warndt Forest had repulsed a German attack and that artillery on both sides was active west of the Saar River and in the Vosges mountains.

German airplanes continued scouting over eastern and northern France while the French made reconnaissance flights deep into Germany.

The high command's morning communique said merely:

"One of our outposts repelled a local attack in the region south of the Warndt Forest. Aviation activity continued during the night."

Berlin, March 26 (CP-Havas) — Allied airplanes flying over Germany were charged today by the Reich high command with having violated the territory of the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg and Switzerland.

German fliers were credited with having shot down a French plane during an air battle over the Western Front. The high command communique follows:

"No important event on the Western Front. In the Saar-Brucken region an air battle occurred between Messerschmidt pursuit planes and French Morane pursuit ships. An enemy plane was shot down during this battle.

"On the night of March 24-25 German aviation undertook a series of reconnaissance flights toward north and west France. These flights were crowned with success and did not meet enemy offence.

"Enemy planes at the same time flew toward north and western Germany and on this occasion violated, either going or returning, the sovereignty of the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, and Switzerland."

FASCIST PAPER PAYS TRIBUTE TO BRITISH STRENGTH

Popolo di Roma States Power of British Army Great Deal Stronger Than in 1914

VAST RESOURCES

Rome, March 26—(CP-Havas)—The authoritative Fascist newspaper Popolo Di Roma paid tribute today to the present and potential future strength of the British army.

It said: "The power of the British army in the initial period of the conflict is undoubtedly a great deal stronger than it was in 1914.

"Furthermore, we do not intend to deceive ourselves by saying that its maximum numerical strength, including troops coming from the Dominions, will reach a war footing only after four years, as was the case in 1914.

"It clearly appears that the British army has evolved in the sense of a quality army, extensively supplied with arms and mechanical means, reinforced by vast industrial machinery and by the enormous raw material resources at its disposal."

Have Corresponded Long Time, Girls First Meet Today in Toronto

Toronto, Mar. 26 (CP). — Two young women who are intimately acquainted met for the first time here today.

They were Doris Boyce of Napanee, a student of household economics at MacDonald Institute at Guelph, and Eileen Airth of Peterborough, a first-year law student at Osgoode Hall. Both girls are nineteen years old and for the last eight years, ever since they tried their high school entrance exams, they have exchanged letters at least once a month.

But until today, neither girl had seen the other's face. During all the years of their correspondence they had not even exchanged photographs. "We preferred to wait for just such a reunion as this," said Miss Boyce.

Both were exceptional students. In their final year of High School, Miss Airth won a $250 Kent scholarship to Western University and Miss Boyce won the Princeps Alumnae award.

The meeting was arranged very simply. Doris, who is spending the Easter holidays in the city, arranged to go to Willard Hall where Eileen lives. They recognized each other.

"Are you Miss Boyce?" said Eileen. "Yes," answered Doris and they were at ease. They say they are going to continue their correspondence and to meet again, this time in Guelph, soon.

FRANCE'S INNER WAR CABINET

SIR R. A. SQUIRES OF NEWFOUNDLAND DIES, 60 YRS. OLD

Former Prime Minister Retired From Political Life in 1932

HELD VARIOUS POSTS

St. John's, Nfld., March 26 (CP-Cable)—Sir Richard Anderson Squires, former Prime Minister of Newfoundland, died today. He was 60 years old.

He had given his time to his legal business and farming at his country estate after the defeat of his Liberal government in 1932, two years before Newfoundland reverted to government by a commission.

Sir Richard was identified with the expansion of the colony's trade and the development of its interior during his political career. Several times he made trips to foreign countries to discuss Newfoundland's

5,000,000 VOTERS EXPECTED TO TROOP TO POLLS

One Contest Called Off When Liberal Nominee Dies on Eve of Election

669 CANDIDATES

Ottawa, March 26 (CP)—Quiet came to the hustings today after seven weeks of strenuous oratory and perhaps 5,000,000 civilian voters trooped to the polls in a war-time general election to name 244 members to parliament for five years. Polls opened at 8 a.m. and close at 6 p.m., local time.

The vote will determine whether Canada's war effort will be continued by the Liberal government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, seeking re-election, or be undertaken by a promised National Government led by Hon. R. J. Manion, Conservative leader.

Best Chance of U. S. Keeping Out Of War is Prompt Allied Victory

New York Herald Tribune Says it is Only Common Sense to Sell Allies Everything Needed to End War Quickly

WOULD SELL SECRETS

New York, March 26—(CP)—The New York Herald Tribune said today the United States' best chance of staying out of war "lies in the Allies winning a prompt victory in Europe" and termed the current Congressional controversy over sale of late-model planes to Great Britain and France "muddle-headed."

Comparing the situation with the "triumphant results of the policy of rushing every possible aid to Finland except the sort of aid which the Finns really needed," the newspaper said editorially:

"Is it not the simplest of common sense to sell the Allies everything they may need to win that victory themselves, including any military secrets or anything else we may have?"

Recalling that President Roosevelt, in explaining last week that sale of late-model fighting planes to the Allies do not envisage sale of United States military secrets, the Herald Tribune asked irritably: "But what difference would it make, the average citizen is likely impatiently to exclaim, if they were?" It added:

"What, in heaven's name, are our own military preparations preparing for? Do the plans for the improvement of our defences ser-

Welland Ship Canal Jammed With Ice

St. Catharines, Ont., March 26—(CP)—For the first time since the Welland Ship Canal was placed in operation in 1931 harbors at both Port Weller and Port Colborne are blocked by an ice jam which is frozen solid, canal officials said today.

No date has been set as yet for the opening of the canal. April 15 is the usual Spring opening date, but one canal officer said today that a prolonged south wind and considerable rain would be required to clear the harbors of ice.

North and West winds have kept drift ice in Lake Ontario clear of the Port Weller harbor entrance, but in Lake Erie off Port Colborne observers said an ice jam extends out into the Lake as far as the eye can see.

TOO MANY CHANGES

Philadelphia, March 26—(AP)—Public schools in Philadelphia won't buy any more maps of Europe until the war ends. Superintendent Alexander J. Stoddard directed principals to get along with existing maps until hostilities cease and to buy no more geographies or other books relating to countries at war.

Col. Ralston Says All Members of Cabinet Backing Regime Wholeheartedly

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 26—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said here in his final campaign appeal that if victory comes to the Liberal Party in today's Dominion election "We will thank God and go ahead to prosecute the war effort with might and main."

Return of the administration with a strong majority would be a message to the enemy that Canada was united in the struggle and determined to support the government in its main objective of "victory, peace and freedom," he declared last night at a meeting in the auditorium.

Finance Minister Ralston, who spoke at the same meeting, said the administration was pledged to prosecute the war to the limit of Canada's ability.

German Coal Trains Now Rolling Through The Brenner Pass

Brussels, March 26 (CP)— The Berlin correspondent of the Vingtieme Siecle reported today that German coal trains have started rolling through the Brenner Pass into Italy, with Nazi trade experts predicting that 9,000,000 tons will be delivered by next October.

According to the dispatch the coal is shipped by waterway to Mannheim, on the Rhine, where it is transferred to railway gondolas. The agreement under which Britain recently released Italian colliers subject to contraband control stipulated that Italy was to attempt no deliveries of German coal by sea.

"According to experts," the newspaper's correspondent said, "9,000,000 tons will be delivered by October and an average of one carload will pass the frontier every 20 seconds. Such a solution will cost the Germans millions, but in a total war money does not seem to matter to the Reich's leaders."

NO JOB DESPITE COURT VICTORY

Pittsburgh, March 26—(AP) — Byron H. Hill's victory in the Supreme Court proved somewhat hollow. He was dismissed as chief clerk of the City Bureau of Sanitation in April, 1938. The High High Court yesterday upheld his right to the job. However, the position was eliminated more than a year ago.

CONSCIENCE MONEY

Evening News Says Importance of Diplomatic Battlefield Lacks Official Recognition

London, Mar. 26 (CP).—Demands for changes in the government for a harder-hitting war against Germany were coupled today with predictions that Liberal and Labor opposition leaders would decline to join Prime Minister Chamberlain's cabinet if invited.

There were reports that a five-man war cabinet would replace the present nine-man inner group, and that Mr. Chamberlain would ask Labor leaders Clement Attlee and Herbert Morrison and the Liberal leader, Sir Archibald Sinclair, to join a broadened government, but these men were believed to prefer remaining in a postion from which they can criticize.

This smaller group would be composed of Mr. Chamberlain, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who would be given increased authority as spokesman for land, sea and air forces, and for the Ministries of Supply and Shipping, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, and Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Privy Seal

PREMIER SAVAGE OF NEW ZEALAND DIES AGED 68

Prime Minister Since 1935, He Has Been Ill for Some Months

NATIVE OF AUSTRALIA

Wellington, March 26 (CP-Reuters)—Rt. Hon. Michael J. Savage, Prime Minister of New Zealand since 1935, died today.

He was 68 years old.

Mr. Savage had been ill since undergoing an abdominal operation last August.

A native of Australia who came to New Zealand in 1907, Mr. Savage succeeded Harry Holland as leader of the Dominion Labor Party in 1933 and two years later led the party to victory at the polls to give New Zealand her first Labor government.

Mr. Savage represented the Dominion at the coronation in 1937 and at the Imperial Conference that followed.

He was a member of the New Zealand parliament for Auckland West for more than 25 years.

He was a bachelor.

Liquid-Oxygen-Carbon Bomb Spreads Death Within a 1,000-Feet Radius

Baltimore, March 26—(AP)—A liquid-oxygen-carbon bomb which inventor Lester Barlow says will spread certain death within a 1,000-foot radius faced its first public test today before newsmen and photographers.

The test, arranged after a joint hearing of United States Senate and House of Representatives naval and military committees, was to prove or disprove Barlow's contention his device is safe to handle.

Barlow took the spectators to a testing ground at the Glenn L. Martin Airplane Factory on wide Middle River for the demonstration.

Critics met Barlow's claims with assertions that such an explosive was too delicate for practical use. Barlow replied that his formula made it immune to fire or shock, and that it was safer to handle than TNT.

Today's demonstration was a preview of official tests by the war and navy departments. Barlow wants to conduct one of these in an isolated area, testing the explosive's power to kill with live animals staked out in a field.

The 53-year-old inventor who, with George Holderer, produced the liquid oxygen bomb after many months of research, told the Congressional Committees his device would keep enemy warships 1,000 miles from American shores and spread "mass murder" if turned loose on a troop transport.

He said his bomb would kill everything in its path was detonating waves that spread a shocking force no one can withstand. Recent tests at the Martin Plant, where he is head of the bomb division, brought complaints that windows and plaster in houses two and three miles away were being cracked, the inventor reported recently.

"They told me I'd have to use smaller charges," he said. "But I was only using three-pound bombs and was behind a clay bank at that."

WAR AND FLOOD IN NORTH CHINA TAKE HEAVY TOLL

Many of Population Near Starvation in Japanese-Controlled China

CROPS DESTROYED

Shanghai, March 26 —(AP) — The cumulative effects of nearly three years of war and one of the worst floods in North China history are claiming a heavy toll in starvation and suffering throughout Japanese-controlled China.

Two successive bumper crops in west and southwest China have piled up more food than can be eaten or stored in areas under Chiang Kai-Shek's control, but the surplus cannot help the hungry in East China because transport and distribution facilities are lacking. Chiang's government, moreover, forbids commerce between "free" and Japanese-occupied China.

FRITZ THYSSEN NOW IN FRANCE

Strict Rule of Silence for Refugees in Switzerland Too Much for Magnate

Berne, Switzerland, March 26 — (AP)—Fritz Thyssen, German steel magnate who backed Adolf Hitler in the days of Nazi ascendancy, but who came to Switzerland last November because he opposed the war and blamed the Nazis for it, has gone to France, it was learned today.

When he established a residence at Locarno, Switzerland, last November Thyssen said that he was "still German" although "no longer a Nazi." He added he and his wife intended to live in Switzerland indefinitely.

It was reported a strict rule of silence, imposed on all political refugees here, was too much for Thyssen and that when his patience broke he departed for Paris leaving no forwarding address.

Officials of the German legation in Berne said that they were "not surprised" to hear of Thyssen's departure and declared that he "certainly can never return to the Reich."

Friends in Switzerland advanced the view that Thyssen, who still retains large industrial holdings outside Germany, may establish an office in some neutral country to direct them.

STILL AGROUND

Halifax, March 26 (CP)—The British oil tanker El Ciervo was still hard aground on ledges at the entrance to Halifax harbor today despite efforts of salvage vessels to move her during the last three days. The 5,841-ton ship struck the shoals in a blizzard Saturday.

OVERHEATED PIPES CAUSE OF RUN

Overheated furnace pipes at 182 William St., caused local firemen a short run to that address yesterday morning, but prompt action by the brigade resulted in no damage taking place. Shortly after the noon hour a second alarm was received from 59 Church St. where a chimney fire was in progress, but here again the trouble was overcome without damage, according to fire officials.

TO REPLACE R. R. TIES ON C.P.R. BRIDGE

New railroad ties are now being prepared by railway employees to replace those that have been in use for many years on the C.P.R. bridge at the Moira River mouth. Armed with crosscut saws and adze, the men are notching the large thirteen foot ties preparatory to placing them in position on the railroad bridge.

THIEVES STEAL $15 IN CASH AND 10 PACKS CIGARETTES

Sneak thieves broke into the premises of the Recreation Bowling Alleys, Bridge Street, and stole the sum of $15.00 and ten packets of cigarettes sometime over the weekend, police revealed today.

It is believed by Detective Isard, who investigated, that a fire exit door had been left unlatched by the marauders, who later gained entrance through this doorway and latched the door behind them, leaving through the main entrance. The cash register was rifled and the cash removed, as well as the cigarettes from the show case.

Worst Hog Cholera Epidemic Checked In London Area

London, Ont., March 25—(CP)—Western Ontario's worst hog cholera epidemic in recent years which killed thousands of animals being raised for wartime markets is now believed under control, Dr. James Bovaird, Federal Veterinary Inspector, said today.

The disease spread into nearly every county reaching its worst in Middlesex, Sarnia and the Wingham-Clinton districts.

The London area has reported no new outbreaks in the past week and authorities hoped the epidemic had been isolated in a few sections.

It is estimated that nearly 2,000 hogs had to be destroyed in Middlesex County districts alone.

As a precautionary measure, until the disease is checked thoroughly, instructions were sent out over the week-end by the Dominion Department of Agriculture officials that all hog sales were to be suspended until further notice.

A six months' ban on hog auctions at Queen's Park here and in other major centres in Western Ontario has been in effect about two weeks.

The outbreak was traced definitely to public sales held in London on three successive Saturdays in February.

OLD SWEETHEARTS TO MARRY

Pasadena, Calif., March 26 (AP)—Mrs. Marion Chase Paulton, 71, of Sioux City, Ia., said "yes" to Frederic Ervin White, 72, of Highland Park, Ill., after 50 years. They filed notice of intention to wed. White said he proposed in Boston in 1890 and she went abroad for six months to think it over. They renewed their friendship two years ago and he reminded her she had never given him his answer.

Apple Growers Urged To Keep Orchards In Good Condition

Faced with the possibility of an entire shut-down in apple exports to Great Britain next fall and winter which would leave an extra six million bushels to be consumed in Canada, local apple growers are putting forth every effort to cut down production costs this year.

Agricultural authorities are advising the growers that they should not relax their vigilance in spray control as soon as spring weather arrives. It is pointed out that everything recommended in the spray calendar is essential and if one or more applications were omitted much of the benefit of previous sprays would be lost. For example, there would not be much sense in producing wormy apples free from scab or scabby apples free from worms.

The directors of the Ontario Apple Growers Association advise the use of the cheapest effective spray materials and advise close study of the two main spray schedules recommended in the Ontario spray calendars available at offices of the Department of Agriculture. Directors also recommend the elimination of unreliable varieties and old trees from orchards, particularly in districts heavily infested with codling moths. They also discourage the planting of apple trees in tender fruit districts because of the high cost of codling moth control in such districts.

POLICE COURT

"Prefer a charge of abandoning an animal in distress against this man," ordered Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K. C., after Lionel Westfall, of this city had pleaded not guilty to a charge of careless driving, when he was arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K. C., in today's local police court.

The H.T.A. charge preferred against Westfall arose out of the fact an automobile driven by the accused had run over and kil'ed a Bull Terrier dog, the property of Morley Smith. Witnesses called today testified that Westfall's car had struck and killed the canine and continued without stopping or returning to the scene of the accident.

Westfall stated in defence he had two elderly women in the car with him at the time, both of whom were in ill-health and suffering from nervousness. Westfall also stated he did return to the scene of the accident some 15 or 20 minutes later. His Worship adjourned the case until Friday, as the accused wished to bring his wife into court as a defence witness.

When the name of Albert Sinder, Picton, was called on a charge of careless driving, the accused failed to answer. Evidence was taken and the accused found guilty after proof of service of a summons was given by Detective Fred Isard. A fine of $10.00 and costs, or 21 days in jail in default, was imposed.

James McGarry, vagrant, was sentenced to five days in the common jail following a plea of guilty. Having been arrested last Friday, McGarry was instructed by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., to leave the city without delay. One L.C.A. charge concluded the court.

SUBVERSIVE LITERATURE DISTRIBUTED

Windsor, Ont., March 26—(CP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police said today that subversive literature containing anti-war propaganda was placed on doorsteps overnight in the Ward One District. Authorities said the literature was signed by the Essex County Executive of the Communist party of Canada.

Police are conducting a drive against the propaganda circulating which was increased greatly the past two weeks.

STIRLING

SPECIAL EASTER SERVICES HELD AT STIRLING

Large Congregations in Attendance on Easter Day —Special Music

ITEMS OF INTEREST

Stirling, March 26—(Special) — Large congregations attended the special Easter services held in all Stirling churches on Sunday with the early worshippers attending dawn services in some instances. Church bells summoned worshippers for the first service of the day at St. John's Anglican Church at 8 a.m. with Rev. A. S. McConnell, rector, conducting a special service. At four in the afternoon a vesper service was held at St. Paul's United Church with the message of Easter being given in sermon and song by Rev. W. J. Scott and a full choir under the direction of G. L. Clute. Special music throughout the day at St. Paul's United Church included two anthems "Why Seek Ye the Living," (Cook) and "Christ is Risen," (Maunder), a baritone solo, "The First Easter Morn" by Wm. Reynolds and a soprano solo, "Man of Sorrows" by Mrs. F. Jeffrey. Rev. W. J. Scott delivered two inspiring messages of Easter thoughts.

At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church a full choir under the direction of Miss Grace Pitman offered special Easter music which included two anthems: "He is Risen" and "How Calm and Beautiful the Morn" with Mrs. Roy Eggleton and Mr. Fred Devolin of Toronto assisting in duet work. In the evening a vocal quartette featuring Mr. and Mrs. Roy Eggleton, Mr. Devolin and Mrs. Walker sang "Nailed to the Cross." Two appropriate messages given by Rev. W. H. V. Walker were entitled "The Christians' Imperishable Hope" and the Easter Longing were enjoyed by large congregations at both services.

St. Paul's United Church choir are justly proud of the display of loyalty and faithfulness shown by their gifted baritone soloist, Wm. Reynolds. With all roads completely blocked on Sunday last Mr. Reynolds walked four miles through knee deep drifts to be in his place at morning worship in which he was expected to sing a solo. Completing one of his best performances in his career, Mr. Reynolds then made the return trip four miles to his home again.

Mr. Fred Devolin of Toronto is spending the Easter holidays with friends and relatives in this district and was a Sunday guest at the home of his sister, Mrs. Roy Eggleton.

Friends of Mr. Arthur Andrew will be pleased to know that the treatment in Kingston Hospital relieved the heart condition from which he suffered. He is spending a week or two in Belleville at the home of his son before returning to his home in Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bush, Jack and Glen of Oak Hills were Easter Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hulin.

Miss Gladys Bly of Toronto is spending the Easter week with Mrs. H. Rosebush, River Valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Macklin spent the Easter week-end visiting relatives in Cobourg.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bennett, Joan and Roy of Frankford were Sunday guests at the home of Mrs. Bennett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hulin. Miss Joan Bennett will remain with her grandparent for the next week.

Miss Myrtle Wood of Frankford spent the Easter week-end at her home in Stirling.

Miss Lillian Weese left on Tuesday morning for Toronto where she has accepted a position at St. Joseph's Hospital. Miss Weese is widely known throughout the district by her interest and activity in St. James' Young People's Club and her many friends wish her success in her new field of employment.

Pte. Jack Tulloch is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tulloch.

Misses Ruth Murray, Betty Hoard, Lorna Wright and Reta Farrell and Messrs. Boyd Beckel and Ralph Richardson of Peterboro Normal School are spending the Easter vacation period at their respective homes in Stirling and district. At the close of the holiday they will spend a week teaching in the rural schools of the district as part of their regular training.

Mr. Harold Burgess of Yarker is spending a few days visiting at the home of Rev. and Mrs. James E. Beckel.

Mr. Arthur Gould of O.A.C., Guelph, is spending the Easter holiday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Gould.

Miss Mildred Richardson, Reg. N. has returned to Peterboro after spending a few days visiting at her home in Stirling.

Due to heavy snowdrifts throughout the province on Saturday the regular 9.45 mail train was nearly seven hours late arriving in Stirling at 4.30 a.m. Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jeffrey and Miss Helen Jeffrey of Belleville were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jeffrey.

Mr. and Mrs. William Leslie, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hill and son Jimmy and Mrs. J. Hill, all of Belleville, were Good Friday guests at the home of Mrs. Nina Morton and Mrs. Nora Wescott.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Salisbury spent Easter Sunday visiting relatives and frends in Toronto.

Miss Jean Salisbury is spending the Easter week visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bailey, Campbellford.

Miss Poynter of the Stirling High School staff is holidaying in Toronto and Kitchener, Ontario.

Miss D. Cooper is spending this week visiting at her home in Toronto.

Dr. and Mrs. Parker of Lindsay, Ont., were recent guests at the home of Rev. W. J. and Mrs. Scott.

Miss Margaret Bateman of Montreal spent the Easter week end visiting at the homes of her sister, Mrs. Walter Wright and Mrs. C. Vance.

Miss Scott of Beaverton, Ont., is spending a few days visiting at the home of her brother, Rev. W. J. Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hatton spent the Easter week end visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Lucas and Miss Betty Lucas spent the week-end visiting friends in Brockville, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. William Glendenning of Toronto were Easter guests at the home of Mrs. Glendenning's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Hatton.

DORMITORY LIFE FULLY EXPLAINED

Bert Simpson of Albert College Tells of Life of Students to Y's Men

"Dormitory Life", as it actually occurs in college was clearly brought before the Y's Men's Club weekly luncheon at the Y.M.C.A. last evening by Bert Simpson, of the Albert College faculty and headmaster in charge of the dormitories at that institution of learning. Many amusing and interesting incidents which have occurred at Albert College, and other preparatory schools at which Mr. Simpson acted in a similar capacity, were most vividly presented by the guest speaker.

Mr. Simpson related as to the various phases of school life which the Master of the Dormitories is confronted with and the manner employed in efforts to break-up the many cliques, which from time to time formulate. The speaker outlined the necessities of discipline within a school which is part of the curriculum in teaching boys to become better men and teach them to take the knocks of life in later life. One of the hardest problems confronting the Master of the Dormitories and other Head Masters is the problem of making the individual parents satisfied, as "sometimes the parents are harder to handle than the students," concluded Mr. Simpson. The speaker was tendered the thanks of the club by President Harold Vaughan.

The night's program was provided by Leo B. Riggs, who gave three piano solos, illustrating the various types of music as introduced by the different composers. The illustrations proved highly enlightening. The songleader of the evening was Y'sman Don Ridley while Y'sman Bill Beatty proved a most able and stern sergeant-at-arms. President Vaughan announced that plans for the annual Y's Men's "ladies' night" were in progress.

WEIGHTLIFTING CONTEST HELD

Bill McMurter Obtains 465 Total in Three Competitions

Keen competition marked the monthly contests in the Hastings Weightlifting Club held last evening, with Bill McMurter attaining the highest total points made during the match.

Tommy Pedder, Canadian bantamweight weightlifting champion, most capably acted as judge for the contests. Mr. Pedder also gave an exhibition of feats of strength and posed in an especially lighted cabinet, that proved interesting to the club members. Following the contests a social evening and refreshments were enjoyed.

The results of the contest were as follows:—

Bill McMurter — press, 150; snatch, 140; jerk, 175; total, 465.

Leon Short—press, 130; snatch, 120; jerk, 170; total, 420.

Junior Bd. of Trade Formed at Picton

Picton, March 26—With seventy members in attendance, a Junior Board of Trade was formed at a banquet here. Objectives of the club include sponsoring of amateur sports, endeavoring to secure industry to locate in Picton, fostering co-operation among the business men, and an active social program at which men of the district would meet together reguarly.

Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon presided. Among those speaking briefly were: Douglas Farley, Rodger Ross, Ralph Warren, L. B. Calnan, H. B. Gully, Don Baxter, George Greer.

It is planned to meet twice monthly for the present with J. O. Herity of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce as speaker at the next meeting.

The program included feats of magic by C. A. Newman and vocal solos by P. Anderson of Belleville, accompanied by Chas. Kilgour of the same city.

Officers were elected as follows: President—William Pettet; vice-president—Ralph VanCamp; secretary—Howard Seeley; treasurer—Louis Yanover. Committees — Speaker and Entertainment — Douglas Farley; Attendance and Membership—Rodger Ross; Sports —Geor Morden; Merchants—L. E. Wiseman; Industrial—L. B. Calnan; Bloomfield Representative — Don Baxter; Wellington Representative—George Greer.

HUNGARY PATIENT, TELEKI DECLARES

Says Attitude Harmonizes With Higher European Necessities

By RICHARD MASSOCK
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, March 26 (AP)—Premier Paul Teleki of Hungary and Premier Mussolini of Italy, conferred today as the Hungarian leader continued his consultations here apparently designed to learn more of what the future holds for southeastern Europe.

Informed diplomatic quarters expressed belief that Count Teleki's chief concern in the talk was what may have been agreed at the March 18 meeting of Mussolini and Adolf Hitler at the Brenner Pass. Thus far, as far as surface indications go, that conference has left unchanged Italy's non-belligerent attitude toward the war.

The Hungarian premier talked yesterday with Il Duce's foreign minister and son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

Problems in Balkans

In an interview published by the newspaper La Tribuna before his talk with Mussolini, Count Teleki said that although peace had not yet been disturbed in the Balkans that did not mean "there are no problems to solve."

"It is significant," he said, "that Hungary is aware of the difficulties of the times and has assumed an attitude which harmonizes with the higher European necessities."

"My country is patient," he said in the interview, "it can wait. That is our feeling."

Count Teleki declined to define Hungary's relations with Rumania from which it has long claimed Transylvania, saying "the less one speaks today of burning problems the better."

Expounds Hungary Attitude

He asserted his talks with Mussolini and Ciano were solely for the purpose of informing himself of Italian view sand expounding Hungary's attitude.

"Anyone who expects anything from these Rome talks is mistaken," Count Teleki said. "I am here for an exchange of views. There is much to learn in Rome. I too can contribute from direct observations."

The Hungarian premier was asked about Hungary's relations with her new neighbor, Soviet Russia, about which he was expected to talk with Mussolini. Russia's occupation of Eastern Poland gave her a common frontier with Hungary.

"Nothing extraordinary is happening on that front," Teleki said. "There are no incidents and relations are proper."

Hungary's relations with Yugoslavia, he said, "are good and capable of improvement," but he said he did not believe that the signing of any agreement was imminent. Hungary also lost territory to Yugoslavia after the last war.

Scattered "end-the-war" votes by labor unions and peace organizations over the week-end gained little public attention. Instead the public was intent on the tightening of the blockade on Germany and upon beating German propaganda.

"Peace front" candidates were given only a negligible vote in recent by-elections, indicating that public opinion generally favors pressing the war rather than making peace. In the last such election, at Leeds Mar. 14, a Conservative, J. J. C. Henderson, defeated a "peace" candidate 23,882 to 722.

Nevertheless dissatisfaction with the pace of the war is being expressed despite Mr. Chamberlain's announced strategy of fighting a safety-first war. The blockade has "gaping holes", the Evening News declared today. The paper said "Mr. Chamberlain in one of his more soothing speeches assured the nation that the gaps were 'very small indeed', but a study of the facts does not support his optimism."

On the propaganda front the Evening Standard said that Britain "has suffered persistent and prolonged defeat."

"London has not yet understood that too great a strictness may inflict as severe damage on our cause as too great a laxity," this paper said.

Lord Snell, Labor leader in the House of Lords, asserted that British news abroad was "hopelessly smothered and outpaced," continued the standard, and was assured by Lord Halifax "that he was giving his personal attention to this subject."

"More protests will no doubt bring forth more assurances," the Standard said.

The Evening News criticized Lord Halifax, stating that "the importance of the diplomatic battlefield still is lacking official recognition"

"That is a mistake," continued the paper, "which our enemies are not making. They know that a diplomatic victory often is less costly than a triumph in the field. Foreign affairs seem to be but little more than a sideshow in our war effort."

The political correspondent of the country's leading Labor organ, the Daily Herald, discounted reports that the Labor leaders had been invited to join a coalition cabinet.

He wrote:

"Persistent rumors that Mr. Chamberlain has approached the Labor Opposition with an invitation to join a reconstructed government of national unity yesterday brought to a head widespread speculation regarding proposals for strengthening the Ministry.

"These rumors (published yesterday by the London Star) bear little relation to the facts.

Says No Proposals Made to Labor

"I can state with authority that the Prime Minister has not put any such proposal before the Labor party leaders.

"Nor is there so far any reliable indication that he desires or intends to do so.

"If he does, it will be found, although the Opposition is as determined as ever to play its part in the war, that there has been little if any lessening of the unanimous feeling in the Labor Party's ranks against participation in a government led by Chamberlain.

"Moreover, Labor leaders who cannot lightly dismiss any serious proposals for association with the government, if they are made, must, in considering them, always have in mind the fact that such an arrangement would bring strong opposition from large sections of the Labor Party."

"Chamberlain spent the Easter holiday considering the formation of a 'Big Five' War Cabinet," said the political correspondent of the Daily Mail.

"Many politicians believe that this is likely to consist of the following members of the government in addition to the Prime Minister: Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary; Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Sir Samuel Hoare, Lord Privy Seal.

"Churchill, it is suggested, may be succeeded at the Admiralty by Lord Chatfield, who is at present Minister for the Co-ordination of Defence.

"Churchill then, as Minister without portfolio, might represent the services and war production departments in the Cabinet.

Production Speed-Up

"It is also thought the Prime Minister may appoint Sir Kingsley Wood, Air Minister, to a post where he can help speed up the nation's productive capacity.

"Chamberlain, it is known, has great faith in Wood's organizing abilities.

"Other changes to relieve Cabinet members with departmental responsibilities of some of their burden may also be made. There is still keen speculation about the prospects of an invitation to Labor leaders to join the government.

"(Maj. Clement R.) Attlee and his colleagues, however, could not take such a step without the full consent of thei rparty, which may be asked at their Whitsuntide Conference to define their attitude toward the eventuality."

EGRESS BARRED FROM N. Y. CITIES

Upper Part of New York State Virtually Snowbound by Worst Blizzard in Years

New York, March 26 — (AP) — Five New York State cities and many smaller communities were virtually snowbound today in storm conditions declared the worst in some sections since 1888's mighty blizzard.

State and local police barred egress from Syracuse, Utica and Rochester and Rome and Malone were almost without vehicular outlets.

Hundreds of automobiles were snowtrapped over the state and troopers cautioned against any travel in Northern and Central New York and in Sullivan County to the south. Both of the state's main east-west highways were impassable at several points.

Railroads were battling to keep trains going, an army airplane was forced down last night near Cortland and two deaths resulted indirectly from the storm.

Central New York milk deliveries shrank as dairymen used sleighs and toboggans to haul their product. Many schools were closed.

16-Year-Old Girl Rescues Uncle

Fort Erie, Ont., March 26 (CP)—Details were learned only today of a quick-thinking action late last Sunday on frozen Lake Erie, three miles west of Fort Erie, in which a 16-year-old Kenmore, N.Y., high school girl was the central figure. She is Florence Hanford, who was visiting her uncle, Carlton Hanford of Niagara Falls, N.Y.

While the pair were inspecting the uncle's summer home at Crescent Beach and were walking on the ice a quarter of a mile off the Ontario shore line, Mr. Hanford suddenly fell into a hole apparently left by some fisherman. He sank to his armpits in a sandbar.

His niece managed to get her hands under his arms and tugged until she pulled him clear. The girl weighs about 100 pounds, but is considered quite an athlete in the adjacent summer colony. She returned to her studies Monday and said nothing about the matter, until her uncle today disclosed the details.

TRAVELS 8,000 MILES TO CAST VOTE

Fort Erie, Ont., Mar. 26 (CP).—Deputy Reeve John Atwood of Fort Erie, who probably travelled farther in order to vote in the federal election than any other franchise holder cast his ballot at noon today. He cut short a California vacation and travelled 3,000 miles to reach here and keep intact his record of voting in every general election during the past 50 years.

Mr. Atwood, who said he was "around 70" has held various municipal offices in this district.

CHAPTER XVII

Sara did not see Curt that afternoon, and on Tuesday, he didnt come to the office. On Wednesday, he came in but, to her puzzlement, gave her no dictation, sent for her only when he absolutely had to, and then was very impersonal and businesslike.

By Thursday, she became convinced that he was deliberately avoiding her. The realization cut her to the quick and filled her with dismay. What was the cause of this change in him since last week-end? Was he, as Toby put it giving her the "run-around?"

She couldn't believe it, after all that he had said to her in apparent sincerity, and yet . . . he was certainly acting strangely. Was he trying to let her know that everything was now over between them—now that he had had his brief interlude of amusing himself with her?

Her fear that this might be so was intensified by her suspicion that he was, in the meantime, seeing quite a bit of Juliette Carter. She herself had seen him with the society girl on Monday. Then, she had read in the paper of two parties at which he and Juliette were among the guests. And she learned from the switchboard operator that Juliette had phoned him several times this week.

She could not know that Curt was avoiding her because of a guilty conscience—couldn't know that he was ashamed to face her while his strategic 'engagement' to Juliette lasted. Also, he feared that, if he should continue his attentions to Sara right now—take her out to lunch or dinner—Juliette might get wind of it and make things difficult for him.

Meanwhile, to add to Sara's misery, Gwendolyn Pickett had been showing a hostility toward her that plainly indicated she still suspected her of having taken the missing blueprints. All week she made things as unpleasant for Sara as possible and missed no opportunity to drop insinuating remarks.

There was, for instance, the occasion when Miss Pickett failed to find a certain important letter in the files and started asking the various girls if they had had it.

Sara suddenly said, "Oh, I have it here in my desk! I put it there when I was referring to it yesterday, and I forgot to return it to the files."

Whereupon, Miss Pickett said icily, "You wouldn't by any chance, have also put the Remo Dam blueprints there and forgotten to return them?"

Then, on another occasion, she went out of her way to question Sara about the time she had worked for Poulton, Inc., leaving no doubt as to the purpose of her questions.

All of this was not lost on the other girls in the office. Sara noticed that they began looking at her queerly and seemed to avoid talking freely in her presence. Had Miss Pickett, once the butt of their jokes, succeeded in poisoning their minds against her?

More important, what was Miss Pickett saying to Mr. Carrington about her? Was she rousing suspicion in him?

Wearily, each day, she went home heartsick, to spend the night tossing restlessly.

Then, on Friday morning, she was summoned to Curt's office to take dictation. By this time, she was so nervous and jumpy that she dropped her notebook twice before she finally reached the door.

Rose Kennedy, looking after her, remarked to Brenda Kraus, "I do believe Sidney is tobogganing for that guy. I never saw any one so jittery. But she must know Juliette Carter has him hooked."

"Perhaps," said Brenda, "Sara might cut the Carter woman out. She has twice the looks and young Carrington has dated her three times to my knowledge."

Neither she nor any of the girls, however, knew of last week-end. Sara had kept quiet about that.

"Nobody," remarked Rose cynically, "has enough looks to cut out three million bucks! Especially when Carrington and Broderick is on the skids!"

Brenda glanced at her sharply. "Where did you get that wild idea?"

"Don't tell me, Brenda, you have not heard the rumors? They say everything hinges on the Remo Dam contract. If the firm loses it, we'll all be hunting new jobs!"

Meanwhile, in Curt's office, Sara was trying to appear cool, collected and thoroughly efficient as she sat with her pad on her knee, taking his rapid-fire dictation. But it was hard to keep her mind on her job when her heart was so heavy — when she kept thinking of how distant he had been all week.

Then, suddenly, he leaned forward, took her pad and pencil away from her, laid them on his desk and clasped both her hands in his.

"That's enough business for now," he said. "I didn't really send for you to take dictation, Sara dear—I sent for you because I've scarcely seen you all week."

Sara's heart was now pounding—but she noticed that he offered no explanation for the way he had been steering clear of her.

"A fine secretary you are!" he went on teasingly. "Leaving a man to shift for himself! Don't you know you're supposed to be at my elbow every minute?"

She blushed. "If you needed me you could have sent for me," she pointed out.

"Well, I do need you—all the time. And particularly, I need you to cheer me up tomorrow evening. Will you do the town with me—from dinner on? Now, don't tell me you already have a date with that old family friend! Because I won't stand for it!"

Sara's eyes had lit up. "No—no, I haven't a date."

"Then, you'll have one with me?"

"I'd love to, Curt."

He didn't of course, tell her that he was making this engagement with her because Juliette was going out of town for the week-end, and hence, he would not only be free from her demands on his time but would run no risk of running into her while with Sara.

Sara, quite unaware of all this, returned to her desk in a haze of happiness. Another evening with Curt! She told herself that all her fears had been foolish—that she must simply have imagined a change in him.

For the moment, she completely forgot there was such a person as Juliette Carter.

CHAPTER XVIII

Saturday morning dawned sultry and leaden-skied. Mrs. Sidney, at the breakfast table, read the weather forecast to Sara.

"The paper says a tropical storm is headed this way. Warnings have been issued." She frowned. "I do hope—well, of course, Vicky's cottage is on the Sound side of the island. That's always safer than the ocean side."

"Heavens, Mother! Why start worrying about Vicky's cottage? Look at all the storms it has already weathered."

"I know but—well, there might come a time when it wouldn't." Mrs. Sidney turned back to her paper. "Be sure and take your raincoat to the office."

"I will," Sara promised.

Curt did not come to the office that morning, but at eleven o'clock he phoned Sara.

"Listen," he said, "I've had an idea. According to the paper, there is a beauty of a storm coming—and you remember I told you how swell it is at Yellow Gables during a storm. How would you like to drive down there this afternoon and watch it with me from the dunes?"

"I think that would be fun!"

"Then, suppose I pick you up at one o'clock. We'll spend the afternoon there, then drive back to town for our spree this evening."

Sara phoned her mother about the change in her plans and, promptly at one o'clock, was waiting outside the office building when Curt drove up.

The storm broke just before they reached Yellow Gables. The rain came down in torrents, and the wind was blowing a gale. As they left the main road, they came in sight of the ocean—caught glimpses of its huge, cresting, creamy rollers.

"It's simply magnificent!" exclaimed Sara.

Curt smiled. "Glad you came?"

"I certainly am!"

"None of my folks are down here today," he said. "Just the housekeeper and servants. The family have all gone to a wedding."

An hour later, after they had had lunch, Sara stood beside Curt on the verandah, her hands thrust into her raincoat pockets, her eyes and ears fascinated by the sinister majesty of the ocean in turmoil.

Curt pointed to a long, irregular spit of land. "That's the best place to watch it—from that last dune. Game to walk out to it?"

"Yes—let's!"

There was little chance for conversation as, in the face of the wind, they made their way across the dunes. Now and then, Curt paused to give Sara a helping hand. Once, between dunes, they found a shallow pool, the remnant of the early-morning tide and here, Curt picked her up and carried her across.

When they finally reached the outermost dune, they climbed down to a sheltered hollow where, no longer buffeted by the gale, they could still gaze out across the heaving sea.

"I never before saw anything quite like it," said Sara.

"But, surely, with your sister having a place at the shore—"

"Oh, they do stage some magnificent blows but, not being on the ocean side, never anything so—well, so epic as this!"

Curt was silent a moment. Then he said thoughtfully, "Do you know Sara, I envy people like your sister and her Bill, for whom life is simple and straightforward!"

Sara laughed. "Why, life for them is just one complication after another. Nothing so complicates life as children and doctor's bills!"

"I suppose so. But what I meant was—" Curt hesitated. "Well, at least they could just fall in love and get married—quite simply and without a to-do!"

Sara's heart skipped a beat. Did he mean that he couldn't get married without a to-do — that is, couldn't marry a girl like her? Did he mean his family would object?

Suddenly, he turned and seized her in his arms. "Sara darling . . . I love you. . . "I can't live without you! Let's elope—just go off and get married without telling a soul."

She caught her breath sharply. What she had been hoping for had happened—he had asked her to marry him! But she found herself pushing him from her.

"Why an elopement?" she asked, in a thin, strained voice. "Why be secret about it?"

"Well . . . . it's so much simpler that way. No fuss Just you and I."

Sara disengaged herself from his arms. "Do you mean your family would object to your marrying me—one of the girls in the office?"

He hesitated. "They—they would not exactly object but—well, Sara, it's like this. My dad has got a fixed idea in his head about me. He—well, he's always thought I'd marry Juliette Carter some day, just because I've known her all my life. And right at this particular time, when he's got so many worries on his mind, he might react unfavorably to my marrying any one else."

"I see," Sara said quietly. "So you want me to elope with you and then keep the marriage a secret until you screw up your courage to break the news to your father."

"Don't put it that way, Sara—"

"That's the way I see it, Curt, and I'm sorry, but I can't marry you under those conditions."

He took one of her hands. "But Sara, you do love me, don't you?"

She lowered her eyes. "Yes —I do."

"Then, darling, what else matters?" he pleaded. "Why should you let my father come between us?"

"The question is," why should you?" she pointed out.

"I'm not! It's only that I don't want to take the chance of upsetting him right now. Later, when he's in a less worried state of mind, I know he'll look at things quite differently and will— will give us his blessing".

"Then why not wait until later?"

"Because it seems so pointless to wait. Sweetheart, we could elope next week-end if only you'd say the word. Please say yes, Sara darling."

Curt was thinking that, by next week-end the matter of the Remo Dam contract would be settled and he could extricate himself from his "engagement" to Juliette and tell her to go to blazes.

Sara, meanwhile was weakening a bit. She was thinking how much she wanted to marry Curt. Why, after all, should she object to secrecy if she loved him enough? Was it false pride, she asked herself, that made her resent the idea?

Finally, she said, "I can't say yes, Curt—but neither will I say no just yet. Give—give me a little time to think it over. . . ."

CHAPTER XIX

Curt had to be content with the grain of encouragement contained in Sara's non-committal answer.

No more was said as they started back to the house. The rain had stopped, but the wind beat against them, whipping at their coats and making their progress slow.

Then, as they reached the crest of a dune, they stopped short in consternation. It was between this dune and the next one that Curt, on their outward trip, had carried Sara across a pool, but now, instead of a mere pool, there was a surging mass of ocean water that completely cut off the spit of land on which they were, turning it into an island.

"Gosh!" groaned Curt. "What a complete fool I am! I should have known— should have remembered—but it's only at very high tides that this happens."

Sara was dismayed. "What will we do?"

"It looks like we'll just have to wait for the tide to go out."

"How long will that be?"

Curt frowned, considering. "Let me see—it should be high tide in about two hours. Then it will take two hours to get back to this stage, and probably an hour more before we can get across. I'm afraid, Sara, we're in for a wait of at least five, maybe six hours."

"Oh dear!" she exclaimed. "Mother will be worried! I told her I'd be home about six o'clock. If only I could get word to her! Do—do you suppose your servants will come looking for us so that I could shout to them to phone her?"

Curt looked rueful. "I'm afraid not. When we don't show up, they will probably assume we went to some neighbor's house. I didn't leave word where we were going or when to expect us back—and they never expect me until they see me. I—I'm terribly sorry, Sara."

She made a little gesture of resignation. "Well, it can't be helped." Then, she managed a smile, and added lightly, "Are you good at riddles or capping verses to while away the time?"

"Gosh, darling, you're a thorough-going sport to take it this way!"

They decided to go back to their shelter to spend the long wait. There, they were able to make themselves more or less comfortable.

When they were settled, Curt made a brief effort to renew his plea for an elopement, but Sara soon hushed him.

"Say yes to that little plan of mine," he urged, "and the time will go like lightning. We'll plan our honeymoon and—"

"No, Curt," Sara said firmly. "Please—let's say no more about it now. You'll only make this harder for me. I'm upset enough, as it is, with Mother to worry about. . . ."

After that, he dropped the subject.

The hours did not drag too interminably. They found much to talk about, and the storm itself provided diversion.

Once, something bobbing on the waves came into view and they laid penny bets as to what it was until it proved to be a piece of a pier, with stringers and planking still intact.

"Somebody's dock," said Curt. "There will be many a boat, too, blown from its moorings."

Later, after darkness fell, Sara actually went to sleep, her head on Curt's shoulder, while he smoked innumerable cigarettes and brooded over his troubles—with many a twinge of conscience over the scheming into which circumstances had forced him.

Why did life have to be so complicated? If only he could marry Sara openly! Suppose he should go to his father and resolutely tell him that he loved her and intended to make her his wife? But no, that would never do. The old man would have a fit—might put obstacles in his way that would prevent him from marrying her at all.

Then, there was his so-called "engagement" to Juliette. He wished now he had never let himself be drawn into it, regardless of what might happen to Carrington and Broderick. But—well, he had been drawn into it, and now he had to get out of it somehow. Would he be able to do so without disastrous results? Would he be able to keep Sara from discovering his double dealing? If she learned about it, would she be so contemptuous of him that she would have no more to do with him? Thus, his troubled thoughts ran on.

At last, their wait for low tide was over and stumbling through the windy darkness, they made their way back to Yellow Gables.

As soon as they reached the house, Sara flew to the telephone. A few minutes later she reappeared with a disturbed expression in her eyes.

"Curt, I couldn't get Mother. The operator rang and rang, but nobody answered!"

He had been engaged in conversation with the housekeeper, but now turned toward her quickly.

"Mrs. Jones says that, this afternoon, your mother phoned here several times," he said, his voice concerned. "She left word that she was at your sister's and that you were to phone her there. Then, about an hour ago, a young man—a Mr. Martin —came here. Mrs. Jones thought we might have gone to the Boxwood Arms, so he drove off to look for us."

Curt took Sara's hand. "Darling . . . I'm afraid you must prepare yourself for some bad news. . . ."

Sara went cold. She turned to the housekeeper.

"What did Mr. Martin say?" she demanded, her throat tight and dry.

"He asked me, miss, to tell you that—"

The housekeeper got no further for just then, there was a flash of headlights outside and Sara rushed to the door.

"That must be Toby now!" she cried.

She flung open the door just as the car drew to a halt in front of the house. Toby leaped out and came hurrying up the steps.

"Toby! What is it? What's happened?"

His face was haggard. "Sara," he said gently, "I've come to take you to Vicky's. Your mother is already there. Bill and little Wendy went sailing in the Cricket early this morning and—and didn't come back."

CHAPTER XX

Sara had climbed into Toby's car with brief, distracted replies to Curt's expressions of sympathy and offers to do "anything — anything under the sun," and now sat forward on the edge of the seat, her hands clenched in her lap.

As the car rushed through the night, Toby told her the few bare facts about Bill and Wendy.

"They started out at nine this morning. Vicky says the Sound was not especially rough at that time—just a nice, sailing breeze—and they hadn't seen the morning paper with its storm warnings. For a couple of hours, it seems, they tacked back and forth in plain sight. Then, they disappeared around Tree Point. Vicky kept watching for them to come into view again, but—" Toby, staring straight ahead, spoke through tight teeth—"they didn't. In the meantime, the gale had begun to blow."

"But Toby, isn't it possible they might have put into some little harbor where they were unable to reach a phone?" asked Sara, clutching to any straw of hope, however fragile.

"That's what your mother and Vicky hoped at first but, if they had made shore, it seems strange they couldn't have reached a phone in all this time."

"Oh, Toby, you sound so pessimistic! What has been done about looking for them?"

"The police, the coast guard and the radio stations have all been notified. And this afternoon, I myself drove for miles along the shore, searching for the boat."

The car roared on, flashing through one sleepy Long Island town after another. Once, Toby drew up at a lunch wagon and went in to get some coffee for Sara. He tried to persuade her to take a sandwich, too, as she hadn't eaten since lunch, but she said she had no appetite.

"Your mother," he explained, as they continued on their way, "phoned me when she heard from Vicky, and asked me to drive her out there. We tried again and again to reach you, so finally I came after you. Where were you all that time?"

"Curt and I went out onto a point of land to watch the storm and were marooned by the tide. We—we had to wait six hours for it to go down."

Toby gave her a quick look.

"Good night! Couldn't that fellow Carrington have anticipated something like that? You'd think he'd know the ways of the tide around his own home!"

"He does but he—he said it is very rarely that high, so he didn't think. He felt awfully badly about it."

"Humph!" said Toby, glowering suspiciously. "It was mighty opportune, though, wasn't it, that he had you to keep him company when he just happened to forget about the tide!"

"Oh, Toby—please! Must you act this way at a time like this?"

He was instantly contrite. "I'm sorry—I didn't mean what I said," he muttered. "It's just that I'm upset, I guess."

Sara forgave him, for she knew that he was taking Bill's and Wendy's disappearance almost as hard as she, and must have been under a considerable strain for several hours. Not only was Wendy a great pet of his, but he and Bill had been close friends for many years.

For the rest of the way, Sara sat with closed eyes, inwardly whispering fervent little prayers, trying to convince herself that somehow, somewhere, Bill and Wendy would be found—safe and sound.

It was well past midnight when they finally drew up before Vicky's cottage.

Toby placed a hand over Sara's. "Chin up! Your mother and Vicky are on the verge of going to pieces. They're going to rely on you for courage."

She turned pleading eyes upon him. "Toby.....what's your honest opinion? Do you think there's any hope?"

He hesitated, then spoke slowly. "Yes—of course there is. And a hunch has come to me. I'll not tell you what it is, because nothing may come of it, but as soon as I take you inside, I think I'll go and follow it up."

He helped her from the car and accompanied her into the house, where they found Vicky and her mother sitting sadly before the big rough-stone fireplace—the fireplace where Wendy loved to toast marshmallows and on whose broad mantel now lay one of Bill's many, stained old pipes.

Sara, breaking down for a moment, mingled her tears with those of her sister and mother. Little Bill, too young to understand what had happened, was asleep upstairs.

"He cried this morning," said Vicky brokenly, "because I would not let him go. Now—Now I wish we had all gone!"

"Oh, no, darling! Don't say that!" Sara patted her sister's shoulder, and tried to smile. "Toby says he has an idea. He's going now to look into it. When he comes back, perhaps he'll bring news — good news!"

Toby, too, tried to say a word of cheer, then departed.

"I don't know what we'd have done without him," Mrs. Sidney said, with a sigh. "He's been—he's been wonderful!"

"Yes — he's done everything." Vicky started weeping again. "Even p-put little Bill to bed."

"Now, now — no more tears!" Sara said briskly, "How long has it been since you two have eaten? I'm famished myself! I'm going to make some scrambled eggs and sandwiches and tea."

Over their protests that they couldn't swallow a morsel, she soon assembled the food, and it did put heart into all of them.

Then, Sara moved about efficiently, putting things in order, doing this and that, just to keep busy. Only once did she have to fight for self-control — when she came upon little Wendy's favorite scarlet sweater, with a childish hanky crumpled into the pocket.

CHAPTER XXI

Somehow, the three women got through the rest of the night—even managed to take fitful naps, though none of them went to bed.

Toby had not returned, and no word had come from him, but with the arrival of morning, sympathetic neighbors started coming in to offer stray bits of faintly encouraging information.

"My husband heard that several boats anchored off the Winnemasset Yacht Club were blown clear to the Connecticut shore. Perhaps the Cricket, too...."

"Mrs. Brent's two boys were caught out in it—and they didn't get home until just an hour ago...."

The coming and going of these friends helped the time to pass, but Sara was acutely aware that every passing hour without news lessened the chance of eventual good news.

In the middle of the morning, Curt phoned her. Vicky and Bill did not have a phone, but Sara had given Curt the number of the next-door neighbor whose phone they shared.

"Any news, darling?" he asked.

"None, Curt."

"Is there any way I can help?"

"No — no, thank you. That's the trouble — there's so little anybody can do!"

"I love you with all my heart, Sara. Not that that's any help—but remember it, darling."

"I do, Curt — and it is a help Thank you for calling...."

The suspense was the worst. The suspense and the inactivity. Sara had awful moments of giving up all hope. She wondered how her sister stood it at all—imagined what thoughts must be passing through her mind. Yet Vicky was bearing up remarkably well.

Sensibly, Sara and Mrs. Sidney made no effort to check her tears when they came. They didn't even try to stop her from reliving the hour just before Bill and his little daughter had set forth in the Cricket.

"Wendy was so cute—put up her own jelly sandwiches, and filled the thermos with coffee for Bill. As they went off, she was standing at the tiller, waving to us, her hair blowing in the breeze...."

Or Vicky talked of Bill. "I wanted him to take his mackinaw, but he wouldn't — laughed at the idea of taking it on so warm a day. We had planned to have a picnic supper at Lookout Rock....."

At noon, Curt phoned again.

"Just wanted to let you know, Sarah, that I've chartered a plane to search the Sound."

"Oh, Curt, how good of you!"

"I wanted to so something. Look—if I drove over there, could I take you for a little ride? It would do you good."

"No, Curt — I don't want to be away a single minute. If any word should come...."

As Sara left the phone and returned to Vicky's cottage, she thought that, strangely, Curt's calls seemed to mean very little to her. She was glad, of course, to know that he was thinking of her, but each time, she had been disappointed to hear his voice—for each time, she had hoped it would be Toby with good tidings.

In the stress of her trouble, Curt's professed love for her seemed to have faded into the background—to have become unimportant. The afternoon she had spent with him yesterday, his ardent urging of a secret marriage—all this seemed to have happened in some far-off forgotten time. His proposal and what her answer to it would be — such critical questions yesterday — now no longer seemed to matter.

It was in the middle of the afternoon that word came, not of Bill and Wendy, but of the Cricket. It came from the plane chartered by Curt. He phoned Sara the information as soon as it had been phoned to him from the airport.

She knew, instantly, from his tone, that he had bad news for her.

"Sara," he said gravely, "are you prepared to hear — not the worst news. Thank heaven — but some that's not so good?"

"Tell me quickly!"

"The plane sighted the Cricket, with her mast dragging, ashore on Tern Island. There was no sign of any one on board her or on the island, which is small."

Sara, white-faced, gripped the back of the chair by which she was standing.

"Do you think that means...."

"Of course not, dear. They may have landed on the island, been sighted and been taken off."

"But Curt, do you really think that? Or do you think—"

"It's a good possibility, Sara," he said, trying to sound encouraging. "Anyway, there's no reason for jumping to pessimistic conclusions. We can only wait and—"

"We've already waited so long!" Sara said despairingly.

She felt she couldn't — simply couldn't — carry Curt's ominous news back to Vicky. Walking with dragging steps across the square of yard between the two cottages, she sought vainly for ways to soften the bald, hard facts—to inject some spark of hope into them which would be reasonable without, in the end, being cruel.

As she reached the edge of the narrow board walk leading up to Vicky's cottage, she stopped for a moment, gathering her courage for the heart-rending task ahead.

Then, suddenly, she saw some one running toward her down the sandy road—saw that it was Toby!

Hilarity reaches a new high peak in the screen romance of Mae West and W. C. Fields, co-stars of fun in "My Little Chickadee," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

Bancroft

Mrs. Kennedy, accompanied by Bill McAlpine, Jack McAlpine and Miss M. O'Shaughnessy left by motor Friday morning for Elmira, Ontario, where they will spend the Easter holiday with Mr. and Mrs. T. McAlpine, who recently opened a hotel in that town.

Mr. T. V. McCarthy motored to Toronto Friday morning for the holiday.

Although Bancroft escaped a real heavy snowfall which was prevalent in the province, it did get the high winds which rendered the rural roads impassable and the main highway quite heavy. The weather cleared off Friday morning and Saturday morning the temperature had dropped to ten below zero.

Miss Edith Joynt who has been attending school in Belleville returned home to spend the holiday with her parents.

FOUND FROZEN IN CANAL

Montreal, March 25 (CP)—Body of an unidentified man was found today frozen to an iron gate of the Lachine Canal at Seigneurs Street here. Police said the man, between 45 and 50, apparently had drowned in the canal before it froze over last fall.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT ROTARY CLUB

The annual Easter Monday children's Day of Belleville Rotary Club proved a great success, with the children outnumbering the members. The main dining room of Hotel Quinte echoed with the merry chatter of small voices which joined with those of the older people in "School Days", "Roll Out the Barrel" and other favorite songs. Then there was a lengthy but thoroughly enjoyable programme, with seven girls from the Ontario School for the Deaf featuring with their dances. Miss Helen Keeler was in charge of the O.S.D. girls.

Stan Wiggins played a couple of cornet solos which brought loud applause. Fred Stone delighted the audience with his splendid imitations both on the violin and with his voice. Four little girls from Miss Forster's dancing school performed some very neat tap dancing.

Little Miss Mary Lou Pigden did some intricate solo dancing, and tiny Miss Madeline Baldwin delighted with her combination of song and dance. A humorous reading by Miss Kathleen Morrison was much enjoyed.

There were numerous favours for the younger guests, mostly with the Easter motif.

The programme was in charge of Past President Joe Shortt. At the conclusion Jack Deacon expressed the thanks of Rotary to the artists.

Among the older guests present was Mr. R. H. Beerhorst of Sassenheim, Holland.

A SPELL OF SECOND WINTER

Higher temperatures and calm made a pleasant change in the weather.

Biting winds, deep snowdrifts and severe cold made up the second winter which the bear prophesied on February 2nd. last but which everyone thought the county was going to escape. Not expecting so sudden a turn which sent the temperature into sub-zero depths, the people felt the last three days as very severe especially on account of the wind. The early Easter date of March 24th., the earliest since 1913 when it fell on March 23rd., had caused the people to look forward to spring, forgetful that March was not yet out and that it might give a performance very lionlike in character. It has done so.
